Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is brought by the United States to recover from the defendants, sub-contractors for carrying the mail, moneys paid to them under a mistake of fact caused by their false representations as to the services. It appears that on the 15th of March, 1878, one Luke Voorhees entered into a contract with the United States, represented by the Postmaster-General, to carry the mail over a route designated as No. 88,146, from Garland to Ouray, in the State of Colorado, passing by Lake City and several other places mentioned, and back, seven times a week, for $19,000 a year, for a term beginning July 1st, 1878, and ending June 30th, 1882.

On the 28th of September, 1878, Voorhees made a sub-contract with the defendants, Barlow and Sanderson, by which they agreed to transport the mails over the route mentioned, for the period designated, and to perform the service required by his contract with the United States, in consideration whereof they were to receive the pay which was or might become due to him. They were recognized and accepted by the Postoffice Department as sub-contractors for the service.

The distance between Garland and Lake City was one hundred and fifty miles, and the time prescribed for the service over it was twenty-seven hours, or five miles and fifty-five hun-

Hun, 533. See Van Alen v. American Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 1; Justh v. National Bank of Com. 56 N. Y. 433; Newton v. Porter, 69 N. Y. 133; Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372, 388; Cardwell v. Hicks, 37 Barb. 458; Weaver v. Barden, 49 N. Y. 292; Utica Bank v. Van Gieson, 18 Johns. 436; Kington Bank v. Eltinge, 40 N. Y. 391; Union Nat. Bank v. Sixth Nat. Bank, 43 N. Y. 452, aff'd 1 Lans. 13, and distinguishing Stephens v. Brooklyn Board of Education, 79 N. Y. 138; Southwick v. First Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 420.

An indorser cannot recover back the amount of a note which he paid in ignorance of the rule of law that he was not liable because he had not received notice of presentment and dishonor. Baldwin v. Rood, 22 N. Y. Week. Dig. 383.

The complaint in an action against the City of New York alleged that the plaintiff had been a police justice during a specified period, and had been entitled during such period to a salary of $10,000 per annum, and that for a portion of that time he was paid but $5,000. Defendant put in issue the claim, and set up by way of counterclaim that while the salary was but $5,000 the city paid plaintiff $10,000 per annum for a portion of the time by mistake, and claimed to recover the alleged excess so paid. Held, that plaintiff could not recover upon his claim, nor defendant upon its counterclaim, because the payment was voluntary. Cox v. New York, 23 N. Y. Week. Dig. 355, aff'd Ct. of Appeals, 5 Cent. Rep. 335, 103 N. Y. 519.

Payment of an assessment by a referee in foreclosure pursuant to the decree is made by coercion of law, and will not prevent a recovery back of the amount so paid by the owner of the equity of redemption after the assessment has been vacated.

348

Peyser v. New York, 70 N. Y. 497; Brehm v. New York, 39 Hun, 533.

A sale of land by an assignee in bankruptcy, and his deed pursuant thereto without covenant for title, may be avoided and the purchase money recovered back, upon the ground of a mutual mistake as to the existence of the subject of the contract, where the assignee, though he acted in good faith, and both parties assumed that he had title as such, had in fact no title at all. Clark v. Post, 45 Hun, 265.

Mistake by the owner of mortgaged property as to the amount which he had paid on such mortgage by reason of which he reconveyed the property and settled his liability with the mortgagee on certain terms, held insufficient, in the absence of an agreement, to sustain an action at law to recover the amount of such overlooked payment. Roberts v. Ellwood, 24 N. Y. Week. Dig. 135.

An action to recover back an amount paid for an assignment of a bond and mortgage upon a mutual mistake as to the amount due thereon was sustained as to such excess, in First Presbyterian Society v. Ayer, 4 N. Y. S. R. 338.

Where a depositary pays over moneys in his hands to a receiver in supplementary proceedings, under an order permitting such payment, under the mistaken idea that the order absolutely directs such payment, it may recover back such money as having been paid under mistake. Syracuse Sav. Bank v. Hess, 23 N. Y. Week. Dig. 230.

As to payment by mistake, see note to McFerran v. Taylor, 7 U. S. 3 Cranch, 270 (2: 436), and note to Hunt v. Rhodes, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 1 (7: 27).

As to voluntary payments and money illegally exacted, see note to Bank of U. S. v. Bank of Washington, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 8 (3: 229).

132 U. S.

dredths of a mile per hour. The distance between Lake City and Ouray by the route designated was forty-six miles, and the time prescribed by the contract for the transportation of the mails over it was thirty hours, that is, one mile and fifty-three hundredths of a mile per hour. The portion of this latter line which lay between a place known as Mineral Point and Ouray, a distance of only ten miles, passed over mountains upon which the mails could be carried only a part of the year—in the winter only by men on snowshoes, and at other times only by pack horses. There was, in consequence, great irregularity in the delivery of the mails upon this portion of the route, and much complaint followed, leading, in October, 1878, to its abandonment and the substitution in its place of a line making a detour around the mountains of one hundred and ten miles, passing by way of Barnum, which afforded a good, practicable road easily traveled with wagons.

The present action has grown out of the orders of the Postoffice Department in making this change of line, and expediting the service over it, and providing increased compensation for the additional service. The compensation allowed by the original contract, as mentioned above, was $19,000 a year, which, the distance being one hundred and ninety-six miles, was at the rate of about $96.93 a mile. At that rate the compensation for the additional service was allowed, amounting to $10,688.26 a year.

The time prescribed by the original contract for the service between Lake City and Ouray by way of Mineral Point across the mountains—thirty hours, that is, at the rate of one mile and fifty-three hundredths of a mile an hour—was owing to the great difficulties attending the crossing of the mountains, as already mentioned. When the line was changed to one making a detour of the mountains by way of Barnum, over a road easily traversable by wagons, it was an obvious duty to the public that the service at the rate of one mile and fifty-three hundredths of a mile per hour should be expedited.

Petitions for a change of that portion of the route which led over the mountains came from officers of the Counties of Ouray and Hildale, in which the proposed new line was to run, and they represented that over its whole distance there was a wagon road by which the mail could be carried the year round. On the 30th of September, 1878, whilst the Postoffice Department had before it the question of opening a new line between Lake City and Ouray, the defendant Sanderson addressed a letter to the second assistant postmaster-general, suggesting that, in lieu of the temporary service ordered between Barnum and Ouray, such service should be made by embracing Barnum in the route No. 88,146 between Garland and Ouray, increasing the distance one hundred and ten miles, "and expediting the schedule from the present, at the pro rata rate of seventy-two hours, to thirty-six hours between Lake City and Ouray." On the same day Sanderson was consulted by the Postoffice Department, or at least was requested to give an estimate, as to the additional number of horses and men which would be required for the increased expedition proposed, and in response to the request he wrote to the Department the following letter, verified by his oath:

"WASHINGTON, Sept. 30, 1878.

"Hon. THOS. J. BRADY, Second Asst Postmaster-General:

"Sir: To perform the service on route No. 88,146, between Lake City and Ouray, on the present schedule of seventy-two hours, requires twenty-two horses and eleven men, and to perform the same service on a schedule of thirty-six hours it will require (66) sixty-six horses and twenty-two men.

"(Signed) J. L. Sanderson.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of September, 1878.

"(Signed) J. H. Herron,
"Notary Public."

There was no existing schedule prescribing seventy-two hours for carrying the mail between Lake City and Ouray, as assumed by Sanderson. As the schedule of time prescribed in the original contract between those places over the mountains was at the rate of one mile and fifty-three hundredths of a mile an hour, he assumed that rate as the existing schedule for the new and easily traversable line of one hundred and ten miles, which would require at the same slow pace seventy-two hours. Notwithstanding the obvious error of this assumption, the evidence tended to show that the Postoffice Department acted upon his representations and estimates. Having extended the route one hundred and ten miles, and allowed the additional compensation provided by the statute upon such extension, it also allowed compensation for expediting the service on the new line, upon this extravagant estimate, at the rate of $15,994.77 a year. That sum for the increased expedition was regularly paid during the term of the original contract.

It is admitted that no additional horses and men for which this allowance was made were ever employed. Neither the horses nor the men exceeded the number originally employed to perform the service, and the defendant Sanderson testified that no greater number was necessary to perform it within the thirty-six hours mentioned, and that he never afterwards corrected his estimate, but continued to draw pay from the government as though the additional horses and men were employed.

It appears that the sums thus allowed and paid to the sub-contractors, for stock and carriers which were never required and never employed, aggregated $59,592.98, constituting the principal item in the amount claimed in this action.

On the trial, the plaintiffs requested the court to instruct the jury, among other things, to the effect, first, that if they believed that service on a portion of the route between Lake City and Ouray by way of Barnum was expedited and extra compensation allowed for such expedition upon the supposition that sixty-six horses and twenty-two men would be necessary to carry the mail on that portion upon a schedule of thirty-six hours, and there was in fact no increase in the number of horses and men required above the number which the defendants swore were necessary to perform the service upon a schedule of seventy-two hours, then the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the sums paid upon such allowance, for in that event they were paid in violation of law; and, second, that in determining the questions in issue the jury could only consider the number of horses and men actually necessary to carry the mail, irrespective of the number of men and horses required by the defendants as carriers of passengers and freight.

The court refused to give these instructions, and charged the jury substantially as follows: That if the agreement for compensation for the additional service was made without authority of law and in excess of all provisions of the statute, the government could not recover any part of the consideration paid the defendants for carrying the mail, unless in the making of the contract there was fraud, participated in and countenanced by the officers of the Department who acted in the matter; that if they were of opinion that the parties combined and agreed to raise the compensation to an extraordinary figure, with a view to benefit the defendants, knowing that the compensation was excessive, the government could recover it back; but if they were of opinion that those parties acted honestly and fairly, and in the belief that they were dealing fairly with each other, and that the compensation for the services to be performed was reasonable, there could be no recovery, without reference to what the service actually cost, and without reference to what turned out afterwards with respect to the force required. To the refusal of the court to give the instructions requested, and to the instructions given, the plaintiffs excepted. The jury found a verdict for the defendants, upon which judgment was rendered in their favor, to review which the case is brought to this court.

The Statutes upon which the government relies to recover in this case, upon the facts presented, are contained in sections 3960, 3961 and 4057 of the Revised Statutes. Those sections are as follows:

"SEC. 3960. Compensation for additional service in carrying the mail shall not be in excess of the exact proportion which the original compensation bears to the original service; and when any such additional service is ordered, the sum to be allowed therefor shall be expressed in the order, and entered upon the books of the Department; and no compensation shall be paid for any additional regular service rendered before the issuing of such order.

"SEC. 3961. No extra allowance shall be made for any increase of expedition in carrying the mail unless thereby the employment of additional stock and carriers is made necessary, and in such case the additional compensation shall bear no greater proportion to the additional stock and carriers necessarily employed than the compensation in the original contract bears to the stock and carriers necessarily employed in its execution."

"SEC. 4057. In all cases where money has been paid out of the funds of the Postoffice Department under the pretense that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed, or as additional allowance for increased service actually rendered, when the additional allowance exceeds the sum which, according to law, might rightfully have been allowed therefor, and in all other cases where money of the Department has been paid to any person in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by the mistake, collusion or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the Postmaster-General shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment or excess, with interest thereon."

In their amended complaint the plaintiffs claim not only the amount allowed and paid each year for the expedited service, but also the amount allowed and paid each year, namely, $10,668.26, for the additional service by the new line from Lake City to Ouray. It would seem from what took place on the trial that the latter amount was claimed on the ground that that route was a distinct one from that prescribed in No. 38,146, and that the contract for its service could only be made after advertisement for bids. The judge who tried the case below was of that opinion, and so instructed the jury; but we are unable to agree in that view. The new line became necessary to avoid an almost impassable portion of the original route, and changes of that kind can be authorized by the Postmaster-General within the established regulations of the Postoffice Department. Those of 1873 provide in terms, that "the Postmaster-General may order an increase or extension of service on a route by allowing therefor a pro rata increase on the contract pay." Such increase of service may be made by enlarging the distance to be traveled when that will better accomplish the object of the original contract, as well as by requiring a greater number of trips between specified points. That object was accomplished in this case by the increase of distance from the detour around the mountains. The carrying of the mails between the original terminal points was thereby greatly facilitated. The compensation allowed for this additional service over the hundred and ten miles of increased route was in accordance with section 3960 of the Revised Statutes in the exact proportion which the original compensation bore to the original service. There was no excess in the allowance.

But the amount allowed for the expedited service over the new line stands upon a different footing. The evidence produced on the trial tended to show that the allowance of $15,994.77 each year for that service was made upon a false estimate of the additional expenses which would be required; that a slight consideration of the subject would have exposed its error; and that officers of the Department and the subcontractors were well acquainted with the fact that the new line was one that could be more easily traveled. It appeared by the petitions presented to the Department that the change of route was asked because such was the condition of the new line desired, while the line of the original route between Mineral Point and Ouray was impassable for the greater part of the year, and then only by pack horses or on snowshoes. To apply the same schedule time to both lines between the same points—the original and the new one—was to ignore the known differences in the character of the roads over them, as disclosed by the evidence on file in the Department. It is true the head of the Department and those who stand immediately under him as assistants or deputies are unable in person to supervise all the estimates made in so extensive a Department as that of the Post-office, and, therefore, great reliance is placed upon the judgment in those matters of clerks and subordinate officers. Irregularities and favoritism and corrupt practices are therefore sometimes found to exist which escape observation and detection. It was to avoid fraud and mistakes from this as well as from other causes that sections 3961 and 4057 were adopted.

Section 3961 declares that "no extra allowance shall be made for any increase of expedition in carrying the mail unless thereby the employment of additional stock and carriers is made necessary." And section 4057, after providing that "in all cases where money has been paid out of the Postoffice Department under the pretense that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed, or as additional allowance for increased service actually rendered, when the additional allowance exceeds the sum which, according to law, might rightfully have been allowed therefor," declares that "in all other cases where money of the Department has been paid to any person in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by the mistake, collusion or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the Postmaster-General shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment or excess, with interest thereon."

These sections would seem to cover the present case. It cannot be pretended that the allowance for expediting the service over the new route was not made upon erroneous representations. It is admitted that such was their character. Whether they were fraudulent as well as erroneous was a matter to be left to the jury, and, if fraudulent, their influence in vitiating the payment and authorizing the recovery of the moneys cannot be affected by knowledge of their character and participation in the result sought to be obtained by any subordinate officers of the Department. Whether they participated in the fraud or were simply imposed upon by the defendants, cannot change the legal liability of the latter. The court therefore erred in instructing the jury that in such cases there could be no recovery of the money unless the fraud was participated in and countenanced by such officers.

But, aside from any consideration of the question of fraud, the evidence produced at the trial tended to show that the allowance was made to the sub-contractors, for the expedited service, upon a clear mistake as to what additional number of men and of animals were required for such service, and that the money was paid in ignorance of the fact that no additional number had been employed in the performance of that service. Such being the evidence, the plaintiffs were entitled to the instructions asked which are mentioned above. It is no answer to say that the amount of compensation for the expedited service was a matter for the determination of the Postoffice Department. Its determination cannot operate to defeat the express declaration of the Statute prescribing the conditions upon which contracts with the Department shall be made. If an allowance is founded upon a clear mistake of fact, not a mere error of judgment, and payments are in consequence made, the Statute provides that "the Postmaster-General shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment or excess, with interest," which means that if such mistake be established in the action of the Department a recovery must follow.

We admit that where matters appertaining to the postal service are left to the discretion and judgment of the Postmaster-General, the exercise of that judgment and discretion cannot in general be interfered with, and the results following defeated. But the very rule supposes that information upon the matters upon which the judgment and discretion are invoked is presented to the officer for consideration, or knowledge respecting them is possessed by him. He is not at liberty, any more than a private agent, to act upon mere guesses and surmises, without information or knowledge on the subject. If the defendant Sanderson intended no fraud by his letter of September 30, 1878, to the assistant postmaster-general, which he verified by his oath; if, in contradiction to his positive assertions, his testimony can be taken, that he did not know at the time anything about the matter in relation to which he was writing, and that the officers of the Department were well aware that he had no knowledge or information of the subject,—then they acted upon his guesses only, and not upon evidence upon the subject, and their decision cannot be received as conclusive. It would be, indeed, a mischievous doctrine in its consequences if a decision thus made could conclude the government from recovering its money paid for additional stock and carriers which were never required and never employed in its service.

It is also true that where the subjects in relation to which the contract of parties is made are necessarily of an uncertain and speculative character or value, and that is known to the parties, a mere mistake by them in their estimate of the value is not deemed sufficient to authorize a recovery of the moneys paid upon the erroneous estimate. If this were a case of that description no recovery could be had. But whether it was so or not was the very issue in the cause to be determined by the jury upon the evidence.

It is familiar law that an action may be maintained to recover back money paid as the price of articles sold, or of work done, when the articles are not delivered or the work not done. The reason is that the consideration for the payment has failed. It is not perceived that the principle of law sought to be applied in this case is in any essential particular different. If the contract for extra allowance was void by reason of fraud or clear mistake, the action becomes simply one for the return of moneys paid for services of stock and carriers never rendered, but which when payment was made were believed to have been rendered. As in the case of goods not delivered, or work ordered not done, the consideration to the party paying has failed. As said by Baron Parkes in Kelly v. Solari, 9 Mees. & W. 54, 58, "Where money is paid to another under the influence of a mistake, that is, upon the supposition that a specific fact is true which would entitle the other to the money, but which fact is untrue, and the money would not have been paid if it had been known to the payer that the fact was untrue, an action will lie to recover it back, and it is against conscience to retain it." See also Townsend v. Crowley, 8 C. B. N. S. 477; Strickland v. Turner, 7 Exch. 208. Reasons for the application of the rule are much more potent in the case of contracts of the government than of contracts of individuals; for the government must necessarily rely upon the acts of agents, whose ignorance, carelessness or unfaithfulness would otherwise often bind it, to the serious injury of its operations.

The judgment must be reversed, and the cause remanded for a new trial, and it is so ordered.

L. N. YOUNG ET AL., Appts.,

v.

L. H. EWART, Administrator.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 287-271.)

Removal of cause from state court to United States court—diverse citizenship at time of removal and at commencement of suit.

1. Under the Act of March 2, 1867, it is essential, in order to a removal of a cause from a state court to a United States court, where there are several plaintiffs or several defendants, that all the necessary parties on one side must be citizens of the State where the suit is brought, and all on the other side must be citizens of another State or States, and the proper citizenship must exist when the action is commenced as well as when the petition for removal is filed.
2. As it does not appear in this case from the petition and affidavits, or in the record, that diverse citizenship as to the parties therein named existed at the commencement of the suit, nor that diverse citizenship existed between the complainant and all the necessary defendants at the time the petition and affidavits were severally filed, the cause was not properly removed, and the state court has never lost jurisdiction.

[No. 75.]

Submitted Nov. 6, 1889. Decided Dec. 2, 1889.

APPEAL from a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia, determining the amounts due to and priorities of creditors of John N. Clarkson, and directing the sale of certain real estate, in an action commenced in the Circuit Court of Kanawha, West Virginia, and removed therefrom into the first above-named court. Reversed and remitted, with a direction to remand the cause to the state court.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. T. B. Swann for appellants.

Messrs. S. A. Miller and J. F. Brown for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In December, 1865, Milton Parker filed his bill in the Circuit Court of Kanawha County, West Virginia, against John N. Clarkson and some seventy other defendants, seeking the marshaling of assets and the subjection of Clarkson's property to the satisfaction of certain judgments held by the complainant against him, which appears to have been treated, and may be considered, as having been intended to bring all Clarkson's creditors into concourse, and after the adjustment of the liens of those having security, to devote any remaining property, or any surplus arising upon the securities, to the discharge of his liabilities. The cause was referred to a commissioner to take, state and report an account of the property owned by Clarkson, and the liens thereon and their priorities, and various reports were made in the premises.

On the 8th day of July, 1871, C. G. Hussey & Company and John Johns, assignees of John N. Clarkson in bankruptcy, described in an order of the circuit court of that date as defendants, filed their petition and affidavit, sworn to by "J. N. Clarkson, a party to the above-mentioned suit," for the removal of the cause into the United States Court for the District of West Virginia, in these words:

"Your petitioners, John Johns, assignee of J. N. Clarkson in bankruptcy, and a citizen and inhabitant of the State of Virginia, and C. G. Hussey and Charles Avery, partners in business, using the name of C. G. Hussey & Company, and citizens and inhabitants of the State of Pennsylvania, respectfully represent unto your Honor that they are parties defendants and also plaintiffs on a bill of review and petition in a suit pending in chancery in your Honor's court, in Kanawha County, in which Milton Parker is complainant and John N. Clarkson and others are defendants.

"That among the defendants are E. Hemmings, S. Thornburg, A. H. Beach, Henry Chappell, J. H. Brown, Ann Thomas, J. M. Laidley and J. D. Lewis and J. C. Ruby, all of whom are citizens and inhabitants of the State of West Virginia; that said suit is now pending in said Circuit Court of Kanawha County, and in said suit there is a controversy between your petitioners in different rights, and the aforesaid parties, citizens and inhabitants of the State of West Virginia, in which said suit is pending; that the matter in dispute exceeds the sum of $500, exclusive of costs. Your petitioners have reason to and do believe, that from prejudice or local influence they, nor either of them, will not be able to obtain justice in such state court; they file this petition for the removal of said cause of Parker v. Clarkson and others, now pending in the Circuit Court for Kanawha County, West Virginia, unto the District Court of the United States, held at Charleston, West Virginia, the same being in the district where this suit is pending," etc.

The cause was thereupon ordered to be removed as prayed.

On the 10th day of April, 1872, another order was entered in the case by the state circuit court, reciting that a mistake had been made in respect to the filing of a bond upon removal, and the bond being now filed, the court directs such removal on the petition of July 8th, 1871, and "on the affidavit of the said C. G. Hussey, this day filed, the sufficiency of which affidavit and bond is hereby approved by this court."

The affidavit referred to is as follows:

"Your petitioners, C. G. Hussey and Charles Avery, partners in trade, using the name, firm and style of C. G. Hussey & Co., and citizens and inhabitants of the State of Pennsylvania, respectfully represent unto your Honor that they are parties defendants, and also parties plaintiffs on petition and bill of review in a cause pending, on the chancery side of your Honor's court, in Kanawha County, West Virginia, in which Milton Parker is complainant and John N. Clarkson et al. are defendants.

"That among the defendants are E. Hemmings, A. H. Beach, H. Chappell, J. A. Brown, J. D. Lewis, J. M. Laidley, all of whom are citizens and inhabitants of the State of West Virginia; that said suit and bill of review therein are now pending in said court for Kanawha County, W. Va.

"That in said suit and bill of review there is a controversy between your petitioners, in different rights, and the aforesaid parties, citizens and inhabitants of the State of West Virginia, in which State said suit is pending; that the matter so in controversy and dispute exceeds the sum of $500, exclusive of costs.

"Your petitioners have reason to and do believe that from prejudice or local influences they will not be able to obtain justice in said state court.

"They file this petition for the removal of said cause of Parker v. Clarkson et al. now pending in the Circuit Court for Kanawha County, West Virginia, unto the District Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia (having circuit court powers), held at Charleston, West Virginia, same being in the district where this suit is now pending."

January 21, 1873, the record was filed and cause docketed in the United States court. Various proceedings were afterwards taken therein, and a decree was rendered on the 12th day of December, 1886, determining the amounts due to, and priorities of, some of the creditors, and directing the sale of certain real estate. From this decree the pending appeal was prosecuted.

The record is in a confused and imperfect condition, but it shows, among other things, that C. G. Hussey & Company were judgment creditors of Clarkson, and Hussey and his partner are described in both petitions as citizens and inhabitants of the State of Pennsylvania. In the first petition, nine persons, and, in the second, six, are designated from among the defendants as citizens and inhabitants of the State of West Virginia. It is stated in the first petition that Clarkson's assignee in bankruptcy was, at the time of filing it, a citizen and inhabitant of the State of Virginia. The assignee did not join in the second, although his name is signed by attorney to the bond given on removal.

There was no separable controversy here (Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 280 [29: 898]; Ayers v. Chicago, 101 U. S. 184, 187 [25: 838, 840]); but if there were, the provision as to the removal of such a controversy has no application to a removal on the ground of local prejudice, under the Act of March 2, 1867 (chap. 196, 14 Stat. 558), upon which these petitions were based. Jefferson v. Driver, 117 U. S. 272 [29: 897].

The provisions of that Act are reproduced in the third subdivision of section 639 of the Revised Statutes, and it was and is essential, in order to such removal, where there are several plaintiffs or several defendants, that all the necessary parties on one side must be citizens of the State where the suit is brought, and all on the other side must be citizens of another State or States, and the proper citizenship must exist when the action is commenced as well as when the petition for removal is filed. Sewing Machine Co's Case, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 553 [21: 914]; Vannevar v. Bryant, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 41 [22: 476]; American Bible Soc. v. Groce, 101 U. S. 610 [25: 847]; Cambria Iron Co. v. Ashburn, 118 U. S. 54 [80: 60]; Hancock v. Holbrook, 119 U. S. 586 [30: 538]; Fletcher v. Hamlet, 116 U. S. 408 [29: 679]. It does not appear from either of these petitions and affidavits, or elsewhere in the record, that diverse citizenship as to the parties therein named existed at the commencement of the suit, nor that diverse citizenship existed between the complainant and all the necessary defendants at the time the petitions and affidavits were severally filed. The cause was not properly removed, and the state court has never lost jurisdiction. Stevens v. Nichols, 130 U. S. 280 [32: 914]; Orehore v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 181 U. S. 240 [33: 144], and cases cited.

The decree is reversed and the record remitted to the district court, with a direction to remand the cause to the state court.

WILHELM PICKHARDT ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

EDWIN A. MERRITT, late Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 252-259.)

Customs statutes, interpretation of—goods manufactured after passage of Act imposing duties—words as commercially understood—similitude—aniline dyes.

1. In interpreting customs statutes, commercial terms are to be construed according to the commercial understanding in regard to them.
2. This rule is applicable in this case, although the articles in question were unknown when the Statute was enacted which imposed the duties exacted.
3. The fact that, at the date of an Act imposing duties, goods of a certain kind had not been manufactured, does not withdraw them from the class to which they belong, when the language of the Statute clearly and fairly includes them. It is sufficient if it so includes them according to commercial understanding.
4. In an action to recover back an excess of duties illegally exacted upon dyes, the rate of duty paid on them being that imposed by the Statute on "aniline dyes," it is not error for the court to charge the jury that the question was whether the articles fell within the description of aniline dyes, as commercially known, or bore a similitude to articles which fell within that description as they were known when the Statute was enacted; and that the jury were to look at the term "aniline dyes" according to its then commercial usage.
5. It was not error to charge the jury that if the dyes, according to the understanding of commercial men, would, when imported, be included in the class known as aniline dyes, they were subject to duty as aniline dyes.

[No. 97.]

Argued Nov. 12, 13, 1889. Decided Dec. 2, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment for the defendant in an action brought against the Collector of the Port of New York to recover duties paid under protest on importations. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Benj. F. Thurston and Livingston Gifford, for plaintiffs in error:

It is a general rule of interpretation of customs statutes to construe commercial names of articles according to the commercial understanding at the time.

Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 430 (8: 128); Elliott v. Swartwout, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 137 (9: 878); U. S. v. One Hundred and Twelve Casks of Sugar, 88 U. S. 8 Pet. 277 (8: 944); Curtis v. Martin, 44 U. S. 8 How. 106 (11: 516); Maillard v. Lawrence, 57 U. S. 16 How. 251 (14: 925); Arthur v. Morrison, 96 U. S. 108 (24: 764); Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112 (24: 766); Arthur v. Davies, 96 U. S. 135 (24: 810); Greenleaf v. Goodrich, 101 U. S. 278 (25: 845); Robertson v. Salomon, 180 U. S. 412 (32: 995); Barber v. Schell, 107 U. S. 617 (27: 490); Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 70 (31: 648).

That general rule is inapplicable. In all cases where it has been applied the article in question had a commercial name at the time the law was enacted, and the commercial evidence relied upon related to that period.

The admission of evidence and the charge touching upon what these articles were called in commerce about the time of the trial were error.

Newman v. Arthur, 199 U. S. 132, 138 (27: 883, 885).

It was an error to admit evidence of what these colors were called at a date subsequent to their date of entry and the exaction of duty, which constitutes this cause of action.

Homer v. Austin, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 486 (17: 688); Reiche v. Smythe, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 162 (20: 566); Greenleaf v. Goodrich, 101 U. S. 278, 284 (25: 845, 847).

Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor-General, for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action at law, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, by Wilhelm Pickhardt and Adolph Kuttroff against Edwin A. Merritt, Collector of the Port of New York, to recover duties paid under protest on importations into that Port from Hamburg, the entries having been made at the custom-house in January and February, 1879. There were proper protests and appeals to the Secretary of the Treasury, and decisions by that officer. The goods were dyes or colors called naphthylamine red, orange II, orange IV and resorcine red J. At the trial, before Judge Wheeler and a jury, there was a verdict for the defendant, and a judgment in his favor for costs, to review which the plaintiffs have brought a writ of error

The Collector assessed a duty upon the articles in question of 50 cents per pound and 85 per cent ad valorem, under that provision of schedule M of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes, 2d ed. p. 479, which reads as follows: "Paints and dyes—aniline dyes and colors, by whatever name known: fifty cents per pound, and thirty-five per centum ad valorem." The plaintiffs claimed, in their protest, that the articles were not aniline dyes, and were liable to a duty of only 20 per cent ad valorem, under section 2516 of the Revised Statutes, which provides that "there shall be levied, collected and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles, not herein enumerated or provided for, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem; and on all articles manufactured in whole or in part, not herein enumerated or provided for, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem."

The course of legislation on the subject of duties on aniline dyes has been as follows: By section 11 of the Act of June 80, 1864, chap. 171 (13 Stat. 212), the following duty was imposed: "On aniline dyes, one dollar per pound and thirty-five per centum ad valorem." By section 21 of the Act of July 14, 1870, chap. 255 (16 Stat. 264), the following duty was imposed: "On aniline dyes and colors, by whatever name known, fifty cents per pound, and thirty-five per centum ad valorem;" and by section 22 of the same Act, p. 266, picric acid, which appears to be not chemically an aniline dye, but a phenol dye, though obtained from coal-tar, was made free of duty. The provision of the Act of 1870 in regard to aniline dyes and colors was carried into the Revised Statutes, enacted in 1874, as was also the provision in regard to picric acid.

The question sought to be raised by the plaintiffs in the present case could not arise under the Revised Statutes as amended by the Act of March 3, 1883, chap. 121, because, under title 33, section 2502, schedule A, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (23 Stat. 498), the following duty is imposed: "All coal-tar colors or dyes, by whatever name known, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, thirty-five per centum ad valorem;" and picric acid was not included by name in the list of articles made free of duty by section 2503 as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883. The articles in question, which, it is claimed, were not aniline dyes or colors, are admitted to be "coal-tar colors or dyes."

The plaintiffs claimed on the trial, and claim here, that the words "aniline dyes and colors, by whatever name known," are words of description, and not words used in a general commercial sense. They therefore introduced a good deal of evidence for the purpose of showing that the articles in question were, physically and chemically, not aniline dyes or colors, though derived from coal-tar. It was shown that none of those articles were known in commerce at the time the Revised Statutes were enacted, resorcine red J having been known first in 1875, orange II and IV in 1877, and naphthylamine red in 1878. On the other hand, the defendant introduced testimony for the purpose of showing that the articles in question were known in trade, when imported, as "aniline dyes," and that in 1874 the term

"aniline dyes" had been applied in trade to all dyes derived from coal-tar, or artificial dyes.

The testimony on the part of the plaintiffs tended to show that the articles in question were not chemically aniline colors; that naphthylamine red and orange II and IV were azo colors; that resorcline red J was an eosine color; that picric acid was a phenol color; that aniline colors had high tinctorial power, as compared with natural colors, while the tinctorial power of azo colors was no higher than that of natural colors; that aniline colors attached themselves to fabrics without manipulation, easily and directly, while azo colors attached themselves with more difficulty, being assisted by mordants; that aniline colors were wanting in fastness, while azo colors were relatively fast; that aniline colors were generally on the blue shades, either blues, or violets, or reds which contained blue or green, while azo colors had exactly the shades that aniline colors lacked,—yellows, orange, and yellowish reds; that aniline colors were not fast to acids or alkalis, while azo colors were relatively fast to both acids and alkalis, and were sometimes even brightened or cleared by acids and alkalis; that aniline colors combined readily with albumen, which was largely used as a mordant and in photography, while azo colors did not combine with albumen; and that aniline colors were not acid, unless sulphonated, while azo colors were always acid. In regard to resorcline red J the plaintiffs gave evidence tending to show that an aniline color could be used as a dye, while resorcline red could not be used generally as a dye; that an aniline color could not be used generally or efficiently for paints, while resorcline red was generally used as a pigment for paints; and that the color of an aniline dye was a crimson, running up to violet or bluish red, while the color of resorcline red was scarlet or yellowish red.

The plaintiffs insist that the court erred at the trial in admitting evidence to show what the importations in question were called in trade at the time of the trial in 1884, which was ten years after the Revised Statutes were enacted, and five years after the entries took place; that it also erred in admitting evidence to show the signification of the words "aniline dyes and colors," as a commercial term, in contradistinction to a descriptive term; and that it erred in refusing to charge the jury, as requested by the plaintiffs, as follows: "That the term 'aniline dyes and colors, by whatever name known,' is not used in a general commercial sense, but as a descriptive term, and primarily includes only such dyes as are in fact aniline by their constitution;" and also: "That, in determining the question at issue, to instruct the jury to disregard all the testimony of the defendant as to the general name under which the articles in question were bought and sold."

They complain that the court erred in charging the jury that, if any of the articles in question would be, according to the understanding of commercial men, dealers in the articles and importers of them, included in the class of articles known as aniline dyes, by whatever name they had come to be known at the time in question, they were subject to the duty imposed on aniline dyes; that Congress used the term "aniline dyes" as applied to a class of articles which, in June, 1874, had acquired that name by reputation and use among dealers in and importers of such articles; and that the Statute was made for the future.

They also complain that the court refused to charge the jury, as requested by the plaintiffs, as follows: "That it is immaterial how the articles in question were regarded in trade, and that the plaintiffs are entitled to a verdict if they are satisfied, upon a fair preponderance of testimony, that the dyes in question are a new and different dye from the aniline dyes known in 1874, and are not in fact aniline dyes, unless the jury should find similitude under the Statute." They also complain that the court refused to charge the jury, as requested by the plaintiffs, as follows: "If the jury find that the plaintiffs' goods were not known in commerce until since June, 1874, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover, unless the jury find they bear the statutory similitude to the aniline dyes and colors known in 1874." In regard to each of these last two requests, the court declined to charge otherwise than as it had already charged.

They further complain that the court erred in refusing to charge, as requested by the plaintiffs, that, if the jury should find, upon a fair preponderance of testimony, that the articles in question "were used as a substitute and in place of cochineal, and not as a substitute for any aniline dye known at the time of their introduction, the plaintiffs, on that branch of the case, are entitled to a verdict." In regard to that request, the court said that the general instruction to the jury on the subject was sufficient.

We think that the objections to evidence before recited, and the objections before mentioned to particular parts of the charge of the court, and to the refusals of the court to charge, and to its refusal to charge otherwise than as it had charged, are untenable.

The court instructed the jury that if the four articles in question, according to the understanding of commercial men, dealers in and importers of them, would, when imported, "be included in the class of articles known as aniline dyes, by whatever name they had come to be known," they were subject to duty as aniline dyes, and the defendant was entitled to a verdict. We see no objection to this instruction. It was in accordance with the established rule that, in interpreting customs statutes, commercial terms are to be construed according to the commercial understanding in regard to them. Nor is this rule inapplicable to this case because the articles in question were unknown in 1874, when the Statute was enacted. As the court said to the jury, the law was made for the future; and the term "aniline dyes and colors, by whatever name known," included articles which should be commercially known, whenever afterwards imported, as "aniline dyes and colors." In Neuman v. Arthur, 109 U. S. 182 [27: 888], it was held that the fact that, at the date of an Act imposing duties, goods of a certain kind had not been manufactured, does not withdraw them from the class to which they belong, when the language of the Statute clearly and fairly includes them. But it is sufficient if it so includes them according to commercial understanding.

The bill of exceptions states as follow: "In the course of the trial a large amount of testimony was introduced, on behalf of both parties, as to the similitude or resemblance, under Revised Statutes, section 2499, of the dyes and colors of the plaintiffs' importations and various dyes and colors known in trade of this country, and by chemists from 1869 to time of trial, as aniline dyes and colors, it being contended upon the part of the defendant that the importations of the plaintiffs, if not specified under and covered by the term 'aniline dyes,' yet that they were chargeable as aniline dyes by similitude."

Section 2499, thus referred to, reads as follows: "There shall be levied, collected and paid, on each and every non-enumerated article which bears a similitude, either in material, quality, texture or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this title, as chargeable with duty, the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any non-enumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles, on which different rates of duty are chargeable, there shall be levied, collected and paid, on such non-enumerated article, the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest duty; and on all articles manufactured from two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which any of its component parts may be chargeable."

On the question of similitude the court instructed the jury that if the articles in question did not fall within the class of articles known as "aniline dyes," or either of them did not, the jury were then to proceed to the consideration of the question arising under section 2499 of the Revised Statutes, as to similitude; that, if the four articles did not fall within the class of "aniline dyes," then the question would be whether any one of them bore a similitude, either in "material, quality, texture or the use to which it may be applied," to what were known as aniline dyes at the time the Revised Statutes were enacted; that, if it did, it was dutiable at the same rate as aniline dyes were; that the word "texture" did not apply to the subject; that, if any one of the articles bore a similitude or resemblance, in material or quality, to what were known as aniline dyes in 1874, it was dutiable at the same rate as an aniline dye; that if either of them bore a similitude in the use to which it might be applied, to aniline dyes known and in use in 1874, it was dutiable at the same rate as an aniline dye; that the mere application to the dyeing of fabrics would not create the similitude, but that, if there was a similitude in the mode of use, a similitude in the same kind of dyeing, producing the same colors in substantially the same way, so as to take the place of aniline dyes in use, there would be a similitude in use; that, if all the articles were neither aniline dyes nor bore such similitude, the plaintiffs were entitled to a verdict for the full amount they claimed; that, if any less than all of them were neither aniline dyes nor bore such similitude, the plaintiffs were entitled to a verdict, as to those, for the amount of duties charged which ought not to have been charged; that the question was whether the articles fell within the description of "aniline dyes or colors, by whatever name known," as commercially known, or bore a similitude to articles which fell within that description, as they were known in 1874; that the jury were not to consider "aniline dyes" as a term synonymous with "coal-tar dyes;" and that they were to look at the term "aniline dyes" according to its commercial usage in 1874.

The plaintiffs excepted to that part of the charge in regard to similitude which had reference to the expression "similitude in material," and to that part which related to "similitude in the same kind of dyeing," and also requested the court to charge the jury, "in respect to similitude of quality," that the mere quality of producing color, or dyeing, was not a sufficient similitude to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for the defendant by reason of similitude. In response to this request, the court said that it had already instructed the jury that the mere fact that the articles would color was not a similitude. The plaintiffs also excepted to the charge of the court as to similitude in use.

We are of opinion that the charge on the subject of similitude submitted the question properly to the jury; and that it was not error to refuse the request to charge, that, if the jury should find that any one of the articles was used as a substitute and in place of cochineal, and not as a substitute for any aniline dye known at the time of its introduction, the plaintiffs, as to that branch of the case, were entitled to a verdict.

Other questions are raised in the bill of exceptions which we do not deem it necessary to notice particularly. We see no error in the record.

Judgment affirmed.

JOSEPH E. YOUNG, Appt.,

THE TOWNSHIP OF CLARENDON and THE MICHIGAN AIR LINE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 340-356.)

Power of municipality to issue bonds—Michigan town bonds—title, when did not vest in railroad company—laches—trust property—substantial equity.

1. A municipality has no power to issue its negotiable bonds in aid of a railroad, except by legislative permission.
2. Bonds of a Town in Michigan, delivered to the state treasurer, under the Michigan Act of March 22, 1866, as trustee for the Town and for the Railroad Company for which they were issued, which were never indorsed and delivered by him to the Company as required by said Act, never became operative.
3. Title to such bonds did not vest in the Company by the delivery of them to the treasurer and the compliance by the Company with the provisions of such Act; they could only be delivered to the Company so as to pass the title, on the certificate of the governor. Such certificate, under such Act, was a condition precedent to the power of the treasurer to deliver.

4. A creditor of the Railroad Company who endeavors, by suit in equity, to reach and subject to the payment of his debt the alleged equitable debt of the Town to the Company by reason of the non-delivery of the bonds to the Company and their return to the Town, may be defeated by the laches of the Company in the pursuit of its rights against the Town.
5. Such bonds [were not perfected instruments, and did not become trust property in the hands of the treasurer, and cannot be followed as such into any hands to which they may be traceable.
6. On a bill in the nature of a bill for specific performance or for an equitable garnishment, the court may inquire where is the substantial equity in the case.

[No. 84.]

Argued Oct. 23, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan, dismissing a suit in equity for an account between The Michigan Air Line Railroad Company and the Township of Clarendon brought by a creditor of such Company in reference to certain alleged town bonds, and asking for a decree against said Town in favor of such creditor for the sum shown to be due from said Town to said Company, to be applied to the satisfaction of a judgment against the Company. Affirmed.

Reported below, 26 Fed. Rep. 805.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

On the 24th of February, 1885, the appellant exhibited in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan his bill, in the nature of a creditor's bill, against the appellees.

The bill avers that, on the 12th of November, 1884, the appellant obtained a judgment against the Railroad Company for the sum of $355,865.24; that an execution upon the judgment was issued, and was returned nulla bona; that the judgment is still unpaid; and that the Railroad Company is a corporation, organized on the 28th of August, 1868, by a consolidation of two companies—one organized under the laws of Michigan, and the other under those of Indiana, which consolidated Company was itself, on October 8, 1880, again consolidated with the St. Joseph Valley Railroad Company, retaining, however, its name of The Michigan Air Line Railroad Company.

The bill also alleges that after the first consolidation as aforesaid, and on the 23d of March, 1869, the Legislature of Michigan passed "An Act to Enable any Township, City or Village to Pledge its Aid, by Loan or Donation, to any Railroad Company now Chartered or Organized, or That May Hereafter be Organized, Under and by Virtue of the Laws of the State of Michigan, in the Construction of its Road." Said Act authorized the issue of aid bonds. In its fifth and sixth sections it provided as follows:

"Sec. 5. Whenever any such bonds as provided by provisions of this Act shall have been issued as therein specified, the same shall be delivered by the person, persons or officers having charge of the same to the treasurer of this State, who shall give a receipt therefor and hold the same as trustee for the municipality issuing the same and for the railroad company for which they were issued, and to be disposed of by said treasurer, in discharge of his trust, as hereinafter provided.

"Sec. 6. . . . Such bonds shall be safely kept by such treasurer for the benefit of the parties interested, and be disposed of by him in the following manner:—that is to say, whenever any railroad company in aid of which any of such bonds may have issued, shall present to said treasurer a certificate from the governor of this State that such railroad company has in all respects complied with the provisions of this Act, and is thereby entitled to any of such bonds, the same or such of said bonds as said company shall be entitled to receive, shall be delivered to said company, the treasurer first cutting therefrom, canceling and returning to the municipality the past-due coupons. The treasurer shall indorse upon each of said bonds the date of such delivery and to whom the same were delivered, and the same shall draw interest only from the time when so delivered; and the treasurer shall notify the clerk of the township or recorder or clerk of the city issuing the same of the date of the delivery of its bonds to such railroad company. . . . And in case any bonds so delivered to said treasurer by any such township or city shall not, within three years from the time when the same were received by him, be demanded in compliance with the terms of this Act, the same shall be canceled by said treasurer and returned to the proper officers of the township or city issuing the same."

The bill further avers that, in conformity with the provisions of this Act, the electors of the Township, on the 21st day of June, 1869, voted to pledge the aid of the Township by the loan of $10,000, to be paid by its 10 per cent bonds at par, upon certain terms and conditions in said vote stated, among which were, that the road should be located and constructed through said Township; that the time of payment of each of those bonds was to be postponed a year in the event of the non-completion of the road-bed and the ironing before the 1st of November, 1869; and that the Company would pay yearly to the Township a sum equal pro rata to the dividends paid stockholders; and said sums were to be in extinguishment of the interest on the bonds, and the excess over 10 per cent, if any, to be applied on the principal. The bonds thus voted were issued in pursuance of said Act, and were delivered to the state treasurer, to be by him held as trustee for both the Township and the Company on the terms and conditions of the Act, as aforesaid.

The bill then avers that the Railroad Company, in consideration of the Township's action, and relying thereon, entered upon the construction of said railroad, and, previous to the 1st of February, 1871, had fully constructed and ironed said road through the Township; and, at the time of the delivery of the bonds to the state treasurer, as aforesaid, had duly executed and delivered to the Township the agreement specified in the terms on which the aid was voted, and had performed every condition precedent to the earning of said bonds, and had become fully entitled to have the same delivered by the treasurer, except that it had not secured the certificate of the governor as required by said Act. While the road, however, was in the process of construction, the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan, on the 28th of May, 1870, declared the Act in question to be unconstitutional; but as the Railroad Company had already expended the sum of a million of dollars and upwards in construction, it could not stop, but went on and completed the road in full compliance with all the conditions of the vote. The Company then applied to the governor for his certificate under the Statute, exhibiting to him proofs of its title to receive the bonds; but he refused to give the same, giving as his sole reason for such refusal the judgment of the Supreme Court aforesaid.

The bill then avers that on May 28th, 1872, the Township, knowing the premises, and without the knowledge or consent of the Company, and in violation of the law and of the trust aforesaid, and in fraud of the Company's rights, induced the state treasurer, who had full knowledge of the foregoing facts, to surrender to the Township the said bonds and the coupons thereunto attached; that the Township has since retained the same, and withheld them from the Company; that said bonds and coupons, by reason of all the premises, became in justice and equity the property of said Railroad Company and the Township became bound thereon according to their tenor and effect; that the said Township is therefore equitably indebted to said Company to the whole amount of said bonds and coupons, with the interest thereon to the present time; and that the appellant is entitled to the said amount, towards the satisfaction of his judgment against the Company.

To this end an account is prayed to be stated between the Company and the Township, the appellees, and a final decree against the Township for the sum shown to be due, in favor of the appellant, is asked.

The bill was dismissed by the circuit court on demurrer, 26 Fed. Rep. 805; and the cause comes here on appeal by the complainant.

Messrs. John D. Conely and Alfred Lucking, for appellant:

The Railroad-Aid Act is unconstitutional.

People v. Salem, 20 Mich. 452.

The subscription passed to the new Company by the consolidation.

New Buffalo Twp. v. Cambria Iron Co. 105 U. S. 78 (26: 1024); Nugent v. Putnam County, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 241 (22: 88); Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 286-297 (17: 180-183); Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436 (27: 780); Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161 (30: 196).

The first consolidated Company existed when the aid was voted, and as the Town dealt with that Company and voted the aid to it, the legality of its consolidation cannot be attacked.

Toledo & A. A. R. Co. v. Johnson, 55 Mich. 456.

It is never necessary to set out the evidence of facts, but only facts themselves.

Wilson v. Eggleston, 27 Mich. 257-261; Palm-ster v. Pere Marquette Lumber Co. 81 Mich. 188, 184; Williams v. Hubbard, 1 Mich. 448-451; Story's Eq. Pl. § 240.

The aid voted was by a loan of the bonds of the Township.

Stanley v. Nye, 51 Mich. 232; New Buffalo Twp. v. Cambria Iron Co. 105 U. S. 78 (26: 1024).

A court of equity will treat as having been done what ought to have been done.

Knight v. Legh, 4 Bing. 589; Outhouse v. Outhouse, 18 Hun, 180.

By the delivery to the treasurer and by the performance of the conditions, the title to the bonds vested in the Company.

Couch v. Meeker, 2 Conn. 802; Taylor v. Thomas, 18 Kan. 217; Jackson v. Catlin, 2 Johns. 248; People v. Salem, 20 Mich. 452; Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60 (26: 1008); Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 678 (21: 382); Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677 (25: 968).

A court cannot, by judicial decision, destroy acquired contract rights.

Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 165-171 (30: 885-888); Moultrie County v. Rockingham Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 631, 635 (25: 631, 638).

The Railroad Company could not have procured a mandamus.

People v. Governor, 29 Mich. 820; Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105 (32: 78).

Where the trustee has violated his trust by an illegal conversion of the trust property, the cestui que trust has a right to follow the trust property.

Oliver v. Piatt, 44 U. S. 8 How. 338-401 (11: 622); Seymour v. Freer, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 202-214 (19: 306-310); May v. LeClair, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 217-231 (20: 50-58); Duncan v. Jaudon, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 165 (21: 142); Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54 (26: 693).

Messrs. Isaac Marston and W. K. Gibson, for appellees:

The Indiana corporation had no power or authority to consolidate.

Green's Brice on Ultra Vires, 633 n, and cases cited; Clearwater v. Meredith, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 25 (17: 604); Peninsular R. Co. v. Tharp, 28 Mich. 506; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Drinker, 30 Mich. 124.

No matter what power the Michigan Company possessed, there would be no legal consolidation.

State v. Consolidation Coal Co. 46 Md. 1; Furnum v. Blackstone Canal Corp. 1 Sumn. 46, 62; State Treasurer v. Auditor-Gen. 46 Mich. 284; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 286 (17: 180).

Every requirement of the Statute must be complied with.

Peninsular R. Co. v. Tharp, 28 Mich. 506; Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Langton, 32 Mich. 251.

It is not enough that the new Company is a corporation de facto, unless there have been dealings with it of such a character as to raise an estoppel.

Rodgers v. Wells, 44 Mich. 411; Tuttle v. Michigan A. L. R. Co. 85 Mich. 247, 253.

It must appear that the creditor has completely exhausted his remedy at law.

Freeman v. Michigan State Bank, Walk. Ch. 62; Wharton v. Fitch, Walk. Ch. 143; Albany City Bank v. Dorr, Walk. Ch. 817; Adsit v. Butler, 87 N. Y. 585; Walseo v. Seligman, 18 Fed. Rep. 415; Bassett v. Orr, 7 Biss. 296.

The corporation is guilty of laches, and should set forth its excuse clearly in its bill.

Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 188 (31: 896).

An escrow takes effect undoubtedly upon the performance of the condition upon which it is deposited, without any formal delivery by the depository. Suit can then be brought.

Couch v. Meeker, 2 Conn. 802; Taylor v. Thomas, 18 Kan. 217; Jackson v. Catlin, 2 Johns. 248.

The corporation must point out why it could not or did not obtain the information, where it seeks to excuse its delay.

New Albany v. Burke, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 96 (20: 155); Marsh v. Whitmore, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 185 (22: 485); Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 188 (31: 896).

For a creditor's bill to be maintainable, all legal remedies must have been exhausted.

Adair v. Butler, 87 N. Y. 586; Taylor v. Bowker, 111 U. S. 110 (28: 868).

The bonds are not equitable assets, subject to be reached by a bill in the nature of a creditor's bill.

Hayward v. Andrews, 106 U. S. 672-675 (27: 271, 272); Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105 (32: 78).

The plaintiff has no rights superior to those of the Railroad Company.

Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105, 110 (32: 78, 76).

If a claim sued at law would have been barred, it is barred in equity.

Carrol v. Green, 92 U. S. 509-516 (23: 788-740); Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201-210 (25: 481-484); Harpenden v. Reformed Prot. Dutch Church, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 455 (10: 1029); German-American Seminary v. Kiefer, 48 Mich. 112; Webster v. Gray, 87 Mich. 87; Dubois v. Campau, 87 Mich. 248.

A court will not construe exceptions into a Statute of Limitations.

Sacia v. De Graaf, 1 Cow. 856; Buckinghamshire v. Drury, Wilms. 177, cited in Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. Jr. 87; Edwards v. Ross, 58 Ga. 147; Blades v. Stokes, 1 Bart. (Tenn.) 812; Demarest v. Wynkoop, 8 Johns. Ch. 129; Bank of Alabama v. Dalton, 50 U. S. 9 How. 522 (18: 242).

The laches of the plaintiff forms an insuperable obstacle to his recovery. He is merely a creditor, and can have no greater rights than the Railroad Company.

Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105 (32: 78); Badger v. Badger, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 87, 94, 95 (17: 886, 888); Bowman v. Wathen, 42 U. S. 1 How. 189, 198 (11: 97); Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 618 (24: 855, 858); Preston v. Preston, 95 U. S. 200 (24: 494); Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201 (25: 481).

Bill should set forth the impediments to an earlier prosecution.

Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 188 (31: 896); Marsh v. Whitmore, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 185 (22: 485).

No general rule can be laid down as to what lapse of time will constitute laches.

Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161 (30: 196); Sullivan v. Portland & K. R. Co. 94 U. S. 896 (24: 324); Burke v. Smith, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 890 (21: 861); Harwood v. Cincinnati & C. A. L. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 79 (21: 558); Davison v. Davis, 125 U. S. 90 (31: 635); Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611 (24: 182 U. S.

855); Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 157, 160 (24: 422, 423); New Albany v. Burke, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 96 (20: 155).

Question of laches is properly raised by demurrer.

Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 567 (25: 815); Lansdale v. Smith, 106 U. S. 391 (27: 219); Speidel v. Henricks, 120 U. S. 877 (30: 718).

The Township is not owing the railroad any liquidated sum whatever.

Stanley v. Nye, 51 Mich. 285.

A person has the right to determine the party to whom he will make a loan, and no one, either by legislative authority or otherwise, can give a third party the right to call for the loan or take the place of the debtor.

Scotland County v. Thomas, 94 U. S. 682 (24: 219); Henry County v. Nicolay, 95 U. S. 619 (24: 894); Marsh v. Fulton County, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 876 (19: 1040); Empire Trp. v. Darlington, 101 U. S. 87 (25: 878); Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S. 569 (23: 747); Menasha v. Haerard, 102 U. S. 81 (26: 88); Green County v. Conness, 109 U. S. 104 (27: 873).

Before the road is completed through the Town, the bonds are declared unconstitutional, and the offer may be said thereby to be withdrawn and terminated.

Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625 (23: 628); Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47 (25: 544); 1 Parsons on Contracts, 482; Shuey v. U. S. 92 U. S. 73 (23: 697); Eliason v. Henshaw, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 225 (4: 556); Payne v. Cave, 8 T. R. 148.

One party cannot be bound without the other.

Routledge v. Grant, 4 Bing. 655; Quick v. Wheeler, 78 N. Y. 300; McDonald v. Bewick, 51 Mich. 79; Piney Shoe & L. Co. v. Kurtz, 84 Mich. 89; Stevens v. Corbitt, 88 Mich. 458, 461; Michigan Midland & O. R. Co. v. Bacon, 88 Mich. 466; Wilkinson v. Heavenrich, 58 Mich. 577.

The rights of the holders of railroad-said bonds are to be determined by the law as it was judicially construed when the bonds were put on the market as commercial paper.

Green County v. Conness, 109 U. S. 104 (27: 873); Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 687 (25: 968, 971).

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

We consider the decisive question in this case to be that of the laches in pursuit of the Railroad Company's right against the Township. In this view the controversy must be narrowed to a single issue. The Township, which is the defendant below, and which defends separately, claims that the cause of action accrued either 18 or 14 years before this bill was filed—18 years if the conversion of the bonds by the Township and the treasurer be considered the gravamen, and 14 years if it be the governor's refusal to issue his official certificate; that since the Statutes of Limitation in Michigan, touching these questions, vary from 6 to 10 years, the cause of action is long since barred at law as to the Railroad Company; that it is, therefore, barred also in equity and lost by laches in its assertion; and that since the appellant by this bill is prosecuting a demand in the nature of a garnishment, and the Railroad Company's right is barred both at law and in equity, therefore that of the appellant is also barred. The appellant seeks to avoid the force of this position by claiming that the bonds had been so far perfected by the dealings between the parties that the Railroad Company was entitled to have them from the state treasurer; that such being the case, the tort of the Township and of the treasurer in converting them could not impair the rights of the Company; that, therefore, the Company was and is entitled to waive the tort and sue directly on the bonds, as in the case of lost or stolen bonds; that only a few of such bonds, if delivered, would have been barred at the time of the filing of the bill, since most of them were so drawn as to mature within 10 years of that time; and, finally, that as the Company was thus still in possession of an enforceable demand, the appellant could avail himself of it by this bill.

The controlling question presented, therefore, is this: Were the bonds in question so dealt with by the parties as at any time to vest in the Railroad Company a right to sue directly on the bonds themselves, as distinguished from a right to sue for their nondelivery or because of their cancellation? That question cannot be satisfactorily or properly answered without constant reference to the exceptional character of the circumstances by which these bonds were deprived of their value. It is not the case of a common negotiable instrument put forth by a natural person as obligor; but it is that of a railroad-aid bond sought to be put forth by the municipality. In such case the nature of the bonds, their force and effect, their value and character while in the hands of the state treasurer, the rightfulness and sufficiency of their issue, and all kindred questions, must be referred to the Statute authorizing them. In this case the Statute is the Act of 1869. It is the touchstone. Whatever might be the rule in ordinary cases, so far as the Act goes, it controls here, being the enabling Act; outside of it there was no power whatever to issue these bonds. By an unbroken current of decisions by this court, and by all other courts, too numerous to mention, it is settled law that a municipality has no power to make a contract of this character, except by legislative permission. It is manifest that, such being the case, the Legislature in granting such permission can impose such conditions as it may choose; and even where there is authority to aid a railroad and incur a debt in extending such aid, it is also settled that such power does not carry with it any authority to execute negotiable bonds except subject to the restrictions and directions of the enabling Act. Wells v. Pontotoc County, 102 U. S. 625 [26: 122]; Olafson v. County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400 [28: 470]; Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 189 [32: 77].

The analogy offered between the case at bar and a lost bond is misleading. There is, in fact, no analogy. There is no doubt about the right of the owner of a bond lost or stolen to sue on it, and in the absence of it to give secondary evidence of its contents; but the very statement of the principle assumes the existence of the instrument. A bond lost or a bond stolen is out of the personal possession and control of the owner, it is true; but it is also an instrument that has become executed, to which those things have been done that were needed to give it legal existence as an actionable obligation.

But here the very question to be determined is, whether there ever were any bonds. It is a question, in substance, of the very existence of the instruments themselves. As before remarked, the Act of 1869 fixes the rights of parties in this case. All the questions concerning the execution of the bonds in controversy must be referred to that Statute, tested by it, and decided in strict conformity with its terms. It is an enabling Act, conferring a power not before existent, and any departure from its requirements cannot be allowed. Harshman v. Bates County, 92 U. S. 569 [28: 747].

In the case of Sheboygan County v. Parker, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 93, 96 [18: 83, 84], this court said: "The commissioners or board of supervisors of a county, in the exercise of their general powers as such, have no authority to subscribe stock to railroads, and bind the people of the county to pay bonds issued for that purpose, without special authority conferred upon them by the Legislature. But when special authority is given to the people of a county to do these acts, and bind themselves by the issue of such bonds, the Legislature may properly direct the mode in which it shall be effected. The persons specially appointed to act as agents for the people have a ministerial duty to perform in issuing the bonds, after the people, at an election held for the purpose, have assented that they shall be bound."

In the case of Anthony v. Jasper County, 101 U. S. 693 [25: 1005], the Township of Marion had, by authority, subscribed in aid of the railroad. Afterwards the Legislature passed an Act requiring such bonds to be registered and certified by the auditor of the State. The court said (p. 696 [1008]): "There can be no doubt that it is within the power of a State to prescribe the form in which municipal bonds shall be executed in order to bind the public for their payment. If not so executed they create no legal liability. Other circumstances may exist which will give the holder of them an equitable right to recover from the municipality the money which they represent, but he cannot enforce the payment, or put them on the market as commercial paper. The Act now in question is, we think, of this character. It in effect provides that no bond issued by counties, cities or incorporated towns shall be valid, that is to say, completely executed, until it has been countersigned or certified in a particular way by the state auditor. For this purpose, after being executed by the corporate authorities, it must be presented to that officer, and he must inquire and determine whether all the requirements of the law authorizing its issue have been observed, and whether all the conditions of the contract in consideration of which it was to be put out have been complied with. To enable him to do this, evidence must be submitted which he is required to file and preserve. If he is satisfied, the registry is made, and the requisite certificate indorsed on the bonds. This being done, the execution of the bond is complete, and, under the law, it may then be negotiated, that is to say, put on the market as valid commercial paper. . . .

When the bonds now in question were put out, the law required that to be valid they must be certified to by the auditor of State. In other words, that officer was to certify them before their execution was complete, so as to bind the public for their payment. We had occasion to consider in McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co. 96 U. S. 816 [24: 680], the effect of statutory requirements as to the form of the execution of patents to pass the title of lands out of the United States, and there say: 'Each and every one of the integral parts of the execution is essential to the validity of a patent. They are of equal importance under the law, and one cannot be dispensed with more than another. Neither is directory, but all are mandatory. The question is not what, in the absence of statutory regulations, would constitute a valid grant, but what the statute requires.' The same rule applies here. The object to be accomplished is the complete execution of a valid instrument, such as the law authorizes public officers to put out and bind for the payment of money the public organization they represent. For this purpose the law has provided that the instrument must not only be signed and sealed on behalf of the county court of the county, but it must be certified to or countersigned by the auditor of state. . . . In order to recover in this case it became necessary for the plaintiff to prove that the bonds from which the coupons sued on were cut had been executed according to law. He did prove that they were signed by the presiding justice and clerk of the court, and were sealed with the seal of the court. This, before the Act of March 30, 1872, would have been enough, but after that more was necessary. The public can act only through its authorized agents, and it is not bound until all who are to participate in what is to be done have performed their respective duties.' The bonds in that case were declared void. See also to the same effect Coler v. Claburne, 131 U. S. 103 [38: 146].

Turning now to the Statute involved in the case at bar, we find its directions, among others, to be as follows:

"Such bonds shall bear interest at the rate of not exceeding 10 per cent per annum, and shall have attached thereto the necessary and usual interest coupons, corresponding in dates and numbers with the bonds to which they are attached, which shall be signed by written signatures by the same person or persons executing such bonds. Such bonds shall, if issued by a city, be executed by the mayor and clerk or recorder thereof, as the case may be, under the seal of the said city; and if issued by a township, they shall be executed by the supervisor and clerk thereof; and if any city or township issuing such bonds shall have a seal, the same shall be impressed upon each of such bonds. The bonds and coupons attached thereto shall be payable at the office of the treasurer of the county in which such township or city may be situate. Whenever any such bonds as provided by provisions of this Act shall have been issued as therein specified, the same shall be delivered by the person, persons or officers having charge of the same to the treasurer of this State, who shall give a receipt therefor and hold the same as trustee for the municipality issuing the same and for the railroad company for which they were issued, and to be disposed of by said treasurer in discharge of his trust as hereinafter provided. Upon receipt of any such bonds from any township or city in aid of any such railroad company, the treasurer of this State shall immediately register or record the same in a book or books to be kept by him for that purpose in his office, which record shall show the amount, date and number of each bond, the rate of interest which it bears, by what township or city issued, to the benefit of what railroad company the same are issued, and the time when payable, which record shall be always open for the inspection of any citizen of this State or other interested person. Such bonds shall be safely kept by such treasurer for the benefit of the parties interested, and be disposed of by him in the following manner—that is to say, whenever any railroad company, in aid of which any of such bonds may have issued, shall present to said treasurer a certificate from the governor of this State that such railroad company has in all respects complied with the provisions of this Act, and is thereby entitled to any of such bonds, the same, or such of said bonds as said company shall be entitled to receive, shall be delivered to said company, the treasurer first cutting therefrom, canceling and returning to the municipality the past-due coupons. The treasurer shall indorse upon each of said bonds the date of such delivery and to whom the same were delivered, and the same shall draw interest only from the time when so delivered; and the treasurer shall notify the clerk of the township or recorder or clerk of the city issuing the same of the date of the delivery of its bonds to such railroad company. . . . And in case any bond so delivered to said treasurer by any such township or city shall not, within three years from the time when the same were received by him, be demanded in compliance with the terms of this Act, the same shall be canceled by said treasurer and returned to the proper officers of the township or city issuing the same."

182 U. S.

A critical analysis of this Statute indicates this to have been the plan: In the preparation and perfecting of the plan persons described by certain official titles, and probably selected because of their titles, were to participate.

(1.) The bonds were to be "executed," that is to say, written or printed, signed and sealed, by the supervisor and clerk of the township. Here the powers of those persons ceased. They could not perfect the instruments by delivery. The word "executed," used in the Statute in connection with the acts mentioned, manifestly does not import the final delivery; for that is expressly directed to be done by the treasurer. Such delivery as they could make was clearly not the technical delivery needed to complete the bonds as negotiable instruments, because the power to hand over to the payee was not conceded to them in any event. The delivery which they were directed to make to the treasurer in his capacity of statutory trustee was only such as amounted to a "giving up" or the "committing" of them to the treasurer for his safe-keeping. The word was used in its ordinary and popular sense, not in the technical one.

(2.) To the governor, and the governor alone, was given the power to determine whether the bonds should ever in fact issue, and if issued, when they should issue. For to him was committed the decision of the important question whether the railroad had performed its part of the common undertaking. His certificate was to be the evidence of that fact, and the only admissible authentication of it to the trustee, the depository. So far as the investigation and determination of that question were concerned, and the certifying of it, the governor was to discharge that function in the process of issuing the bonds which was imposed on the auditor in the case of Anthony v. Jasper County, supra, the difference being that in that case the certificate was to be indorsed on the bonds themselves, but not so in this case.

The state treasurer was appointed to be a trustee for both the township and company; to receive the bonds, to register them, and to finish their clerical execution, using the word in its popular sense, by his indorsements on them of the date of delivery, and of the person to whom delivered. Such indorsements are clearly a part of the very form of the completed bond, as laid down in Anthony v. Jasper County, supra. He was also to cancel them, and to return them so canceled to the township authorities if not demanded in three years; and, finally, if demanded in compliance with the terms of the Act within the three years, to complete their execution (using the word in its technical sense) by delivering them. Such, as we understand it, was the intention of the Legislature. If it be said that such details are useless and technical, a sufficient answer is, so the Statute is written, and the courts cannot unmake or modify it.

As already shown, the Legislature in this class of cases has the right to provide the processes by which the contract is to be perfected. Moreover, we do not think these details are either useless or technical. When it is remembered that the whole policy of allowing contracts of this class has been deprecated by some of the oldest publicists and jurists, and that the negotiable form of such bonds has often led to the imposing of great burdens on municipalities for which there has been no return, we are not disposed to criticise the care of a Legislature to establish a system of even rather severe checks as a condition to its concession of such extraordinary powers.

The appellant claims that the bonds were perfected instruments when delivered to the state treasurer—that the ministerial duties had been performed in full. The argument proceeds largely upon the idea that, as to this transaction, the township and its agents, the supervisor and clerk, were a complete and rounded organism, distinct from the state treasurer, and capable of dealing with the treasurer as if he were a third party—in making delivery to him, for instance. We do not so regard it. All the steps directed by the Statute to be taken leading up to the final act of delivery to the railroad company constitute one progressive process. To adopt the language of the court in McGarrahan v. New Idria Min. Co. supra, "Each and every one of the integral parts of the execution is essential to the validity of the bond."

We hold, therefore, that since the bonds were never indorsed and delivered by the treasurer, as required by the Statute, they never became operative. The act of delivery is essential to the existence of any deed, bond or note. Although drawn and signed, so long as it is undelivered it is a nullity; not only does it take effect only by delivery, but also only on delivery. Bayley v. Taber, 5 Mass. 286; Marvin v. McCullum, 20 Johns. 288; Ward v. Churn, 18 Gratt. 801; Lovejoy v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 379.

The appellant, however, contends that these bonds were, in effect, delivered—that "by the delivery to the treasurer and by the performance of the conditions the title to the bonds vested in the Company, the state treasurer holding them as trustee for the Township and for the Railroad Company." We cannot concur in this view. The law in reference to escrows seems to be involved in some uncertainty. What the effect is of a performance of the conditions by the grantee, the instrument remaining in the hands of the depository—whether, in such case, the second delivery by the depository is or is not necessary to give effect to the deed—are questions about which the courts yet differ. But concede the appellant's position to be correct, as a general rule, yet that general rule does not necessarily control this case. These are extraordinary instruments, and certain fundamental questions of power to contract and of details of execution underlie any action brought upon them, which render the usual rules in regard to escrows very unsafe guides. Too much stress cannot be laid on the necessity for consulting the Statute.

Even in the case of an ordinary escrow, nothing passes by the deed until the condition is performed. Cathoun County v. American Emigrant Co. 93 U. S. 124 [28: 826]. Here the condition prescribed by the Statute as that upon which the delivery was to be made to the Railroad Company, and on which the bonds were to be perfected instruments in its hands, was never performed. On this point the Statute seems to be very simple and clear. Indeed, it would be difficult to make it more clear. By its very terms, the bonds received by him in their uncompleted condition were to be by the state treasurer "safely kept;" and for three years after their reception could only be parted with by him in one way—that is, to the Railroad Company interested, on its production of the governor's certificate. On that condition could they be delivered, not on any other. The certificate was not a mere formal act on the part of the governor, but was a condition precedent to the power of the treasurer to deliver. The Statute is not only emphatic on this point, but also repetitious in its emphasis. Section 5 says, the bonds are "to be disposed of by said treasurer in discharge of his trust as hereinafter provided;" and section 6 provides that "such bonds shall be safely kept by such treasurer for the benefit of the parties interested, and be disposed of by him in the following manner:—that is to say, whenever any railroad company . . . shall present to said treasurer a certificate from the governor," etc.; also, that "in case any bond so delivered to said treasurer . . . shall not within three years . . . be demanded in compliance with the terms of this Act, the same shall be canceled by said treasurer," etc. The certificate was designed to be the treasurer's sole authority to deliver. The question whether the railroad company had "in all respects complied with the provisions of this Act" was one that he could not inquire into except by consulting the governor's certificate. This was his only and conclusive evidence, by the very terms of the Statute. The company's compliance with the provisions of the Act gave it the right to receive the governor's certificate; but it did not confer the right to receive the bonds. That was given by the governor's certificate alone. Had the treasurer made delivery without the certificate, he would have acted without authority of law, and the bonds would have been voidable in the hands of the company. Anthony v. Jasper County, supra. These requirements are not novel. They are matters of administrative detail fixed by the Statute. We cannot declare them to be merely directory, or annul them by construction. It does not matter, so far as the question of the statutory power of the treasurer is concerned, that the failure of the company to produce the certificate might not be because of any fault in the company. The failure might be due to the governor's mistaken view of the law, or to his misconception of the facts, or even to his willful refusal to discharge his official duty—all is immaterial to this aspect of the statutory scheme. A miscarriage in this particular was one of the risks taken by the company. The company knew the Statute—was held by the law to know and understand it. It contracted with the township through the Statute, and could so contract with it in no other way. Availing itself of the Statute, it must take it cum onere. If the governor failed to give the certificate when he should, and could not be reached by a mandamus, those were but features of the company's risk.

There is another provision of the Statute in question which supports the foregoing views. It is the direction that when the treasurer should make the delivery to the company he should cut the over-due coupons from the bonds and cancel them; and that he should at the same time indorse the bonds with the date of that delivery, from which date the bonds should bear interest. Had the Legislature inserted in the Statute a declaration, in set and formal phrase, that it should be the issue of the bonds on the governor's certificate and not the completion by the railroad company of the portion of its contract that should perfect the bonds and give them effect, such declaration would not, in any degree, be clearer than this provision. Lonejoy v. Whipple, supra. It is to be observed that no question arises in this case of a bona fide purchaser of bonds improperly issued. The appellant stands exactly in the shoes of the Railroad Company, and his rights are no greater. Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105 [82: 78].

Holding these views, it is unnecessary to pursue this discussion further. Whether the railroad acquired a cause of action against the Township by the failure to deliver the bonds, or by their cancellation prior to the lapse of the three years fixed by the Statute, on the one hand, or the whole project was a mere fiasco, on the other, and, if such cause of action arose, what was its precise nature and form,—are matters rather of curious speculation than of practical consequence. If no real cause of action arose, that is the end of the matter. If it did arise, then its form and nature are immaterial, since all forms are barred alike, being actionable as of the then date. It is not even suggested that any other method exists by which to escape the bar save the one considered and hereinbefore rejected. We consider the question of the constitutionality of the Act of 1869, herein mooted again, to be fully settled by the case of Taylor v. Ypsilanti, 105 U. S. 60 [26: 1006]; but this case is decided on other grounds, and it is unnecessary to dwell on that question.

It is further claimed by the appellant that the bonds in question were invested by the Statute with the character of trust property, and that, therefore, they can be followed into any hands to which they may be traceable; and that that right is not subject to the limitation prescribed for a conversion. To this view there are two answers: first, the fact that the bonds were never perfected instruments, as already decided; and, while the treasurer returned them canceled a few weeks prior to the lapse of the three years fixed by the Statute, that error became immaterial from this point of view so soon as the three years did expire; secondly, the laches of the Railroad Company in pressing what claim it may have had. New Albany v. Burke, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 96 [20: 155].

We apply the doctrine of laches to this case with the less reluctance, because after all we see but little of substantial merit in the bill. The scheme contemplated was a loan, not a donation. A loan on rather indifferent security, perhaps, but a loan nevertheless. While therefore it is possible that a loan may be so proposed and accepted as to give to the intended borrower a cause of action for any failure to perform the agreement, and a right to recover damages at law, yet on a bill in the nature either of a bill for specific performance or for an equitable garnishment the court may well inquire where is the substantial equity in the case.

The decree of the circuit court is affirmed.

THE HASTINGS AND DAKOTA RAILROAD COMPANY, Pff. in Err.,

v.

JULIA D. WHITNEY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 357-366.)

Entry of public lands, effect of—homestead entry—grant to railroad company—effect of cancellation of homestead entry—rights under subsequent entry—decisions of Land Department.

1. Lands, originally public, cease to be public after they have been entered at the Land Office and a certificate of entry has been obtained.
2. A homestead entry of land embraced within the limits of a land grant afterwards made by Act of Congress to a Railroad Company, excepted the land from the operation of the railroad grant.

2. The cancellation of the homestead entry after the grant to the railroad and the definite location of its line of road, did not inure to the benefit of the Railroad Company, but the land reverted to the government and became a part of the public domain, subject to appropriation by the first legal applicant.
4. A person who made a homestead entry of the same land and received a government patent therefor, after such cancellation of the first entry, is entitled to hold the same as against the Railroad Company.
5. Although the decisions of the Land Department on matters of law are not binding on this court, yet, on questions similar to the one involved in this case, they are entitled to great respect.

[No. 49.]

Argued Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a decree of that court, reversing a decree of the District Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, decreeing a homestead entry of land void and that the title was vested in the plaintiff, The Hastings and Dakota Railroad Company, and that the entry of the defendant, Julia D. Whitney, was unauthorized. Decree of the Minnesota Supreme Court affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Gordon E. Cole, for plaintiff in error: The Turner homestead entry was void on its face.

Grignon v. Astor, 48 U. S. 2 How. 819-841 (11:283); Comstock v. Crawford, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 396-403 (18: 84-87); Mohr v. Manierre, 101 U. S. 417-425 (25: 1052-1055).

If not void on its face, it was void in fact, for want of jurisdiction of the officers to allow the entry.

Union Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, 2 Dill. 310; Minnesota v. Bachelder, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 109 (17: 551); Lindsey v. Hawes, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 554-558 (17: 265-267); Ounningham v. Ashley, 55 U. S. 14 How. 377 (14: 462); Comegys v. Vasee, 28 U. S. 1 Pet. 212 (7: 108); Garland v. Wynn, 61 U. S. 20 How. 8 (15: 802); Barnard v. Ashley, 59 U. S. 18 How. 43 (15: 285); Lytle v. Arkansas, 68 U. S. 22 How. 198 (16: 806); Silver v. Ladd, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 219 (19: 138).

The prior title must prevail.

Ryan v. Central Pac. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382 (25: 305); Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488 (30: 1039); Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 44-60 (22: 551-554).

The right of homestead settlement had not attached to the lands at the time of the location of the road.

Wilcox v. Jackson, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 498 (10: 264); Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 681 (18: 689); Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. U. S. 92 U. S. 738 (23: 634); Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761 (23: 769); Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 118 U. S. 629 (28: 1122).

The construction of the Land Department is immaterial.

Knisken v. Hastings & D. R. Co. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws, 558; Larson v. St. Paul R. Co. 2 Copp's Pub. Land Laws, 62; Graham v. Hastings & D. R. Co. 9 Copp's Land Owner, 286; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406 (29: 928).

(No counsel for defendants in error.)

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action, somewhat in the nature of a suit in equity, originally brought in the District Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, by The Hastings and Dakota Railroad Company (a corporation organized under the laws of that State), against Julia D. and John Whitney, to recover a tract of about eighty acres of land situated in that county, for which the defendants have a United States patent.

The material facts in the case are undisputed, and are substantially as follows: By the Act of July 4, 1866, Congress granted to the State of Minnesota, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from Hastings, through the Counties of Dakota, Scott, Carver and McLeod, to such point on the western boundary of the State as the Legislature of the State might determine, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers, to the amount of five alternate sections per mile on each side of the road. The Act further provided that "in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the lines or route of said roads are definitely located, sold any section, or part thereof, granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preemption or homestead settlement has attached to the same, or that the same has been reserved by the United States for any purpose whatever, then it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be selected, for the purposes aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States nearest to the tiers of sections above specified, so much land in alternate sections or parts of sections, designated by odd numbers, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, reserved or otherwise appropriated, or to which the right of homestead settlement or preemption has attached as aforesaid, which lands, thus indicated by odd numbers and sections, by the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be held by said State of Minnesota for the purposes and uses aforesaid." 14 Stat. 87.

On the 7th of March, 1867, the Legislature of Minnesota accepted this grant, and transferred it over to the plaintiff. The Railroad Company complied with all the terms and conditions of the Acts of Congress and of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, and, on or about the 7th of March, 1867, definitely located its line of road by filing its map in the office of the commissioner of the General Land Office.

The land which is the subject of this controversy fell within what are known as the ten-mile limits of the aforesaid grant, when the line of road was definitely located.

The case being brought on for trial on evidence produced by the respective parties, the court made and filed its findings of fact and conclusions of law, the essential parts of which are as follows:

"Claiming to act under the provisions of section 2298 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, one Bentley S. Turner, on the 8th of May, 1865, then being a soldier in the army of the United States, and actually with his regiment in the State of Virginia, made an affidavit and caused the same to be filed in the local land office of the district wherein said land was situate. Said affidavit was made before his commanding officer in the State of Virginia, and stated that said Turner was the head of a family, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of Franklin County, New York. Application was made through one Conwell, whom said Turner constituted his attorney for that purpose, upon said affidavit, to enter said land as a homestead. Said affidavit did not state that Turner's family or any member thereof was residing on the land, or that there was any improvement thereon; and, as a matter of fact, no member of his family was then residing, or ever did reside, on said land, and no improvement whatever had ever been made thereon by anyone. Thereupon, upon being paid their fees by said Conwell, the register and receiver of said land office allowed said entry, and the same stood upon the records of said local land office and upon the records of the General Land Office uncanceled until September 30th, 1872, when said entry was canceled by the proper officers of the United States. It does not appear that any specific reason was assigned for said cancellation, nor does the reason for said cancellation appear, save as it may be furnished by the facts aforesaid. On the 7th day of May, 1877, without notice to the plaintiff, the defendant Julia D. Whitney, then a single woman, by name Julia D. Graham, who has since intermarried with said defendant John Whitney, did enter said land at the local land office as a homestead, and thereafter, in the usual course of business, the officers in charge of the General Land Office of the United States caused a patent of the United States for said land to be issued in due form, and delivered to said defendant Julia, who ever since May 7th, 1877, has been and now is in the actual occupancy of said premises, holding the same under said patent. Said land is of the value of six hundred dollars ($600)."

After making these findings of fact, and holding as a conclusion of law that the alleged entry of Turner was absolutely void, that the title to the land in dispute was, under the land grant to the State, vested in the plaintiff, and that the entry of Julia D. Whitney thereon was unauthorized and of no effect, the court entered a decree in favor of the plaintiff in error.

On an appeal by the defendant to the Supreme Court of the State that decree was reversed, without any order for a new trial. Such reversal, under the laws of Minnesota, is, in effect, the final judgment of the highest court of that State in which a decision of the cause could be had, and the case has been brought here by a writ of error.

Section 1 of the Act of March 21, 1864, 18 Stat. 35 (now section 2203 of the Revised Statutes), under which Turner's homestead entry was made, provides as follows:

"In case of any person desirous of availing himself of the benefits of this chapter, but who, by reason of actual service in the military or naval service of the United States, is unable to do the personal preliminary acts at the district land office which the preceding sections require, and whose family, or some member thereof, is residing on the land which he desires to enter, and upon which a bona fide improvement and settlement have been made, such person may make the affidavit required by law before the officer commanding in the branch of the service in which the party is engaged, which affidavit shall be as binding in law, and with like penalties, as if taken before the register or receiver; and upon such affidavit being filed with the register by the wife or other representative of the party, the same shall become effective from the date of such filing, provided the application and affidavit are accompanied by the fee and commissions as required by law."

The question presented for our consideration is, whether, upon the facts found and admitted, the homestead entry of Turner upon the land in controversy excepted it from the operation of the land grant under which plaintiff in error claims title.

The doctrine first announced in Wilcox v. Jackson, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 498 [10: 264], that a tract lawfully appropriated to any purpose becomes thereafter severed from the mass of public lands, and that no subsequent law or proclamation will be construed to embrace it, or to operate upon it, although no exception be made of it, has been reaffirmed and applied by this court in such a great number and variety of cases that it may now be regarded as one of the fundamental principles underlying the land system of this country.

In Witherspoon v. Duncan, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 210 [18: 339], this court decided, in accordance with the decision in Carroll v. Safford, 44 U. S. 3 How. 441 [11: 671], that "lands originally public cease to be public after they have been entered at the land office, and a certificate of entry has been obtained." And the court further held that this applies as well to homestead and preemption as to cash entries. In either case, the entry being made, and the certificate being executed and delivered, the particular land entered thereby becomes segregated from the mass of public lands, and takes the character of private property. The fact that such an entry may not be confirmed by the land office on account of any alleged defect therein, or may be canceled or declared forfeited on account of non-compliance with the law, or even declared void, after a patent has issued, on account of fraud, in a direct proceeding for that purpose in the courts, is an incident inherent in all entries of the public lands.

In the light of these decisions the almost uniform practice of the Department has been to regard land upon which an entry of record valid upon its face has been made, as appropriated and withdrawn from subsequent homestead entry, preemption settlement, sale or grant until the original entry be canceled or declared forfeited; in which case the land reverts to the government as part of the public domain, and becomes again subject to entry under the land laws. The correctness of this holding has been sustained by this court in the case of Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 118 U. S. 629 [28: 1122], and the principle applied to a Railroad Grant Act, which contained the same exceptions as those embodied in the Act under which the plaintiff in error claims title to the tract in controversy. In that case a homestead claim had been made and filed in the land office by one Miller, and there recognized by a certificate of entry, before the line of the company's road was located. Subsequently to the location he abandoned his entry and took a title under the railroad company, and his homestead entry was canceled. One G. B. Dunmeyer then entered the land under the Homestead Law, claiming that, by the cancellation for abandonment, it had passed back into the mass of public lands and was not brought within the grant; and upon that claim ousted the defendant in error, who afterwards brought his action against the railroad company for a breach of covenant, obtaining a judgment in the court below, which was afterwards affirmed by this court.

The court said, Mr. Justice Miller delivering its opinion: "The record shows that, on July 25, 1866, Miller made a homestead entry on this land which was in every respect valid. . . . It also shows that the line of definite location of the company's road was first filed . . . September 21, 1866.

"In the language of the Act of Congress, this homestead claim had attached to the land, and it therefore did not pass by the grant. Of all the words in the English language, this word 'attached' was probably the best that could have been used. It did not mean mere settlement, residence, or cultivation of the land, but it meant a proceeding in the proper land office, by which the inchoate right to the land was initiated. It meant that by such a proceeding a right of homestead had fastened to that land, which could ripen into a perfect title by future residence and cultivation. With the performance of these conditions the company had nothing to do.

"It is argued by the company that, although Miller's homestead entry had attached to the land, within the meaning of the excepting clause of the grant, before the line of definite location was filed by it, yet when Miller abandoned his claim, so that it no longer existed, the exception no longer operated, and the land reverted to the company—that the grant by its inherent force reasserted itself and extended to or covered the land as though it had never been within the exception.

"We are unable to perceive the force of this proposition.

"No attempt has ever been made to include lands reserved to the United States, which reservation afterwards ceased to exist within the grant, though this road, and others with grants in similar language, have more than once passed through military reservations for forts and other purposes, which have been given up or abandoned as such reservations, and were of great value.

"Nor is it understood that, in any case where lands had been otherwise disposed of, their reversion to the government brought them within the grant.

"Why should a different construction apply to lands to which a homestead or preemption right had attached? Did Congress intend to say that the right of the company also attaches, and whichever proved to be the better right should obtain the land?"

Counsel for plaintiff in error contends that the case just cited has no application to the one we are now considering, the difference being that in that case the entry existing at the time of the location of the road was an entry valid in all respects, while the entry in this case was invalid on its face, and in its inception; and that this entry having been made by an agent of the applicant, and based upon an affidavit which failed to show the settlement and improvement required by law, was, on its face, not such a proceeding, in the proper land office, as could attach even an inchoate right to the land.

We do not think this contention can be maintained. Under the Homestead Law three things are needed to be done in order to constitute an entry on public lands: first, the applicant must make an affidavit setting forth the facts which entitle him to make such an entry; second, he must make a formal application; and, third, he must make payment of the money required. When these three requisites are complied with, and the certificate of entry is executed and delivered to him, the entry is made—the land is entered. If either one of these integral parts of an entry is defective, that is, if the affidavit be insufficient in its showing, or if the application itself is informal, or if the payment is not made in actual cash, the register and receiver are justified in rejecting the application. But if, notwithstanding these defects, the application is allowed by the land officers, and a certificate of entry is delivered to the applicant, and the entry is made of record, such entry may be afterwards canceled on account of these defects by the commissioner, or on appeal by the Secretary of the Interior; or, as is often the practice, the entry may be suspended, a hearing ordered, and the party notified to show by supplemental proof a full compliance with the requirements of the Department; and on failure to do so the entry may then be canceled. But these defects, whether they be of form or substance, by no means render the entry absolutely a nullity. So long as it remains a subsisting entry of record, whose legality has been passed upon by the land authorities and their action remains unreversed, it is such an appropriation of the tract as segregates it from the public domain, and therefore precludes it from subsequent grants. In the case before us, at the time of the location of the Company's road, an examination of the tract books and the plat filed in the office of the register and receiver, or in the land office, would have disclosed Turner's entry as an entry of record, accepted by the proper officers in the proper office, together with the application and necessary money—an entry the imperfections and defects of which could have been cured by a supplemental affidavit or by other proof of the requisite qualifications of the applicant. Such an entry attached to the land a right which the road cannot dispute for any supposed failure of the entry-man to comply with all the provisions of the law under which he made his claim. A practice of allowing such contests would be fraught with the gravest dangers to actual settlers, and would be subversive of the principles upon which the munificent railroad grants are based.

As was said in the Dunmeyer Case, supra: "It is not conceivable that Congress intended to place these parties [homestead and preemption claimants on the one hand and the railway company on the other] as contestants for the land, with the right in each to require proof from the other of complete performance of its obligation. Least of all is it to be supposed that it was intended to raise up, in antagonism to all the actual settlers on the soil, whom it had invited to its occupation, this great corporation, with an interest to defeat their claims, and to come between them and the government as to the performance of their obligations."

A question somewhat analogous in principle to the one in this case arose in Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761 [23:769]. In that case, Newhall claimed under a patent issued to the Western Pacific Railroad Company for land supposed to be within the grant made by the Act of July 1, 1862 (12 Stat. 489), and that of July 2, 1864 (18 Stat. 856), and Sanger claimed under a subsequent patent which recited, among other things, that the former patent had been erroneously issued. The land in controversy had been within the boundaries of a claim made under a Mexican grant, which was pending in the Land Department of the United States at the time the order withdrawing the railroad lands from entry was made. The Mexican claim was rejected a few days thereafter because of its fraudulent character. Under that state of facts, the contention of the railroad company was, that, the Mexican claim having been declared invalid, the land in controversy became subject to the operation of the granting Acts, and, therefore, passed to the company. But this court declared otherwise, and held that the land never became subject to the grant, and that the claimant under the second patent had the better title.

In addition to this, section 2806 of the Revised Statutes provides:

"Where a party at the date of his entry of a tract of land under the Homestead Laws, or subsequently thereto, was actually enlisted and employed in the army or navy of the United States, his services therein shall, in the administration of such Homestead Laws, be construed to be equivalent, to all intents and purposes, to a residence for the same length of time upon the tract so entered," etc.

That Act is a curative Act, or, rather, one putting a construction upon the prior Act of 1864, under which the Turner entry was made. The effect of it is to declare service in the army or navy of the United States by the applicant, at the date of an entry made under the Act of 1864, equivalent to actual residence upon the land by him. In that view of the case the affidavit in the Turner entry was sufficient; for in contemplation of law, he was then residing upon the tract embraced in his entry.

The conclusion at which we have arrived is in harmony with the later rulings of the Land Department. See Graham v. Hastings & D. R. Co. (this case) 1 Land Dec. 363; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Forseth, 3 Land Dec. 446; So. Minn. R. E. Co. v. Gallipean, 3 Land Dec. 166; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. United States, 3 Land Dec. 479; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Leech, 3 Land Dec. 506; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitnall, 4 Land Dec. 249, and many others of like tenor and effect.

It is true that the decisions of the Land Department on matters of law are not binding upon this court, in any sense. But on questions similar to the one involved in this case they are entitled to great respect at the hands of any court. In United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763 [24:588, 589], this court said: "The construction given to a statute by those charged with the duty of executing it is always entitled to the most respectful consideration, and ought not to be overruled without cogent reasons. . . . The officers concerned are usually able men, and masters of the subject. Not unfrequently they are the draftsmen of the laws they are afterwards called upon to interpret." See also Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 571 [28:1079, 1080], and cases there cited; United States v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co. 98 U. S. 384, 341 [25:198, 200]; Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 418 [28:794, 796].

Other subsidiary questions have been argued by counsel for plaintiff in error, but they are all virtually disposed of in the foregoing.

For the foregoing reasons we concur with the court below that Turner's homestead entry excepted the land from the operation of the railroad grant; and that upon the cancellation of that entry the tract in question did not inure to the benefit of the Company, but reverted to the government and became a part of the public domain subject to appropriation by the first legal applicant, who, as the record shows, was the defendant in error, Julia D. Whitney, née Graham.

The decree of the Supreme Court of Minnesota is affirmed.

NANCY A. BRADLEY, Wife of J. H. SCHREIN, ET AL., Appts.,

v.

HORACE B. CLAFLIN ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 379-383.)

Suit to strengthen title to land—mortgage, when not merged in title—mortgage to wife, when prior lien—omission to record mortgage—conveyance, when does not defeat mortgage.

1. A person who has received a conveyance of the legal title to real estate from his debtor may institute other proceedings against that debtor, in relation to the same property, to strengthen his title or establish his lien.
2. A mortgage, which, in Louisiana, a wife has by statute on her husband's real estate for her money which came to his hands, though not registered, is not merged in a simulated and fraudulent title conveyed by her husband as dation en paiement.
3. In that State, where a wife has a right of mortgage for such money, and has received a conveyance from her husband of property which did not transfer to her a clear title, and has resorted to her original right of mortgage by recording it against the property before any other lien has accrued on the property, such mortgage constitutes a prior and superior lien.
4. The omission of the wife to record her mortgage only deprives it of force as to third persons who, at the time of its recording, have perfected liens on the property of the husband.
5. A conveyance by the husband to his wife of property, as dation en paiement, which is subsequently set aside, does not defeat her right to a mortgage for her dotal or paraphernal property.

[No. 110.]

Argued Nov. 14, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana, dismissing a cross-bill on demurrer, and decreeing that the lien of the complainants on the property conveyed by John H. Scheen to Nancy A. Bradley, his wife, is superior and paramount to the mortgage claim of said wife on said property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 27 Fed. Rep. 420.

Messrs. Walter H. Rogers and B. B. Foreman, for appellants:

There is no common law of the United States.

Kendall v. U. S. 87 U. S. 12 Pet. 621 (9:1181).

Questions as to title to real estate and mortgages and liens thereon and their rank and priority must be determined by the law of the State where the property is situated.

Suydam v. Williamson, 65 U. S. 24 How. 427 (16: 742); McCormick v. Sullivan, 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 202 (6: 300); Green v. Neal, 81 U. S. 6 Pet. 297 (8: 402); Ewing v. St. Louis, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 413 (18: 657).

The word "privilege" is equivalent, in Louisiana, to a statutory lien.

Stetson v. Gurney, 17 La. Ann. 162; First Municipality v. Hall, 2 La. Ann. 549; Fontenot v. Soileau, 2 La. Ann. 774; Shropshire v. Russell, 2 La. Ann. 961; Shaw v. Grant, 13 La. Ann. 62.

When creditors make a cessio bonorum (surrender in insolvency under the state law), all of their property passes under the exclusive control of the insolvent court.

Dwight v. Smith, 9 Rob. (La.) 32; Dwight v. Simon, 4 La. Ann. 490.

The equitable lien given by a creditor's bill in a State where the common law prevails, can have no existence in a State where the common law and its complement, the chancery law, does not prevail, and when all liens or their equivalent privileges are expressly prohibited, unless established by express statute.

Squire v. Lincoln, 187 Mass. 408; Trow v. Lovett, 122 Mass. 571; Powers v. Raymond, 137 Mass. 488; Jones v. Green, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 831 (17: 553); Day v. Washburn, 65 U. S. 24 How. 852 (16: 712); Sloane v. Ohniquy, 23 Fed. Rep. 218.

If the conveyance dation en paiement was set aside, the previously recorded mortgage would revive and attach to the property.

Bowman v. McKleroy, 14 La. Ann. 594; Chaffe v. Morgan, 80 La. Ann. 1807; New Orleans Ins. Assn. v. Labranche, 81 La. Ann. 889; Spencer v. Goodman, 83 La. Ann. 909; Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640 (28: 547); Adams v. Preston, 63 U. S. 22 How. 488 (16: 277).

Partners are joint owners.

Skillman v. Purnell, 8 La. Ann. 494; Baca v. Ramos, 10 La. Ann. 417; McKee v. Griffin, 23 La. Ann. 419.

The court erred in decreeing a partnership creditor to have a preference on individual property to an individual creditor.

Bernard v. Dufour, 17 La. Ann. 506; Poydras v. Laurans, 6 La. Ann. 771.

Mr. W. W. Howe for appellee.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Julius Lisso and John H. Scheen constituted a mercantile partnership engaged in business in the Town of Coushatta, Louisiana. Horace B. Claffin, Edward E. Eames and others, constituting the firm of H. B. Claffin & Co., of the City of New York, were creditors of Lisso and Scheen, and on the 4th day of December, 1878, they commenced, in the proper state court of Louisiana, a suit with an attachment against Lisso and Scheen and their wives, Clara Forchheimer and Nancy A. Bradley, and others, in accordance with the law and practice of Louisiana. The attachment was levied upon property, real estate mainly, which is the subject of controversy in this case. The suit was afterwards removed into the circuit court of the United States. The record of the case in the circuit court commences with a bill in chancery filed on the 18th day of November, 1879, in that court by H. B. Claffin et al. against Julius Lisso et al. To this suit Lisso and Clara Forchheimer, his wife, and John H. Scheen and Nancy A. Bradley, his wife, are made defendants. This bill, after giving the names of the persons composing the partnership of plaintiffs, who are citizens of New York, and of the defendants, who are citizens of Louisiana, alleges that the defendants Lisso and Scheen are indebted to the plaintiffs in the sum of $9,580.14 on promissory notes, which are described in the bill, and on an open account. It then sets out the commencement of the suit and attachment of December 4, 1878, and that certain property was seized under that attachment as the partnership and individual property of Lisso and Scheen, a schedule of which is said to be annexed to the bill. The plaintiffs further allege that by said seizure they have acquired a just and valid lien upon the property seized under the laws of Louisiana. They allege that said Lisso and Scheen obtained the goods sold by complainants to them by false representations as to their solvency made to plaintiffs in New York, and in contemplation of the fraud and insolvency hereinafter set forth:

"Among other assets they reported the real estate herein mentioned, which they declared to be and which is justly worth upwards of $20,000. That thereafter, and on or about the 23d November, 1878, being entirely insolvent, and largely indebted not only to your orators, but to others, the said Julius Lisso and John H. Scheen did conspire and collude with their said wives and their said wives with them, to cheat, hinder, delay and defraud your orators, by making a pretended, simulated and fraudulent transfer of all the real estate of the said Lisso and Scheen unto their said wives, respectively, including alike the partnership and individual real property of said Lisso and Scheen in the Town of Coushatta and Parish of Red River, and also the interest in the telegraph line described in the deeds.

"That said pretended, simulated and fraudulent transfers were made on the 23d day of November, 1878, and recorded in the office of the parish recorder at Coushatta, and were by acts before D. H. Hayes, notary public, and for greater certainty your orators annex hereto and refer to said acts as a part of this bill.

"Now your orators aver that said acts purported to be dations en paiement, but they allege and charge that they and each of them was and is illegal, fraudulent, simulated and void, and worked and still work great injury to your orators; that they were and each of them was made when the transferors were solvent; that after such transfers the transferors had not property enough left to pay orators' claims; that the said transferees and each of them knew of the insolvency of the said Lisso and Scheen, and was a party to and colluded in said fraud. They further show that the price named in said pretended dations en paiement or transfers was wholly inadequate and fraudulent; and they show that even if the said acts or transfers had and have any reality in law, they gave and give an unjust and unlawful preference and are null and void; but they expressly aver and charge that the said Lisso and the said Scheen owed their said wives nothing whatever at the time of said pretended transfers, whether on paraphernal account or otherwise.

"And your orators exhibit this their bill, as well in aid of the proceedings in said suit No. 8883, as for such discovery and relief as they may be entitled to in the premises."

The prayer of the bill is, that defendants may be required to answer, "and that the said transfers, or dations en paiement, passed before D. H. Hayes, notary public, on the 28d November, 1878, may be declared to be simulated, fraudulent, injurious, illegal, null and void, and all the property therein described subjected to the just claims of and debts due your orators as aforesaid, and sold to pay the same; and that the debts due and owing to your orators may be duly liquidated by proper decree as to the said defendants, Lisso and Scheen, as well as to the other defendants."

Other proceedings of a similar character were instituted against the same defendants at about the same time by Henry Bernheim et al., Simon August et al. and Charles F. Claffin et al. Bills identical in their language with those of Claffin & Co. were filed against defendants. They were afterwards, by an agreement of counsel and the order of the court, consolidated and tried together as one cause. In these cases thus consolidated there was, by consent of all the parties in open court, as shown by the record, entered a decree on January 23, 1883. This decree declared—

"That as to the act of conveyance, or dation en paiement, recited in the bills of complaint herein made by the defendant, John H. Scheen, unto the defendant, Nancy A. Bradley, his wife, by act passed before D. H. Hayes, notary, Parish of Red River, November 28d, 1878, and filed for record and recorded in said parish in conveyance and mortgage books the same day, and whereof a certified copy has been filed as an exhibit herein November 26th, 1879, and is now annexed hereto as part hereof, be, and the same hereby is, in all things revoked, annulled and set aside, and the property therein described and purporting thereby to be conveyed to said Mrs. Nancy A. Bradley, wife of John H. Scheen, declared to have been the property of said John H. Scheen, at the time the bills of complaint herein were filed, to wit, November 18th, 1879, and is hereby subjected to the just claims, demands and judgments of the complainants herein, subject to provisions hereinafter made, which judgments of complainants herein against said Julius Lisso and John H. Scheen in solido are as follows:

"H. B. Claffin & Co. v. Lisso & Scheen, No. 8883, of the docket of this court, $9,580.14, with interest as therein set forth.

"H. Bernheim & August v. Lisso & Scheen, No. 8880, $655.38, with interest as therein set forth.

"August, Bernheim & Bauer v. Lisso & Scheen, No. 8881, $2,326.36, with interest as therein set forth.

"Claffin & Thayer v. Lisso & Scheen, No. 8822, $2,298.57, with interest as therein set forth.

"And it is further ordered that any mortgage claims which said Mrs. Scheen may have against said property described in said deed of November 23, 1878, be, and the same are hereby, reserved for further decision."

This reservation had reference to a claim by Mrs. Bradley, the wife of Scheen, under a mortgage which she asserted on the property in controversy, filed in the proper parishes where the land in question lay, where they were duly recorded, namely, in the proper office at Bienville, April 30, 1879, and that of the Parish of Red River, June 6, 1879. After the consent decree had been rendered, Mrs. Bradley was permitted to file an answer and cross-bill against complainants in the original suit, setting up her claim under this mortgage, to which there were a demurrer and answer, also replications. On the 19th of December, 1885, the following agreement was filed, by which the case came on to be heard on the bills, answers and demurrers:

"Claffin et al. } Nos. 8896-99.—Four consolidated causes.
v.
Lisso et al. }

"To save time and expense to both sides, it is agreed that the complainants may withdraw their replication to answer of Mrs. Nancy A. Bradley, wife, etc., filed April 26th, 1884, and their answer to said Mrs. Bradley's cross-bill filed, and the said Mrs. Bradley may withdraw her replication to said answer (with rights, however, reserved to both parties to renew said pleadings and reinstate the issues as hereinafter reserved), and that complainants may file their annexed demurrers and the cause may be set down on the bills, answers and demurrers.

"In case said demurrers are overruled, the answers and replications above mentioned may be renewed and stand restored to the record, and cause proceed on traverse and issues thereby made as if they had not been withdrawn, the object of this agreement being to present in the simplest and least expensive manner the questions raised by said demurrers.

"Dec. 19th, '85.

"Kennard, Howe & Prentiss, for complainants.

"W. H. Rogers, for defendants."

The decree of the court, rendered on February 6, 1886, declared:

"That the demurrers of the complainants herein to the said cross-bill of the said Mrs. Nancy A. Bradley, wife of John H. Scheen, be, and the same hereby are, sustained, and the said cross-bill dismissed.

"It is further ordered and decreed that the lien, privilege and preference of the complainants herein on the property or its proceeds described in the conveyance thereof, made November 8, 1878, from said John H. Scheen to said Nancy A. Bradley, his wife, by act before D. H. Hayes, notary public for the Parish of Red River (which conveyance has been revoked as to the complainants by the decree herein of January 22, 1888, and which property has been subjected to the judgments of the complainants in said decree specially detailed), be, and are hereby, recognized, declared and made executory, and are adjudged to be in all respects superior and paramount to all and any mortgage claim or other debt or demand of the said Mrs. Nancy A. Bradley, wife of said John H. Scheen, set up in this cause, and are declared to be a first lien, privilege and preference on the said property, its proceeds, fruits, revenues, rents and profits."

It is from this decree that the present appeal by Mrs. Bradley, wife of Scheen, is taken, and all other questions are by the original consent decree and by the state of the record eliminated from the case, except that which concerns the validity of the mortgage of Mrs. Bradley on account of the paraphernal property which passed to her husband, for which this mortgage was inscribed. It is necessary to add that in the progress of this case the attachments which had been issued and levied on the property in controversy were dissolved, and that an ordinary judgment was rendered personally against Lisso and Scheen for their indebtedness to the parties plaintiff to this suit. It is therefore clear that the plaintiffs derived no aid in establishing their lien upon the property by reason of these attachments, and it seems to be conceded in the argument of counsel that such lien as they may have commenced with the filing of their bills on the 18th of November, 1879. The object of those bills, it will be observed, was to set aside the conveyance made by Lisso and Scheen to their wives, of November 23, 1878, which is said to be a dation en paiement under the Louisiana law, that is, a proceeding by which the husband, in this case, conveyed to his wife certain real estate, which she accepted as payment pro tanto, to wit, at $10,000, on her debt against him arising out of her paraphernal property that came into his control; and although the subsequent mortgage instituted by Mrs. Scheen, which it was supposed would cover the property now in controversy, had been recorded in the proper parishes April 30, 1879, and June 6, 1879, which was in one instance seven months and the other nearly six months before the bill of complaint was filed, no reference is made in that bill to this mortgage and no attempt made to have it declared void or set aside, but the plaintiffs were content to take a decree setting aside the first conveyance of November 23, 1878; and it is only by reference to the reservation in the decree that any notice is taken of the mortgage of Mrs. Bradley.

As there is no answer to Mrs. Bradley's cross-bill, and as the case before us rests altogether upon the sufficiency of the allegations of that bill to establish her right under that mortgage, we must look to that alone to determine the question. Mrs. Bradley sets out in very distinct terms that her husband at various times received from her father advancements made to her and from her estate, which are specifically set out and amount to the sum of $29,321.23, for which she claims interest at the rate of five per cent per annum. By the law of Louisiana the assertion of this claim of a wife against a husband and against his property is an ex parte proceeding, by which the wife, with certain formalities, makes out an account of the foundation of her claims against her husband, and has it recorded in the proper book of records of the parish or parishes where the lands of her husband lie. Until this is done her claim affects no other person, and this act of recording what is called a mortgage is the initial proceeding by which the claim against her husband's property is made effective. But after it is so recorded all persons are bound to take notice of the existence of the claim, as though the husband had himself executed a mortgage to his wife to secure the payment of the debt. What may be set up by creditors of the husband or by purchasers of his real estate to defeat the claim thus instituted, it is not necessary to inquire in this case, because no attack is made upon the justice of the claims of Mrs. Bradley against her husband nor upon the regularity of the proceedings by which this mortgage was instituted. No answer being filed to the cross-bill, the statements in it are to be taken as true so far as they are pertinent to the question before the court. It is thus admitted by the demurrer to the bill that Scheen had, prior to the 30th day of April, 1879, received of the paraphernal and dotal property of Mrs. Bradley coming through her father the sum alleged in her bill, $29,321.23, for which he was indebted to her, and that she followed the course pointed out by the law in establishing what the statute of Louisiana calls a mortgage on his real estate to secure the payment of that indebtedness. No fraud is alleged by appellees in regard to this transaction. No denial of its truth is made in the record. Some attempt is made in the way of argument to assert the priority of the appellees because their attachment was levied upon the property before a record was made of appellant's mortgage, but with the dissolution of that attachment any lien which could depend upon it fell. In the language of counsel for the appellees in this case, the attachments having been dissolved on technical grounds only judgment for the money demand was rendered in each case in June, 1880. As these judgments were rendered long after the recording of Mrs. Bradley's mortgage, they could not effect a lien prior to hers, and by the dissolution of the attachments no lien acquired by them could affect her interest at all.

The ground on which the invalidity of this mortgage is asserted by appellees is that at the time Mrs. Bradley had it inscribed in the proper book the property was her own, and the title to it was in her by reason of the conveyance made by Scheen to her in payment of his debt to her, which was the subject of the controversy between the parties, and which was set aside in the consent decree rendered January 22, 1888. It is asserted in argument that, because the title and ownership of that property was in her at the time she inscribed the mortgage now in controversy, she could not in such a proceeding create a valid mortgage on her own property; that at that time Scheen, her husband, against whom the mortgage lien was asserted, had no title or interest in the property, and that therefore the proceeding was of no effect. This proposition is earnestly insisted upon by counsel, and seems to have been the one on which the circuit court rested its decision dismissing Mrs. Bradley's bill. (27 Fed. Rep. 420.) We are not referred to any clause of the Code of Louisiana which asserts this principle, nor have we been able to find it in any article or section of that code. It seems to be counsel's inference from the general state of the law concerning mortgages and the title to real estate. Reference is made in the brief of counsel to the case of Townsend v. Miller, 7 La. Ann. 683, and to the cases of Miller v. Sherry, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 249 [17: 880], and Lyon v. Robbins, 46 Ill. 279, which are also mentioned in the opinion of the judge who decided the case below; but these cases only concern the effect to be given to a decree rendered in favor of a judgment creditor setting aside a prior conveyance of the debtor as a fraudulent obstruction in the way of the judgment creditor. None of them establish the doctrine contended for in this case, that a person who has received a conveyance of the legal title to real estate from his debtor may not institute other proceedings against that debtor in relation to the same property to strengthen his title or establish his lien, if it is his interest to do so. That this may be done under the English system of equitable jurisprudence is well established, and no reason can be seen, either in law or in equity, why a party who has received such conveyance, coming to see that his title through it is not perfect, that the conveyance itself may be void or voidable, and that thereby he may lose the debt or consideration of the conveyance, may not institute any proceeding known to the law, and not unjust or inequitable, by which his defective title may be strengthened or his original lien made effectual and established in regard to the property. One of the most common instances of this character, very similar in its nature to the transaction now under consideration, is that of a mortgagee who, by the English common law, was treated as holding the legal title with an equity of redemption in the mortgagor, but who accepts a conveyance of that equity of redemption to himself by the mortgagor as payment of the debt secured by the mortgage. In such case it may happen that the mortgagor has created other liens or incumbrances upon the property between the execution of the mortgage and that of the deed conveying to the mortgagee the equity of redemption. If this conveyance of the equity of redemption is to be treated as absolute payment of the debt secured by the mortgage, which, as between the mortgagor and mortgagee, it is intended to be, then, the mortgage being paid off and discharged, and of no further effect, the parties who have obtained a lien subsequent to that mortgage, but prior to the sale to the mortgagee, would find their lien to be a prior incumbrance upon the property, and superior to the title conveyed by the mortgagor to the mortgagee. To prevent this injustice, equity has established the principle that by holding the possession of his mortgage, and not making any release or satisfaction, he may continue to have the benefit of that mortgage as a lien prior to that of the parties whose rights have intervened, and thus he takes the title, which is intended to be a discharge of that debt as between him and his debtor, while he holds the mortgage itself to be so far alive as to protect him against the subsequent incumbrances on his own land. The analogy of that principle of equitable jurisprudence to the case before us is obvious. In both cases, because equity requires it, the common-law doctrine of merger of the two titles does not occur. In favor of the party whose interest would otherwise suffer, they are both kept alive. In this case the mortgage which the law gave Mrs. Bradley on her husband's real estate for her money which came to his hands, though not registered, was not merged in the simulated and fraudulent title conveyed by her husband as dation en paiement. Forbes v. Moffatt, 18 Ves. Jr. 884; Mulford v. Peterson, 85 N. J. L. 127; Mallory v. Hitchcock, 29 Conn. 127; Slocum v. Catlin, 23 Vt. 137; Wickersham v. Reeves, 1 Iowa, 413.

182 U. S.

By the Code of Louisiana, article 3319 (3387):

"The wife has a legal mortgage on the property of her husband in the following cases:

"1. For the restitution of her dowry, and for the reinvestment of the dotal property sold by her husband, and which she brought in marriage, reckoning from the celebration of the marriage.

"2. For the restitution or reinvestment of dotal property, which came to her after the marriage, either by succession or donation, from the day the succession was opened or the donation perfected.

"3. For the restitution or reimbursement of her paraphernal property."

We understand this article as declaring the existence of such mortgage or lien from the time when the dotal or paraphernal property of the wife was received by the husband. Scheen v. Chaffe, 86 La. Ann. 220. Certainly such is the meaning of the article as between the husband and wife. But as to other parties, it is declared by section 3347 that "no mortgage or privilege shall hereafter affect third parties, unless recorded in the parish where the property to be affected is situated;" and by section 3349, that when the evidence of such legal mortgage existing in favor of a married woman shall not exist in writing, then "a written statement, under oath, made by the married woman, her husband, or any other person having knowledge of all the facts, setting forth the amount due to the wife, and detailing all the facts and circumstances on which her claim is based, shall be recorded."

The appellant in this case having this undisputed right of mortgage for the $29,321.23 set out in her bill, and perceiving that it might be lost either by the fraud of her husband in making the conveyance to her or by some other imperfection, by which it did not transfer to her a clear title to the property mentioned in the conveyance, resorted to her original right of mortgage against the property, which she undertook to make effectual by recording it, as the law required, in the parishes where the real estate lay. She thus, as in the case of the mortgage mentioned in the English equity jurisprudence, reverted to her original right, which was prior to all the conveyances and all the suits about this property set out in this record; and as it was inscribed before any lien accrued to the appellees on that property, or any right to appropriate it to the payment of that debt, it is not perceived why her mortgage does not constitute a prior and superior claim to theirs.

371

There is found running through the whole of this record an attempt to control the action of the circuit court of the United States in the case by the introduction of proceedings had in the local court of Louisiana, which would have undoubted jurisdiction if it were not for the prior commencement of proceedings in the circuit court in the present case. These state court proceedings originated in a surrender by Lisso and Scheen of all their property of whatever description for the benefit of all their creditors, after the proceedings in this case had been commenced and the appointment by the Tenth District Court of the Parish of Red River of a syndic, namely, Christopher Chaffe, Jr., to take charge of all their assets, convert them into money, and pay it out on the debts of the firm of Lisso & Scheen. In that proceeding, which of course could not oust the circuit court of the United States of its jurisdiction to proceed in the present case already before it, Mrs. Bradley filed her claim under the original dation en paiement made by Scheen to her, and her mortgage, the same that is in controversy here, asserting the superiority of her claim on the real estate in controversy in this suit against the syndic and the creditors whom he represented. That case, so far as Mrs. Bradley was concerned, followed very much the same course as the present case, and it came twice before the Supreme Court of Louisiana. The first of these cases, that of Chaffe v. Scheen, is reported in 34 La. Ann. 684. The question there had relation to the validity of the same conveyance by Scheen to his wife as a dation en paiement, in which the court declared that conveyance to be void in the following language:

"For these reasons, and after thorough and prolonged study of the question, and of all the law and the facts bearing on it, we are forced to the conclusion that this act of giving in payment was null and void and without effect as to the creditors of J. H. Scheen."

But the court in that case declared that whatever other claims Mrs. Scheen may have against her husband, J. H. Scheen, are reserved to her with the right to prosecute them in such mode and manner as the law may provide. Subsequently Mrs. Scheen did prosecute in the District Court of the Parish of Red River her claim under the mortgage, which is now the subject of controversy, and that case, which also went to the Supreme Court of Louisiana, and is reported in 36 La. Ann. 217, was decided in her favor as to the validity of the mortgage. The court says: "The greater part of the indebtedness claimed grows out of the husband collecting and using the moneys realized on promissory notes taken on the sales of lands, and alleged as stated, to have been donated to the plaintiff." The court says further: "The validity of these donations is not questioned by the donor nor his heirs, nor his creditors, and we cannot perceive any right in the creditors of Scheen to raise such objection. It is sufficient that the husband received or collected the funds in question as agent of his wife, and under color of the right claimed by her and recognized by him." "The most serious contest," says the court, "is in regard to the legal mortgage claimed. One of the grounds was that it was not inscribed prior to the 1st of January, 1870." To this the court replies "that the omission to register at that time only deprived the mortgage of force with respect to third persons, who at that date had mortgages or pledges upon the property of the husband that are so far superior to the claims of the wife. So far as relates to the husband and his property, the mortgage in favor of the wife, if there existed one, continued to exist without registry, and if recorded subsequently took effect as to third persons from the date of its registry. The evidence of plaintiff's legal mortgage against her husband was recorded in the Parish of Red River in 1879, and its effect upon the immovables in that parish surrendered by the insolvent was properly recognized by the judgment." There was then considered a question as to the registry in the Parish of Bienville, which seems not to have been proved, and which was left open for further consideration. Although the direct question of the effect of the prior conveyance of Scheen as dation en paiement is not referred to in this last report, it is obvious that the whole case was a proceeding in the Tenth District Court of the Parish of Red River in regard to the rights of the syndic Chaffe in this property; and, in the one case, that part of it which related to the dation en paiement, the court in the first of these reports declared that conveyance void, but remitted Mrs. Bradley to her rights, if she had any, under the mortgage inscribed April 30th, 1879; and that, when the proceedings to enforce that right came before the same court, it declared the mortgage to be valid for all property within the parish where it was recorded. It must necessarily have considered the effect of the previous conveyance in payment which it had set aside, upon the mortgage it now declared to be valid. It can hardly be believed that if that prior conveyance constituted any lawful obstruction to the right of Mrs. Bradley to record and assert her mortgage, which the court said had existed long prior to any of these proceedings as between her and her husband, and which was made effectual when it was recorded, it would not have been considered and referred to. It is a fair, if not a necessary, inference from these two cases, that the counsel engaged in them and the court which decided them did not perceive in the conveyance of Scheen to his wife anything which defeated her right to the mortgage for her dotal or paraphernal property. The question as to the validity of that mortgage, after the court had set aside the conveyance as dation en paiement, was precisely the same as the one in the circuit court of the United States, whose decree we are called to revise, and we think we are safe in following the decision of the Supreme Court of Louisiana on the same facts under Louisiana law. The result of these considerations is, that the decree of the circuit court dismissing Mrs. Bradley's bill is reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings.

SAM KLEIN ET AL., as FRIEBERG, KLEIN & COMPANY, Piffs. in Err., SOLOMON HOFFHEIMER ET AL., as HOFFHEIMER BROS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 367-379.)

Statements of vendor, when evidence—acts and declarations, when res gestæ—burden of proof—immaterial testimony—fraud upon creditors—damages for conversion.

1. One who has sold his interest in property cannot by his own subsequent statements of the nature of the transaction defeat the title he has transferred; yet if his statements are made in the presence of one of the defendants, who, as partners, were the purchasers of the property, who concurs in such statements, they are admissible against him and his partners, in an action to subject the property or its avails to the debt of a creditor of the seller, on the ground that the sale was fraudulent as to creditors.
2. Where an assignment of notes and accounts belonging to an insolvent debtor was a part of a transaction by which his whole property was distributed to certain of his creditors in fraud of the others, whatever was said or done by any of the parties, in the transaction, or by one of the assignees, in furtherance of the transaction, is part of the res gestæ, and is evidence against all of such parties.
3. Where one of the firm to which such choses in action were assigned testified that he knew at the time of the transaction that the assignor was insolvent, and that he received all or nearly all of the notes and accounts due the assignor in payment of the debt of his firm, it was not error for the court to charge that the burden of proof was upon the firm to show the fairness of the transaction, although in their answer as defendants they denied having any property of the debtor.
4. Testimony which is immaterial, and which could have done no harm, is not ground of reversal.
5. It was not error for the court to charge (the jury that, under the circumstances, if defendants took more of the debtor's property than what appeared to be reasonably worth the amount of their debt, it was a fraud upon the other creditors.
6. Where defendants fraudulently converted notes and accounts, the property of an insolvent debtor, they are liable to a creditor of the latter not only for the money collected on such notes and accounts, but for the value of those which remain in their hands, not exceeding the amount of the creditor's debt.

[No. 112.]

Argued Nov. 14, 15, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs against garnishees for property and money in their hands of plaintiffs' debtor. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. M. F. Morris and Leo N. Levi for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. George Hoadly for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Texas.

Hoffheimer Brothers brought suit in the District Court of Dallas County, Texas, for a debt of $11,329.79, against Strauss & Levy, of that place, a firm composed of A. Strauss and J. J. Levy, in which suit they applied for and obtained a writ of garnishment against Frieberg, Klein & Co., who were residents of the same county and doing business in Dallas. This writ was served upon Frieberg, Klein & Co. through Joseph Seinsheimer, a member of the firm, in the County of Galveston, on the 15th day of August, 1885. The writ required the garnishees to answer upon oath "what, if any, they were indebted to said Strauss & Levy, and were when this writ was served upon them, and what, if any, effects of said Strauss they have in their possession, and what when the writ was served." To this they made the following answer on oath:

"Now come Frieberg, Klein & Co., garnishees herein, and, answering the writ of garnishment heretofore served upon them, say that they are not now indebted to Strauss & Levy, or either of them, and were not when this writ was served; that they have no effects of Strauss & Levy, or either of them, in their possession, and had none when this writ was served; that they know of no person indebted to Strauss & Levy, or either of them, or who have in their possession effects belonging to Strauss & Levy, or either of them."

This answer was controverted by Hoffheimer Brothers, who took issue upon it by a plea which alleged that said garnishees "combined, colluded and confederated together with said Strauss & Levy for the purpose and with the intent to hinder, delay and defeat the creditors of said Strauss & Levy in the collection of their debts, and that in furtherance of said combination, at said time and with the intent aforesaid, said garnishees secretly and covinously procured and received from said Strauss & Levy all the books, accounts, notes, choses in action and other evidences of indebtedness then owing to said Strauss & Levy by divers and sundry persons to these plaintiffs unknown, but amounting in the aggregate to about the sum of thirty-two thousand dollars, and that said garnishees thereafter immediately commenced to collect said claims, pretending to be owners thereof. These plaintiffs are not informed as to the amount of such claims which had been collected by said garnishees at the time said writs of garnishment were filed herein, but they are informed and believe that at the time the writs of garnishment were served, as well as at the time the said answers were filed, said garnishees had then collected a very large amount upon said claims—it is believed more than sufficient to pay off and discharge the claims of these plaintiffs against said Strauss & Levy—and that the said garnishees then had and still have the money so collected, and that said garnishees then had in their possession said claims not so collected by them."

The case was afterwards transferred to the circuit court of the United States, and the plaintiffs having obtained judgment against Strauss & Levy for the sum of $11,787.15, a trial was had in that court before a jury on the issues made between Hoffheimer Brothers and Frieberg, Klein & Co., garnishees. In that trial the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for the sum of $11,829.79, and the court rendered judgment upon that verdict, and declared that when it should be paid or collected it should constitute a credit for that amount on the judgment in favor of plaintiffs against Strauss & Levy. It is to reverse this judgment that the garnishees, Frieberg, Klein & Co., have brought the present writ of error.

The errors assigned relate to the admission of evidence against objections of plaintiffs in error, and to the charge of the court to the jury, and to the refusal to charge as requested by them. A bill of exceptions was taken which purports to give the proceedings on the trial, and which, while it does not expressly state that it includes all the testimony given in the case, is probably a correct statement of all that was said and done pertinent to the issues now presented.

It appears from this bill of exceptions that Strauss & Levy were engaged in Dallas as wholesale dealers in liquors and cigars on the 10th day of August, 1885, and were at that time seriously embarrassed in their business; that Frieberg, Klein & Co. were also wholesale dealers, in Galveston, Texas, with a house in Dallas; that Strauss & Levy were indebted to Frieberg, Klein & Co. by notes and accounts in the probable sum of about $15,000; and that on the 10th day of August aforesaid, just after dinner, Klein was in the office of Strauss & Levy, when Mr. Bradford, a lawyer, came in. He had a paper in his hand, and demanded payment of them of a claim not then due. They said they would pay it when due, and Bradford talked about suing them. Klein says he knew that Bradford was the attorney for the Bradstreet Commercial Agency, and he became alarmed, and demanded payment for the debt due his firm. They told him they had no money, but they had notes and accounts which they assigned to Frieberg, Klein & Co. in payment of their debt on his demand. The notes and accounts were assigned to Frieberg, Klein & Co. by a written instrument in which Strauss & Levy assigned and transferred to Frieberg, Klein & Co., in full payment and satisfaction of their indebtedness to that firm of the sum of $15,789, "all of our accounts mentioned on a sheet attached marked A, and the notes now held by Frieberg, Klein & Co. as collateral security, besides the notes this day handed Mr. Klein in person, which notes, with aforementioned accounts, amount in the aggregate to the estimated value of $15,000." This instrument is dated the same day, August the 10th. Mr. Klein states that late on the night of the 10th a Mr. Rhinehart came to his house and showed him a telegram, and stated that Strauss and Levy were outside and wanted to know what to do about their business matters. At their solicitation he went with them to the residence of Mr. L. M. Crawford, a lawyer, after one o'clock in the morning of the 11th. Mr. Crawford said that his papers were ready, and he was going to attach. It appears that during that night papers were prepared for attachment in favor of several creditors living in the Town of Dallas. Among these attaching creditors were Marx & Kempner, Addie Lowenstein, Oliver & Griggs, and perhaps others. The order in which these attachments should be levied or issued so as to give priority among themselves was determined during these interviews, in all of which Mr. Klein took an active part, directing himself the displacement of this order of priority in one case to the dissatisfaction of Strauss and Levy when they found it out, who thus found some of their own friends, whom they intended to make safe by these attachments, postponed to some others; and it is obvious from the testimony, that Klein, and Strauss and Levy, and Crawford, the lawyer, and some of the other parties to those suits sat down during that night and morning and arranged for the issuing of attachments sufficient in amount to absorb all the property owned by Strauss & Levy, and that Hoffheimer, and perhaps many other creditors, were left without protection and without any means of making their debts, so that between the time when Bradford, the lawyer, made his demand that evening, after dinner, and daylight next morning, all the assets of the partnership of Strauss & Levy had been divided between the parties who met that night, and that not by any assignment, but by a contrivance by which Frieberg, Klein & Co. got the choses in action, whether notes or accounts, due to Strauss & Levy, and the visible property was secured to the other persons engaged in the transaction by attachments issued with the consent and active assistance of Strauss & Levy, and apportioned among these different parties in accordance with an arrangement which met the assent of all of them. It will be observed that in the reply of Hoffheimer & Co., by which they took issue on the answers of the garnishees, they state that prior to the service of the writ of garnishment said garnishees combined, colluded and confederated together with said Strauss & Levy for the purpose and with the intent to delay, defeat and hinder the creditors of said Strauss & Levy in the collection of their debts; and the question which came before the jury for trial turned upon the truth of this allegation. There is much other testimony in the bill of exceptions showing the interference of Klein, and occasionally of one of his partners, in the proceedings, by which this combination or conspiracy was carried out. Whether it is sufficient to establish it or not, it was for the jury to say, if they were properly instructed, and if no improper testimony was admitted. It is obvious that there is sufficient testimony to justify a jury in the inference that Mr. Klein was the presiding genius in the appropriation and distribution of the assets of Strauss & Levy.

Before we come to the matters on which the assignments of error are made, it is proper to make one or two things a little more clear than they seem at first sight. The transfer of the notes and accounts of Strauss & Levy to Frieberg, Klein & Co. was not an assignment to secure payment of the debt of the former to the latter, but it purports upon its face to be, and was treated by the parties throughout as, an absolute sale of those notes and accounts in full satisfaction of the debt due by the insolvent firm. The case is not to be treated, therefore, in its subsequent consideration, as one in which Frieberg, Klein & Co. held these notes and accounts as security for their debt, but as one in which they became the owners of them absolutely, if the transaction was fair and honest.

Another point to be considered is, how far this transfer or assignment of the notes and accounts was a part of the transaction by which the whole property of the insolvent firm of Strauss & Levy was appropriated during the twelve or fifteen hours within which the matter was completed. It is earnestly insisted by counsel for plaintiffs in error that the transaction between Klein and Strauss & Levy in the afternoon of the 10th was totally distinct from those which took place that night in regard to the attachments, and that therefore nothing said or done by Strauss or Levy, or by any of the parties, or their agents, whose attachments were levied after the execution of the paper transferring the notes and accounts to Frieberg, Klein & Co., can be used as evidence against the validity of that transfer. If the entire proceedings of that afternoon and night are to be considered as one transaction, intended to distribute the assets of Strauss & Levy to certain creditors to the exclusion of others, then whatever was said or done by any of those parties in regard to that transaction is evidence against all of them, and the acts of Mr. Klein in furtherance of this combination, though some of them may have occurred after he had obtained the transfer of a part of the assets of Strauss & Levy to himself and partners, must be considered as part of the res gesta. We are of opinion that the short time consumed in the whole transaction, the active interference of Mr. Klein in all its stages and in securing priority for certain friends of his, and of Strauss & Levy in the attachments, and the fact that the whole property of the insolvent debtors was intended to go to certain individuals to the exclusion of others by consent of the parties engaged, constituted one transaction, in which Mr. Klein's acts and doings were part of the res gesta, and as such are admissible evidence.

With these principles in view we approach the assignments of error, the first of which relates to the introduction of testimony objected to by defendants below. The testimony of John W. Edmondson, who was in the employ of Marx & Kempner, one of the firms whose attachments were included in the proceedings we have mentioned, stated that the suit and attachments of Marx & Kempner were filed by the authority of Klein, and that Klein, Strauss and Levy, and Crawford, the attorney, had told him so. He also said that in September, 1886, he had a conversation with Strauss and Levy, at which Klein and Marx were present. In that conversation Strauss and Levy said they had received from Hoffheimer Brothers on the 10th of August, about nine or ten o'clock at night, a telegram which referred to their matters in such a way as to alarm them. That they then went with the telegram to Klein, about one o'clock that night, and with Klein to the house of Crawford, the lawyer, and there conferred together. It was then agreed "between all of them that confidential debts should be attached for as follows: Crawford & Crawford, Marx & Kempner, Wertheim & Schiffer, Oliver & Griggs and Addie Lowenstein. Crawford & Crawford were to come first and Marx & Kempner next; but Sam Klein had it fixed so that next day when the attachments were levied that of Oliver & Griggs was levied ahead of Marx & Kempner." "Some statements were made by Levy that the attachment was agreed on, in which August Cohn, brother-in-law of Levy, was indorser on one of the notes. Levy said that he had taken legal advice, and would knock all the attachments out of court and give away how the whole thing was done, and let none of the confidential debts be paid a dollar rather than Cohn should suffer."

There is much more of this showing the secret arrangements by which the property of the insolvents was to be disposed of as the parties present had determined. Edmondson said that Klein, who was present, concurred in all that Strauss and Levy said. He further testified that Klein had said in that conversation that in consideration of the agreement of Marx & Kempner to hold August Cohn harmless, they gave Marx & Kempner a note of Cohn indorsed by Strauss & Levy, and by Frieberg, Klein & Co.

The objection to this testimony seems to be upon the ground that Strauss and Levy, after they had parted with their interests in the property, could not, by their own confessions, or statements of the nature of the transaction, defeat the title they had transferred to Frieberg, Klein & Co. But it will be remembered that this conversation was in the presence of Klein, one of the defendants, and that the bill of exceptions states that he concurred in all that was said. It was therefore admissible against him and his partners as a statement which he agreed to at the time of the conversation, and which he should have contradicted if it were untrue.

With regard to the letter attached to Edmondson's deposition as an exhibit, from J. J. Levy to M. Marx, of the firm of Marx & Kempner, it might possibly be admissible, though written August 31st, twenty days after the attachment proceedings, as showing that Levy understood that in those proceedings his friend Cohn was to be taken care of. Otherwise it is entirely immaterial, and could not have worked the defendants any harm.

After the testimony of Edmondson, the deposition of H. Kempner, of the firm of Marx & Kempner, was introduced. He testified to a conversation with Mr. Klein in Galveston on the Sunday morning after the attachment suits had been instituted, in which he said: "Now, Mr. Klein, being that you were the leader and manager for the attachment suits, why is it that you did not carry out the instructions of Strauss & Levy, and put Marx & Kempner second in the order of attachment?" He replied that he felt in honor bound to put Oliver & Griggs ahead of Marx & Kempner, because he had recommended them for accommodation. He said that he had done all that he could for Marx & Kempner; that Strauss had insisted that Addie Lowenstein should be put in as a creditor in attachment for three thousand, but he, Klein, had objected, and it was compromised on the one thousand named in her suit. She is the sister-in-law of Strauss.

As this testimony relates to what Klein himself, one of the defendants, said, and as it tends to show his own recognition of the fact that he had been a controlling spirit in the attachment proceedings, we do not see what objection can be urged to it.

Objection is made to the testimony of Chapman Bradford, offered in rebuttal, to the effect that he had seen in the store of Pascal Tucker, in Brownwood, several barrels of whiskey marked "S. & L., Dallas." This testimony seems to have been offered in rebuttal of the testimony of Klein, who had declared that Tucker had been book-keeper for Strauss & Levy, and had afterwards moved to Brownwood, and was keeping a store there; that "none of Strauss & Levy's goods were shipped to Tucker; he received none of them. I shipped all of them to Frieberg, Klein & Co., at Galveston." This was his own firm. So far as the testimony of Bradford tended to contradict this statement of Klein, no objection can be seen to its admissibility; and if neither Klein's testimony nor Brown's testimony is material to the issue, it seems to be so utterly useless that defendants could not be hurt by it.

Two principal objections are made to the charge of the court. The first of these, and perhaps the more important, is that the court placed the burden of proof upon the garnishees to establish the fairness of the transaction by which they obtained possession of the notes and accounts of the insolvent debtors. The argument is that the defendants, by virtue of the statute, answered certain interrogatories which had been propounded to them in the garnishee process; that that answer is to be taken as evidence in their favor; and that, as they positively denied having any property or credits of the insolvent debtors in their hands, or being in any way indebted to them, this answer should stand as a prima facie case in their favor to be overcome by proof on the part of the plaintiffs. It is also true that in the traverse of this answer made by plaintiffs they set out the affirmative allegation that "prior to the service of the writ of attachment and writ of garnishment the garnishees combined, colluded and confederated together with said Strauss & Levy for the purpose and with the intent to hinder, delay and defeat the creditors of said Strauss & Levy in the collection of their debts, and that in furtherance of said combination, at said time and with the intent aforesaid, said garnishees secretly and covinously procured and received from said Strauss & Levy all the books, accounts, notes, choses in action, and other evidences of indebtedness then owing to said Strauss & Levy by divers and sundry persons to these plaintiffs unknown, but amounting in the aggregate to about the sum of thirty-two thousand dollars, and that said garnishees thereafter immediately commenced to collect said claims, pretending to be owners thereof." If this allegation is not true in substance, the plaintiffs had no case against Frieberg, Klein & Co., and the burden of the issue was, therefore, primarily upon them. But Klein and another member of that partnership were sworn as witnesses, and what they said as witnesses, being minutely descriptive of what was done, is much more important in ascertaining the truth than their general denial that they held the property of the insolvent debtors or owed them anything. In the testimony of Klein himself it was made very clear that he was aware, at the time of the transaction by which he obtained their choses in action, that Strauss & Levy were insolvent, or at least were in failing circumstances and unable to pay their debts; and that he received from them all or nearly all of the notes and accounts due them, and professed to take them in payment of the debt of his firm. It was not unreasonable, therefore, that the court should charge that, under these circumstances, Klein and his partners should establish the fairness of the proceeding by which they came into the possession of these notes and accounts.

The substance of the charge of the court, of which complaint is made, is that, "if the jury believe from proof in the case that plaintiffs had a valid, existing, unsatisfied claim against Strauss & Levy for something over eleven thousand dollars, and that Strauss & Levy were insolvent on the 10th day of August, 1885, and that Klein knew, or might have known, that fact, and that under the circumstances he on behalf of garnishees took the bills receivable, and that garnishees had received and collected the sum of nearly ten thousand dollars, and have still uncollected bills of value, you will find the garnishees liable, unless you believe also from the proof that the garnishees were, in fact and in good faith, creditors of Strauss & Levy in the full sum claimed by said garnishees, and that the dealings of Klein on behalf of the garnishees, with Strauss & Levy, on the 10th day of August, were, in fact, fair and honest, and had with a single purpose of obtaining satisfaction of their debt, and that he received no more therefor than was reasonably worth the amount of said garnishees' said debt." We think that this was a fair statement of the law on the subject. The whole case was before the jury. The insolvency of Strauss & Levy was known, or might have been known, to Klein, and, therefore, when he undertook to deal with the assets of this insolvent firm by taking a very large part of it in payment of his own debt, a circumstance which he knew must leave many other creditors either wholly or partly unprotected and without means for payment, it was proper that all his dealings in that matter should be fair and honest; that his claim should be a just one; that he should receive no more than what was reasonably necessary to pay his debt; and that if the transaction was tainted with any fraud or unjust interference with the rights of creditors it should not stand. In other words, the preliminary statement of those facts made a case which required of the garnishees a fair and satisfactory explanation of the remarkable proceedings of Mr. Klein and his partners in the whole transaction.

The language we have cited also shows that there is no ground for the argument of counsel that the jury were instructed that if the garnishees received anything more, even a dollar, than was due to them of the assets of the insolvent debtors, the transaction was therefore void. Fair play and honest dealing did require that while they had the right, as is admitted by the court, to secure their debt or to take payment for it, provided it was done fairly and honestly, and that Strauss & Levy had a right to pay them out of their assets in preference to other creditors, yet it was right and proper that they should take no more of these assets in which other creditors were interested than was, in the language of the court, "reasonably worth the amount of the garnishees' debt." Of course this reasonable amount did not mean that it should be measured to a dollar or to a cent. It did not mean if what they took turned out to be worth a little more than their debt, if the notes and accounts yielded a little more than the debt in the end, that thereby the whole transaction was to be void, but it meant, and that we think was sound law, that in presence of the circumstances under which the transfer was made, if defendants took more than what appeared to be reasonably worth the amount of their debt, it was a fraud upon the other creditors; and the court, in giving the converse of this proposition, said that if the garnishees on that day received no more from the insolvent debtors than was reasonably sufficient to satisfy their claim, the jury were to find for the garnishees.

The court also instructed the jury that if they found for the plaintiffs, they were to return a verdict for the amount of money shown by proof to have been received by the garnishees, and the value of the uncollected bills, if the sum of these did not exceed plaintiff's debt. It is said that the garnishees could only be liable for the sum which they had actually collected out of these notes and accounts, and that, as to any of them remaining in their hands, they could not be held accountable in this proceeding. If the transfer of these choses in action to the garnishees had been a fair assignment by way of security out of which they were to pay their debt, if so much of it could be collected, then the remainder of the choses in action, whether valuable or not, could be returned by them, without liability; but, as we have seen, the case goes upon the idea of a fraudulent conversion by Frieberg, Klein & Co. of assets of the insolvent debtors. By this fraud the control of the assets passed to them, and we are of opinion that, if liable at all, they were liable not only for the money collected on such notes and accounts, but for the value of those which remained in their hands to at least, as the court instructed, an amount sufficient to pay the debt of Hoffheimer Brothers against Strauss & Levy. Whether there was, or not, such amount was a question left to a jury, and the jury found that there was. They must have found, under the instructions of the court, that enough of the assets collected remained in their hands, either in the shape of money collected or of notes and accounts yet uncollected but valuable, to pay the debt of Hoffheimer Brothers against Strauss & Levy. In this we see no error to the prejudice of the plaintiffs in error, and the judgment is therefore affirmed.

WOLF BACHRACK, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ANTHONY B. NORTON ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 337-340).

Action on marshal's bond—nonresident may be assignee—laws of Texas.

132 U. S.

1. An action on a marshal's bond, against him and his sureties, for wrongful taking of goods of plaintiff under an attachment issued out of the circuit court of the United States, arises under the laws of the United States, and is therefore within the jurisdiction of the circuit court, without any averment of citizenship of the parties.
2. An assignment of a debtor's property for the benefit of his creditors is not void because the assignee is not a resident or citizen of the State where the assignment is made and the debtor resides, provided he complies with the conditions prescribed by the law.
3. A resident and citizen of Missouri can lawfully be an assignee, under the laws of Texas in regard to assignments by insolvents for the benefit of their creditors.

[No. 116.]

Argued Nov. 15, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, to review a judgment dismissing a suit on a marshal's bond against him and his sureties to recover for his wrongful taking of plaintiff's goods under an attachment. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. G. Robertson and Sawnie Robertson for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John Johns and D. A. McKnight, for defendants in error:

It is a well-settled rule that a deed of assignment against the policy or terms of a statute is void against non-consenting creditors.

Burrill on Assignments, § 352; Jaffray v. McGee, 107 U. S. 365 (27:496); Schoolfield v. Johnson, 11 Fed. Rep. 297; Heelan v. Hoagland, 10 Neb. 511; Bonne v. Carter, 20 Neb. 566; Edwards v. Mitchell, 1 Gray, 239; Pike v. Bacon, 21 Me. 280; Raleigh v. Griffith, 37 Ark. 153; Churchill v. Whipple, 41 Wis. 611; Keovil v. Donaldson, 20 Kan. 168; Henderson v. Pierce, 7 West. Rep. 261, 108 Ind. 462.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on a marshal's bond, against him and his sureties, to recover damages for his wrongful taking of the goods of the plaintiff under an attachment issued out of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, against one Myerson. According to the decision in Feibelman v. Packard, 109 U. S. 421 [27:984], it is a case arising under the laws of the United States, and is therefore within the jurisdiction of the circuit court without any averment of citizenship of the parties.

The plaintiff avers that Myerson had previously assigned the goods to him for the benefit of his creditors, and sets out a copy of the assignment. The defendants demurred to the petition, or, in the language of the Texas practice, filed a special exception, the principal ground of which was that it appears by the petition that the plaintiff was a resident and citizen of Missouri, and therefore could not lawfully be an assignee under the laws of Texas. The court below entertained this view and sustained the exception, and the plaintiff having declined to amend, the cause was dismissed. The question therefore is, whether the view taken by the court below was, or was not, erroneous.

377

The assignment was made on the 22d day of October, 1880, under the Act of the Legislature of Texas, approved March 24th, 1879, which was before this court in the case of Cunningham v. Norton, 125 U. S. 77 [81: 624]. In that case the provisions of the Act were examined in extenso, and we held that it was intended to favor general assignments by insolvents for the benefit of their creditors, and to sustain them, notwithstanding technical defects, provided they assigned all the property of the debtor. The assignment in the present case is substantially the same in form as in the case of Cunningham v. Norton. The only material difference (if it is material) is the fact that the assignee was a resident of the State of Missouri, and not of Texas. As to this, the allegation of the petition is, "that at the time of making of said assignment he (the plaintiff) was a resident of the City of St. Louis and State of Missouri; but that, while holding his domicile in said State last named, his business lay in the State of Texas, and for the greater part of the year, before and since said time of the making of said assignment, he was in said State of Texas in pursuance of his calling in said State; that at, before and since the time of said assignment he was, in pursuance of his calling, frequently in said County of Grayson, in which county he had business interests. That at the time of making said assignment said Myerson was a resident of Grayson County, Texas, where he was conducting his business, and where said goods, wares and property, before and at the time of making said assignment, were situated, and where said assignment was made." Some two or three years after this assignment was made, viz., April 7th, 1883, an amending Act was passed which, amongst other things, required that the assignee of an insolvent debtor under the Act should be a resident of Texas; but the Act of 1879 had no such requirement. The only word in the whole Act which could be construed to imply it was in the 6th section, which required the assignee to execute a bond with sureties, and directed that the bond should be filed with the county clerk of his county. We think that this expression was insufficient to raise the implication contended for. It probably only meant that the bond should be filed with the clerk of the county where the debtor resided and carried on business.

Independently of a statute on the subject, we do not see why, as a mere matter of law, an assignment should be held void because the assignee is not a citizen or resident of the State where the assignment is made and the debtor resides, provided he complies with the conditions prescribed by the law. A citizen or resident of another State may, in a particular case, be a very proper assignee. A large part of a debtor's assets may be located in a State other than that in which he resides. If a nonresident assignee should for any reason be deemed an improper person to act as such, the court having jurisdiction of the matter could, according to the laws of Texas, remove him and appoint another in his place. It was the object of the Act of 1879 to uphold, rather than to set aside, assignments; to aid defects, rather than to allow them to defeat the purpose of the debtor and the rights of his creditors. In Windham v.

Patty, 63 Tex. 490; the court held that the failure of the assignee to give a bond ought not to defeat the assignment, but that the creditors might apply for the appointment of another assignee to fulfill the trust. The 14th section of the Act of 1879 declares that "if any assignee becomes unsuitable to perform the trust, refuses or neglects so to do, or mismanages the property, the county judge or judge of the district court may, upon the application of the assignor, or one or more of the creditors, upon reasonable notice to all parties interested, by publication or otherwise, as such judge may direct, remove such assignee, and, in case of vacancy by death or otherwise, shall appoint another in his place, who shall have the same powers and be subject to the same liabilities as the original assignee."

One or two other objections to the assignment are made under the special exception, but we do not deem it necessary to discuss them. They are clearly untenable. In our judgment it was error in the court below to allow the exception and dismiss the action.

The judgment must be reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to overrule the exceptions, and take such further proceedings in the case as to law and justice may appertain.

F. H. AYERS ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

A. E. WATSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 394-406.)

Impeaching witness by former declarations—effect of death of witness.

1. Before former declarations of a witness can be used to impeach or contradict him, his attention must be called to those declarations, with particularity as to time, place and circumstances, so that he can deny or explain them.
2. Where three trials of the same case have been had, in each of which the same deposition of the same witness has been given in evidence, and in the taking of such deposition he was cross-examined, and on those trials no reference was made to a former deposition of his in another suit, nor any attempt to call his attention to it, and by his death subsequently he is placed beyond the power of explanation, then, on a fourth trial of the case, contradictory declarations of his in such former deposition cannot be used to impeach his testimony.

[No. 119.]

Argued Nov. 19, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas to review a judgment in an action of ejectment in favor of the plaintiff below. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wm. E. Earle, for plaintiffs in error: To impeach a witness by showing that he has made a statement materially different from the facts sworn to by him, a foundation must be laid by questioning the witness as to such statement.

U. S. v. Dickinson, 2 McLean, 325; Chapin v. Siger, 4 McLean, 378.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for defendant in error:

The deposition of Johnson was admissible.

George v. Thomas, 16 Tex. 92; Stroud v. Springfield, 23 Tex. 665; Weider v. Carroll, 29 Tex. 833; Evans v. Hurt, 84 Tex. 118; Smith v. Russell, 87 Tex. 255.

Declarations of deceased witnesses may be proved to fix the location of corners and lines.

Hurt v. Evans, 49 Tex. 814; Coleman v. Smith, 55 Tex. 254; Tucker v. Smith, 68 Tex. 478; Hunnicutt v. Peyton, 102 U. S. 833 (26: 113); Clement v. Packer, 125 U. S. 810 (31: 721).

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of ejectment brought by Watson, the original plaintiff, in the District Court for the County of Bell, in the State of Texas, and afterwards removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of that State. It was twice tried before a jury, which failed in each of these trials to come to an agreement. It was tried a third time, which resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff. A writ of error was taken to that judgment, by which it was brought to this court and reversed. The case is reported as Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 594 [28: 1093]. It was thereupon remanded to the circuit court for a new trial, where a verdict was again had for the plaintiff, and the judgment rendered on that verdict is before us for review.

The details of the controversy may be found in the report of the case above mentioned. While it was pending in the District Court of Bell County the following agreement between the parties was made, which simplifies the case very much:

"A. E. Watson }
v. }
Frank Ayers et al. }

"It is agreed and admitted by the defendants, for the purpose of this trial at this term of the court, that A. E. Watson, plaintiff in this cause, is entitled to all the right, title and interest granted by the State of Texas to the heirs of Walter W. Daws on September 16, A. D. 1850, said land patented being one third of a league, described in said patent No. 542, vol. 8, and which said land is described in plaintiff's petition; but defendants say that said one third of a league of land so patented as aforesaid to the heirs of Walter W. Daws is covered by the grant of the government of Coahuila and Texas to Maximo Moreno of eleven leagues of land, as set forth more fully in defendants' petition; which said eleven-league grant is an older and superior title to that of plaintiff's and the title to which is in the defendants in this cause.

"X. B. Saunders,
"W. T. Rucker,
"F. H. Sleeper and
"A. M. Monteith,
"Attys for Defendants."

By this agreement it will be seen that the sole question at issue was whether the land in controversy was covered by the eleven-league grant to Maximo Moreno. A plat of that survey is found in the bill of exceptions. On the trial which resulted in the judgment which we are now called to reconsider, and which, as we understand it, was the fourth time the case has been tried by a jury, the defendant introduced the deposition of F. W. Johnson, the surveyor who had made the survey under the Moreno grant. It seems that his deposition had been taken twice in this action, and, though the details of those trials are not before us, it had no doubt been used in them. But prior to the trial which we are now reviewing, he had died. It appears from the bill of exceptions that in these depositions he had been cross-examined by plaintiff's counsel. Plaintiff in rebuttal to this testimony of Johnson offered in evidence a deposition of the said Johnson taken in 1880, in a suit between other parties, in which his testimony with regard to the matters to which he testified in the depositions offered by defendant varied materially from these latter depositions. To the introduction of this deposition of 1880 the defendants objected, and, their objection being overruled, took this exception. As we think the judgment of the court below must be reversed on account of this ruling, all that relates to it in the bill of exceptions is here reproduced:

"It was admitted by both parties that the upper and lower corners on the river of the Maximo Moreno 11-league grant are extant as called for in the original grant to Maximo Moreno, and their corners are not in dispute.

"The defendant read in evidence the depositions of F. W. Johnson, taken in 1878 and 1880, in which he testified that he was principal surveyor for Austin's colony. . . . The first survey made was the Maximo Moreno 11-league survey. This survey was commenced at the point opposite the mouth of the Lampasas River, as called for in the field notes of the grant, and a line was run thence on the course called for in the grant the distance called for, the chain being used to measure the distance. The northwest or second corner called for in the grant was thus established by him, the distance giving out in the prairie. In running the west line I made an offset to avoid crossing the Leon River, which was about 50 or 60 vrs. wide. This offset was made soon after leaving the beginning corner, there being a peculiar bend in the river at that point. From the northwest corner thus established the second line was run the course and distance called for in the grant. Several streams were crossed on this line at distances not now recollected, and the northeast corner established on two small hackberries in Cow Creek bottom. From the northeast or third corner so established a line was run in the course called for in the grant to San Andres River. This last line was marked but not measured, because it was not usual or necessary to measure the closing line.

"It was admitted by the defendant that the distance as measured on the ground from the northeast corner to a creek called for in the grant was some four thousand varas more than the distance called for; that is, the distance is 7,500 instead of 8,500 vrs; and on cross-examination, being asked to account for the discrepancy, said the distances called on that line were not measured but guessed at. No part of the east line was measured. The exterior lines were marked with blazes. The corner trees and bearing trees, where there were such, were marked with blazes, with two hacks above and two below. In answer to question, on cross-examination, he said that he did not begin the survey at the southeast corner, but he began at the southwest corner, at the three forks at the mouth of the Lampasas, and actually traced the lines in the order set forth in the field notes. The field book containing the same, which I kept, I examined, which I don't remember to examine until a month ago, and as hereinbefore stated.

"The plaintiff in rebuttal to Johnson's testimony, as above set forth, it appearing that said Johnson died in 1884, offered to read in evidence a deposition of said Johnson, taken in 1860, in a certain suit then pending in Bell County, Texas, wherein David Ayers was plaintiff and Lancaster was defendant, in which he stated in answer to question therein propounded that he began the Moreno survey at the southeast corner and ran thence northerly. The north line was then run westwardly, and the third, if run at all, was run southwardly to the river. I am of the opinion that no western line was run, but was left open; but the eastern and northern lines were run and measured; it was not usual to measure the closing line. To the reading of which last-mentioned deposition, proven to be in the handwriting of Johnson, taken in 1860, the defendants objected upon the ground that the deposition had been taken in another and different cause, between other parties, before the institution of this suit; and the same witness having testified in answer to interrogatories and cross-interrogatories propounded herein in 1877 and 1880, respectively, it was not competent as original evidence nor admissible to contradict or impeach the testimony of the witness Johnson, as given in his deposition read by the defendants, notwithstanding the death of Johnson; which objection the court overruled and admitted the testimony so objected to; to which ruling of the court the defendants then and there excepted and still except, and the same is allowed as exception No. 1."

A very earnest and able argument is presented to us to sustain this ruling, upon the general ground of the liberality of courts in admitting what would be otherwise called hearsay evidence in regard to boundaries, such as tradition, general understanding in the neighborhood, declarations of persons familiar with the boundaries and with the objects on the lines of the survey, and others of similar character. An opinion of Mr. Justice Field, delivered in the Supreme Court of California in 1860, in the case of Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 277, is much relied on in this case, and it is also said that the courts of the State of Texas have established the same principle, which has thus become a rule of property in that State, which should be followed in this case. If the principle stated in the decision of the California court, and in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Texas, were indeed applicable to the case before us, we would hesitate very much in reversing the judgment on this ground, and, indeed, should be inclined, on the weight of those authorities, and in the belief that in the main they are sound, to overrule the exception. But the objection in the present case to the deposition of Johnson, taken in 1860, does not rest upon the ground that it is hearsay testimony, or that it does not come within the general principle which admits declarations of persons made during their lifetime of matters important to the location of surveys and objects showing the line of those surveys. Johnson's deposition of 1860, if it stood alone and was introduced upon the trial of this case for the first time as independent testimony in favor of plaintiffs, might be admissible. It is not necessary to decide that question, because such is not the character of the circumstances under which the testimony was admitted. As we have already said, there had been three trials of this action, during which Johnson was alive and was a competent witness for either party. All his testimony was given by way of deposition. This only renders the manner of taking it more deliberate, and if it was to be contradicted by anything he had said on former occasions, made it the more easy and reasonable that plaintiff should have called his attention to the former statements which they proposed to use. It will be observed that the plaintiffs did not introduce, or offer to introduce, this deposition of Johnson of 1860 as a part of their case, when it was their duty to introduce their testimony. They, therefore, did not rely on it as independent testimony in their favor. But after Johnson's deposition had been given in the case itself, and he had been cross-examined by the plaintiffs in that deposition in regard to his testimony, and after he was dead and could give no explanation of his previous testimony of 1860, which might show a mistake in that deposition, or give some satisfactory account of it consistent with his testimony in the principal case, this old deposition is for the first time brought forward to contradict the most important part of his testimony given on the present trial. The importance of this matter as it was presented to the jury will be readily understood when we revert to the fact that the two southern corners of the survey are established without question and are found on the San Andres River, and the controversy concerns the question whether the east line and the west line of that survey, which are straight lines almost due north, extend so far north that the northern line between these lines is so far north as to include the survey of Daws under which plaintiff claims. In the principal deposition of Johnson, as we have seen by the bill of exceptions, he states that this survey commenced at the southwestern corner on the San Andres River and was run northward the distance called for in the grant, and actually measured by the chain. The northwest or second corner called for in the grant was established by him, the distance giving out in the prairie. From the northwest corner thus established, the second, the line was run for the course and distance called for in the grant, and the northeast corner established on two small hackberries on Cow Creek bottom. From the northeast or third corner thus established, the course was run to the San Andres River. This last line was marked but not measured, because it was not necessary to measure the closing line. In answer to questions on cross-examination, he said he did not begin at the southeast corner but he began at the southwest corner, and actually traced the lines in the order set forth in the field notes. He said the field book containing these notes "I kept and examined, which I do not remember to have examined till a month ago, as hereinbefore stated." The deposition offered by plaintiff states distinctly that he began the Moreno survey at the southeast corner, and ran thence northerly. The north line was then run westwardly, and the third, if run at all, was run southward to the river. And he further says: "I am of the opinion that no western line was run but was left open, but the eastern and northern lines were run and measured. It was not usual to measure the closing line." It was admitted that the distance as measured on the ground from the northeast corner to a creek called for in the grant was some four thousand varas more than the distance called for, and the witness on cross-examinations in the principal depositions read by the defendant in this case, being asked to account for this discrepancy, said: "The distances called on that line were not measured but guessed at. No part of the east line was measured." The discrepancy between these two depositions is manifest, and that discrepancy is in a matter which relates directly to the question whether the Moreno grant as it was surveyed included the land embraced within the Daws grant, under which plaintiff asserts claim. If the jury believed in the truth of the depositions of Johnson taken by the defendant in this case, at which he was cross-examined by the plaintiff, it affords the strongest evidence that the Daws claim was included in the lines of the Moreno survey. This deposition is supported by the field notes and by the reference of Johnson himself to those field notes a very little while before he gave his deposition. If, on the contrary, the eastern line was the one which was actually run and measured, beginning at the southeast corner of the survey on the San Andres River, then the fact that that line was actually run and measured would probably have a very great influence in the mind of the jury on the question in issue. And whether this was so or not, the contradictory statements of Johnson under oath might destroy the value of his testimony before the jury.

The circumstances under which the former statements of a witness in regard to the subject matter of his testimony when examined in the principal case can be introduced to contradict or impeach his testimony, are well settled, and are the same whether his testimony in the principal case is given orally in court before the jury or is taken by deposition afterwards read to them. In all such cases, even where the matter occurs on the spur of the moment in a trial before a jury, and where the objectionable testimony may then come for the first time to the knowledge of the opposite party, it is the rule that before those former declarations can be used to impeach or contradict the witness, his attention must be called to what may be brought forward for that purpose, and this must be done with great particularity as to time and place and circumstances, so that he can deny it, or make any explanation intending to reconcile what he formerly said with what he is now testifying. While the courts have been somewhat liberal in giving the opposing party an opportunity to present to the witness the matter in which they propose to contradict him, even going so far as to permit him to be recalled and cross-examined on that subject after he has left the stand, it is believed that in no case has any court deliberately held that after the witness's testimony has been taken, committed to writing and used in the court, and by his death he is placed beyond the reach of any power of explanation, then in another trial such contradictory declarations, whether by deposition or otherwise, can be used to impeach his testimony. Least of all would this seem to be admissible in the present case, where three trials had been had before a jury, in each of which the same testimony of the witness Johnson had been introduced and relied on, and in each of which he had been cross-examined, and no reference made to his former deposition nor any attempt to call his attention to it. This principle of the rule of evidence is so well understood that authorities are not necessary to be cited. It is so well stated, with its qualifications and the reasons for it, by Mr. Greenleaf in his work on Evidence, vol. I, in §§ 462 and 464 inclusive, that nothing need be added to it here except a reference to the decisions cited in his notes to those sections. See also Weir v. McGee, 25 Tex. Supp. 82.

It will thus be seen that the principle on which counsel for plaintiff in error objected to this deposition of Johnson is not in conflict with the case of Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 277, nor with any case to which we are cited, decided by the Supreme Court of Texas. That ground, as stated in the bill of exceptions, is "that the deposition had been taken in another and different cause, between other parties, before the institution of this suit; and the same witness having testified in answer to interrogatories and cross-interrogatories propounded herein in 1877 and 1880, respectively, it was not competent as original evidence, nor admissible to contradict or impeach the testimony of the witness Johnson as given in his deposition read by the defendant, notwithstanding the death of Johnson."

We are very clear that the deposition of 1880 was improperly admitted, and its important relation to the issue tried by the jury was such that the judgment rendered on it must be reversed, and the verdict set aside and a new trial granted.

There are other assignments of error, the consideration of which is not necessary in the decision of the case before us, which, with due attention to what we decided when the case was here before, to which we still adhere, may not arise in another trial.

WILLIAM ROEMER, Appt.,
v.
THOMAS B. PEDDIE ET AL.

SAME, Appt.,

ALBERT O. HEADLEY.

SAME, Appt.,

CHARLES KUPPER.

SAME, Appt.,

RICHARD C. JENKINSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 318-317.)

Construction of letters-patent—limitations and restrictions in patent.

1. When a patentee, on the rejection of his application, inserts in his specification, in consequence, limitations and restrictions for the purpose of obtaining his patent, he cannot, after he has obtained it, claim that it shall be construed as it would have been construed if such limitations and restrictions were not contained in it.
2. Where the patentee, after the rejection of his application, inserted in his specification a statement that his invention related to a new construction of lock-case, whereby it was made "to dispense with an extended bottom plate," he cannot contend that his specification and claims are to be interpreted so as to cover a construction which has an extended bottom plate.

[Nos. 120, 121, 132, 133.]

Argued Nov. 18, 19, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

APPEALS from decrees in the two first above-named cases of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, and appeals from decrees in the two last above-named cases of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey, dismissing suits in equity for the infringement of letters-patent No. 195,233, granted to William Roemer Sept. 18, 1887, for an improvement in a combined lock and handle for traveling bags. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 27 Fed. Rep. 702.

Mr. Arthur V. Briesen for appellant.

Messrs. Frederic H. Betts and J. E. Hindon Hyde, for appellees:

There is no invention in what Roemer has shown in his patent in suit, in view of what he himself had shown in his prior patent, and in consideration of other prior structures of this class.

Winans v. Denmead, 56 U. S. 15 How. 330 (14:717); Evans v. Eaton, 16 U. S. 8 Wheat. 454 (4:433); Smith v. Nichols, 2 Pat. Off. Gaz. 649; Tucker v. Spalding, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 453 (20:515); Phillips v. Page, 65 U. S. 24 How. 164 (16:639); Hicks v. Kelsey, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 670 (21:852); Rubber-Coated Harness Trimming Co. v. Welling, 97 U. S. 7 (24:942); Terhune v. Phillips, 99 U. S. 592 (25:298); Orouch v. Roemer, 103 U. S. 797 (26:426); Atlantic Works v. Brady, 107 U. S. 192 (27:438); Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Greenleaf, 117 U. S. 554 (29:952).

He has simply taken the Havell lock-box or his own lock-box of his patent of May, 1887, and substituted for the forms of notch or ring-loop in those structures the old and well-known form of ring-loop. This does not amount to invention.

Stimpson v. Woodman, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 117 (19:866); Dunbar v. Meyers, 94 U. S. 187 (24:34); Hall v. Macneale, 107 U. S. 90 (27:867); Slawson v. Grand Street, P. P. & F. R. Co., 107 U. S. 649 (27:576); Double Pointed Tack Co. v. Two Rivers Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 117 (27:877); Bussey v. Excelsior Mfg. Co. 110 U. S. 181 (28:95); Stephenson v. Brooklyn Cross-Town R. Co. 81 Pat. Off. Gaz. 263, 114 U. S. 149 (29:58).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

These are two suits in equity, brought by William Roemer in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, one against Thomas B. Peddie and George B. Jenkinson, and the other against Albert O. Headley; and two suits in equity brought by the same plaintiff in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey, one against Charles Kupper, and the other against Richard C. Jenkinson. All four of the suits are brought for the infringement of letters-patent No. 195,233, granted to the plaintiff September 18, 1877, for an improvement in a combined lock and handle for traveling bags.

The specification says: "Be it known that I, William Roemer, of Newark, in the County of Essex and State of New Jersey, have invented a combined lock and handle-holder for traveling bags, etc., of which the following is a specification: Figure 1 is a top view of my improved combined lock and handle-holder, figure 2 is a vertical longitudinal section of the same; figure 3 is a cross-section on the line c c, figure 2. Similar letters of reference indicate corresponding parts, in all the figures. This invention relates to a new construction of lock-case for traveling bags, satchels, and the like, whereby the same is made to retain the rings which connect with the handle [to dispense with an extended bottom plate], and yet to leave said rings movable in their bearings. The invention consists in forming notches in the sides, near the ends of the lock-case, which notches engage over the lower parts of the handle-rings, all as hereinafter more fully described. In the accompanying drawing, the letter A represents the lock-case, the same being of suitable construction, shape and size, and adapted to be fastened to the frame of the satchel or bag by rivets or other suitable means. The ends of the lock-case are, by notches a, which are cut into or formed in its sides, made hook-shaped, as clearly shown in figure 2, and these hooks b, thus produced, serve to retain the handle-rings B B in place. These handle-rings are, as indicated in figure 3, preferably flattened at their lower parts, and are, with these flattened portions, placed under the hooks b of the lock-case, and thereby secured to the satchel-frame, to which the lock-case is riveted, as already described. In these hooks, however, the rings are free to vibrate, and free, therefore, to move with the handles, and the rings constitute, in consequence, a flexible connection between the handle and the bag or satchel. [By making the notches in the sides, the top of the lock-case remains smooth and offers no obstruction to the free movement of handle and rings.] The claim of the patent is as follows: "The lock-case made with the notched sides a a near its ends to receive and hold the handle-rings B, substantially as herein shown and described."

In the application for the patent as filed, the parts above put in brackets were not contained in the specification, and the proposed claim was as follows: "The combination of the lock-case, A, having the hooks, b, at its ends, with the rings, B B, which are held in place by said hooks, substantially as herein shown and described." The application as thus made was rejected, by a reference to patent No. 177,020, granted May 2, 1876, to William Simon, for improvements in a traveling bag. The proposed claim was then stricken out, and the following claim was substituted: "The lock-case, A, having the notches, a a, at its under side, and combined with the rings, B B, which are held in said notches, substantially as and for the purpose specified." The application was again rejected, by a reference to the patent to Simon, the Patent Office saying: "The difference between the two devices appears to be, that in applicant's device the notches are cut in the vertical sides of the lock-case, and in the reference they are struck up from the bottom plate." The application was then amended by inserting in the specification the words above put in brackets, and by altering the claim so as to read as it does in the patent as issued.

After an answer and a replication in the suit against Peddie and Jenkinson, proofs were taken on both sides, and the court, held by Judge Wheeler, made a decree dismissing the bill, with costs. In the opinion of the court (27 Fed. Rep. 702) it was said: "The improvement patented consists essentially in extending the sides of the lock-case to hold the handle-rings of traveling bags. The bottom plate of the lock had before been extended for that purpose. By the improvement the bottom plate could be dispensed with, and the side walls of the lock-case made both to inclose the lock and hold the handle-rings. The defendants use the same thing to hold the handle-rings, but place the lock above it, and do not use it for the side walls of the lock-case. It becomes, by the use which they make of it, an extended bottom plate to the lock, of an improved form. If this piece was patented and the patent is valid to cover it, the defendants do infringe. The file-wrapper and contents are made a part of the case. From them it appears that the orator, in his application for this patent, at first applied for a patent covering the combination of the lock-case with the handle-rings. His claim was rejected on a reference to patent No. 177,020, granted to William Simon, which covered an extended bottom plate to the lock to hold the handles. The claim was amended and again rejected on the same reference, and was not granted until the specification was amended to dispense with an extended bottom plate to the lock, and the claim was confined to a lock-case with notched sides near its ends, to receive and hold the handle-rings. This piece, which the defendants use, was the same before as after these amendments. The Patent 182 U. S.

Office would not grant a patent for it generally in combination with the handle-rings, but only specifically when used for the sides of the lock-case and for the handle-rings. The orator accepted the patent narrowed in that manner, and cannot now be heard to claim that it is any more broad than that in its scope. He invented this particular form of lock-case, and his patent is for that only, and it cannot be construed to cover anything else. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sayles, 97 U. S. 554 [24: 1058]. The defendants do not use his lock-case, but use an extended bottom plate like his lock-case. It has been argued ingeniously and with plausibility that the same thing is used under a merely different name; but this argument is not in reality well founded. The patent was for a lock-case not only in name but in substance. The defendants do not use this lock-case. They evade the patent not by a mere colorable, but by a substantial, evasion."

As the patentee, after the rejection of his application, inserted in his specification a statement that his invention related to a new construction of lock-case, whereby it was made "to dispense with an extended bottom plate," he cannot now contend that his specification and claims are to be interpreted so as to cover a construction which has an extended bottom plate. By his patent, as issued, he dispenses with the extended bottom plate, and confines his claim to a lock-case with sides notched near its ends to receive and hold the handle-rings—an arrangement not found in the defendants' structure. In that, the lock and the handle fastenings are combined with the extended bottom plate, as in the Simon patent of May 2, 1876. The lock-case of the defendants does not have notches in its sides, but the notches are in the sides of an extended, struck-up bottom plate, such extended bottom plate being expressly excluded from the construction by the specification of the plaintiff's patent.

This court has often held that when a patentee, on the rejection of his application, inserts in his specification, in consequence, limitations and restrictions for the purpose of obtaining his patent, he cannot, after he has obtained it, claim that it shall be construed as it would have been construed if such limitations and restrictions were not contained in it. Leggett v. Avery, 101 U. S. 256 [25: 865]; Good-year Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Davis, 102 U. S. 222, 228 [26: 149, 151]; Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S. 408 [27: 979]; Mahn v. Harwood, 112 U. S. 354, 359 [28: 665, 667]; Union Met. Cartridge Co. v. U. S. Cartridge Co. 112 U. S. 624, 644 [28: 828, 834]; Sargent v. Hall Safe & Lock Co. 114 U. S. 63 [29: 67]; Shepard v. Carrigan, 116 U. S. 598, 597 [29: 723, 724]; White v. Dunbar, 119 U. S. 47 [30: 303]; Sutter v. Robinson, 119 U. S. 530 [30: 492]; Bragg v. Fitch, 121 U. S. 478 [30: 1008]; Snow v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 121 U. S. 617 [30: 1004]; Crawford v. Heysinger, 123 U. S. 589, 606, 607 [31: 269, 274].

It is contended by the defendants that, in view of the prior state of the art, the patent is invalid. We do not consider it necessary to examine that question, because, for the reasons before assigned, we are of opinion that the decree must be affirmed; and as, in each of the other three cases, there is a stipulation that the suit may be argued here, on appeal, on the record in the Peddie suit, and abide the result of that suit, and as the decree in each of those other three cases was a decree dismissing the bill with costs, each of such decrees is affirmed.

JAMES O. CLEVELAND ET AL., Plffs.
in Err.,

CHARLES S. SMITH ET AL., Survivors of THEMSELVES AND GEO. C. RICHARDSON.

(See S. C. as Cleveland v. Richardson, Reporter's ed.
818-838.)

Fraudulent misrepresentations, what are—duty to disclose facts—ignorance of fact, effect of omission to disclose financial ability, on compromise—voluntary payment—coercion or duress, what is.

1. A party can commit a legal fraud, in a business transaction with another, only by fraudulent misrepresentations of fact, or by such conduct or artifice, for a fraudulent purpose, as will mislead the other party, or throw him off his guard, and cause him to omit inquiry or examination which he would otherwise make.
2. Where there is no such relation of trust or confidence between the parties as imposes upon one an obligation to give full information to the other, the latter cannot proceed blindly, omitting all inquiry and examination, and then complain that the other did not volunteer to give the information he had.
3. Ignorance of a fact extrinsic and not essential to a contract, but which, if known, might have influenced the action of a party to the contract, is

NOTE.—Fraud—suppression veri—duty to disclose.
Silence is by no means necessarily equivalent to direct affirmation; for in very many cases no duty of disclosure exists. Ordinarily, indeed, it is only where, from what has passed in the transaction or from some relationship between the parties, disclosure becomes a duty, that silence is a fraud. People's Bank's Appeal, 98 Pa. 107.

Fraud may consist in silence as well as in actual, outspoken misrepresentation; but a vendor is not obliged at law or in equity, no matter what the rule of morality may be, to disclose latent defects in the subject matter of the sale; nor is the purchaser bound to inform the seller of advantages known only to himself. Laidlaw v. Organ, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 178 (4: 214); Kintzing v. McElrath, 5 Pa. 467; Hanson v. Edgerly, 20 N. H. 348; Smith v. Countryman, 30 N. Y. 655; Fisher v. Budlong, 10 R. I. 525; Hadley v. Clinton County Importing Co. 18 Ohio St. 502; Williams v. Spurr, 24 Mich. 335; Law v. Grant, 37 Wis. 548; Mitchell v. McDougall, 62 Ill. 498; Frenzel v. Miller, 37 Ind. 1. But see Cedil v. Spurger, 32 Mo. 462; McAdams v. Cates, 24 Mo. 223; Barron v. Alexander, 27 Mo. 530; Patterson v. Kirkland, 34 Miss. 423, 431.

Lord Thurlow, as an illustration of this doctrine, put the case of a man buying land under which there was a mine, known only to the purchaser, and said that the latter was not bound to disclose his knowledge. Turner v. Harvey, Jac. 169, 178.

Such cases have arisen in this country, and the dictum of Lord Thurlow has been followed. Harris v. Tyson, 24 Pa. 847; Williams v. Spurr, 24 Mich. 335. But see Williams v. Beasley, 8 J. J. Marsh. 578; Law v. Grant, 37 Wis. 548; Elgelow on Fraud, 33.

If, however, a man professes to describe the article which he is selling, he must describe everything that is material. If he undertakes to tell the truth, not such a mistake as will authorize equitable relief.

4. A compromise made by a debtor with a firm, his creditor, cannot be assailed on the ground that the agent of the firm in the compromise omitted to disclose the financial ability of a partner of the firm to pay the debts of the firm.
5. Where an insolvent firm, in consideration of a compromise with some of their creditors at sixty cents on a dollar, executed to them an agreement not to pay voluntarily to any creditor to exceed sixty cents on a dollar in settlement, a payment of more than sixty per cent, to wit, eighty per cent, to a creditor to settle a suit brought by him on a debt against the firm in which there was no defense, which was about to be tried, and in which a judgment for the full amount would be recovered, and where the debt was secured by attachment, was not a voluntary payment.
6. Where there is actual or threatened exercise of power possessed over the property of another by the party exacting or receiving payment, there is coercion or duress which will render a payment involuntary.

[No. 125.]

Argued Nov. 21, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment for the plaintiffs in an action to recover for breach of an agreement made upon a compromise of debts not to pay voluntarily to any creditor more than sixty per cent on the dollar in settlement. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Jas. S. Harlan, for plaintiffs in error:
The acceptance of a smaller sum in payment of a larger, when evidenced by an instrument it will not do for him to tell only part of the truth. Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 61, 62.

Nor can a man remain silent if it is his duty to speak. Suppression of the truth in such a case is a fraud. Young v. Bumpass, 1 Freem. Ch. (Mis.) 241; Paddock v. Strobbridge, 20 Vt. 470, 477; Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 95; Leake on Contracts, 134.

As in contracts of insurance and suretyship, where from the situation of the parties the duty of disclosure is greater than in ordinary cases. Carter v. Boehm, 3 Burr. 1006; 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. pt. 2 (7th Am. ed.) 834, notes; notes to Locke v. North American Ins. Co. 2 Am. Lead. Cas. 523, 13 Mass. 61; Leake on Contracts, 139; Perry on Trusts, § 179.

It is, in law, a willful falsehood for a man to assert of his own knowledge a matter of which he has no knowledge. Hazard v. Irwin, 18 Pick. 95; Stone v. Denny, 4 Met. 151; Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 54; Jolliffe v. Baker, L. R. 11 Q. B. Div. 271.

No man can be held responsible for a misrepresentation made through an honest mistake. No fraudulent intention can be imputed in such a case. Fisher v. Mellen, 103 Mass. 603; Cabot v. Christie, 42 Vt. 126; Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 57; Leake on Contracts, 137. See, however, Bankhead v. Alloway, 5 Coldw. 75.

If, however, he afterwards discovers the untruth, he must not allow the other party to act on the belief that no mistake has been made. To do so would be fraud. Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De Gex, M. & G. 660; Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 57.

But a party may be held responsible, even for an honest mistake, if the duty of knowing the truth is for any reason cast upon him. In such a case, mistake, ignorance or forgetfulness is no excuse. Burrowes v. Lock, 10 Ves. Jr. 470; Babcock v. Case, 61 Pa. 430; Kerr on Fr. and Mis. 60.

It is not every concealment, even of facts ma-under seal, may always be pleaded in bar of a suit to recover the balance.

Kingsley v. Kingsley, 20 Ill. 205; Co. Litt. 212 b; Potter v. Green, 6 Allen, 442.

The payment of a lesssum and its acceptance in full discharge, when it is not yet due, is a good discharge of the whole.

2 Parsons on Contracts, 619; Brooks v. White, 2 Met. 288; Goodnow v. Smith, 18 Pick. 414; Sibres v. Tripp, 15 Mees. & W. 28.

If Libbey, by signing the paper, had expressly agreed that he would individually become liable for the debts of the old firm, such an agreement would not avail creditors. It could only be enforced by the old firm. As to creditors, it would be res inter alios acta.

Serviss v. McDonnell, 9 Cent. Rep. 841, 107 N. Y. 260.

A compromise made by a debtor may not be assailed on the ground that he failed to make disclosures as to his financial condition, when he is not questioned in regard thereto, and does nothing to mislead.

Graham v. Meyer, 99 N. Y. 611.

The ruling that any payment over sixty per cent to any creditor was voluntarily made unless the claim had gone to judgment was erroneous.

Carey v. Barrett, L. R. 4 C. P. Div. 379; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Chicago, V. & W. Coal Co. 79 Ill. 121; Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U. S. 218 (24: 410).

A payment in excess made afterwards will not avoid the composition unless made in pursuance of a previous understanding.

Re Sturges, 8 Biss. 79.

When an instrument under seal is set up, the defendants in error cannot set up any exception to it by parol. The remedy, if any, can only be by suit upon the agreement.

Kingsley v. Kingsley, 20 Ill. 205.

Mr. James R. Doolittle, for defendants in error:

The assignment to Knickerbocker was not binding upon the defendants in error, because the plaintiffs in error did not disclose the financial standing of Libbey, and the express liability which he assumed in the agreement with Cleaveland, and that all the debts of the firm should be paid.

Nothing less than an act of God making it impossible would be a good defense to an action upon the agreement for its breach.

2 Parsons on Contracts, 6th ed. 671, 672.

In effecting a composition agreement the policy of the law demands the utmost good faith on the part of the debtor.

Hester v. Cahn, 78 Ill. 206; Sewing v. Gale, 28 Ind. 486; Bump on Composition, 23; Elfelt v. Snow, 2 Sawy. 94.

Dormant partners are liable when disclosed.

Hoare v. Dawes, 1 Doug. 371; Robinson v. Wilkinson, 3 Price, 583; Bump on Composition, 20.

Where parties reduce their agreement to writing they cannot be allowed to vary its terms by parol; but where it is evident that the agreement is not reduced to writing, but only a part of it, the whole agreement may be proven.

Greenleaf on Ev. 12th ed. 321, chap. 15, § 284 a; Bradshaw v. Combs, 102 Ill. 428; Morgan v. Griffith, L. R. 6 Exch. 70; Lewis v. Seabury, 74 N. Y. 409; Chapin v. Dobson, 78 N. Y. 74.

terial to the interest of a party, which will entitle him to the interposition of a court of equity. The case must amount to the suppression of facts which one party, under the circumstances, is bound in conscience and duty to disclose to the other party, and in respect to which he cannot innocently be silent. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 204.

It is essentially necessary, in order to set aside the transaction, not only that a great advantage should be taken, but also that there should be some obligation on the party to make the discovery. Fox v. Mackreth, 2 Bro. Ch. 420; Turner v. Harvey, 1 Jac. Rep. 178; Pothier, De Vente, n. 234-242; Id. n. 295-299.

A fraud in the sense of a court of equity, and for which it will grant relief, is the non-disclosure of those facts and circumstances, which one party is under some legal or equitable obligation to communicate to the other; and which the latter has a right, not merely in foro conscientia, but juris et de jure, to know. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 207; 2 Kent, Com. 490, 491; Parker v. Grant, 1 Johns. Ch. 630; Ellard v. Llandaff, 1 Ball & B. 260, 261; 1 Fonbl. Eq. Bk. 1 chap. 3, § 4, note n.

Many most material facts may be unknown to one party, and known to the other, and not equally accessible, or at the moment within the reach of both; and yet contracts, founded upon such ignorance on one side, and knowledge on the other, may be completely obligatory. Turner v. Harvey, Jac. 178; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 207.

If a vendor should sell an estate, knowing that he had no title to it, or knowing that there were incumbrances on it, of which the vendee was ignorant, the suppression of such a material fact, in respect to which the vendor must know that the very purchase implied a trust and confidence on the part of the vendee that no such defect existed, would clearly avoid the sale on the ground of fraud. Arnot v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. Sr. 95, 96; Pothier, De Vente, n. 240; Pilling v. Armitage, 12 Ves. Jr. 78; Story, Eq. Jur. §§ 142, 143.

There is often a material distinction between circumstances which are intrinsic, and form the very ingredients of the contract, and circumstances, which are extrinsic, and form no part of it, although they may create inducements to enter into it, or affect the value or price of the thing sold. 2 Kent, Com. 482 (4th ed.); Pothier de Vente, n. 236, n. 242, 243; Id. n. 208-210; 1 Domat, Bk. 1, tit. 2, § 3, art. 11; Id. § 11, arts. 2, 3, 5, 15.

The case of Martin v. Morgan, 1 Brod. & Bing. 289, is a strong application of the doctrine of concealment avoiding a payment. In that case there was no special confidence between the parties; but a post-dated check being paid to the holder by a banker, at a time when the latter had no funds of the drawer, and the holder knew that the drawer had become insolvent, of which the banker was ignorant, the amount was allowed to be recovered back on account of the concealment. But there are cases of intrinsic circumstances in which courts of law and equity treat the concealment of them as a breach of trust and confidence justly reposed. In cases of this sort, silence of the party must import as much as a direct affirmation, and be deemed equivalent to it. Martin v. Morgan, 1 Brod. & Bing. 289; Piddock v. Bishop, 3 Barn. & C. 805; 2 Kent, Com. 488, 489, note (4th ed.); Smith v. Bank of Scotland, 1 Dow, Parl. Cas. 292, 294; Etting v. Bank of U. S. 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 59, 68 (6: 419); Fishmongers Co. v. Maltby, cited in 1 Dow, Parl. Cas. 294.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of assumpsit, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, in September, 1884, by George C. Richardson, Charles S. Smith, George K. Guild, Ralph L. Cutter and Harrison Gardner, partners composing the firm of George C. Richardson & Co., against James O. Cleaveland, Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Washington Libbey, partners composing the firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff.

The declaration contains the money counts, and annexed to it is a copy of an account showing various items of merchandise sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants, in August, September and October, 1883, amounting in debit items to $12,125.25, with a credit item of cash, December 31, 1883, amounting to $7,275.15, leaving a balance due to the plaintiffs, on the last-named day, of $4,850.10.

The defendants were served with process and put in various pleas, and there were replications and rejoinders, raising issues covered by the findings of the court on the trial. The defendant Woodruff having died, it was ordered that the suit proceed against the surviving defendants. A trial before a jury was commenced, but a juror was withdrawn, and the parties duly waived a trial by jury and consented that the case be tried by the court.

The court filed special findings, as follows:

"1. James O. Cleaveland, Cornelius B. Cummings and Washington Libbey, three of the defendants, with one William F. Shelley, on the 31st of December, 1881, formed a limited co-partnership under the Statute of the State of Illinois in that behalf, under the name of 'Cleaveland, Cummings & Shelley,' to do a wholesale business in merchandise in Chicago, in which the said Washington Libbey was a limited partner, having put in $50,000 of capital.

"2. About the 1st of May, 1883, the said Shelley went out of the firm, and Charles W. Woodruff, the other defendant in this cause, came into the firm, which assumed the name of 'Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff,' and continued to do business until as hereinafter stated.

"3. Said firm of 'Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff' intended, as between themselves, to do business as a limited partnership, but they did not take the steps required by law to make said firm a limited partnership under the Statute of Illinois in that behalf.

"4. The plaintiffs sold to the firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, upon the 28th, 29th and 30th of August, 1883, and upon the 14th and 15th of September, 1883, merchandise to the amount of $8,064.08, payable by the said firm in sixty days from Sept. 15th; and on the 24th of October sold to Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff merchandise to the amount of $1,291.83, payable in sixty days from November 1st; and the plaintiffs were also the holders of two notes of said Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, dated Chicago, September 15, 1883, due in four months from the date thereof, payable to the order of the defendants and indorsed by them, one for $1,847.99 and one for $1,421.40, which two notes matured January 18, 1884; said several amounts aggregating $12,125.25.

"5. On the 30th of October, 1883, Washington Libbey paid to James O. Cleaveland $1,000 for his interest in the firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, and said James O. Cleaveland, Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Washington Libbey signed and delivered to James O. Cleaveland an instrument in writing as follows, viz:

" 'The co-partnership heretofore existing between James O. Cleaveland, Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Washington Libbey, under the firm name of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, has this day been dissolved by mutual consent, and such dissolution to take effect Nov. 1, 1883. All accounts and indebtedness due the late firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff must be paid to Cummings, Woodruff & Brown, successors to Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, by whom all liabilities of the late firm must be paid and said Cleaveland held harmless therefrom.

" 'Dated Chicago, Illinois, Oct. 30, A. D. 1883.

" 'James O. Cleaveland,
" 'C. B. Cummings,
" 'Charles W. Woodruff,
" 'Washington Libbey.'

"6. It was contemplated, October 30, 1883, that a new firm would be formed, composed of Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Swan Brown, as general partners, and Washington Libbey, as special partner, but said firm was never formed, but the said Cleaveland supposed it was so formed when he sold out his interest to the said Libbey.

"7. The firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff stopped business on or before November 14, 1883. Said firm owed for borrowed money about $179,000, which was unsecured, and for merchandise about $461,000; and the assets of said firm were sufficient to pay the borrowed money in full and not quite sixty per cent on the dollar upon the mercantile debts. The said Washington Libbey was reputed to be a man of large wealth.

"8. On the 14th of November, 1883, all the bills receivable, notes and accounts of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff were sold to Columbus R. Cummings for his two notes for $201,110.43; one for $110,000, which was delivered to the Union National Bank in full payment of borrowed money due by said firm to said bank. The other, for $91,110.43, was delivered to a member of said firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff. Columbus R. Cummings was a brother of Cornelius B. Cummings, and a director in the Union National Bank, to which he had introduced said firm, and felt in honor bound to see that the bank suffered no loss.

"9. Immediately thereafter, Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff sent J. J. Knickerbocker, as their attorney, to New York, and proposed to the mercantile creditors of that firm to pay them sixty cents on the dollar of their respective claims. When application to the plaintiffs was made to accept sixty cents on the dollar of their claims, some had settled at that rate and some had not. The attorney of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff explained the situation of the assets of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, saying that the borrowed money was to be paid in full, which would not leave enough to pay quite sixty per cent of the remaining indebtedness. Libbey's liability as a member of the firm was spoken of, when said attorney stated to the plaintiffs that he had not had opportunity to examine into the question and was not in possession of information to know whether Libbey could make a successful defense or not, but that it was a question they could investigate for themselves. One of said plaintiffs said to said attorney they had sold no goods to the defendants on the strength that Libbey was more than a special partner; that no credit had been given to the firm on the faith that Libbey sustained any other relation to it; that Libbey had lost his special capital; and that they had no desire to make him pay more. It does not appear, however, from the evidence, that the defendants, or their attorney, communicated to the plaintiffs the fact that Libbey had signed the instrument in writing referred to in the fifth finding, or that he made any statement as to Libbey's financial ability to pay the debts of said firm. The plaintiffs at first refused, but about the 29th of December, 1888, upon the receipt of the sum of $7,275.15, which was sixty per cent of their entire claim, they, by their agent, Walter M. Smith, executed and delivered to the said John J. Knickerbocker, the attorney for the defendants, at Chicago, an instrument in writing, as follows:

"For and in consideration of the sum of seven thousand two hundred and seventy-five and $\frac{15}{100}$ (\$7,275.15) dollars, to us in hand paid by John J. Knickerbocker, of Chicago, Ill., the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged and confessed, we have sold, assigned, transferred and delivered, and do hereby sell, assign, transfer, set over and deliver, to said Knickerbocker, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, the above and foregoing claim in our favor and against the late firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, and all other claims and demands which we now have or might or could have against the said Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, by reason of the happening of any matter or thing from the beginning of the world to the day of the date hereof, without recourse to us, and authorize and empower said Knickerbocker to sue for, collect, settle, compound and give acquittance therefor as fully as we could do in person.

"In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal this 29th day of December, 1888.

"George C. Richardson & Co., [Seal.]

"Per Walter M. Smith. [Seal.]

"Attached to said instrument are the following:

"Chicago, Sept. 15, 1888.

"Four months after date we promise to pay to the order of ourselves one thousand three hundred and forty-seven $\frac{15}{100}$ dollars at the Mechanics' National Bank, N. Y., value received.

"Due Jan'y 18, 1884.

"$1,347.99.

"Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff."

"(Indorsed:)

"Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff."

182 U. S.

"Chicago, Sept. 15, 1888.

"Four months after date we promise to pay to the order of ourselves one thousand four hundred and twenty-one dollars and $\frac{15}{100}$ at the Mechanics' National Bank, N. Y., value received.

"Due Jan'y 18, 1884.

"$1,421.41.

"Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff."

"(Indorsed:)

"Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff."

"Messrs. Cleaveland, Cummings and Woodruff to George C. Richardson & Co., debtors:

"1888.

	To mdse., 60 days, Sept. 15....
"Aug. 28.	8338 94
" 29.	863 79
" 30.	156 06
" 31.	859 35
" Sept. 1.	4,733 66
" 2.	1824 74
" 3.	237 17
" 4.	525 33
" Oct. 24.	Nov. 1....	1,291 83

$9,355 86"

"And Charles W. Woodruff, one of the said defendants, at the same time, and as part of the same arrangement, delivered to the said agent of the plaintiffs an instrument in writing as follows, viz:

"John J. Knickerbocker. Jesse Holdom.

"Knickerbocker & Holdom,

"Attorneys at Law,

"164 La Salle St.

"Chicago. — —, 188—.

"In consideration of a compromise this day made by Messrs. Geo. O. Richardson & Co. and Messrs. Jay, Langdon & Co., of New York City, of their respective claims against the late firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, of Chicago, Ill., the said Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff stipulate and agree not to pay voluntarily to any of their creditors holding claims in excess of one thousand dollars, to exceed sixty per cent on the dollar in settlement: Providing, however, that the payment of attorneys' fees and court costs in all cases where suits have been heretofore or may hereafter be commenced shall not be considered as an evasion or violation of this agreement.

"Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff.

"Dec. 29th, 1888."

"10. In April, 1884, all the mercantile debts of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff had been settled at sixty cents and released except about $88,000. The firm of Vitor & Achelis had not released their claim, but had brought a suit by attachment thereon against James O. Cleaveland, Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Washington Libbey, which was about to be tried. The attorney of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff paid to Vitor & Achelis sixty cents on the dollar of their claim, who thereupon released their said claim; but at the same time said attorney of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff gave his check (which was afterwards paid) to the attorneys of Vitor & Achelis, for twenty-five per cent on the dollar of said claim, and said attorneys remitted twenty of said twenty-five per cent to Vitor & Achelis. This payment to the attorneys of Vitor & Achelis was a cover under which Vitor & Achelis were to and did receive on their claim more than sixty per cent, and such payment was made, after Viotor & Achelis had refused to take sixty per cent, by agreement between the attorneys of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff and Viotor & Achelis that Viotor & Achelis should receive eighty per cent.

887

"11. The amount due on the original claim is $4,850.10, and the interest thereon from December 29th, 1883, to April 14th, 1886, is $679.85, making $5,529.45 in all."

Thereupon a judgment was entered, which states that the court finds the issues for the plaintiffs, and assesses their damages at $5,529.45, and overrules a motion by the defendants for a new trial, and orders that the plaintiffs recover from the defendants Cleaveland, Cummings and Libbey, survivors of Woodruff, $5,529.45 damages and $147.80 costs. To review this judgment the defendants have brought a writ of error.

There is a bill of exceptions, which states that both parties adduced evidence tending to prove the issues on their respective sides; that, when the written paper dated October 30, 1883, set forth in the fifth special finding, was offered in evidence, the defendants objected to its introduction, on the ground that it was incompetent and irrelevant, but the court overruled the objection and admitted the paper in evidence, and the defendants excepted; that the plaintiffs also offered in evidence the paper dated December 29, 1883, signed "Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff," set forth at the close of the ninth special finding; that the defendants objected to its introduction, on the grounds of variance and incompetency, but the court overruled the objection and admitted the paper in evidence, and the defendants excepted; that evidence was introduced touching the matters named in the tenth special finding, and the defendants adduced evidence tending to show that no payment was made to either of the mercantile creditors by preference, or with a view to discriminate between one of the said creditors and another; that the defendants objected to the evidence tending to show that Viotor & Achelis were paid more than 60 per cent on the ground that such payment, if made as claimed by the plaintiffs, was not made voluntarily; that the court overruled the objection, and held that, under the contract of December 29, 1883, signed "Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff," any payment over 60 per cent was made voluntarily, unless such claim had gone to judgment; that the defendants excepted to such ruling; and that it appeared from the evidence that the borrowed money was paid in full during November, 1883, and each of the mercantile creditors received 60 per cent on their claims from Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff.

It is contended for the plaintiffs that their assignment to Knickerbocker was not binding upon them, because the defendants did not disclose to them the financial standing of Libbey, nor the fact of his liability as a general partner in the firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, nor the liability in regard to the debts of that firm assumed by him by the paper set forth in the fifth finding.

But the ninth finding sets forth fully what took place between Knickerbocker and the plaintiffs, on the visit of the former to the latter, at New York, to propose to them to accept from the defendants sixty cents on the dollar. That finding states that Knickerbocker explained the situation of the assets of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, saying that the borrowed money was to be paid in full, which would not leave enough to pay quite 60 per cent of the remaining indebtedness (a fact which was true, according to the seventh finding); that Libbey's liability as a member of the firm was spoken of, when Knickerbocker stated to the plaintiffs that he had not had opportunity to examine into the question and was not in possession of information to know whether Libbey could make a successful defense or not, but that it was a question they could investigate for themselves; and that one of the plaintiffs said to Knickerbocker that they had sold no goods to the defendants "on the strength that Libbey was more than a special partner;" that no credit had been given to the firm on the faith that Libbey sustained any other relation to it; that Libbey had lost his special capital, and that they had no desire to make him pay more. The ninth finding does not state that Knickerbocker was in possession of any information such as that which he stated to the plaintiffs he was not in possession of.

The ninth finding further says that it does not appear from the evidence that the defendants or Knickerbocker communicated to the plaintiffs the fact that Libbey had signed the paper set forth in the fifth finding, or that Knickerbocker made any statement as to Libbey's financial ability to pay the debts of the defendants' firm. It is not shown that Knickerbocker made a false answer to any inquiry put to him by the plaintiffs.

It thus appears that Libbey's liability as a member of the defendants' firm was spoken of between Knickerbocker and the plaintiffs; that Knickerbocker made to them no representation that Libbey was not liable, but substantially stated to them that the question of Libbey's liability was a matter to be examined into, and one which they could investigate for themselves; that the plaintiffs communicated to Knickerbocker at the time the idea that, in their dealings with the defendants, they had always acted on the view that Libbey was only a special partner; and that Knickerbocker did not state to the plaintiffs that Libbey was not financially able to pay the debts of the defendants' firm.

The exact date of this interview in New York, between Knickerbocker and the plaintiffs, does not appear, but it would seem, from the eighth and ninth findings, that an interval of between five and six weeks must have elapsed between the time of that interview and the 29th of December, 1883, when the assignment to Knickerbocker was executed.

It is not found by the court that it was known to the defendants' firm or to Libbey that the latter was not merely a special partner; nor is it found that the defendants were guilty of any fraudulent concealment. The suggestion by Knickerbocker to the plaintiffs, that there was a question as to the liability of Libbey as a general partner, was full enough to put them on inquiry, and to call upon them to investigate the question for themselves, during the five or six weeks that elapsed before they made the assignment to Knickerbocker.

As to the statement in the ninth finding, that it does not appear that the defendants or Knickerbocker communicated to the plaintiffs the fact that Libbey had signed the paper set forth in the fifth finding, it is to be remarked that that paper sets forth that the liabilities of the defendants' firm were to be paid by the proposed new firm of Cummings, Woodruff & Brown; and that the sixth finding states that it was contemplated, on the day that paper bears date, that a new firm would be formed, composed of Cornelius B. Cummings, Charles W. Woodruff and Swan Brown, as general partners, and Washington Libbey as special partner, but that such new firm was never formed, although Cleaveland supposed it was so formed when he sold out to Libbey his interest in the firm of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, on the day that paper was signed. As the new firm was never formed, that paper had no effective force at the time of the interview between Knickerbocker and the plaintiffs, or at the time the assignment to Knickerbocker was made. Besides, Libbey was to be only a special partner in the new firm.

We are unable to see, in this case, any breach of good faith on the part of the defendants, or any misrepresentation as to the assets of their firm, or any false answer by Knickerbocker to any question put to him by the plaintiffs.

It is found as a fact, by the court below, that Cleaveland, Cummings and Libbey, with one Shelley, in December, 1881, formed a limited co-partnership under the Statute of Illinois, under the name of "Cleaveland, Cummings & Shelley," in which Libbey was a limited partner, having put in $50,000 of capital; that, about the 1st of May, 1883, Shelley went out of the firm, and Woodruff came into it, the firm being then called "Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff;" and that that firm intended, as between its members, to do business as a limited partnership, but did not take the steps required by law to make itself a limited partnership under the Statute of Illinois. It is not found that either Cleaveland, or Cummings, or Woodruff, or Libbey, supposed at any time that the co-partnership was other than a limited one; and it distinctly appears, by the ninth finding, that the plaintiffs, in selling their goods to the defendants, all the time regarded Libbey as only a special partner.

In a case very like the one before us, Dambmann v. Schulting, 75 N. Y. 55, it was held that a party can commit a legal fraud, in a business transaction with another, only by fraudulent misrepresentations of fact, or by such conduct or artifice, for a fraudulent purpose, as will mislead the other party, or throw him off his guard, and cause him to omit inquiry or examination which he would otherwise make; that where there is no such relation of trust or confidence between the parties as imposes upon one an obligation to give full information to the other, the latter cannot proceed blindly, omitting all inquiry and examination, and then complain that the other did not volunteer to give the information he had; that ignorance of a fact extrinsic and not essential to a contract, but which, if known, might have influenced the action of a party to the contract, is not such a mistake as will authorize equitable relief; and that, as to such facts, the party must rely upon his own vigilance, and, if not imposed upon or defrauded, will be held to his contract. That was an action brought to set aside a release under seal, on the ground that it was inoperative because obtained by misrepresentation and a concealment of material facts. It was not found that there was any fraudulent misrepresentation, and there was none in fact, and there was no misrepresentation of any kind, nor was there any fraudulent concealment of any facts; nor was any statement or artifice used to throw off from his guard or to entrap or mislead the party executing the release. The court says in its opinion: "A party buying or selling property, or executing instruments, must, by inquiry or examination, gain all the knowledge he desires. He cannot proceed blindly, omitting all inquiry and examination, and then complain that the other party did not volunteer all the information he had." These views were reaffirmed when the case was again before the court, in 85 N. Y. 622.

In Graham v. Meyer, 99 N. Y. 611, it was held that a compromise made by a debtor with his creditor cannot be assailed on the ground that the debtor omitted to disclose his financial condition; and that where he is not questioned in regard thereto, and does nothing to mislead, he is not bound to make any such disclosure. It was claimed in that case that, although there was a failure to show that any fraudulent representations were made on the part of the debtor to induce the compromise, yet it ought to be set aside on the ground of the undue concealment by the debtor and his attorney of the true condition of the estate of the debtor, which he had assigned under a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The court said: "But the defendant was not bound to make any disclosure of his financial condition. He was not asked to make any. He made no misrepresentations, and did nothing to mislead Graham, or prevent him from inquiring, or to throw him off from his guard. They negotiated at arms' length. The defendant was in no trust or confidential relation with him. It is true that he had made an assignment, and had thereby created a trust for Graham's benefit. But he was not the trustee. He bore the simple relation to him of debtor, and he had the right to make the best compromise with him he could, using no fraud or culpable artifice to accomplish the result. Each party to such a compromise has the right to the advantage which his superior skill, foresight and knowledge may give him. The business of the world can be conducted upon no other basis. If either party desires information from the other, he must ask for it; and then he must not be misled or deceived by answers given. These views are fully sustained by the case of Dambmann v. Schulting, 75 N. Y. 62, and the court below was not mistaken in holding that that case was a controlling authority for the decision it made. The principles of law laid down in that case were in no way impugned or questioned when the case again came before this court, in 85 N. Y. 622, but they were reaffirmed."

As to Libbey's financial ability, the seventh finding states that he "was reputed to be a man of large wealth," not that he was a man of large wealth. The failure of Knickerbocker to make any statement as to Libbey's financial ability to pay the debts of the defendants' firm cannot give rise to any inference of concealment or fraud, because the importance of Libbey's financial ability depended entirely upon whether he was a special or a general partner; and the statement made by one of the plaintiffs to Knickerbocker, that they had acted, in their dealings with the defendants' firm, on the view that Libbey was only a special partner, joined with the fact that Knickerbocker distinctly suggested to them an investigation of the question as to the character of Libbey's liability as a member of the firm, shows that there was no duty on the part of Knickerbocker, as representing the defendants, to make any statement as to Libbey's actual or reputed financial ability.

The only remaining question is as to whether the defendants violated the agreement made by them in the paper signed in their firm name, dated December 29, 1883, set forth in the ninth finding, "not to pay voluntarily, to any of their creditors holding claims in excess of one thousand dollars, to exceed sixty per cent on the dollar in settlement."

It appears by the tenth finding that, in April, 1884, all the mercantile debts of the defendants' firm had been settled at 60 cents and released, except about $88,000; that the firm of Viotor & Achelis had not released their claim, but had brought a suit by attachment thereon, against Cleaveland, Cummings, Woodruff and Libbey, which was about to be tried; that the attorney of the defendants' firm paid to Viotor & Achelis 60 cents on the dollar of their claim, which they thereupon released, and that at the same time said attorney gave his check, which was afterwards paid, to the attorneys of Viotor & Achelis, for 25 per cent on the dollar of said claim, and the latter attorneys remitted 20 of said 25 per cent to Viotor & Achelis; that this payment was a cover under which Viotor & Achelis were to and did receive on their claim more than 60 per cent, and such payment was made, after Viotor & Achelis had refused to take 60 per cent, by agreement between the attorneys of Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, and of Viotor & Achelis, that the latter should receive 80 per cent.

We are of opinion that the facts set forth in the tenth finding fail to show that the payment of the 20 per cent to Viotor & Achelis was a voluntary payment. They had brought a suit by attachment on their claim, against their debtors, and the suit was about to be tried. There was evidently no defense to it, and a judgment for the full amount of it would be recovered, and it was secured by attachment. A settlement of the entire claim for 80 per cent would be a saving of 20 per cent and would, to that extent, increase the assets of the firm, which were not quite sufficient to pay the 60 cents on the dollar which the firm proposed to pay on the mercantile debts, and which they had paid, by April, 1884, and prior to the transaction with Viotor & Achelis, on debts amounting to $378,000. Under these circumstances, the payment of the 20 per cent to Viotor & Achelis was not voluntary.

It appears by the bill of exceptions that the defendants objected to the evidence tending to show that Viotor & Achelis were paid more than 60 per cent on the ground that such payment was not made voluntarily, but that the court held that, under the paper of December 29, 1883, signed by Cleaveland, Cummings & Woodruff, any payment over 60 per cent was made voluntarily, unless the claim had gone to judgment. If the claim had gone to judgment, the payment over 60 per cent would have been 40 per cent; and we do not see that the payment of the 20 per cent, at the time it was made, was any the less involuntary than would have been the payment of the 40 per cent after judgment had been obtained.

In Carey v. Barrett, L.R. 4 C. P. Div. 379, certain creditors of the defendant signed an agreement, to which the plaintiff assented, setting forth that they, in consideration of ten shillings in the pound on their respective debts, agreed to accept the same in discharge of those debts, "the whole of the creditors receiving not exceeding a like sum in discharge of their debts." At the time the agreement was entered into, it was known that the debtor was being sued by a creditor for a sum of money which was afterwards paid in full the day before the cause was ripe for trial. In consequence of this, the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover a part of his unpaid debt. The court (Lord Coleridge, Ch. J., and Lindley, J.) held that the agreement of compromise was limited to the creditors who signed it, and that, even if that were not so, the payment to the creditor who was paid in full, being made under pressure, and not in pursuance of a prior arrangement to give him a preference, did not render the transaction void. Lord Coleridge said that the payment in full "was not the less a payment under process of law because the debtor did not wait to incur the expense of a judgment and execution."

In Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U. S. 210, 218 [24: 409, 410], it is laid down that where there is an actual or threatened exercise of power possessed over the property of another by the party exacting or receiving a payment, there is coercion or duress which will render a payment involuntary; and the case of Baltimore v. Lefferman, 4 Gill, 425, is cited, which holds, that when a payment is made to emancipate property from an actual and existing duress imposed upon it by the party to whom the money is paid, the payment is to be regarded as compulsory.

The judgment is reversed, and the case is remanded to the Circuit Court, with a direction to enter judgment for the defendants on the findings of fact.

Mr. Justice Miller dissents.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, having been of counsel in this case, did not sit in it or take any part in its decision.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

TYLER DAVIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 334-337.)

Fees of deputy marshal—regulations by the President.

1. Although the President has authority to regulate the length of service and compensation of a special deputy marshal or a supervisor of election, yet, where the services for which compensation is demanded were performed before the President made such regulations and were performed in pursuance of the Statute, compensation must be made therefor accordingly.

2. The regulations cannot have a retroactive effect so as to invalidate a claim for services performed before they were in existence.

[No. 1033.]

Submitted Nov. 4, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

APPPEAL from a judgment of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland in favor of plaintiff for a balance due him for services as a special deputy marshal at the congressional election of 1886 in the City of Baltimore. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John B. Cotton, Assistant Attorney-General, for appellant.

Mr. Charles C. Lancaster, for appellee:

This same question was fully reviewed by Judge Hughes of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, and decided in favor of the claimant.

Berry v. U. S. 35 Fed. Rep. 269; Stocksdale v. U. S. 39 Fed. Rep. 62.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 2d day of December, 1887, the appellee, Tyler Davis, brought suit against the United States in the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, under the Act of March 3, 1887, giving to the District Courts of the United States concurrent jurisdiction with the Court of Claims in suits against the United States where the amount in dispute does not exceed $1,000, with a few exceptions not necessary to be considered in this case (24 Stat. 505), to recover the sum of $25, alleged to be a balance due him for services performed as a special deputy marshal at the congressional election of 1886, in the City of Baltimore, in that State.

Issue having been joined upon a demurrer filed by the plaintiff to the answer of the United States, the court found the facts and the law in favor of the plaintiff, and rendered judgment in his favor for the amount demanded. The United States appealed.

At the last term of this court the case was before us on a motion to dismiss the appeal upon the ground that the United States were not entitled to appeal from a judgment of the district court against them where the amount in dispute was less than $5,000. The motion was denied, the court holding that, under the Act of March 3, 1887, supra, appeals from the district court were governed by the same law as applied in the case of appeals from the Court of Claims in like cases. 181 U. S. 87 [83: 98]. The case is now here on its merits.

There is no dispute as to the facts. As found by the court below they are as follows:

"(1.) The plaintiff was duly appointed and commissioned special deputy marshal of election for the Eighteenth Ward of Baltimore City, in the State of Maryland, by George H. Cairnes, Esq., United States marshal for the District of Maryland, on the 8d day of September, A. D. 1886, in pursuance of section 2021 of the United States Revised Statutes, and the 132 U. S.

supplements and amendments thereto, and he duly qualified and entered upon his duties.

"(2.) The laws of Maryland governing registration for congressional and other elections in the City of Baltimore require that the officers of registration, for the purpose of correcting the lists of qualified voters, shall sit with open doors in the several wards of the city from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., for fifteen successive days, commencing on the first Monday of September; and afterwards, for the purpose of revising the lists, for three (3) successive days, commencing on the — Monday of October.

"(3.) The plaintiff, in pursuance of his said appointment, and of the provisions of section 2016 of the Revised Statutes, which authorized and required the supervisors of elections to attend at all times and places fixed for the registration of voters, who, being registered, would be entitled to vote for a representative or delegate in Congress, and to personally inspect and scrutinize such registration, and in pursuance of section 2021, which made it his duty, when required thereto, to aid and assist the supervisors of election in the verification of any lists of persons who may have registered, did attend to said registration in the said ward for which he was appointed for the purpose of aiding and assisting the supervisors of election, for fifteen days in September, A. D. 1886, and for three days in October, 1886, being October 4th, 5th and 6th in said year.

"(4.) The United States marshal for this district, on the 10th of October, 1886, received from the Attorney-General of the United States a circular letter, in which he notified the marshal that 'it is not expected that supervisors and deputy marshals will receive compensation for more than five days' services, and they should be so informed. Within this time all can be done, it is thought, that ought to be done.'

"(5.) The plaintiff was on duty and had performed eighteen days of proper and necessary service as special marshal before the circular letter of the Attorney-General, relied upon in the answer of the United States, had been received."

Section 2081 of the Revised Statutes provides, among other things, that "there shall be allowed and paid to . . . each special deputy marshal, who is appointed and performs his duty under the preceding provisions, compensation at the rate of five dollars per day for each day he is actually on duty, not exceeding ten days."

The defense relied upon by the United States is, that the President had authority to regulate the length of service and compensation of a special deputy marshal or a supervisor of election; and that, having such authority, and having undertaken, through the Attorney-General, to make such regulations, by the circular letter aforesaid, those regulations are binding upon inferior officers. Upon the facts in this case it is to be observed, that the question of the authority of the President to make the regulations mentioned does not arise here; for, as shown by the findings of fact, the services for which compensation is demanded were performed prior to the date when the circular letter was issued from the Attorney-General's office. They were performed under the Statutes mentioned, and compensation must be made accordingly. Whether the President had the power to make the regulations prescribed by the above-mentioned circular or not, they manifestly cannot have a retroactive effect, so as to invalidate a claim for services performed before they were in existence.

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

HENRY SCHOFIELD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 887, note.)

United States v. Davis, ante, p. 890, followed.

[No. 1084.]

Submitted Nov. 4, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

APPEAL from a judgment of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland in favor of plaintiff for wages as supervisor of registration during a congressional election. Affirmed.

Reported below, 82 Fed. Rep. 576.

Mr. John B. Cotton, Assistant Attorney-General, for appellant.

Mr. Charles C. Lancaster for appellee.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is similar in all its essential features to the preceding one of United States v. Davis, ante, p. 890, and the decision in it should be the same. For the reasons given in the opinion in that case the judgment of the court below in this case is affirmed.

WILLIAM H. ROBERTSON, Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK, Piff. in Err.,

v.

JESSE ROSENTHAL ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 460-464.)

Duty on hairpins—Act of 1870—construction of.

1. Iron and steel-wire hairpins are liable to a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem, under that part of Schedule C, section 2502, of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 8, 1883 (22 Stat. 501).
2. As Congress, for the thirteen years prior to 1883, treated hairpins for revenue purposes as a distinct article from "pins, solid-head or other," it would be unreasonable to hold that the legislation of 1883 was intended to do away with such distinction.
3. As by the Act of July 14, 1870, Congress assigned hairpins to a class by themselves, therefore their not being specifically enumerated in 1883 did not relegate them to the category of "pins, solid-head or other."

[No. 57.]

Argued Nov. 4, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of the plaintiffs in an action to recover duties illegally exacted by defendant as Collector of the Port of New York upon goods imported by plaintiffs. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was an action brought to recover duty alleged to have been illegally exacted by the defendant, as Collector of the Port of New York, upon certain merchandise imported by the plaintiffs. It was stipulated on the trial that if the plaintiffs should be entitled to recover on the main question raised by their protest, a verdict should be entered generally in plaintiffs' favor, subject to adjustment as to formal requisites and to amount, at the custom-house, under the direction of the court.

Evidence was given tending to show that on or about July 5th and 7th, 1884, the plaintiffs imported certain iron-wire and steel-wire hairpins, upon which the Collector assessed a duty of 45 per cent ad valorem, under that part of Schedule C, section 2502, of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 8, 1883 (22 Stat. 501), which reads:

"Manufactures, articles or wares, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, copper, . . . and whether partly or wholly manufactured, forty-five (45) per centum ad valorem."

The plaintiffs paid the amount of duty assessed, and protested as follows:

"We protest against your decision as to the rate and amount of duties to be paid on the hairpins entered by us for consumption July 5, 1884, per Donau 86888, from Bremen, because they are dutiable at 80 per cent ad val. under tariff Schedule C, pins, solid-head or other.

"If not so dutiable they are dutiable under said schedule at the rates per pound prescribed for the iron or steel wire of which they are made.

"We pay the excess exacted under compulsion, solely to get the goods."

To sustain the issues upon their part, the plaintiffs introduced Leopold Kramer, who testified that he was an importer of fancy goods in the house of plaintiffs, and that their business was the general importation of notions, etc., and who identified the invoices and entries involved in this action, and also showed that the rate of duty upon said hairpins, if classified as "pins, solid-head or other," would not be less than the rate of duty chargeable upon the iron or steel wire from which they were made.

Witness testified further as follows:

"These samples are samples of the articles imported, and are known ordinarily as hairpins. There are also samples of various other kinds of pins: one is a crimping pin, one a solid-head pin, one a pin with a black head, called a bonnet pin, used to fasten shawls; also diaper pins. They are made of iron wire and steel wire, and have no heads at all. Diaper pins and crimping pins have not solid heads. They have no heads."

And on cross-examination:

"Some pins have heads, but are not solid-headed pins. Bonnet pins and shawl pins are pins with heads, but are not solid-headed pins. Those pins [referring to card] are pins with heads, but are not solid-headed pins.

"Q. Are solid-headed pins the ordinary pins that everybody has?

"Ans. Yes; not everybody. I am familiar with dress pins. I don't know anything about clothespins, except that there are such things. I know there are linchpins and kingpins for locomotives, but they are not used for the same purpose as the articles in suit."

Plaintiffs having rested, defendant's counsel moved the court to direct a verdict for the defendant upon the following grounds, to wit:

"1st. That in prior laws pins, solid-head or other, and hairpins were both provided for, which shows that, as Congress uses the phrase 'pins, solid-head or other,' it does not include hairpins.

"2d. That the phrase 'pins, solid-head or other,' applies only to pins with heads of some kind.

"3d. Generally; that the evidence does not make out a case for recovery by the plaintiffs."

Which motion the court denied; to which ruling defendant's counsel then and there excepted.

The court thereupon charged the jury as follows:

"Gentlemen, if you think these articles are pins, according to the common understanding of the class of pins that are known as solid-head pins or other pins, return a verdict for the plaintiffs; if not return a verdict for the defendant. You may take the case."

The jury having returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, and the amount having been subsequently ascertained as agreed, judgment was entered against the Collector accordingly, and the cause brought here on writ of error.

Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor-General, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Edward Hartley and Walter H. Coleman for defendants in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The articles in question were ordinary headless hairpins, made of steel wire and iron wire, and the question is whether they were dutiable as "pins, solid-head or other."

By section 18 of the Act of July 14, 1862 (12 Stat. 555-57), a duty of five per centum ad valorem, in addition to then existing duties, was levied on many articles, including "pins, solid-head or other," and "manufactures, articles, vessels and wares, not otherwise provided for, of gold, silver, copper, brass, iron, steel, lead, pewter, tin or other metal, or of which either of these metals or any other metal shall be the component material of chief value."

By section 21 of the Act of July 14, 1870 (16 Stat. 264), a duty of fifty per centum ad valorem was levied "on hairpins made of iron wire."

Under section 2504, title XXXIII, Revised Statutes of 1874, "Schedule M—Sundries," we find: "Hairpins, made of iron wire: fifty per centum ad valorem;" "Pins, solid-head or other: thirty-five per centum ad valorem." (Ed. 1878, 476, 480.) And in "Schedule E—Metals" (465): "All manufactures of steel, or of which steel shall be a component part, not otherwise provided for: forty-five per centum ad valorem. But all articles of steel partially manufactured, or of which steel shall be a component part, not otherwise provided for, shall 182 U. S.

pay the same rate of duty as if wholly manufactured." And also (467): "Manufactures, articles, vessels and wares not otherwise provided for, of . . . iron, . . . or other metal (except . . . steel), or of which either of these metals shall be the component material of chief value: thirty-five per centum ad valorem."

In March, 1875, certain imported steel hairpins having been held at the Port of New York dutiable at fifty per cent ad valorem, because of their similarity to iron-wire hairpins, the Treasury Department decided that this was erroneous, and that they were properly chargeable with the rate of duty applicable to manufactures of steel not otherwise provided for. Synopsis T, Dec. 1875, p. 56, No. 2140.

By section 2502 of title XXXIII of the Revised Statutes as enacted by the Act of March 8, 1888 (22 Stat. 501), "Schedule C—Metals," a duty of thirty per centum ad valorem was levied on "pins, solid-head or other;" and by the last paragraph in the same schedule, on "manufactures, articles or wares, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, . . . or any other metal, and whether partly or wholly manufactured: forty-five per centum ad valorem."

It will be perceived, that although hairpins are not mentioned eo nomine, this last paragraph covers iron and steel hairpins, as was ruled as to the latter by the Department in 1875, in the construction and application of similar language.

Inasmuch as Congress, for the thirteen years prior to 1888, treated hairpins for revenue purposes as a distinct article from "pins, solid-head or other," we consider it unreasonable to conclude that the legislation of 1888 was intended to do away with a distinction manifestly regarded as inherent in the thing itself.

In short, it is doubtful if it could ever have been properly held that hairpins were ejusdem generis with the pins referred to in the Tariff Acts; but if this could have been so prior to 1870, we are of opinion that at that time Congress assigned them to a class by themselves, because essentially sui generis, and therefore that their not being specifically enumerated in 1888 did not relegate them to the category of "pins, solid-head or other," as ingeniously argued by counsel.

From these views the conclusion follows that the court below should have instructed the jury to find for the defendant.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded, with a direction to award a new trial.

FRANK HUME, Appx.

v.

UNITED STATES.

UNITED STATES, Appt.

v.

FRANK HUME.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 406-415.)

Government contract—unconscionable contract—damages upon—defense at law—dealing with government officers—clerical error—admission—reasonable profit.

1. Where claimant made a written contract with the United States to furnish to a government hospital a quantity of shucks at the rate of sixty cents per pound, based on proposals made by the Secretary of the Interior, when shucks were only of the market value of from six mills to one and three fourths cents per pound, and those furnished by claimant were only of the latter value, in an action for the price of the shucks delivered, the market value can only be recovered.
2. If a contract be unreasonable and unconscionable; but not void for fraud, a court of law will give to the party who sues for its breach damages, not according to its letter, but only such as he is equitably entitled to.
3. Where a contract is so extortionate and unconscionable on its face as to raise the presumption of fraud in its inception, or to require but slight evidence to justify such presumption, inference of fraud is as efficacious to maintain a defense at law as to sustain affirmative relief in equity; and if performance has been accepted in ignorance and under circumstances excusing the non-return of articles furnished, and these have some value, the amount sued for may be reduced to that value.
4. It is the duty of persons dealing with public officers to inquire as to their power and authority to bind the government; and persons so dealing are held to a recognition of the fact that government agents are bound to fairness and good faith as between themselves and their principal.
5. If claimant knew that a clerical error had been made in the contract, of which the agents of the government were ignorant, or if, under the facts, he must have known that their action in making the contract was in violation of their duty, the character of the fraud is not changed by the fact that such action was the result of a mistake or negligence of such agents.
6. Where claimant alleges that sixty cents per pound for shucks was the price at which he intended to bid, and that there was no mistake on his part in making the bid, this is an admission, when taken with the findings of fact, that he designed to commit the agents of the government to an unconscionable contract.
7. The effect of the contract is not weakened by the fact that, under his bids on the shucks and on other items separately, the claimant lost money on some of the articles and he will receive on the whole only a reasonable profit, if paid for at the contract price.

[Nos. 102, 103.]

Submitted Nov. 13, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

A PPEALS from a judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of claimant in an action for the price of goods sold and delivered to the United States. Affirmed.

Opinion below, 21 Ct. Cl. 328.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Claimant filed his petition against the United States in the Court of Claims, averring that on the 9th day of August, 1888, he entered into a contract in writing with the acting Secretary of the Interior Department for the furnishing of certain articles, constituting items in his proposal numbered 2, 9, 19, 32, 42, 56, 71, 77, 78, 79, 89, 90, 91, 97, 102 and 103, to the Government Hospital for the Insane near Washington, at rates specified therein; that he had furnished merchandise amounting to the sum of $5,635.89, according to the prices established by the terms of the contract, and had been paid only the sum of $1,663.89, and that there was still due and owing to him the sum of $4,032, which he was entitled to recover with interest from the first day of July, 1884; and that the accounting officers of the Interior Department had refused and neglected to pay such balance of $4,032, because, as they alleged, the price charged for item 97 in claimant's proposal was excessive, "notwithstanding the charge therefor was based upon the amount stated in said proposal, and accepted by said defendant's officers and agents, and by them incorporated in said contract as aforesaid."

To this petition a special plea was filed February 12, 1886, on behalf of the United States, to the effect that claimant had agreed to furnish shucks to the government hospital at the rate of sixty cents per hundred weight, and entered into a written contract, to recover damages for the breach of which this suit was instituted, whereby he agreed to furnish (inter alia) shucks at the rate of sixty cents per pound; that this was a clerical error, the real contract being that shucks were to be furnished by claimant to said hospital at sixty cents per hundred weight; that notwithstanding this "claimant attempts to practice a fraud against the United States in attempting to establish an allowance of the claim as made by him, and by his effort to obtain a judgment in this court upon such written contract, as if such mistake and clerical error had not been made, and for the amount due for the shucks furnished, as expressed by mistake in said written contract."

To this special plea claimant replied, by his attorney, denying that he agreed to furnish shucks at the rate of sixty cents per hundred weight, and averring that he bid for shucks "at the rate of sixty cents per pound, in accordance with the printed schedule furnished him by the United States upon which to make out his bid; that the said price was the price at which he intended to bid, and that there was no mistake on his part in making out the bid; that the said contract contained fifteen other items of goods, which were furnished as ordered, and some items furnished in much larger quantities than the estimated quantity contained on the printed schedule; that upon some of the items the claimant lost money; upon others there was a very small profit; and that upon the whole contract, adjusted at contract rates, the claimant will not receive more than a fair and reasonable profit. Claimant denies emphatically any attempt to practice a fraud on the United States, and avers that the whole transaction was in absolute good faith in the ordinary course of business; that there was no inducement or promise made in regard to the matter, except the written proposal of the claimant and the written contract."

Evidence was adduced on behalf of the United States, tending to show that shucks at the time of the contract were worth from three fifths of a cent to one cent and three quarters per pound; that it was the custom of the government to buy shucks by the hundred weight; and that the mistake in question had occurred by reason of the word "pounds" in the printed form not having been struck out and "hundred weight" inserted; all of which evidence was objected to on behalf of the claimant.

The Court of Claims filed its findings of fact and conclusion of law on the 3d of May, 1886.

The first finding sets forth the advertisement of the Secretary of the Interior for proposals for furnishing supplies to the Government Hospital for the Insane for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, stating, among other things, "Proposals must be made in duplicate on the forms furnished by the Department." "Bids will be considered on each item separately. Schedules containing blank forms for bidding, items and approximate estimates of amounts will be furnished on application." A description of what the quality of many of the articles, not including shucks, must be, is given at length in the advertisement.

The second finding contains the bids of the claimant on forms furnished by the Department, the schedule attached to his proposal enumerating some one hundred and seven articles, on all but twelve of which claimant made bids. This schedule, under the head of estimated quantity, enumerates the articles by pound, dozen, gross, bushel, box, ton, barrel, bale, gallon, case, quart and sack, and the bids are carried out per pound, per dozen, per gallon, etc.

The third finding gives the contract, by the terms of which the claimant agrees to furnish the items in the proposal, numbered as in the petition, and the acting Secretary of the Interior agrees to pay or cause to be paid on behalf of the United States the prices specified in the proposal and contract, "for all the articles delivered and accepted," the right being reserved to order a greater or less quantity of each.

The fourth and fifth findings and conclusion of law are as follows:

"IV. He (claimant) furnished under said contract all the articles included under items Nos. 2, 9, 19, 32, 42, 56, 71, 78, 79, 89, 90, 91, 102, 108, and has been paid therefor according to the contract. He also furnished in two or three lots, in the latter part of the year 1888, 6,720 pounds shucks under item No. 97, with memorandum bills accompanying the delivery thereof, with the price carried out, at 60 cents per pound, the whole aggregating $4,032. For the shucks he has not been paid.

"V. At the time said contract was made shucks were of the market value of from $12 to $35 a ton, according to quality, and whether they were hackled or unhackled; and those furnished by the claimant were of the market value of $35 a ton, or 14 cents per pound, aggregating, for all that were delivered, $117.60.

"Conclusion of law: Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court decides, as a conclusion of law, that the claimant is entitled to recover $117.60, and no more."

The opinion of the court was delivered by Richardson, Ch. J. (21 Ct. Cl. 328), who, after stating the facts and pointing out that the claimant was the only bidder for shucks, says:

"At the time the contract was made shucks were worth from $12 to $35 a ton, or from 6 mills to 14 cents a pound, while the claimant was to receive nearly forty times as much as the highest value.

"That an agreement to pay $1,200 a ton for shucks, actually worth not more than $35 a ton, is a grossly unconscionable bargain, defined in Bouvier's Law Dictionary to be 'a contract which no man in his senses, not under delusion, would make, on the one hand, and which no fair and honest man would accept, on the other, nobody can doubt. Such a contract, whether founded on fraud, accident, mistake, folly or ignorance, is void at common law. It is not necessary to invoke the aid of a court of equity to reform it. Courts of law will always refuse to enforce such a bargain, as against the public policy of honesty, fair dealing and good morals."

After citing Story's Equity Jurisprudence, § 188; James v. Morgan, 1 Levinz, 111; Baxter v. Wales, 12 Mass. 365, and Leland v. Stone, 110 Mass. 459, the opinion thus concludes:

"These citations are sufficient to show that in suits upon unconscionable agreements the courts of law will take the matter in their own control, and will, without the intervention of courts of equity, protect the parties against their enforcement.

"If it be so in suits on contracts between private parties who act by and for themselves, how much more is it so in suits on agreements by the United States, acting always through public officers, who are mere agents, required to act in good faith towards their principal according to the laws of the land, as everybody dealing with them are bound to know.

"There is no finding by the court of actual fraud by any of the persons engaged in making the contract now under consideration. The unconscionable price inserted for shucks was no doubt a mere accident, perhaps from an idea that it was the price per hundred pounds instead of per pound, as printed in the proposals and contract, and from neglect to change the printed words accordingly, which, if it had been done, would have fixed the price at $12 a ton, the very price which the findings show to have been the lowest value of shucks of any kind at that time. But, however it may have happened, we hold, as was held in the case of Leland v. Stone, from which we have quoted the words of the court, that a contract may be held unconscionable without proof of actual fraud at its inception if its enforcement would be unconscionable.

"It would be a fraud upon the United States to enforce such a contract as the one now in suit, and it never can be done through the Court of Claims."

Judgment was accordingly rendered in favor of the claimant for $117.60, and both parties appealed.

Messrs. Robert Christy and John C. Fay, for Hume, appellant:

Parol evidence is inadmissible to contradict or vary the terms of a valid written instrument. 1 Greenl. Ev. 277.

If parties choose to enter into unwise and improvident bargains they must abide by the consequences of their own rashness and folly; they have contracted for themselves and the court cannot contract for them.

Addison on Contracts, 12; Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 925; Erwin v. Parham, 53 U. S. 12 How. 200 (18: 952).

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Attorney-General, for the United States:

If a contract be unreasonable and unconscionable, but not void for fraud, a court of law will give to the party who sues for its breach damages, not according to its letter, but only such as he is equitably entitled to.

Scott v. U. S. 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 443, 445 (20: 488, 489).

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In his celebrated judgment in Earl of Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. Sr. 125, 155; Lord Hardwicke arranged all the forms of fraud recognized by equity in four classes, the first two of which he gives in these words:

"1. Then fraud, which is dolus malus, may be actual, arising from facts and circumstances of imposition; which is the plainest case. 2. It may be apparent from the intrinsic nature and subject of the bargain itself; such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept on the other; which are unequitable and unconscionable bargains; and of such even the common law has taken notice; for which, if it would not look a little ludicrous, might be cited James v. Morgan, 1 Lev. 111."

The case referred to by the Lord Chancellor was ruled by Sir Robert Hyde, then at the head of the King's Bench, and is reported in 1 Levinz, 111, in these words:

"Assumpsit to pay for a horse a barley-corn a nail, doubling it every nail; and avers that there were thirty-two nails in the shoes of the horse, which, being doubled every nail, came to five hundred quarters of barley. And on non-assumpsit pleaded, the cause being tried before Hyde at Hereford, he directed the jury to give the value of the horse in damages, being £8, and so they did. And it was afterwards moved in arrest of judgment for a small fault in the declaration, which was overruled, and judgment given for the plaintiff."

James v. Morgan is cited by Lord Chief Justice Hale, 1 Ventris, 267, to the point that "upon certain contracts the jury may give less damages than the debt amounts to," and also in Bacon's Abridgment, Damages, D, 1, together with Thornborough v. Whitacre, 6 Mod. 805, 8. C., 2 Id. Raym. 1164, to the same point, stated thus: "Though in contracts the very sum specified and agreed on is usually given, yet if there are circumstances of hardship, fraud or deceit, though not sufficient to invalidate the contract, the jury may consider of them and proportionate and mitigate the damages accordingly."

In Thornborough v. Whitacre, the plaintiff declared that the defendant, in consideration of 2s. 6d. paid down, and £4 17s. 6d. to be paid on the performance of the agreement, promised to give the plaintiff two grains of rye corn on a certain Monday, and to double it successively on every Monday for a year; and the defendant demurred to the declaration. Upon calculation, it was found that, supposing the contract to have been performed, the whole quantity of rye to be delivered would be 524,288,000 quarters. The court recognized the case of James v. Morgan as good law, and said that though the contract was a foolish one, the defendant ought to pay something for his folly. "The counsel for the defendant, perceiving the opinion of the court to be against his client, offered the plaintiff his half crown and his cost, which was accepted of, and so no judgment was given in the case."

In Leland v. Stone, 10 Mass. 459, James v. Morgan and Thornborough v. Whitacre are referred to with approbation, and the principle of mitigating the damages applied, as also in Cutler v. How, 8 Mass. 257; Cutler v. Johnson, Id. 268, and Baxter v. Wales, 12 Mass. 865. And see Greer v. Tweed, 18 Abb. Pr. N. S. 427, and Russell v. Roberts, 8 E. D. Smith, 818.

Mr. Justice Swayne remarks, in Scott v. United States, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 443-445 [20: 488, 489]:

"Where parties intend to contract by parol, and there is a misunderstanding as to the terms, neither is bound, because their minds have not met. Where there is a written contract and a like misunderstanding is developed, a court of equity will refuse to execute it. If a contract be unreasonable and unconscionable, but not void for fraud, a court of law will give to the party who sues for its breach damages, not according to its letter, but only such as he is equitably entitled to. James v. Morgan, 1 Lev. 111; Thornborough v. Whitacre, 2 Id. Raym. 1164; Baxter v. Wales, 12 Mass. 865."

But James v. Morgan and Thornborough v. Whitacre were plainly cases in which one party took advantage of the other's ignorance of arithmetic to impose upon him, and the fraud was apparent upon the face of the contracts. In the latter case the defendant, by demurring, admitted that there was no fraud, and consequently the only question was on the validity of the contract in the absence of fraud, and it was sustained, but the plaintiff was allowed to take nominal damages only. And as to many of the cases it may be objected that they are at variance with the rule that a party must recover according to his contract if he sue upon it, or not at all, although, if the express contract were void, the defendant might nevertheless be held in general assumpsit, upon the implied contract to pay for property received from the plaintiff and retained.

The true principle deducible from the authorities, and most consistent with the reason of the thing, seems to be this: In the instance of a special contract which has been wholly executed and the time of payment passed, if the plaintiff proceeds in general assumpsit, the express contract is only evidence of the value of the consideration, which is open to attack by the defendant in reduction of damages. But, where the action is in special assumpsit, the express promise of the defendant fixes the measure of damages to which the plaintiff is entitled. And while the general rule is that the performance of every contract may be resisted on the ground of fraud, at law as well as in equity, yet upon a contract of sale, the defendant, having accepted performance, cannot interpose this defense to defeat the contract, unless he returns the article or proves it to have been entirely worthless, though he may ordinarily recoup the damages which he can show he has sustained through the fraud. And there may be contracts so extortionate and unconscionable on their face as to raise the presumption of fraud in their inception, or at least to require but slight additional evidence to justify such presumption. In such cases the natural and irresistible inference of fraud is as efficacious to maintain the defense at law as to sustain an application for affirmative relief in equity. When this is so, if performance has been accepted in ignorance and under circumstances excusing the non-return of articles furnished, and these have some value, the amount sued for may be reduced to that value.

In the case at bar the shucks had been appropriated by the government before the discovery of the error in the schedule and the position of the claimant in regard to it, and if the defendant successfully impeached the contract on the ground of fraud, the judgment for the actual market value of the shucks was correct, and sustainable under the pleadings.

In order to guard the public against losses and injuries arising from the fraud or mistake or rashness or indiscretion of their agents, the rule requires of all persons dealing with public officers the duty of inquiry as to their power and authority to bind the government; and persons so dealing must necessarily be held to a recognition of the fact that government agents are bound to fairness and good faith as between themselves and their principal. Whiteside v. United States, 98 U. S. 247, 257 [23: 882, 885]; United States v. Barlow, 132 U. S. 271, ante, p. 346.

If the claimant intended to induce the agents of the government to contract to pay for these shucks thirty-five times their highest market value, and the agents of the government knowingly entered into such a contract, it will not be denied that such conduct would be fraudulent and the agreement vitiated accordingly. If the claimant knew that a clerical error had been committed, of which the agents of the government were ignorant, and deliberately intended to take advantage of the error to obtain the execution of a contract for the payment of so grossly unconscionable a price, or if the facts were such that he must be held to have known that their action, if understandingly taken, would be in palpable dereliction of their duty to their principal, and, notwithstanding, sought to profit by it, the character of the fraud, so far as the claimant is concerned, is not changed by the fact that such action was the result of the negligence or mistake of the government's agents, untainted by moral turpitude on their part.

The claimant by his replication insists that the price of sixty cents per pound for shucks "was the price at which he intended to bid, and that there was no mistake on his part in making out the bid." This is an admission, when taken with the findings of fact, that he designed to commit the agents of the government to a contract "such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make, on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept, on the other," and is fatal to his recovery according to the letter of the contract. Nor is its effect in that regard weakened in any degree by the suggestion that, under bids on each item separately, the claimant made but little profit, or none at all on some of the articles.

The Court of Claims did not err in the admission of the evidence upon which the fifth finding of fact is based, nor in its refusal to permit the claimant to recover more than the market value of the shucks, its allowance of which we will not disturb.

The judgment is affirmed.

FREDERICK MULLER ET AL., Plffs.
in Err.,

vs.
ANTHONY B. NORTON ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 501-506.)

Assignment for benefit of creditors—sale on credit—law of Texas—two assignees.

1. A clause in an assignment by an insolvent debtor of his property for the benefit of his creditors, that the assignee shall "convert" the property assigned "into cash as soon and upon the best terms possible for the best interest of the creditors," does not give him authority to sell on credit.
2. But if such clause does permit a sale by the assignee on credit, yet, under the Texas decisions, that does not render the assignment void upon its face.
3. Under the Statute of Texas such an assignment is not void because it is made to two assignees, instead of to one, although the Statute speaks only of an assignee.

[No. 91.]

Argued Nov. 8, 11, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas to review a judgment in favor of defendants in an action brought by assignees of a debtor against the marshal of the Northern District of Texas and his sureties for seizing under attachments the goods of the debtor which had been assigned to the plaintiffs. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Reported below, 19 Fed. Rep. 719.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. John Johns and D. A. McKnight, for defendants in error:

The deed of assignment is void, as against non-consenting creditors, for the reason that it authorizes the assignees to sell upon credit.

In the following cases, wherein the assignee had authority to fix the "terms" of sale, it was held that a sale on credit was implied:

Sumner v. Hicks, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 582 (17: 355); Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 286; Keop v. Sanderson, 12 Wis. 352; Beus v. Shaughnessy, 2 Utah, 492; Moir v. Brown, 14 Barb. 89; Schufeldt v. Abernethy, 2 Duer, 583.

Authority to the assignor to sell upon credit renders the deed of assignment void on its face.

McCleery v. Allen, 7 Neb. 21; Collier v. Davis, 47 Ark. 867; Bagley v. Bove, 7 Cent. Rep. 258, 105 N. Y. 171, 177; Robbins v. Butcher, 6 Cent. Rep. 803, 104 N. Y. 575; Jaffray v. McGhee, 107 U. S. 385 (27: 496); Robinson v. Elliott, 89 U. S. 22 Wall. 513 (22: 758); Means v. Dowd, 128 U. S. 273 (32: 429); Nicholson v. Leavitt, 6 N. Y. 510.

Under the statutes of the State of Texas, and the decisions of her courts, a deed of assignment authorizing a sale upon credit is voidable by non-consenting creditors.

Tex. Rev. Stat. 1879, art. 2465, p. 863, Act March 24, 1879; Woodward v. Marshall, 22

Pick. 474; Bagley v. Bowe, 7 Cent. Rep. 258, 105 N. Y. 177; Cunningham v. Norton, 125 U. S. 77, 81 (81: 624, 625).

Where the Statute is silent the assignee must be governed by the deed of assignment.

Burrill on Assignments, § 868; Ogden v. Peters, 21 N. Y. 28; Re Lewis, 81 N. Y. 424; Adler v. Ecker, 1 McCrary, 257; Hopkins v. Ray, 1 Met. 79; Collier v. Davis, 47 Ark. 367; Blum v. Welborne, 58 Tex. 157; Keller v. Smalley, 63 Tex. 512, 516; Bagley v. Bowe, 7 Cent. Rep. 258, 105 N. Y. 171.

In Texas it has always been held that an authority to sell on credit voids the assignment.

Eckes v. Copeland, 53 Tex. 590; Baldwin v. Peet, 22 Tex. 714; Carlton v. Baldwin, 23 Tex. 731; Nave v. Britton, 61 Tex. 572; La Belle Wagon Works v. Tidball, 59 Tex. 291.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors, which in terms directs or authorizes the assignee to execute the trust or dispose of the property in a mode not authorized by the Statute, or contrary to its requirements, is void on its face.

Schoolfield v. Johnson, 11 Fed. Rep. 297; Heeland v. Hoagland, 10 Neb. 511; Bonns v. Carter, 20 Neb. 566; Edwards v. Mitchell, 1 Gray, 239; Pike v. Bacon, 21 Me. 280; Raleigh v. Griffith, 37 Ark. 158; Churchill v. Whipple, 41 Wis. 611.

The deed of assignment is void as against non-consenting creditors, for the reason that it is not made to one assignee as required by the Statute.

Sedgwick on Stat. Law, 91; Burrill on Assignments, § 819; Wakeman v. Grover, 4 Paige, 28; Grover v. Wakeman, 11 Wend. 187; Jaffray v. McGhee, 107 U. S. 365 (27: 490); McKee v. Coffin, 66 Tex. 804, 809.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of trespass brought in the court below by Frederick Muller and Adolph Jacobs, assignees of the firm of Louis Goldsal & Company, of Denison, Texas, against Anthony B. Norton, the United States Marshal for the Northern District of Texas, and the sureties on his official bond, for levying upon and seizing, under certain attachment suits in that court, the goods, wares and merchandise of said firm which had been assigned to the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs in their petition set up the fact of the assignment by virtue of which they assert title to the property, reciting the main portions of the deed at length; set out the details of the various levies under the attachment suits, and prayed judgment for the amount and value of the goods levied on, which was alleged to be something over $34,000. Upon demurrer to the petition, the court below held the deed of assignment null and void, and accordingly rendered a judgment in favor of the defendants. (19 Fed. Rep. 719.) To reverse that judgment this writ of error is prosecuted.

The deed of assignment was as follows:

"Know all men by these presents that we Louis Goldsal and Benjamin Hassberg, doing business as merchants in Denison, Grayson County, Texas, under the firm name and style of 'Louis Goldsal & Co.,' for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar, to us in hand paid by Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs, of same place, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and for the further purposes and considerations hereinafter stated, have this day assigned, bargained, sold and conveyed, and by these presents do assign, bargain, sell and convey, unto the said Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs, all the property of every kind owned by us, or either of us, individually or as a firm, either real, personal or mixed, said property consisting of our stock of merchandise situated in our place of business known as Nos. 204 and 206, south side Main Street, in Denison, Texas, being composed of dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, hats, caps, trunks, valises, gents' furnishing goods, show-cases, book accounts, etc., worth about twenty-seven thousand dollars, and all other property owned by us or either of us not herein mentioned, except such of our or either of our property as is exempt from execution by the laws of the State of Texas and no other; to have and to hold unto them, the said Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs, their assigns and successors, forever. This conveyance is made, however, for the following purposes, to wit: We, the said Louis Goldsal and Benjamin Hassberg, doing business as aforesaid under the firm name of 'Louis Goldsal & Co.,' are insolvent, being indebted beyond what we or either of us are able to pay, and desire to secure a just and proper distribution of our and each of our property among our creditors, and this assignment is made in trust to the said Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs for the benefit of such of our creditors only as will consent to accept their proportional share of our estate and discharge us from their respective claims; and for said purpose the said Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs are hereby authorized and directed to take possession at once of all the property above conveyed and convert the same into cash as soon and upon the best terms possible for the best interest of our creditors, and execute and deliver all necessary conveyances therefor to the purchasers, and to collect such of the claims due us or either of us as are collectible, and to bring and prosecute such suits therefor as may be necessary, and to execute and deliver all proper receipts, releases and discharges to our said debtors on the payment of said claims, and to do and perform each and every act and thing whatsoever requisite, necessary and proper for them to do in and about the premises for the proper and lawful administration of this trust in accordance with the law; and the said Fred. Muller and A. Jacobs shall pay the proceeds of our said property, according to law, to such of our creditors as shall legally consent to accept their proportional share of our estates, property and effects as aforesaid, and discharge us from their respective claims, and no others, he first paying the expenses of administering this trust, and a reasonable compensation to himself for his services."

The validity of the above deed in view of matters apparent on its face constitutes the only question for consideration. We think that question is determined by the principle laid down in Cunningham v. Norton, 125 U. S. 77 [81:624], which reversed the judgment on the authority of which the one now under review was rendered by the court below. That case involved, as does this, the validity of an assignment under the Texas Statute just referred to, which was sought to be set aside on account of a provision in the deed alleged to be not in conformity with that Statute. The assignments in the two cases are very similar, the main difference being that the one in the Ounningham Case contains two provisions neither of which occurs in the instrument under consideration. The first of these provisions reserves to the assignor the surplus of the property assigned after the payment of all the debts of the consenting creditors. The second expressly authorizes the assignee to sell such property on credit, according to his discretion. This last provision, however, was not called to the attention of the court in that case. The main contention was, that the deed in controversy was rendered void by the clause directing the assignee to pay over to the assignor the surplus after paying in full all the creditors who should accede to the deed. This court decided that the said clause did not affect the validity of the assignment, but was itself alone invalidated by reason of its being in violation of the Statute. The decision was based upon the general construction of the whole Act taken together, in view of the main object designed to be subserved by it, and of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Texas upon many of its express provisions, in which line of decisions the court indicated its full concurrence. That policy the court declares to have been the appropriation of the entire estate of an insolvent debtor to the payment of his debts, and as a means thereto to favor assignments, and to give them such construction that they may stand rather than fall; that its manifest purpose was to provide a mode by which an insolvent debtor, desiring to do so, may make an assignment simple and yet effective to pass all his property to an assignee for the benefit of such of his creditors as will accept a proportionate share of the said property and discharge him from their claims; that it further manifests the intention to transfer to the assignee all the property of the debtor for distribution among all the creditors; that no act of the assignee or of the assignor after the assignment is made, or preceding it, but in contemplation of it, however fraudulent that act may be, shall divest the right of the creditors to have the trust administered for their benefit in accordance with the spirit of the Statute; and that, therefore, the provision reserving the surplus to the debtor after payment of the debts to the consenting creditors, even though conceded to be not in conformity with the requirements of the Statute, and therefore itself void, does not vitiate the assignment or prevent its execution for the benefit of the creditors, as provided in the Statute.

These principles apply with controlling force to the assignment in the case at bar. The ingenious argument of the counsel has failed to point out any distinguishing features in the two cases.

The first ground upon which this deed is assailed is the following clause therein: "The said Fred Muller and A. Jacobs are hereby authorized and directed to take possession at once of all the property above conveyed, and convert the same into cash as soon and upon the best terms possible for the best interest of our creditors;" which language the court below, and the counsel for the defendants claim is an authority to the assignee to sell upon credit. We do not think that such is a correct or fair interpretation of the clause, taking the whole instrument together and construing it with reference to the purpose manifest in all its other provisions. A positive direction to "convert" the property assigned "into cash as soon and upon the best terms possible for the best interest of our creditors," can hardly be construed into a discretionary authority to sell on credit, without doing violence to the well-established rule that the power to sell on credit will not be inferred from language susceptible of a different construction. Burrill on Assignments, § 224.

But even if we concede that the construction contended for be correct, and that the clause thus construed is in contravention of the Statute, it will not, as this court has decided, operate to annul the assignment, in which all the creditors may have an interest. In Kellogg v. Muller, 68 Tex. 182, 184, this very point we are now considering was presented and decided by the court in the following language: "The first exception to the deed is that it authorized the assignee to sell the property assigned on a credit, and is therefore void. The provision to which we are cited in support of the exception is as follows: 'That so soon as said inventory is complete, the said Frederick Muller, as such trustee aforesaid, shall thereafter, with all reasonable dispatch, proceed to sell and dispose of said goods, wares and merchandise and furniture, and collect said book accounts and bills receivable, converting the same into cash or its equivalent.' It may be doubted if this can be construed to empower the assignee to sell for anything but money. . . . But, however this may be, even if a badge of fraud, it is not sufficient to authorize the court to hold the deed void upon its face," citing Baldwin v. Post, 22 Tex. 708.

In the assignment before us all the property conveyed by it is in terms devoted to the payment of the creditors of the insolvent debtors. The judgment of the court below adjudging it to be void upon its face, because it permitted a sale on credit, was erroneous.

The second objection, that the deed was not made to one assignee, does not require any extended comment. Under the common law an insolvent debtor was permitted to make an assignment to a single individual or to several. Burrill on Assignments, § 91. It is true the Act of March 24, 1879, speaks only of an assignee; but the statutory rule of construction in force in Texas is: "The singular and plural number shall each include the other, unless otherwise expressly provided." Rev. Stat. of Texas (1879), art. §188, § 4. Under this rule, and keeping in mind the policy of the Statute of 1879 regulating assignments, we do not think the deed of assignment in this case void for the second reason assigned.

For the reasons given the decrees of the court below is reversed and the case remanded, with directions to take such further proceedings as shall not be inconsistent with this opinion.

THE RIO GRANDE RAILROAD COMPANY, Pf. in Err.,

JOHN B. VINET, Dative Testamentary Executor of A. J. GOMILA.

(See S. C. Rio Grande R. Co. v. Gomila's Executor, Reporter's ed. 478-486.)

Property seized on execution on U. S. judgment does not revert to state probate court, on death of debtor—jurisdiction of U. S. court not impaired by state legislation—court cannot surrender its jurisdiction.

1. Property of a debtor, brought within the custody of the circuit court of the United States by seizure under process issued upon its judgment, remains in its custody to be applied in satisfaction of the judgment notwithstanding the subsequent death of the debtor; by such death it does not pass under the control of the probate court of the State, to be disposed of in the administration of the assets of the deceased.
2. The jurisdiction of a court of the United States once obtained over property by being brought within its custody continues until the purpose of the seizure is accomplished, and cannot be impaired or affected by any legislation of the State or by any proceedings subsequently commenced in a state court.
3. When property is seized to satisfy a money judgment of the United States court, it is appropriated to pay that judgment, and the court cannot surrender its jurisdiction over the property until it is applied to that judgment, or that judgment is otherwise satisfied. Only the part remaining after such appropriation goes, upon the death of the debtor, into the probate court as his assets.

[No. 113.]

Argued Nov. 15, 1889. Decided Dec. 9, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana to review a judgment that certain property, seized by the United States marshal to satisfy an execution upon a judgment rendered by said United States circuit court, and then in the possession of said marshal, be delivered to the executor of the judgment debtor, as the officer of the Probate Court for the Parish of Orleans, for the purpose of administration under the orders of the Probate Court. Reversed.

Reported below, 28 Fed. Rep. 837.

Statement by Mr. Justice Field:

This case comes from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana. It arises out of the following facts: On the 5th of June, 1885, The Rio Grande Railroad Company, a corporation, recovered a judgment in that court against a co-partnership firm known as Gomila & Co., and against its members, Anthony J. Gomila and Larned Torrey, in solido, for $26,781.99, with interest from January 1, 1884. Upon this judgment execution was issued under which certain interests were attached, or seized, as it is termed in the laws of Louisiana, namely, a claim upon which, in February, 1885, judgment was recovered in that court in favor of Gomila & Co. against Culliford & Clark, for $28,999.76, with interest at the rate of five per cent per annum from June 30, 1883, from which judgment an appeal was, at the time, pending in the Supreme Court of the United States; also a claim and judgment thereon in favor of Gomila & Co., against John T. Milliken, rendered in a state court of Louisiana, on the 27th of June, 1883, for $6,200, with interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum from February 27, 1883; and also a claim made by Gomila & Co. against Kehlor Brothers, garnishees in the suit of Gomila & Co. against Milliken. Under this execution a parcel of real estate in the City of New Orleans was also seized. The property, except the real estate, was advertised by the marshal of the district for sale. Whilst thus advertised, and before the day of sale designated, Gomila, of the firm of Gomila & Co., died. The sale did not, therefore, take place, and the representatives of Gomila were made parties to the proceedings under the execution. Subsequently a new sale was advertised. Before the day of sale arrived, the public administrator, and, as such, dative testamentary executor of Gomila, upon an affidavit that three fourths of these assets belonged to and were inventoried as of the succession of the deceased, and should be administered with his other assets in the Probate Court of the Parish of Orleans, moved the circuit court of the United States for an order directing the marshal of the district to discontinue and withdraw the advertisement of sale, and desist from making the sale as advertised, or offering for sale the property seized. To this motion the Railroad Company appeared, and, by way of exception and demurrer, pleaded, first, that the executor could not proceed by motion if he had any cause of complaint, but must proceed by an original bill in equity; and, second, that the motion presented issues of law and fact, which, if within the jurisdiction of the law side of the court, should be tried in the ordinary way by a jury. The Company further stated that, if the demurrer and exception were overruled, it desired to set up in answer to the motion the fact that the claims were seized and advertised for sale before the death of Gomila, and were in the custody and jurisdiction of the court at the time of his death, and should not, therefore, be transferred to the probate court of the parish. Upon the hearing, which took place on the 5th of November, 1885, the court overruled the exception and demurrer, and ordered that the marshal discontinue and withdraw the advertisement of sale, which had been fixed for that day, and desist from making the sale until further order of the court, reserving to the parties all the rights not therein passed upon. This order merely operated to postpone the sale. Subsequently another rule was taken out by the executor upon the Railroad Company to show cause why the effects and property should not be delivered to him, burdened with any liens in its favor which might have resulted from their seizure, and be received and held by him as executor for the purpose of administration, under the orders of the probate court. Upon the hearing which followed, the circuit court, in December, 1885, adjudged and decreed that the rule be made absolute, and that the property described in the motion, then in the possession and under the control of the marshal, be delivered to the executor as the officer of the Probate Court for the Parish of Orleans, the said property to pass into his possession burdened with any liens in favor of the plaintiff which might have resulted from its seizure, and that it be received and held by the executor for the purposes of administration under the orders of the probate court, and that the cost of the proceeding be paid by The Rio Grande Railroad Company. Rio Grande R. Co. v. Gomila, 28 Fed. Rep. 387.

To reverse this judgment the case is brought to this court on writ of error.

Mr. George L. Bright, for plaintiff in error:

Whenever property has been seized under judicial process, the property is to be considered as in the custody of the court, within its jurisdiction; and no other court has a right to interfere with that possession, unless it be some court which may have a direct supervisory control over the court whose process has first taken possession, or some superior jurisdiction in the premises.

1 Abb. U. S. Pr. § 46; Wallace v. McConnell, 88 U. S. 13 Pet. 151 (10: 95); Biggs v. Johnson County, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 166 (18: 768); Bell v. Ohio Life and Trust Co. 1 Biss. 260; De Visser v. Blackstone, 6 Blatchf. 235; Fox v. Hempfield R. Co. 2 Abb. U. S. 151; U. S. v. The Reindeer, 2 Cliff. 57; The Skylark, 2 Biss. 251; Buck v. Colbath, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 384 (18: 257); Collier v. Stanbrough, 47 U. S. 6 How. 14 (12: 324); Dupuy v. Bemiss, 2 La. Ann. 510.

The jurisdiction of the courts of the United States over controversies between citizens of different States cannot be impaired by the laws of the State.

Erwin v. Lowry, 48 U. S. 7 How. 181 (12: 655); Hyde v. Stone, 61 U. S. 20 How. 175 (15: 875); Suydam v. Broadnax, 89 U. S. 14 Pet. 67 (10: 357); Union Bank v. Vaiden, 59 U. S. 18 How. 508 (15: 473); Freeman v. Howe, 65 U. S. 24 How. 454 (16: 750).

Mr. Gus. A. Breaux, for defendant in error:

The administration laws of a State will be observed by the federal courts in the enforcement of individual rights.

Yonley v. Lavender, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 279, 280 (22: 537, 538); Williams v. Benedict, 49 U. S. 8 How. 111 (12: 1007); Hess v. Reynolds, 118 U. S. 77 (28: 928); Peale v. Phipps, 55 U. S. 14 How. 375 (14: 459); Serra & Hijo v. Hoffman, 29 La. Ann. 19.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented for our consideration is whether property of a debtor, brought within the custody of the circuit court of the United States by seizure under process issued upon its judgment, remains in its custody to be applied in satisfaction of the judgment notwithstanding the subsequent death of the debtor, or is removed by such death from the jurisdiction of the circuit court and passes under the control of the probate court of the State, to be disposed of in the administration of the assets of the deceased. To this question we have no doubt the answer must be that the property remains in the custody of the circuit court of the United States, to be applied to the satisfaction of the judgment under which it was seized. The jurisdiction of a court of the United States once obtained over property by being brought within 182 U. S.

its custody continues until the purpose of the seizure is accomplished, and cannot be impaired or affected by any legislation of the State or by any proceedings subsequently commenced in a state court. This exemption of the authority of the courts of the United States from interference by legislative or judicial action of the States is essential to their independence and efficiency. If their jurisdiction could in any particular be invaded and impaired by such state action, it would be difficult to perceive any limit to which the invasion and impairment might not be extended. To sanction the doctrine for which the executor appointed by the Probate Court of the Parish of Orleans contends, would be to subordinate the authority of the federal courts in essential attributes to the regulation of the State, a position which is wholly inadmissible.

The principle declared in Freeman v. Howe, 65 U. S. 24 How. 450 [18: 749], and in Buck v. Colbath, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 384 [18: 257], both of which have, from their importance, attracted special attention from the profession, in effect determines the question presented here.

In the first of these cases the marshal had levied a writ of attachment, issued from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts, upon certain property which was subsequently taken from his possession by the sheriff of the County of Middlesex, in that State, under a writ of replevin issued from a state court, and the question presented was whether the sheriff was justified in thus taking the property from the marshal's possession, or whether the marshal had the right to retain it. The court held that the property was, by its attachment under process of the federal court, brought within the custody of that court and under its jurisdiction; that it could not be taken from that custody by any tribunal of the State; and that if a conflict in the assertion of jurisdiction in such case arose, the determination of the question rested with the federal court, observing that "no government could maintain the administration or execution of its laws, civil or criminal, if the jurisdiction of its judicial tribunals were subject to the determination of another."

In the second of the above cases—Buck v. Colbath, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 384 [18: 257]—this court referred to the decision in Freeman v. Howe, and, after stating that, when first announced, it had taken the profession generally by surprise, said that the court was clearly satisfied with the principle upon which the decision was founded; "a principle," it added, "which is essential to the dignity and just authority of every court, and to the comity which should regulate the relations between all courts of concurrent jurisdiction. That principle is that, whenever property has been seized by an officer of the court by virtue of its process, the property is to be considered as in the custody of the court and under its control for the time being; and that no other court has a right to interfere with that possession, unless it be some court which may have a direct supervisory control over the court whose process has first taken possession, or some superior jurisdiction in the premises." The doctrine of Freeman v. Howe was thus reaffirmed, with a statement of the limitation to which, in its application, it was subject, by allowing suits against officers and others for seizing the property of strangers, which did not invade the custody of the court over the property. With the property in custody, so long as it continues, no other tribunal can interfere, though, but for such custody, possession of it might be taken under process from state courts. Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176 [28: 390].

In Riggs v. Johnson County, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 166 [18: 768], which came from the Circuit Court for the District of Iowa, and was before us at December Term, 1867, this doctrine finds illustration. There the plaintiff had obtained judgment in the circuit court against the county upon certain of its bonds. Execution issued upon the judgment was returned unsatisfied. Thereupon he applied to the circuit court for a mandamus upon the supervisors of the county to compel the levy of a tax for the payment of the judgment. An alternative writ was issued commanding the supervisors to assess the tax or show cause to the contrary on a day designated. The supervisors appeared on the return day and alleged that they had been enjoined by proceedings in a state court from assessing a tax for that purpose, and that they could not do so without being guilty of contempt and becoming liable to punishment. To this return the plaintiff demurred on several grounds; and, among others, that the state court had no jurisdiction, power or authority to prevent him from using the process of the circuit court to collect its judgment; and that the decree for an injunction rendered in the state court was no bar to his application for relief. The court overruled the demurrer, and decided that the return was sufficient. Judgment was thereupon rendered for the supervisors, and the plaintiff brought the case to this court by writ of error. Here the judgment was reversed and the cause remanded, with directions to sustain the demurrer and take further proceedings in accordance with the opinion of the court. In considering the grounds of the demurrer, this court held that the jurisdiction of a court is not exhausted by the rendition of judgment, but continues until that judgment is satisfied; that process subsequent to judgment is as essential to jurisdiction as process antecedent to judgment; observing that the judicial power would otherwise be incomplete and entirely inadequate to the purposes for which it is conferred by the Constitution; that mandamus is an appropriate remedy to compel the levy of a tax to pay a debt contracted by a municipal corporation, where judgment has been recovered for the debt, and execution thereon has been returned unsatisfied; and that state laws cannot control its process. "Repeated decisions of this court," was its language, "have also determined that state laws, whether general or enacted for the particular case, cannot in any manner limit or affect the operation of the process or proceedings in the federal courts." And it concluded its consideration of the subject by holding that the injunction of the state court was "inoperative to control or in any manner to affect the process or proceedings of a circuit court, not on account of any paramount jurisdiction in the latter courts, but because, in their sphere of action, circuit courts are wholly independent of the state tribunals."

It is earnestly contended that this doctrine cannot apply where the property brought under the control of the federal court has by the subsequent death of the debtor become, under the Statute of Louisiana, the subject of administration in the probate courts of the State. The doctrine as declared in the cases cited does not admit of any exception to the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States in such cases. Indeed, if an exception could be made in cases in the probate court, it might be made in other cases. Special jurisdiction in particular classes of cases might be authorized, so as to take a large portion of subjects from the jurisdiction of the federal courts. When property is seized to satisfy a money judgment of the United States court, and thus brought within its custody, it is appropriated to pay that judgment, and the court cannot surrender its jurisdiction over the property until it is applied to that judgment, or that judgment is otherwise satisfied. Only the part remaining after such appropriation goes, upon the death of the debtor, into the probate court as his assets. All proceedings under a levy of execution have relation back to the time of the seizure of the property. Freeman v. Dawson, 110 U. S. 264, 270 [28: 141, 143].

We do not question the general doctrine laid down in Yonley v. Lavender, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 276, 279, 280 [22: 536-538], to the effect that the administration laws of a State are not merely rules of practice for the courts, but laws limiting the rights of the parties, and will be observed by the federal courts in the enforcement of individual rights, and that those laws upon the death of a party withdraw the estate of the deceased from the operation of the execution laws of the State, and place them in the hands of his executor or administrator for the benefit of his creditors and distributees. But that doctrine only applies where the property has not been, previous to the death of the debtor, taken into custody by the federal court upon its process, and thus specifically appropriated to the satisfaction of such judgment. In this case, had Gomila died before the property in question had been seized upon process issued upon a judgment against him, the doctrine of the case cited might have been applicable. We do not recall any case now where the federal courts have not paid respect to the principle that all debts to be paid out of the decedent's estate are to be established in the court to which the law of his domicile has confided the general administration of estates, and that judgments against the deceased, unaccompanied by a seizure of property for their satisfaction, stand in the same position as other claims against his estate, and are to be paid in like manner. The jurisdiction of chancery to enforce the equitable rights of a nonresident creditor in the case of maladministration or non-administration of the estate of a decedent, stands upon a different principle (Payne v. Hook, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 425 [19: 280]); the rule prevailing, as stated in Hyde v. State, 61 U. S. 20 How. 170, 175 [15: 874, 875], that the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States over controversies between citizens of different States cannot be impaired by the laws of the State which prescribe the modes of redress in their courts or which regulate the distribution of their judicial power.

Nor is there anything in the doctrine of the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal court to dispose of the property in its custody without any intervention of the probate court, until its judgment is satisfied, that in any way trenches upon that doctrine, equally well established, that where a state and a federal court have concurrent jurisdiction over the same subject matter, that court which first obtains jurisdiction will retain it to the end of the controversy, either to the exclusion of the other, or to its exclusion so far as to render the latter's decision subordinate to the other, a doctrine which, with some exceptions, is recognized both in federal and state courts. Wallace v. McConnell, 88 U. S. 18 Pet. 186, 143 [10: 95]; Taylor v. Taintor, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 366, 870 [21: 287, 290].

Wallace v. McConnell, 88 U. S. 18 Pet. 186, 143 [10: 95], was a case brought in the District Court of the United States for the District of Alabama, exercising the power of a circuit court, upon the promissory note of the defendant for $4,880. The defendant appeared and pleaded payment and satisfaction, and, issue being joined, the case was continued until the succeeding term. The defendant then interposed a plea of pais darrien continuance, alleging, that as to $4,204 of the sum, the plaintiff ought not to maintain his action, because that sum had been attached in proceedings commenced against him under the Attachment Law of the State in which he was summoned as garnishee. In those proceedings he had admitted his indebtedness beyond a certain payment made, and the state court gave judgment against him for the balance. To this plea the plaintiff demurred, and the demurrer was sustained. The case being taken to this court, it was contended that the proceedings under the Attachment Law of Alabama were sufficient to bar the action as to the amount attached, and that, therefore, the demurrer ought to have been overruled. But the court said: "The plea shows that the proceedings on the attachment were instituted after the commencement of this suit. The jurisdiction of the district court of the United States, and the right of the plaintiff to prosecute his suit in that court, having attached, that right could not be arrested or taken away by any proceedings in another court. This would produce a collision in the jurisdiction of courts that would extremely embarrass the administration of justice."

From the views expressed it follows that the court below erred in ordering the marshal to discontinue the advertisement for the sale of the property seized, and from proceeding with its sale, and directing its delivery over to the executor of the deceased Gomila, for purposes of administration under the orders of the Probate Court of the Parish of Orleans. Only so much of the property, or of its proceeds, as may remain after the satisfaction of the judgment under which the property was seized, can be transferred to such executor.

The judgment of the court below must therefore be reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to discharge the rule; and it is so ordered.

182 U. S.

WILLIAM H. ROBERTSON, Collector of the Port of New York, Piff, in Err.,

v.

OTTO GERDAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 454-459.)

Duty on ivory keys for pianos—not musical instruments.

1. Ivory pieces for the keys of pianos or organs are manufactures of ivory and are not dutiable as musical instruments.
2. The fact that such articles were to be used exclusively for a musical instrument, and were made on purpose for such an instrument, does not make them dutiable as musical instruments.

[No. 56.]

Argued Dec. 4, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff to recover duties paid under protest on certain ivory pieces for the keys of pianos or organs. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Attorney-General, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Stephen G. Clarke and Edwin B. Smith for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought in the Superior Court of the City of New York, and removed by certiorari by the defendant into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, by Otto Gerdan against William H. Robertson, Collector of Customs of the Port of New York, to recover duties paid under protest on certain ivory pieces for the keys of pianos or organs, imported into the Port of New York, and entered there, some of them in September and October, 1882, and the rest of them in January, October and November, 1884. Upon those imported in 1882, the Collector assessed a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem, under the provision of Schedule M of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes (2d ed. p. 474), enacted June 22, 1874, which imposes that rate of duty on "manufactures of bones, horn, ivory or vegetable ivory." On the articles imported in 1884, the Collector assessed a duty of 80 per cent ad valorem, under that provision of Schedule N of section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 511), which imposes that rate of duty on "bone, horn, ivory or vegetable ivory, all manufactures of, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act."

The importer claimed in his protest that the goods imported in 1882 were subject to a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem, under that provision of Schedule M of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes of 1874 (2d ed. p. 478), which imposes that rate of duty on "musical instruments of all kinds;" and that the goods imported in 1884 were liable to a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem, under that provision of Schedule N of section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the said Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 513), which imposes that rate of duty on "musical instruments of all kinds."

On appeal, the decision of the Collector was affirmed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and suit was brought in due time. The plaintiff had a verdict at the trial, and judgment was entered for him, for $345.50, to review which the defendant has brought a writ of error.

The bill of exceptions states as follows: "Plaintiff called as his only witness George W. Clark, who, being duly sworn, testified that he was in the employ of plaintiff; that he identified the samples produced as similar to the articles which were imported; that they are pieces for the keys of pianos or organs; that they come in packages and are matched to certain octaves for certain instruments, to wit, organs and pianos, five octaves for organs and seven octaves for pianos, and are glued on the keys; that they are sawed and cut in a particular shape for that purpose, and are tapered in thickness, so that the end meets and the shaft comes in between. Q. They are used for no other purpose than for piano and organ keys? A. That is it, sir. On cross-examination this witness testified that he had never put them on pianos or organs; that there are different grades and two sizes of the articles in question. Q. Do you know how they are put on the piano? A. We don't do that; we sell to the piano makers and key-board makers. I have seen it done. They scrape them to make them hold to the wood; then they are put on the key-board, and then sawed out and stuck on in that way on a large board, and then sawed out, and this, the ivory piece, is then glued on top of it, and then it is polished. Q. Are the corners rounded off? A. We don't do that; we sell to the makers. Q. As a matter of fact, don't you know that the outside corners are rounded off? A. I have seen it so, yes, sir; on the pianos. We are not piano makers; we sell to the piano and key-board makers." No other evidence was offered on either side.

The defendant asked the court to direct a verdict in his favor, because (1) the imported article was not a musical instrument, and (2) it was not a completed, indispensable part of a musical instrument. This motion was denied, and the defendant excepted. The defendant then asked the court to charge the jury that, in order to find for the plaintiff, they must find that the imported articles were completed, indispensable parts of a musical instrument. But the court charged that if the articles were used exclusively for pianos and organs, the jury should return a verdict for the plaintiff, if not, for the defendant; to which instruction the defendant excepted. The court also charged that if the articles were made on purpose for pianos and organs, as musical instruments, and no other purpose, the jury might return a verdict for the plaintiff. To this instruction the defendant excepted.

We think there was error in the charge of the court. The substance of the charge was that, if the articles were made on purpose to be used in pianos and organs, and were used exclusively in pianos and organs, they were dutiable as musical instruments, and not as manufactures of ivory. That the articles were in themselves musical instruments, cannot be gravely contended. They were ivory pieces for the keys of pianos or organs. As imported, they were simply pieces of ivory which had undergone a process of manufacture; were of a shape and size to be used for certain octaves of pianos and organs; and were sold to piano makers and key-board makers. Those persons scraped the lower surface of the ivory, to make it adhere to a piece of wood to which it was afterwards glued. In the shape in which the articles were imported, they were clearly manufactures of ivory.

Neither of the Statutes in question imposes on parts of musical instruments the same rate of duty which it imposes on musical instruments.

By Schedule E of section 11 of the Act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat. 47), a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "musical instruments of all kinds, and strings for musical instruments of whip-gut or catgut, and all other strings of the same material;" and, by the same Act (p. 45), a duty of 80 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "manufactures of bone, shell, horn, pearl, ivory or vegetable ivory."

By section 20 of the Act of March 2, 1861 (12 Stat. 190), a duty of 20 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "musical instruments of all kinds, and strings for musical instruments of whip gut or catgut, and all other strings of the same material;" and by section 23 of the same Act (p. 192), a duty of 80 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "manufactures of bone, shell, horn, ivory or vegetable ivory."

By section 6 of the Act of July 14, 1862 (12 Stat. 550), a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, in addition to then existing duties, was imposed on "musical instruments of all kinds, and strings for musical instruments of whip-gut or catgut, and all other strings of the same material;" and by section 13 of the same Act (p. 557), a duty of 5 per cent ad valorem, in addition to then existing duties, was imposed on "manufactures of bone, shell, horn, ivory or vegetable ivory."

By Schedule M of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes of 1874 (2d ed. p. 481), a duty of 80 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "strings: all strings of whip-gut or catgut, other than strings for musical instruments;" and by section 2505 of said Revised Statutes (2d ed. p. 484), "catgut strings, or gut-cord, for musical instruments," were made free of duty.

By section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 514), a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "strings: all strings of catgut, or any other like material, other than strings for musical instruments;" and, by section 2508 of the same enactment (22 Stat. 518), "catgut strings, or gut-cord, for musical instruments," were made free of duty.

It is thus seen that, by the Act of 1846, by the Act of 1861, and by the Act of 1862, provision was made for imposing a duty on parts of stringed musical instruments, by laying a duty on "strings for musical instruments of whip-gut or catgut," leaving other parts of musical instruments, imported in parts, to be dutiable under other provisions of law. So, in the Revised Statutes of 1874, and as enacted in 1883, while there is no specific duty on parts of musical instruments, as such parts, "catgut strings or gut-cord, for musical instruments," are made free of duty, leaving other parts of musical instruments to be dutiable under other provisions than that applicable to "musical instruments of all kinds."

This view of the legislation of Congress is fortified by the fact that in the Revised Statutes of 1874, and in the same as enacted in 1883, a duty is imposed on carriages and parts of carriages; on chronometers and parts of chronometers; on clocks and parts of clocks, and on watches and parts of watches. If Congress had intended, in either enactment of the Revised Statutes, to impose the same duty on parts of musical instruments which is imposed on musical instruments, it would have been easy to impose that duty on "musical instruments of all kinds, and parts of the same."

It is very clear to us that the fact that the articles in question were to be used exclusively for a musical instrument, and were made on purpose for such an instrument, does not make them dutiable as musical instruments.

The contention of the plaintiff is thought to be supported by the fact that, in the case of Foot v. Arthur, tried in the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York early in the year 1880, and unreported, it was held that a completed violin-bow was a musical instrument, and subject to duty as such under the Statute, and by the fact that the Treasury Department acquiesced in that decision, under the advice of the Attorney-General of the United States. It is sufficient to say that the pieces of ivory in question were not violin-bows; and that, whatever the true view may be as to violin-bows, the same considerations applicable to them do not apply to the articles in question here.

Attention is called by the plaintiff to the fact that the provision in the Revised Statutes, as enacted in 1883, in regard to manufactures of ivory, imposes the duty of 80 per cent ad valorem on all manufactures of ivory "not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act." But those words have no bearing on the present case, because the pieces of ivory in question are not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act of 1883.

The judgment is reversed, and the case remanded to the Circuit Court, with a direction to grant a new trial.

WILLIAM H. ROBERTSON, Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK, Plff. in Err.,

HENRY R. BRADBURY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 491-501.)

Act of March 3, 1883—duty on valuation, including transportation charges—appraisement—damaged goods—deduction for lost goods—voluntary payment.

1. The 7th section of the Act of March 3d, 1883, entitled "An Act to Reduce Internal Revenue Taxation, and for Other Purposes," went into effect at the time of the passage of the Act.
2. The levy of duties on a valuation which includes charges of transportation from the place of production to the place of shipment, and charges of shipment, since the passage of the Act of 1883, is contrary to law.

3. If the value of the goods expressed in the invoice included the charges of transportation and shipment, and the importer desired to have the invoice corrected, and he was told by the officers that he must enter the goods at the value expressed in the invoice and was compelled to do that in order to proceed at all, then he was not bound to ask for an appraisement under section 2926, Rev. Stat., in order to recover for the excess of duties paid.

4. If goods are damaged that is matter for appraisement under section 2927, Rev. Stat., but if any portion of them has been actually lost an allowance for the same must be made to the importer in estimating the duties.

5. Where the jury finds that the plaintiff was compelled to pay the illegal duties in order to get possession of his goods, the payment was not voluntary.

[No. 58.]

Argued Nov. 22, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover an excess of duties paid. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Attorney-General, for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Edward Hartley and Walter H. Coleman, for defendant in error:

The importer made his entry under duress as the only means of getting his goods.

Maxwell v. Griswold, 51 U. S. 10 How. 242 (18: 405); Hutton v. Schell, 6 Blatchf. 49, 50, 59; U. S. v. Lawson, 101 U. S. 169 (25: 862); Corkle v. Maxwell, 8 Blatchf. 418; U. S. v. Ellsworth, 101 U. S. 173 (25: 864).

Refusal to receive any other proof in aid of the original invoice relieved the importer from any obligation to produce it.

U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 200, 202 (27: 172, 174); Atwood v. Weems, 99 U. S. 186, 187 (25: 472); Tracey v. Irwin, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 549 (21: 786); Bennett v. Hunter, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 326 (19: 672); Craig v. Maxwell, 2 Blatchf. 548; Reynolds v. Maxwell, 2 Blatchf. 556, 557.

Duty is due only on the quantity landed.

Marriott v. Brune, 50 U. S. 9 How. 619 (18: 282); U. S. v. Southmayd, 50 U. S. 9 How. 637 (18: 290); Lawrence v. Canwell, 54 U. S. 18 How. 488 (14: 235); Balfour v. Sullivan, 17 Fed. Rep. 281, 8 Sawy. 648; Weaver v. Saltonstall, 38 Fed. Rep. 493.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit to recover alleged excess of duties exacted on certain cargoes of asphaltum in cakes, imported by Bradbury, the plaintiff below, from Antwerp, in May, 1883. Two questions are presented in the case for our determination: First, whether the 7th section of the Act of March 3d, 1883, entitled "An Act to Reduce Internal Revenue Taxation, and for Other Purposes," went into effect at the time of the passage of the Act, or not until the fourth of July following; secondly, if it did go into effect at the time of the passage of the Act, whether, under the circumstances of this case, the plaintiff below was entitled to the benefit of that section.

Prior to the passage of the Act referred to, under the 2907th and the 2908th sections of the Revised Statutes (which were taken from the 9th section of the Act of July 28th, 1866, 14 Stat. 830), the collector, in determining the "dutiable value" of merchandise, was required to add to the cost, or actual wholesale price or general market value, at the time of exportation, in the principal markets of the country whence the goods were imported, the cost of transportation, shipment and transshipment, with all the expenses included, from the place of growth, production or manufacture to the vessel in which shipment was made to the United States; also the value of the sack, box or covering, and commissions and brokerage; which additions were to be regarded as part of the actual value, and a penalty was imposed for not including them. These sections were repealed by the 7th section of the Act of March 3d, 1883. They are repealed by words in the present tense, thus: "That sections 2907 and 2908 . . . be, and the same are hereby, repealed, and hereafter none of the charges imposed by said sections, or any other provisions of existing law, shall be estimated in ascertaining the value of goods to be imported." We do not see how there can be any doubt that this repealing section went into immediate effect. The law itself went into immediate effect, although, it is true, various provisions of it contained in other sections were postponed, to take effect, some on the first of July and some on the first of May. But where such postponement was intended it was expressed, and only referred to the parts that were so postponed. It did not affect the section in question. And such was the understanding of the Treasury Department itself at the time. In a treasury circular of March 12th, 1883, addressed to the collectors of customs, the Secretary, referring to the Act in question, then just passed, said: "Various sections recite the date when each shall go into effect, and, so far as concerns these sections, those dates control. Section 7, however, names specifically no date when it is to go into operation, and the Department holds that it takes effect from and after the date of the passage of the Act." This contemporaneous construction is entitled to some weight in favor of importers. United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 253 [81: 389, 396]. At all events it was undoubtedly the correct construction.

The question then arises whether the plaintiff below, by anything that took place in the entry of the goods at the custom-house, or by any omission to do what the law required, precluded himself from being entitled to the benefit of this Statute.

Under the old law, the cost or value of the goods at the place of production was often merged for convenience with the costs of transportation to the place of shipment and the other charges, and the aggregate was called the price or value "free on board" of the vessel in which the goods were shipped to the United States. This price or value, free on board or f. o. b., in the absence of fraud, represented the "dutiable value," subject, of course, to correction by appraisement. When the vessel arrived, and the consignee presented the entry at the custom-house, it was accompanied with the invoice, showing this price or value. In the present case, although the goods were shipped in April, the consignors in Europe, not being aware of the passage of the Act of March 3d, 1883, repealing sections 2907 and 2908, made out the invoices in the usual way, stating the price of the goods as free on board at Antwerp, including therein the original cost of the goods at the mines, near Neufchatel, Switzerland, their cost of transportation from Neufchatel to Antwerp, and the other charges required by the repealed sections. This invoice was duly certified by the consul at Mannheim, Germany. Before the entry of the goods, a corrected supplementary invoice had arrived, in answer to a telegram, and was presented at the time of the entry; but it had no consular certificate—that being supplied afterwards. On the trial of the cause, the plaintiff introduced evidence tending to show these facts. He produced the entry, which described the importation as "12,000 cakes, 300,000 kilograms asphaltum, marks 15,750, $8,749," with the usual consignee's oath that the invoice and bill of lading produced with the entry were the true and only ones received, and that the invoice exhibited the actual cost or fair market value at Neufchatel of the goods and all charges thereon. The invoice, certified by the consul, on which the entry was based, was also produced in evidence, representing the goods as "a quantity of asphaltum, 300,000 kilograms, at 52.50 marks per 1000 kilograms, 15,750 marks, free on board—Antwerp." There was attached to this invoice on making the entry, and when produced in evidence, the uncertified supplementary invoice before referred to, which represented the goods as "a quantity of asphaltum, 300,000 kilograms; value at the mines, 84.50 marks per 1000 kilos. M 10,350. Freight and charge from the mines to Antwerp, free on board, at 18 marks per 1000 kilos, 5,400. Free on board, Antwerp, marks 15,750."

Attached to the consular invoice was the oath of the owner of the goods, which stated, among other things, that said invoice contained the actual cost and quantity thereof and of all charges thereon. The certificate of the consul attached to said invoice was dated 20th of April, 1883, and certified, among other things, that the invoice, "in which are mentioned and described certain asphaltum, amounting with the charges thereon to the gross sum of marks 15,750, was produced to him by the owner," and that the actual market value of the goods (except as corrected by him) was correct and true.

The plaintiff further offered evidence to show that, being charged with duties on the entire amount of 15,750 marks, he protested against the assessment on the ground that the defendant "assessed duty upon the cost of transportation, shipment and transshipment, with all expenses included, from the place of production and manufacture to the vessel in which the shipment was made to the United States, contrary to section 7 of the Act of March 3, 1883," claiming "that said charges were not subject of appraisement or duty;" and on a second ground that the weigher's return showed a less quantity than that on which duty was charged; and that he paid the excess of duties exacted under compulsion, solely for the purpose of obtaining the goods.

An appeal was taken to the Secretary of the Treasury, who affirmed the decision of the Collector, on the ground that the deduction for charges had not been made in the entry, and the action was brought within proper time thereafter.

A. W. Patterson, the plaintiff's custom-house broker, testified that he presented the two invoices above named at the custom-house on the entry of the goods; that he made the entry for the plaintiff; that he asked to make the entry on both the consular and supplemental invoices, the latter as explanatory of the former; that the custom-house officers refused to allow this to be done; that he asked permission to use the supplemental invoice in connection with the other invoice as explanatory, and enter in the net value, charges off, which was refused; that he then entered the goods according to the consular invoice; that the supplemental invoice had come in answer to a telegram to the Neufchatel Asphaltum Company, to furnish a corrected invoice showing what the charges were; that subsequently to the entry of the goods a copy of the supplemental invoice was received, properly certified by the consul. (This copy was admitted in evidence.) The weigher's certificate was also produced, showing a deficiency of 2,740 pounds of asphaltum in the cargo of the Marshall, and over 9,000 pounds in that of the Edith, for which no refund of duty had been made. The witness Patterson further testified as to the meaning of the expression "free on board," as before stated.

Potter, an examiner in the appraisers' department, testified that he passed the entry in question, and indorsed it "correct," which merely meant that the entry was sufficient to cover the market value of the goods. He further testified that he found from memory, and by comparison with other goods in the same markets, that the market value of these goods was 84 marks 50 pfennigs, or 85 marks at the mines, at the place of production. Being asked if he had passed, as a rule, invoices of asphaltum from Mannheim, Germany, for a considerable period before and after that time at the same rate of 84.50, he said that would be impossible to say without the papers, but he presumed that that was about the market value. On cross-examination he stated that he had no recollection as to what he found the market value of this importation to be independent of what was written upon the entry and invoice. To the question "Have you any recollection at all of what you did, in fact, find the market value in the principal foreign ports to be?" his answer was "Yes; I have that recollection, because it is so stated on the invoice (supplemental), that 84 marks 50 pfennigs per thousand kilograms was about the usual price, and it seems to have been stated there on the invoice." To the further question, "Then, as I understand, the effect of your testimony is that from looking at the supplemental invoice you form the impression that the value at that time at the mines was 84 marks and 50 pfennigs per thousand kilograms?" his answer was "Yes, sir."

Esterbrook, chief liquidating clerk of the custom-house, testified that, according to the course of business in the custom-house, under the law, the entered value is the value declared upon the entry under oath, and that the practice is, that the Collector shall not levy duty on less than the entered value, though the amount in the invoice is less. Another clerk testified to the same effect.

Thereupon, the evidence being closed, the counsel for the government moved that the jury be directed to find for the defendant upon the following grounds: 1, that the evidence does not show the duty exacted on any amount in excess of the invoice value; 2, nor in excess of the entered value; 3, nor does it make out a case of recovery for the plaintiff. The court having denied this motion, the counsel then made a request to charge fourteen separate propositions, the substance of which was that under section 2900 of the Revised Statutes, which declares that "the duty shall not, however, be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value," the Collector was bound to assess the duty on the amount stated in the entry and in the invoice certified by the consul, and could not take notice of the uncertified invoice; and that if the plaintiff desired to have the invoice corrected, his remedy was to demand an appraisement under section 2926 of the Revised Statutes, which provides that merchandise of which incomplete entry has been made, or an entry without specification of particulars, either for want of the original invoice or for any other cause, or which has received damage during the voyage, shall be conveyed to a warehouse and there remain until the particulars, cost or value, as the case may require, shall have been ascertained, either by the exhibition of the original invoice, or by appraisement, at the option of the owner, importer or consignee, and until the duties shall have been paid or secured to be paid.

The court declined to adopt the propositions of the counsel, but charged the jury that as the invoice certified by the consul purported to show the value of the goods "free on board at Antwerp," if the jury were satisfied by the evidence that this meant that the value so expressed included charges, the charges of transportation and placing on board ship,—charges from the markets of the country to the ship,—then it was not an invoice of the "dutiable value," but was an incomplete invoice; that if this was its character, the importer or consignee had a right to claim that it was incomplete, and to ask that the goods be appraised, or that he might amend his invoice. The charge then proceeded as follows: "You have heard Mr. Patterson testify as to what occurred when he presented this invoice to the entry clerk. . . . Now, if he was given to understand when he presented that invoice there and stated that he wanted to get the charges out in some way, and presented this additional paper—you heard his testimony about what he did—if he was given to understand that he must enter those goods at the value expressed,—that is, the value including the charges, the value expressed in the invoices, and in no other way, and that they could not get along in any other way than that,—then he was not bound to ask for an appraisement. If they gave him to understand that that was the only thing he could do, if they met him right there when he wanted to put in this additional invoice, and said the only thing you can do is to enter these goods at this value, and the importer was compelled to do it in order to proceed at all, and he yielded to that, then he was not bound to say anything about an appraisal. But if they did not do that, if they merely refused that and gave him a chance to ask for an appraisal if he wanted to, and he did not ask for it, he mistook his remedy, and the plaintiff cannot recover, and it was his fault that he did not enter them right. But if they cut him right off on that subject and said he must enter at this larger value, then it was their fault, and the plaintiff can recover if duties on charges were collected."

The court further charged that, if the examiner who appraised the goods appraised their value in the principal markets of the country whence they came, in the shape they were (that is, in cakes), at 34 marks 50 pfennigs, that was their dutiable value, and the Collector exacted a duty in excess for charges, whether he called them charges or not, and the plaintiff should recover what he paid for this duty on charges, because the Law of 1888 took out charges as a part of the dutiable value; but that, if this was not the value that the appraiser took, when he says he did appraise the goods, and the jury cannot tell what it was, then they cannot tell what duty was paid on charges, and the plaintiff has not made out his case.

As to the deficiency in weight, the counsel for the government contended, and asked the court to charge, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover anything in respect to the difference between the weights stated in the invoices and entries and the weights stated in the official weigher's returns. The court declined so to charge, and instructed the jury that if the deficiency arose from the loss of goods on the passage, a proportionate reduction should be made; but not if it arose from mere shrinkage, and if all the goods that were sent arrived.

The counsel for the government excepted to each part of the charge as given, and to each refusal to charge as requested.

We do not think that the court below committed any error in its instructions or in its refusals.

First. In regard to the construction and effect of the consular invoice which expressed the value of the goods "free on board," it was perfectly proper and right to instruct the jury that if they were satisfied from the evidence that this form of valuation was understood to include charges of transportation from the place of production to the place of shipment, and other charges of shipment and transshipment, then the levy of duties on such valuation, since the passage of the Act of 1888, was contrary to law; and that the plaintiff could recover back the duties levied on the amount of such charges, provided he took the proper course to avail himself of the error. This is so evident that it needs no discussion to make it plainer.

Secondly. As to the course which the plaintiff did pursue, we see no error in the position taken by the court, that, although the Statute prescribed a particular method to be followed under section 2026 of the Revised Statutes, in case of an incomplete entry of goods, or an entry without the specification of particulars (namely, to convey the goods to a warehouse, there to remain until the particulars, cost or value should be ascertained either by the exhibition of the original invoice, or by appraisal), yet if, when the importer or consignee pointed out the imperfection, and desired to correct it, or have it corrected, he was met by a declaration of the officers that he must enter the goods at the value expressed in the invoice and in no other way, and was given to understand that that was the only thing he could do, and he was compelled to do that in order to proceed at all, then he was not bound to ask for an appraisal under the Statute. The case was prejudged against him. The theory of the custom-house officers evidently was that the valuation of the goods in the entry and invoice was binding on the importer, although in that valuation he had inadvertently included charges for transportation and other charges exempted from duty by the Act of 1888; and that it was his own fault for having so included such charges, and that he was estopped from disputing the valuation thus made and sworn to, even though qualified by the words "free on board," which could have no effect to alter the valuation. It is not stated in these words, but that was the tendency of the evidence; and we think that the jury were properly instructed on the subject.

Thirdly. As to the deficiency in the weight of the goods, as the value was measured by the weight, both in the invoice and by the appraiser—namely, so much per 1,000 kilograms,—we think the court was right in telling the jury that any deficiency arising from loss of goods, and not from mere shrinkage, was a proper subject of recovery. If goods are damaged or affected intrinsically, that is a matter for examination and appraisal under section 2027, Revised Statutes; but if any portion of them has never come to hand but has been actually lost, the case would seem to come within the spirit of section 2021, which says that "if, in the opening of any package, a deficiency of any article shall be found on examination by the appraisers, the same shall be certified to the collector in the invoice, and an allowance for the same be made in estimating the duties." The appraiser's certificate in the present case related merely to pro rata value, and not to quantity—that was ascertained and certified by the weigher. If only half of the cargo was found on board the ship, it could hardly be contended that the importer would be bound by his entry and invoice to pay duty on the entire cargo shipped at Antwerp.

As to the point that the payment of the duties was voluntary on the part of the plaintiff, it is obvious to remark, that the case as already considered involved this very question. The verdict of the jury in favor of the plaintiff, under the instructions given, was virtually a finding of the fact that the plaintiff was compelled to pay the illegal duties in order to get possession of his goods. The counsel for the government says that he ought to have asked for a reappraisal. The question whether he was bound to take that course or not was involved in the inquiry submitted to the jury under the second head of instructions.

We see no error in the record and the judgment is affirmed.

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Pff. in Err.,

v.

THOMAS SEAY, Governor, ET AL.

(See S. C. The W. U. Tel. Co. v. Alabama Board of Assessment, Reporter's ed. 472-478.)

Telegraph companies—exemption from taxation on interstate messages—interstate commerce—jurisdiction.

1. Telegraph companies which have accepted the provisions of the Act of Congress of July 24, 1866, sections 5263 to 5268, Rev. Stat. U. S., cannot be taxed by a State for any messages, or receipts arising from messages, from points within the State to points without, or from points without the State to points within, but such taxes may be levied upon all messages carried and delivered exclusively within the State.
2. Messages of the former class are elements of commerce between the States and not subject to legislative control of the States, while the latter class are elements of internal commerce solely within the limits and jurisdiction of the State, and therefore subject to its taxing power.
3. Where a state court decided that a state law taxing telegraph companies authorized and imposed a tax upon receipts derived by them from messages from or to other States, and sustained a state tax thereon under such law, this court has jurisdiction to review such decision.

[No. 115.]

Submitted Nov. 15, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a judgment affirming a judgment of a court of that State quashing a writ of certiorari to correct an assessment for taxes on the gross receipts of a Telegraph Company. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Reported below, 80 Ala. 278.

Messrs. Gaylord B. Clark and Thos. B. Jones for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John T. Morgan for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes before us on a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama.

The question on which the jurisdiction of this court depends has been decided in this court so frequently of late years, several of the decisions having been made since the judgment of the Supreme Court of Alabama was delivered, that but little remains to be said in the present case except to show that it comes within the principles of the cases referred to.

That principle is, in regard to telegraph companies which have accepted the provisions of the Act of Congress of July 24, 1866, sections 5263 to 5268 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, that they shall not be taxed by the authorities of a State for any messages, or receipts arising from messages, from points within the State to points without or from points without the State to points within, but that such taxes may be levied upon all messages carried and delivered exclusively within the State. The foundation of this principle is that messages of the former class are elements of commerce between the States and not subject to legislative control of the States, while the latter class are elements of internal commerce solely within the limits and jurisdiction of the State, and therefore subject to its taxing power. The following cases in this court have fully developed and established this proposition: Pensacola Tel. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. 96 U. S. 1 [24: 708]; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460 [26: 1067]; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 530 [31: 790]; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co. 127 U. S. 411 [32: 229]; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640 [32: 811]; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 290 [30: 888]; Philadelphia and Southern Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 826 [30: 1200].

The plaintiff in error instituted its proceeding in the state court by a writ of certiorari, directed to E. A. O'Neal, Governor; C. C. Langdon, Secretary of State; M. C. Burke, Auditor, and Frederick H. Smith, Treasurer, composing the State Board of Assessment, for the purpose of correcting the error which they had made in an assessment for taxation of the gross receipts of the Company. This Board was invested by the law of Alabama with authority to assess for taxation the items of property of railroad companies returned to the auditor of the State (section 13 of the Act approved February 17, 1885), and by section 15 of the same Act a similar authority is conferred upon it in reference to telegraph companies whose lines, or any part thereof, are within the State. By an Act to levy taxes for the use of the State and the counties thereof, approved December 12, 1884, it is declared by subdivision 6, section 1, that a tax shall be levied "on the gross amount of the receipts by any and every telegraph, telephone, electric light and express company, derived from the business done by it in this State, at the rate of two dollars on the hundred dollars." The Telegraph Company, in making its report of gross receipts to this Board of Assessment, included only those received from business transacted wholly within the State of Alabama. The Board were not willing to accept this report, and required the Company to make report of its receipts from all messages, whether carried wholly within or partly without the State, and, against the remonstrances of the Company, decided that this sum should be the amount on which the tax of two per cent should be paid. It was to correct the supposed error of this assessment that the writ of certiorari was issued by the Circuit Court of Montgomery County to the Governor and others constituting that Board of Assessment. That court held the assessment valid, and made an order quashing the writ of certiorari and dismissing the proceeding. On appeal to the Supreme Court of the State this decision was affirmed, and the case is now before us, on a writ of error, to review that judgment of affirmance. In the opinion of the Supreme Court of Alabama, which is found in the record, the point mainly discussed is the construction of the Tax Law, in regard to the meaning of the words "gross receipts derived from business done in this State," and also whether, "if that means all the receipts of the Company for business having connection with lines within the State, it is consistent with the Constitution of Alabama." Of these questions this court has no jurisdiction; but, having decided that the Statute, by fair interpretation, included all receipts derived from business done in the State, and actually received there, though the message may have been delivered at, or may have been sent for delivery from, some office out of the jurisdiction of the State, the court proceeds: "Though thus construed, the Statute is not an unauthorized interference with interstate commerce. The question is fully and ably considered and discussed in the following cases: Western Union Tel. Co. v. Richmond, 26 Gratt. 1; Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 55 Tex. 814; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Mayer, 28 Ohio St. 531, and Port of Mobile v. Leloup, 76 Ala. 401; and is expressly decided in respect to a tax on the gross receipts of railroad companies, they consisting in part of freights received for transportation of merchandise from the State to another State, or into the State from another, in State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 284 [21: 164], and in Osborne v. Mobile, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 479 [21: 470]."

It will be observed that the authorities relied on by the Supreme Court of Alabama to sustain its judgment in this case are mostly decisions of state courts. The case of the Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 55 Tex. 814, and the case of Port of Mobile v. Leloup, 76 Alabama, 401, have been reversed by the decisions of this court in the same cases on writ of error to the state courts. Of the cases already referred to as establishing the proposition which we have stated in the early part of this opinion, those of the Pensacola Tel. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. 96 U. S. 1 [24: 708]; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460 [26: 1067]; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts, 125 U. S. 580 [31: 790]; Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co. 127 U. S. 411 [32: 229], and Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640 [32: 811], are all cases in regard to taxes upon telegraph companies by state authorities, and all of them hold that no tax can be imposed upon messages, or upon the receipts derived from messages, where the communication is carried either into the State from without, or from within the State to another State.

In the earliest of these cases, Pensacola Tel. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., the Statute of Florida had attempted to confer upon a corporation of its own State, the Pensacola Telegraph Company, an exclusive right of doing the telegraph business within that State. This court held, affirming the judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States for that District, that this Statute was a regulation of commerce among the States forbidden by the Constitution of the United States to the State of Florida. In the next case, that of the Telegraph Co. v. Texas, in which that State had imposed a tax of one cent for every full-rate message sent, and one half cent for every message less than full rate, on the business of the Western Union Telegraph Company, many of the messages were by the officers of the government on public business, and a large portion of them were to places outside of the State. The company contested the constitutionality of this law, and the case came to this court, where it was said that a telegraph company occupies the same relation to commerce, as a carrier of messages, that a railroad does as a carrier of goods. Both companies are carriers, and their business is commerce itself. The court then went on to consider the authorities, and said further that it followed that the judgment under review, so far as it included the messages sent out of the State or for the government on public business, was erroneous. The rule that the regulation of commerce which is confined exclusively within the jurisdiction and territory of the State, and does not affect other nations or States,—that is to say, the purely internal commerce of the State, belongs exclusively to the State,—was said to be as well settled as that the regulation of commerce which does affect other nations or States or Indian tribes belongs to Congress. The judgment of the Supreme Court of Texas was therefore reversed.

The case of Western Union Tel. Co. v. Massachusetts was a question growing out of the taxation of the telegraph company by the State of Massachusetts, and the same principle we have already considered was asserted in that case, after a general review of the authorities upon the subject.

In Ratterman v. Western Union Tel. Co. the same question arose on a writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio, where, after a full review of the whole subject, this court said that there was really no question, under the decisions of this court in regard to the proposition, that so far as a tax was levied upon receipts properly appurtenant to interstate commerce, it was void; and that so far as it was only upon commerce wholly within the State, it was valid. The commerce here mentioned was telegraph business, and the receipts were receipts for telegraph messages. This case arose upon a certificate of division of the judges who presided at the trial, and in remanding the case the court said: "We answer the question in regard to which the judges of the circuit court divided in opinion, by saying that a single tax, assessed under the Revised Statutes of Ohio, upon the receipts of a telegraph company which were derived partly from interstate commerce and partly from commerce within the State, but which were returned and assessed in gross, and without separation or apportionment, is not wholly invalid, but is invalid only in proportion to the extent that such receipts were derived from interstate commerce;" and, concurring with the circuit judge in his action enjoining the collection of the taxes on that portion of the receipts derived from interstate commerce, and permitting the treasurer to collect the other tax upon property of the company and upon receipts derived from commerce entirely within the limits of the State, the decree was affirmed.

In the subsequent case, Leloup v. Port of Mobile, found in the same volume, the question arose upon a conviction under the Statute of Alabama on an indictment for failing to take out a license tax by the telegraph company, imposed by the City of Mobile on all telegraph companies. Edward Leloup, the agent of the company, was convicted under this proceeding, his conviction affirmed by the Supreme Court of Alabama, and its judgment brought to this court on writ of error. This court held, that, his company having complied with the Act of Congress of July 24, 1866, the State could not require it to take out a license for the transaction of business in the city, and that a general license tax on the telegraph company affected its entire business, interstate as well as domestic and internal, and was unconstitutional.

We think these cases are so directly in point on the questions arising in the present case that they must control; and as the record of the case presents the means by which the receipts arising from commerce wholly within the State, and from that which, under these definitions, may be called interstate commerce, can be separated, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Alabama is reversed, and the case remanded to it, with directions for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

MEHITABLE B. GREENE ET AL., Appts.,
v.

JAMES TAYLOR ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 415-444.)

Statute of Limitations—the two years' Statute which applies to assignee in bankruptcy, applies to his grantee—beginning to run against assignee, continues to run against grantee—new period of limitation—redemption from foreclosure sale—waiver of right.

1. A conveyance by the assignee in bankruptcy cannot prevent the operation of the bar of the Statute against the grantee, when it has already run against the assignee, or bring into action a new period of limitation dating from the time of the conveyance.
2. Nor can it interrupt the running of the Statute against the claim or right, when it has once commenced to run against the assignee.
3. The purchaser takes the right cum onere, subject to the continuance of the running of the Statute, and subject to the fact that a part of the two years has already run as against the claim or right, while it was in the hands of the assignee, and to the consequence that when sufficient additional time shall have run against it in the hands of the purchaser to make up the entire two years, the claim or right will be wholly barred.
4. No initiation of a new period of limitation, under any statute, begins to run in favor of the purchaser at the time of his purchase, whether the two years wholly elapsed, or only a part thereof elapsed, while the claim was owned by the assignee.
5. Where the Statute of Limitations has begun to run against the right of an assignee in bankruptcy to redeem from a foreclosure sale and conveyance of real property of the bankrupt, the Statute continues to run against a subsequent grantee of the same property by conveyance from the assignee.
6. The right of a creditor to redeem such property by virtue of a judgment is waived by his procuring the property to be sold by the assignee in bankruptcy and its proceeds to be applied on the judgment.

[No. 128.]

Argued Nov. 20, 21, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decree that plaintiffs may redeem lands from a foreclosure sale and conveyance on payment of the amount found due the defendants on their lien on the land, and that, on such payment being made, defendants convey the land to plaintiffs by quitclaim deed. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss the suit.

The facts are stated in the opinion. Opinions below, 21 Fed. Rep. 209, 27 Fed. Rep. 537.

Messrs. George L. Paddock and John Lowell, for appellants:

The two years' limitation set up in the answers, and insisted upon in the assignments of error, applies in favor of appellants,—and the bill should be dismissed.

Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5057; Bankrupt Act of March 2, 1867, § 2; Gifford v. Helms, 98 U. S. 248 (25: 57); Jenkins v. Bank, 106 U. S. 571 (27: 304); Wiener v. Brown, 122 U. S. 219 (30: 1207); Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528 (29: 467).

The ignorance of the assignee is immaterial as a reply to the bar.

Norton v. De la Villebeauve, 1 Woods, 163; McIver v. Ragan, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 25 (4: 175); Phelps v. Elliott, 29 Fed. Rep. 53.

Messrs. Charles E. Pope and Charles B. McCoy, for appellees:

This case is not within the terms of the Statute of Limitations. The limitation clause of the Bankrupt Act, by its terms, only applies to contests between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an interest adverse to such assignee.

Bailey v. Glover, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 846 (22: 638); Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 352 (29: 414); Bariles v. Gibson, 17 Fed. Rep. 298.

Where the interest adverse to that of the assignee has been acquired through fraud and the fraud has been concealed, the two years' Statute of Limitations does not commence to run until the discovery of the fraud.

Upton v. McLaughlin, 105 U. S. 640 (26: 1197); Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 190 (28: 397); Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528 (29: 467); Retzer v. Wood, 109 U. S. 187 (27: 901); Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505 (32: 1005).

Appellees have a right to redeem from this trustee's sale by reason of their title acquired through sale of this property, under their judgment recovered against Robertson before the bankruptcy and before the trustee's sale.

Shirley v. Watts, 3 Atk. 200; King v. Marissal, 3 Atk. 192; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1023; Dunlap v. Wilson, 83 Ill. 517; Sumner v. Waugh, 56 Ill. 539; Beach v. Shaw, 57 Ill. 19; Freedman's Saving & Trust Co. v. Earle, 110 U. S. 710 (28: 301).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 1st of April, 1871, Nathan S. Grow, of Chicago, Illinois, executed a trust deed to Benjamin E. Gallup, of the same place, to secure the payment of a promissory note for $35,000, payable in five years from that date, with interest at the rate of 9 per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on October 1 and April 1, as evidenced by 10 interest coupons, bearing the same date, for $1,575 each. The note was payable to the order of Grow, and was indorsed by him payable to David R. Greene or order. The trust deed stated that the $35,000 was a loan to Grow made by the legal holder of the note. Greene was the person who loaned the money. He resided in New Bedford, Massachusetts. The real estate covered by that trust deed was at the northeast corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets, in Chicago, being 73 feet on West Madison Street, in front, 116 feet deep, on Sheldon Street, 73 feet in the rear, on a line parallel with West Madison Street and on a sixteen-foot alley, running east and west, and 116 feet on the east line, parallel with Sheldon Street. It was described as having on it three four-story brick stores with stone fronts, fronting on West Madison Street; and it was stated that a block of two-story-and-basement brick dwelling-houses was about to be erected on the property. The front piece was 60 feet deep; then came a twelve-foot court; and the rear part was 44 feet deep. The entire property came afterwards to be known as "the Jefferson-Park Hotel property." This trust deed was recorded April 1, 1871.

Grow, on the 9th of February, 1876, conveyed the entire property to William Scott Robertson, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000, by a warranty deed, which was recorded February 18, 1876. The loan to Grow matured on the 1st of April, 1876, and in the spring of 1877 negotiations were had between Robertson and Greene for a renewal of the loan. These negotiations were successful, and Robertson executed a trust deed dated April 2, 1877 (the 1st of April, 1877, being Sunday), covering the same property, to Francis B. Peabody, of Chicago, to secure the payment of a promissory note for $35,000, which, the trust deed stated, was for a loan of that sum, made on the day of the date of the trust deed, by the legal holder of the note to Robertson, the note being payable three years after date, with interest at the rate of 7½ per cent per annum, payable half-yearly on the 2d of October and 2d of April, with six interest coupons for $1,812.50 each. The name of David R. Greene was not mentioned in the trust deed or in the promissory note. The six interest coupons were each of them signed by Robertson and made payable to his order; and each was indorsed by him payable to the order of David R. Greene. The note was payable to the order of Robertson and was indorsed by him payable to David R. Greene or order. It stated that it was expressly agreed that if default should be made in the payment of any installment of interest when it should become due, and such default should continue for 30 days thereafter, the principal sum should, at the election of the legal holder of the note, at once become due and payable, such election to be made at any time after the expiration of said 30 days, without notice; and this provision of the note was recited in the trust deed. It was provided in the trust deed that, if default should be made in the payment of the principal sum secured by the note, whether it should have become due by election or by the regular maturity of the note, or if Robertson should fail to perform its agreements, it should be lawful for the trustee, on application of the legal holder of the note, with or without a previous entry on the premises, to sell and dispose of them and all right, title, benefit and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, therein, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, having first given notice of the time and place of such sale (such sale to be made at some place in Cook County, Illinois), by publication once in each week for four successive weeks, the first publication to be at least 30 days before the day of sale, in some newspaper published in Cook County authorized by law to publish legal notices, personal notice to Robertson, his heirs or assigns, or any person claiming by, through or under him, of such sale, being expressly waived, and in the name of the trustee to execute and deliver to the purchaser at the sale a deed of conveyance of the premises in fee simple; and that all the recitals that might be contained in such deed, setting forth the fact of such default, due notice, advertisement and sale, and any and all such other facts and statements as might be proper to evidence the legality of such sale and conveyance, should be considered and taken, on all occasions, and as between all persons, to be prima facie evidence of the truth of all the facts and matters set forth in such recitals, and such deed should be effectual to pass the title, and all the right and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, in and to the premises sold. This trust deed was acknowledged by Robertson on the 28d of July, 1877, and was recorded on the same day.

On the 30th of July, 1877, James Taylor and John Bruce recovered a judgment against Robertson in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, for $21,666.66 damages and $120.05 costs. Robertson took steps toward bringing a writ of error to review that judgment, and for that purpose procured one Hugh Templeton to sign a bond as surety, and, to indemnify Templeton therefor, executed to him a bond and a mortgage covering the real estate aforesaid, subject to the incumbrance of the trust deed to Peabody. This mortgage was acknowledged August 17, 1877, and recorded August 22, 1877. As the writ of error was never perfected, Templeton did not become liable, and the mortgage to him was no incumbrance on the premises.

Robertson, on the 1st of September, 1877, leased to John McAllister the second, third and fourth stories of the three stores fronting on West Madison Street, and known as the Jefferson-Park Hotel, for two years, at a rent of $300 a month. This rent was afterwards reduced to $30 a month from January 1, 1878.

On the 15th of October, 1877, Taylor and Bruce issued to the marshal an execution on their judgment. This was returned wholly unsatisfied on the 12th of January, 1878; and, on the 24th of January, 1878, they, being aliens, filed a bill in equity, in the form of a creditor's bill, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, against Robertson, Templeton, McAllister, Gallup and Peabody. The bill was founded on their judgment and the issuing of their execution and its return unsatisfied. It set forth that Robertson was interested in a large quantity of real estate, including the before-mentioned property, 73 feet by 116 feet, at the corner of West Madison Street and Sheldon Street, which, it stated, brought in a large rental monthly. It contained the allegations usual in creditors' bills, and alleged that Robertson had property which ought to be applied to the payment of the plaintiffs' judgment, and prayed that he might discover on oath what assignments or transfers he had made of his property. It averred that the defendants other than Robertson held the title to real estate belonging to Robertson, for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs, and prayed for a discovery on oath by such defendants of all such real estate. It did not mention the trust deed to Gallup, or the trust deed to Peabody, or the mortgage to Templeton, or the lease to McAllister.

The plaintiffs, on the 29th of January, 1878, issued to the marshal a second execution on their judgment, which, on the 15th of February, 1878, was levied on real estate of Robertson, not including the premises at the corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets.

On the 2d of March, 1878, the five defendants to the bill filed a general demurrer to it, for want of equity. On the 25th of March, 1878, the court entered an order sustaining the demurrer.

Robertson failed to pay to Greene any of his interest due October 2, 1877, and April 2, 1878, being two installments amounting to $2,625, and was pressed for payment by Greene, through Peabody, in April and May, 1878. This pressure continued through the summer of 1878, and Greene complained directly to Robertson that the latter was receiving the rents of the property and paying him no interest. This pressure took the shape of a request by Greene to Robertson that the latter should turn over to the former the rents of the property, and a statement that otherwise the trust deed would be foreclosed.

Greene, on the 27th of August, 1878, notified Peabody in writing that, by reason of the default, continued for more than 80 days, in the payment of the installments of interest due October 2, 1877, and April 2, 1878, on the note secured by the trust deed of April 2, 1877, Greene had elected to make the principal note at once due and payable; and that, default having been made in its payment, he requested Peabody to proceed at once, under the powers contained in the trust deed, to advertise and sell the premises.

Robertson, on the 29th of August, 1878, notified Peabody and Greene that he intended to file a petition in bankruptcy, and that he proposed to go to Scotland (which was his native country) to see what arrangement could be made of his affairs, and to turn over to Greene, from the 1st of September, 1878, the rents of the property monthly.

On the 30th of August, 1878, Robertson signed a paper, addressed and delivered to Peabody as trustee, which stated that the note secured by the deed of trust was held by Greene; that Peabody had that day demanded of Robertson the possession of the premises covered by the deed of trust, on account of a breach of the covenants contained therein; that Robertson consented to Peabody's taking possession of the premises; that he thereby delivered such possession to Peabody, and requested the tenants of the premises severally to attorn to Peabody; and that it was understood that Peabody should respect the leases granted by Robertson and his reservation of certain rooms mentioned in the lease to McAllister. On this paper Peabody, as trustee, wrote an order addressed to Edmund A. Cummings, directing him, for Peabody and as his agent, to receive from Robertson possession of the premises and the attornment of the tenants. Six of the tenants, including McAllister, on the same day signed a paper by which they recognized the transfer of the possession of the premises from Robertson to Peabody as trustee, and respectively attorned to Peabody as to the premises occupied by them.

Robertson, on the 31st of August, 1878, filed in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, with schedules. In the schedule of "Bankrupt creditors holding securities," there appeared, under the heading "Names of Creditors," "David R. Greene;" under the heading "Residence and Occupation," "New Bedford, Mass.;" under the heading "When and Where Contracted," "April 2, 1877, at Chicago, Ill.;" under the heading, "Value of Securities," "Unknown;" under the heading, "Amount of Debt," "$35,000 and interest at 7½ per cent, since April 2, 1877;" and under the heading, "Particulars," "Note for money borrowed to take up old mortgage upon property when bought, and secured by trust deed to F. B. Peabody upon lot 26 (except the east 2 feet thereof) and lots 27 and 28, all in block 6, in McNeill's subdivision, in Wright's Addition to Chicago, with improvements and appurtenances; property known as 487 and 489 and 491 West Madison Street, Chicago, and 53 and 54 Sheldon Street;" being the premises in question.

Peabody, on the 2d of September, 1878, notified Greene that he would forthwith proceed to advertise the foreclosure sale. On the same day, Peabody, as successor in trust to Gallup under the trust deed of April 1, 1871, made to Gallup by Grow, executed and acknowledged a paper releasing to Grow all the interest acquired under the trust deed, the paper stating that the indebtedness secured by that deed had been canceled.

On the 8d of September, 1878, Peabody, as trustee, prepared a notice of sale, dated that day, setting forth the facts of the date and record of the trust deed of April 2, 1877; the contents of the note secured by it; the fact that its legal holder, as thereby authorized, had elected to make the principal sum therein mentioned, and the same had thereby become, at once due and payable, by reason of the default, continued for more than 80 days, in the payment of the installments of interest due thereon October 2, 1877, and April 2, 1878, respectively; that there was due on the note the principal sum of $35,000, with interest thereon at the rate of 7½ per cent per annum from April 2, 1878, and the two defaulted installments of interest, of $1,312.50 each, with interest on each at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, from the dates when they respectively became due; that default had been made in the payment thereof; that, on the demand of the legal holder of the note, the trustee, on October 7, 1878, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Monroe Streets, in Chicago, at the door of No. 174 Dearborn Street, would sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, for the uses and purposes specified in the trust deed, the premises described therein (repeating the description contained in the trust deed), together with all the right, title, benefit and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, therein; and that the records of the recorder's office showed that Templeton had acquired some title or interest in the premises, as assignee of Robertson, subject to the trust deed. This notice was published in the "Chicago Journal," a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in Chicago, four times, being one time a week for four successive weeks, the date of the first paper containing the same being September 4, 1878, having been published and issued on that day, and the date of the last paper containing the same being September 28, 1878, having been published and issued on that day.

Robertson, on the 7th of September, 1878, left Chicago for Scotland; and on the same day he was adjudicated a bankrupt. He has never since been in Chicago.

On the 5th of October, 1878, Taylor and Bruce, as creditors of Robertson, filed a petition in the district court, in bankruptcy, sworn to by Charles B. McCoy, their agent at Chicago, setting forth their judgment, and stating that no assignee of the estate of Robertson had yet been chosen; that Robertson, in his inventory of assets, had scheduled a large amount of property which required the immediate personal attention of some person properly authorized to care therefor and preserve the same for the benefit of the estate, and prevent waste, injury and loss thereof; that among the assets so scheduled, with other real estate, was "the property known as the Jefferson-Park Hotel, on West Madison Street, Chicago." The petition prayed that a provisional assignee be appointed for the estate of Robertson, with the usual powers in such cases, to act in the premises until the regular assignee should be chosen. On the same day, Bradford Hancock was appointed by the district court provisional assignee of the estate of Robertson, "with full power and authority to take possession of, manage and control the same, and to collect the rents due said estate."

The sale under the trust deed took place on the 7th of October, 1878, at the hour and place named in the published notice. Greene became the purchaser, and Peabody, as trustee, on the same day executed and acknowledged a deed to him, which was recorded October 10, 1878. That deed recited the making of the note and its contents, including the provision for election by the legal holder of the note as to the becoming due of the entire principal; the making and recording of the trust deed; the power of sale given by it to the trustee, and the provisions in it for notice and for giving a deed to the purchaser. It also recited the default in the payment of the two installments of interest; the election by the legal holder of the note that the principal sum should at once become due and payable; the amount that was due for principal and interest; that the legal holder had applied to the trustee to advertise and sell the premises; that he had advertised them, and all right, title, benefit and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, therein, for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, on the day and at the place before mentioned; the notice he had given; that the contents of the notice were in conformity with the provisions of the trust deed and of the statute; that, in pursuance of said notice, and at the time and place of sale therein mentioned, he had offered the premises described in the trust deed, and all right, title and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, therein, for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash; that Greene was such highest bidder, and bid therefor $30,000, which was the highest bid; and that the same were accordingly struck off and sold to Greene at that price. The deed then conveyed to Greene, his heirs and assigns, forever, the premises described in the trust deed, by the description therein contained, together with all the right, title, benefit and equity of redemption of Robertson, his heirs and assigns, therein, to have and to hold the same, with the appurtenances, to Greene, his heirs and assigns, forever. It further stated that Peabody covenanted to the extent, and no more, that he had fulfilled all the powers and trusts in said deed contained, in respect to the sale, in accordance with the terms of the trust deed.

The $30,000 for which Greene purchased the property was applied to pay the first and second interest coupons, with interest thereon to October 17, 1878, and interest on the note to that date from April 2, 1878, the expense of advertising, the fees of the trustee, and sundry back taxes; and the balance of the amount, $24,107.48, was indorsed by the trustee as paid on the principal of the note for $35,000, on the 17th of October, 1878.

On the 23d of October, 1878, the release by Peabody, as successor in trust, of the trust deed from Grow to Gallup, was recorded.

Greene died at New Bedford on the 19th of May, 1879.

On the 7th of July, 1879, a warrant in bankruptcy was issued against the estate of Robertson.

Bradford Hancock was, on the 24th of July, 1879, appointed assignee, in bankruptcy of Robertson, and on the same day the register assigned to him all the estate, real and personal, of Robertson, including all the property, of whatever kind, of which he was possessed, or in which he was interested, or entitled to have, on the 31st of August, 1878, except property exempt by section 5045 of the Revised Statutes.

Taylor and Bruce, on the 23d of March, 1880, filed in the bankruptcy court a proof of debt against Robertson, founded on their judgment and on the levy made February 15, 1878, under the execution issued January 29, 1878. They claimed therein a lien, by virtue of the judgment, on all the real estate of Robertson, and by virtue of such levy, on the portion thereof on which it was levied, and a first preference on all the proceeds of the property covered by the lien of the judgment and the levy.

On the 25th of March, 1880, Taylor and Bruce filed a petition in the bankruptcy court, setting forth the recovery of their judgment; the issuing and return unsatisfied of their execution of October 15, 1877; the filing of their creditor's bill in the circuit court on the 24th of January, 1878; the fact that they had proved their debt in the bankruptcy court; that on the 30th of July, 1877, the date of the recovery of their judgment, Robertson owned real estate, all of which was incumbered with sales for taxes, and the greater part with mortgages or deeds of trust to about or near the full value thereof, so that of the latter class he was, at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, at best only invested with an equity of redemption; that at the time their judgment was rendered, and at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, he owned sundry real estate which was unincumbered except by tax sales and judgments (describing it); that, at those times, he owned or had interest in real estate incumbered by mortgages and trust deeds, and also by tax liens, describing it, and as part of it describing the property 73 feet by 116 feet, on the corner of West Madison Street and Sheldon Street, "incumbrance, $35,000, besides interest and taxes;" that on the 29th of January, 1878, they issued a second execution on their judgment; that on the 15th of February, 1878, it was levied on all the real estate described in the petition, except a small portion in Cook County, Illinois, which was heavily incumbered; that before any sale was made by the marshal Robertson went into bankruptcy, and no sale had ever been made under the execution, but the levy was in force as a first lien of any judgment; that they were entitled to have the amount of their judgment paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the property, to the exclusion of all the other creditors of Robertson, except those who held mortgages or liens prior to their judgment; and that they were willing and desirous to have the administration and enforcement of the lien of their judgment transferred to the bankruptcy court, and established by that court, and enforced against the property of the bankrupt estate. They prayed that their lien might be established against the described real estate; that Hancock, the assignee, might be ordered to sell said real estate and apply the proceeds to pay their judgment; and that they might be permitted to purchase at the sale and credit their bids on the judgment.

Hancock, the assignee, on the 2d of April, 1880, presented a petition to the bankruptcy court, in answer to a rule for him to show cause, issued on the filing of the petition of Taylor and Bruce of March 25, 1880, setting forth that he believed the allegations of that petition to be substantially correct, and that he believed it was for the best interest of the bankrupt's estate that said real estate should be sold without further delay. He prayed for an order directing him to sell it; that it be sold subject to all taxes, liens and incumbrances thereon, except the judgment of Taylor and Bruce and judgments rendered subsequently thereto; and that he be ordered to bring the proceeds of sale into court or make such other disposition of them as the court should direct. On this petition, and on the same day, an order was made by the bankruptcy court, on the consent of the assignee, of Taylor and Bruce, of the bankrupt, and of two creditors by a judgment subsequent to that of Taylor and Bruce, directing the assignee to sell all the real estate of the bankrupt, free and clear of the lien of the judgments mentioned, "but subject to all other liens and incumbrances thereon, and all taxes and assessments thereon," and to bring the proceeds of the sale into court, to be paid to such judgment creditors according to the priority of their liens on the property sold, to the amount of their respective judgments.

On the 26th of April, 1880, the assignee made a report to the bankruptcy court, setting forth that, on the 24th of April, 1880, he had sold to the highest bidder for cash all the right, title and interest of the bankrupt, and of himself as assignee, to real estate which he described, free and clear of the lien of the judgment and execution levy of the creditors mentioned in the order of sale, "but subject to all other liens and incumbrances thereon, and taxes and assessments thereon." The description included the premises at the corner of West Madison Street and Sheldon Street, with the buildings thereon, at the sum of $250, to L. G. Pratt, trustee. The gross proceeds of sale were $6,122, and the net proceeds $5,107.42, which the assignee reported to the register on the 27th of May, 1880.

The register, on the 14th of June, 1880, made an order directing the assignee to pay to Taylor and Bruce $5,053 out of the proceeds of the sale.

On the 17th of June, 1880, the assignee, by a deed recorded on the 30th of August, 1880, conveyed to Lorin G. Pratt, trustee, certain real estate purchased by him at said sale, including the premises at the corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets. The deed recited the prior proceedings in bankruptcy, the order of sale and its confirmation, and the order for a deed, and conveyed all the right, title and interest of the bankrupt, which he had on the 31st of August, 1878, and of the assignee, subject to all unpaid taxes and to all liens and incumbrances, unless by the terms of sale expressly excepted, to the real estate described in the deed.

Robertson, on the 4th of December, 1880, filed his petition for a discharge in bankruptcy.

Taylor and Bruce, on the 22d of December, 1880, directed the marshal to release the levy made February 15, 1878, and to return the execution of January 29, 1878, unsatisfied. This was done.

On the 5th of January, 1881, under an execution issued to the marshal on the previous day, on the judgment of Taylor and Bruce, he levied on certain real estate of Robertson, including the premises at the corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets, with all the buildings and improvements thereon, and on the 27th of January, 1881, sold the premises at the corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets to Lorin G. Pratt, trustee, for the sum of $5,000. No deed appears to have been made under this sale.

No proceedings having been taken in this suit since the demurrer to the original bill was sustained, an order was made on the 6th of July, 1881, after an interval of more than three years and three months, giving leave to the plaintiffs to amend their bill and also to file a supplemental bill.

On the 17th of September, 1881, they filed an amended and supplemental bill, dismissing the original bill as to all the real estate except that situated at the corner of West Madison and Sheldon Streets, 73 feet by 116 feet, with the buildings thereon erected. This new bill recites the contents of the original bill, and states that, on a demurrer thereto, the court held that all the property and estate of Robertson, so far as it could be discovered, must first be exhausted, before the court could interfere in equity to compel the discovery and relief sought, and required the plaintiffs to wait until all such visible property and estate was so sold and exhausted. It sets forth the contents of the trust deed from Grow to Gallup; that Peabody was the successor in trust of Gallup; that the deed was made to secure the payment of an indebtedness of $35,000 to Greene; that Peabody had been in possession of the premises, and receiving the rents and profits, amounting to more than sufficient to pay all the interest on the debt, and the taxes, insurance and expenses of carrying the property; that, in pursuance of a fraudulent scheme to place the property beyond the reach of the plaintiffs, Robertson, on the 28d of July, 1877, which was two days after the verdict was returned in their suit against Robertson and seven days prior to the rendering of their judgment, executed a second deed of trust to Peabody, to secure an alleged additional indebtedness of Robertson of $35,000; that, for the purpose of making it appear that the trust deed had been made before the verdict was rendered, it and the note were dated back to April 2, 1877; that, for the purpose of preventing the plaintiffs from learning who was the real holder of the note and the interest coupons, or whether the deed was a bona fide lien in addition to the first lien, the note was made payable to the order of Robertson and indorsed by him in blank; that said trust deed was only a renewal of the former trust deed from Grow to Gallup, and was made to secure to Greene said debt to him, and was not an additional incumbrance on the property; that said first mortgage should have been released of record so that the plaintiffs might ascertain from the record the true amount of the incumbrance; but it was withheld, making it appear that the property was subject to $70,000 incumbrance, instead of only $35,000; and that Robertson prayed an appeal from said judgment to the Supreme Court of the United States, which appeal was not perfected, but on account of its pendency the plaintiffs were unable to issue an execution on their judgment until October 15, 1877. The new bill then recites the mortgage to Templeton, and avers that it ought to be canceled of record. It then sets forth the making of the lease to McAllister for two years from September 1, 1877, at a rent of $800 a month, and the reduction of the rent to $30 a month from January 1, 1878, and avers that this was done for the purpose of lessening the income from the property, so that it would be insufficient to pay the taxes, insurance and expenses, and the interest on the loan; and that the plaintiffs used due diligence to reach the estate of Robertson, but were unable to realize anything therefrom by execution. It then sets forth the turning over by Robertson to Peabody, as agent and trustee for Greene, of all the leases, rents and profits of the premises; and alleges that this was done in pursuance of the fraudulent scheme aforesaid, and under an arrangement substantially as follows: Robertson was to go through bankruptcy and obtain a discharge; Greene and Peabody were to carry the property and collect the income from it, but by reason of such reduction of the rent the income would be insufficient to carry it; Peabody was thereupon to declare a forfeiture for nonpayment of interest, and sell the property under the deed of trust, and thus cut out the lien of the plaintiffs' judgment, and also prevent the property from coming to the hands of the assignee in bankruptcy; but Robertson, or his agent, said McAllister, was to be allowed to redeem from such sale, after Robertson had procured his discharge, upon paying the amount actually due according to the terms of the loan, and the expenses incurred in carrying the property, less the amount received from the rents and profits thereof, the same as if no sale had been made; the release of the trust deed to Gallup was to be withheld from record, so as to prevent any outside bidder and the plaintiffs from bidding at the sale; such arrangement was made with Robertson, and McAllister, his agent, and Peabody, as agent for Greene, began to collect the rents of the premises under the leases, and they were, if judiciously and honestly applied, more than sufficient to carry the property and pay the interest on the loan; but they were not applied to that purpose. The new bill further sets forth that, immediately on the making of such arrangement, Robertson filed his petition in bankruptcy, and very soon afterwards left the United States and had since remained continuously absent therefrom, so that he could not be examined; that Peabody proceeded to declare a forfeiture of the trust deed for nonpayment of interest on the loan, and, on October 7, 1878, pretended to sell the premises, and executed a deed thereof to Greene for a pretended bid at the sale of $30,000; that after the sale an agreement was made by Robertson, either in person or by his agent McAllister, with Greene, and Peabody, as the agent of Greene, whereby Greene was to hold the property and collect the rents and apply them to carrying the property, and to allow Robertson or McAllister to redeem on payment of the amount of the incumbrance and interest, and the cost of carrying the property, less the amount of rents received, the same as if no sale had been made; that the notice of sale was insufficient and defective; that the release of the trust deed to Gallup was purposely withheld from record; that the plaintiffs had no actual notice of the sale, but it was concealed from them and they did not learn of it until long afterwards; and that the deed of June 17, 1880, by the assignee in bankruptcy, on his sale, was made to Lorin Grant Pratt as trustee for the plaintiffs. It then sets forth the purchase of the property by the plaintiffs for $5,000, at the marshal's sale; that Greene died after the pretended purchase by him of the premises at the sale by Peabody; that on his death whatever right, title or interest he had in and to the premises passed to and became vested in Mehitable B. Greene, his widow; William W. Crapo and Charles W. Clifford, as trustees of Robert B. Greene, Susan G. Page, Horatio N. Greene and Francis B. Greene; and said Robert B. Greene, Susan G. Page, Horatio N. Greene and Francis B. Greene, as the heirs-at-law or devisees of said David R. Greene, and was still so held by and vested in them; that such heirs-at-law or devises are citizens of Massachusetts and of full age; and that E. A. Cummings, a citizen of Illinois, is the agent for the property, and collecting the rents for the heirs or devisees of Greene.

The new bill makes as defendants the five persons who were defendants to the original bill, and also the widow and the heirs or devisees above named of Greene, and their trustees, and Cummings, their agent. Its prayer is that the mortgage to Templeton may be declared void; that the deed from Peabody to Greene may be set aside as against the rights of the plaintiffs; that Greene, during his lifetime, and his heirs or devisees, and Cummings as their agent, may be decreed to be mortgagees in possession; that they and Peabody make full answer in the premises; that an account be taken; and that the plaintiffs be allowed to redeem on paying the amount found to be due.

All of the defendants except Robertson and Templeton entered an appearance in the suit on the 21st of November, 1881.

The plaintiffs, on the 15th of December, 1881, consented to the discharge of Robertson in bankruptcy.

On the 31st of December, 1881, all of the defendants who so appeared, except McAllister, put in an answer to the original bill and the amended and supplemental bill, denying all the allegations imputing fraud to the said defendants or to Greene in his lifetime, and claiming that the foreclosure proceedings by Greene and Peabody were had in good faith.

On the 6th of February, 1882, a replication to this answer was filed, and on the 6th of June, 1882, the cause was referred to a master, to take proofs and report them.

After some proofs had been taken on the part of the plaintiffs, and on the 4th of January, 1883, the plaintiffs filed an amendment to their amended and supplemental bill, which avers that Peabody, in order to conceal the time of the sale from the plaintiffs, caused the notice of sale to be published in "The Chicago Weekly Journal," a newspaper which was not read in the City of Chicago and had no circulation in said city or in Cook County; that the premises sold were composed of three separate lots; that the north 44 feet of the property was separated from the south portion, fronting on West Madison Street, by an alley or court 12 feet wide; that such north 44 feet were divided into two lots of 22 feet each, on each of which stood a brick dwelling-house 22 feet wide and fronting on Sheldon Street, which were used for private dwelling-houses, and were entirely distinct from the hotel part of the premises; that Peabody sold the property in bulk to Greene, at half its value, when it was his duty to have sold it in separate lots; and that, if he had so offered it, the part of it used for a hotel, and fronting on Madison Street, south of the alley or court, would have brought more than sufficient to pay off the debt, interest and costs.

On the 6th of January, 1883, the defendants answered this amendment, denying its allegations, and, on the 29th of January, 1883, they amended their answer by averring that, as to so much of the bill, amended bill and supplement as alleged any agreement between Greene and Robertson for the redemption or repurchase of the premises by Robertson, such supposed agreement was not in writing, signed by Greene or by any person by him authorized in writing, according to the Statute of Illinois in such case made and provided.

On the 27th of October, 1883, the master reported the proofs to the court, and the cause was heard before Judge Blodgett, in November, 1883; and, on the 14th of April, 1884, he filed an opinion, which is reported in 21 Fed. Rep. 209, deciding the case in favor of the plaintiffs.

A motion for a rehearing was made and overruled on the 7th of July, 1884, and on the 29th of July, 1884, an interlocutory decree was entered, finding that the equities of the cause were with the plaintiffs; that they were entitled to redeem the premises in question from the indebtedness secured thereon in favor of the heirs and representatives of the estate of David R. Greene, deceased, upon such terms as might be thereafter fixed by the court; and that a reference be had to a master, who was named, to take and report to the court an account of what was due to such heirs and representatives, for principal and interest, on the debt secured by the trust deed to Peabody, and of the amounts paid for taxes, assessments and charges provided for in such trust deed, and an account of what had been paid by said defendants for necessary repairs and improvements, and an account of the rents and profits of the premises, and to report such accounts with the evidence.

Those accounts were taken, and the master filed his report on the 15th of July, 1885, finding due to the defendants on the 12th of June, 1885, on the principles stated in the interlocutory decree, $45,641.66. Both parties filed exceptions to this report. Before they came on for hearing, and on the 4th of January, 1886, the defendants moved for leave to amend their answer, so as to set up the limitation of actions provided by the Bankruptcy Statute. The consideration of the motion was postponed until the final hearing of the cause.

The case came on to be heard on the 1st of April, 1886, and on the 3d of April, 1886, the court made an order allowing the defendants so to amend their answer, and also granting leave to the plaintiffs to amend their bill, and ordering the replication to the original answer to stand as a replication to such amendment thereto, and giving leave to either party to put in before the master further evidence on the subject matter of such amendments, directing the master to continue the account from June 12, 1885, to April 1, 1886, and ordering that such additional evidence and statement of account be considered as if taken before the hearing, and that all exceptions to the former report of the master be considered as exceptions to such supplemental matters.

In pursuance of such leave, the plaintiffs amended their amended and supplemental bill, by averring that neither they nor the assignee in bankruptcy had any knowledge that the sale by Peabody had been made, until the 24th of April, 1880; that they did not have any knowledge of such collusive agreement between Robertson and his agents, and Peabody, as trustee for Greene, until on or about September 13, 1881; that the details of such agreement did not come to their knowledge until the taking of the evidence in the cause; that such sale and agreement were purposely concealed by all parties thereto, notwithstanding all due diligence was used to discover the same; that Peabody having been, prior to the making of the sale, placed in possession of the property as agent and trustee, and there being no apparent change in the possession of the property thereafter, there was nothing to advise the plaintiffs of the sale, unless they had accidentally discovered the record of the deed from Peabody to Greene; and they made no examination for that for the reason that, by the conduct of Robertson and his agents and of Peabody, they had been lulled into the belief that no foreclosure or sale would be made, at least prior to April 2, 1880, when the debt secured by the trust deed to Peabody would mature; that the sale made by Peabody October 7, 1878, was made after the filing of the petition of Robertson in bankruptcy, August 31, 1878, and before the appointment of his assignee, July 24, 1879, and while there was no representative of the estate of Robertson and of his equity of redemption in the property, on whom the notice of sale could operate, or who could protect the estate and the creditors; that the sale was, therefore, void as against the rights of the plaintiffs, and as against the assignee in bankruptcy and the plaintiffs as purchasers of the title and right of such assignee, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Statute; that such sale, made under such circumstances, should not in equity be allowed to cut off the plaintiffs from their right to redeem from the trust deed, notwithstanding the sale and the deed thereunder; and that the plaintiffs should be decreed to have taken the title of Robertson in and to the property in the same condition as it was on the 31st of August, 1878, unaffected by the sale by Peabody, and with full right to redeem from the trust deed as if no sale had been made.

The defendants filed the proposed amendment to their answer. As to the allegation that the sale by Peabody took place, and his deed to Greene was made, pending the proceedings in bankruptcy, and before the election of an assignee, or at a time when the power of sale under the trust deed was suspended, and as to any other irregularity in the notice of sale, or any right in the plaintiffs or in said Pratt, derived from the assignee in bankruptcy, to set aside the deed from Peabody to Greene for any matter alleged, it says that the right to do so, if it ever existed, belonged to the assignee and the provisional assignee, as representing the creditors in the bankruptcy proceeding; that the assignees and the plaintiffs waived such claims and equities and failed to assert them; that at the time Peabody made the deed to Greene, on October 7, 1878, Hancock was provisional assignee in the bankruptcy matter, and on the 24th of July, 1879, became assignee; that the supposed equities and claims under which the plaintiffs pretend to have derived a right, under such assignee, to vacate such foreclosure and redeem the premises, did not accrue within two years next before the bringing of the amended and supplemental bill of September 17, 1881, wherein the defendants, excepting Peabody, were for the first time impleaded in this suit, and wherein, as to all of the defendants, said pretended rights were for the first time asserted; and that those claims and equities, if they ever existed, were barred by such laches and by the Statute at the time when the supplemental bill was filed. The amendment sets up such laches as an equitable bar and defense to so much of the bill as rests upon such pretended equities, and avers that, by the Bankruptcy Act, the plaintiffs, by reason of such lapse of time and of the said facts, were and are barred from claiming any relief by reason of such pretended equities, and sets up said bar and limitation of two years. The amendment to the answer also denies the allegations contained in the amendment so filed by the plaintiffs to the amended and supplemental bill.

The master, on the 12th of April, 1886, filed a supplemental report, bringing down the account to the 1st of April, 1886, and finding to be due to the defendants on that day $45,842.86.

The case was brought to a hearing before Judge Blodgett, and he filed his opinion on the 24th of May, 1886 (27 Fed. Rep. 587.) He adhered to his former views.

On the 28th of May, 1886, Robertson, Templeton and McAllister filed an answer disclaiming all interest in the property in controversy, admitting that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief prayed by them, and consenting to the entry of such decree as might seem proper to the court.

The court, on the 1st of July, 1886, made a final decree, adjudging that there was due to the defendants, the widow, heirs and representatives of the estate of David R. Greene, deceased, on their lien on the premises in question, $45,842.86, with interest thereon from April 1, 1886, at 6 per cent per annum; that the plaintiffs pay to them that sum, with the interest, within 90 days, in redemption of all lien of the defendants on the premises; and that, on such payment being made, the defendants convey the premises to the plaintiffs by a quit-claim deed.

The widow, heirs and representatives of the estate of David R. Greene, deceased, with Peabody and Cummings, have appealed to this court from that decree.

The plaintiffs claim a right to redeem from the sale to Greene, made by Peabody as trustee, or from the trust deed under which that sale was made, on payment of the mortgage debt, (1) as owners of Robertson's equity of redemption by virtue of their purchase from the assignee in bankruptcy; and (2) as judgment creditors of Robertson, having a lien on the property by virtue of their judgment, prior in time to the sale by Peabody as trustee, and by their purchase of the property at the sale under the execution issued on their judgment.

They rest their claim under their purchase from the assignee in bankruptcy, first, on the ground that the sale by Peabody as trustee was made after the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and after the adjudication thereon, before an assignee was appointed, and without leave of the bankruptcy court, and was void as against such assignee and those claiming under him, that the property was still subject to the right of redemption by the assignee, and that such right has been conveyed by him to the plaintiffs; second, on the ground that there was a collusive agreement made with Robertson, by Peabody as agent for Greene, giving to Robertson the right to redeem from the sale by Peabody, and that such right of redemption passed from Robertson to his assignee in bankruptcy, and from the latter to the plaintiffs.

The claim of the plaintiffs to redeem, as judgment creditors of Robertson, is based on the allegation that they were led by the wrongful conduct of the defendants to believe that the property was subject to the deed of trust to Gallup, as well as to that to Peabody; that they were not allowed an opportunity to pay off the incumbrance before the sale by Peabody, although they were ready and willing to do so; that, by reason of the collusive agreement referred to, the sale by Peabody was part of a scheme to hinder them in collecting their judgment, by cutting off their lien on Robertson's equity of redemption, and giving the property back to him, after he should have been discharged in bankruptcy from the judgment; that the sale by Peabody was not properly advertised; that the plaintiffs had no notice of such sale prior to its being made; that such notice was intentionally withheld from them; that the sale by Peabody, with the prior incumbrance of the trust deed to Gallup apparently standing against the property, when such incumbrance had been paid, was made with a view to prevent competition in bidding at the sale; that the property was sold in bulk, and not offered for sale in parcels; and that it was sold for an inadequate price.

But we do not find it necessary to consider any of these questions, because we are of opinion that the right of action of the plaintiffs, under their title derived from the assignee in bankruptcy, was barred by the two years' limitation enacted by the Bankruptcy Statute.

Section 5067 of the Revised Statutes provides as follows: "No suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee."

It is contended for the plaintiffs that the limitation provided by section 5067 applies only to the case of a contest between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an interest adversely to such assignee, touching property of the bankrupt, in a suit to which the assignee is a party; that when the assignee transferred his rights to Pratt, who acted for the plaintiffs, on the 17th of June, 1880, under the sale to Pratt made on the 24th of April, 1880, the Statute ceased to run, and the interest which thus passed from the assignee then ceased to be within the terms of the Bankruptcy Statute of Limitation, and became subject to the ordinary Statute of Limitation, and that the two years' limitation had not run on the 24th of April, 1880, or on the 17th of June, 1880, the register's deed to the assignee in bankruptcy having been made on the 24th of July, 1879.

But we are of opinion that the right which passed to the assignee, to file a bill to redeem, began to exist on the 24th of July, 1879; that, as the Bankruptcy Statute of Limitation began then to run against such right in the hands of the assignee, it continued to run after such right passed to the plaintiffs, by the assignee's deed to Pratt on their behalf, of June 17, 1880, made in pursuance of the sale of April 24, 1880; that the two years' Statute of Limitation bars the right asserted by the plaintiffs in their bill, in like manner as it would have barred the right of the assignee to redeem, if he had never made any sale or conveyance to Pratt, and if he were now the plaintiff in this suit; that the suit cannot be regarded as having been brought against the widow, heirs and representatives of David R. Greene until the supplemental bill was filed, on the 17th of September, 1881, when for the first time the sale by Peabody, as trustee, to Greene was drawn in question in this suit; and that, as more than two years elapsed between July 24, 1879, and September 17, 1881, the two years' bar of the Statute is complete.

That the two years' bar of the Statute applies in favor of a purchaser from an assignee in bankruptcy, has been decided by this court.

In Gifford v. Helms, 98 U. S. 248 [25:57], the assignee in bankruptcy was appointed in May, 1868, and sold all the assets of the bankrupt to the plaintiff in May, 1871. Afterwards the plaintiff brought suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance which had been made by the bankrupt in June, 1867. It was held that, as the right of action on the part of the assignee in bankruptcy was barred in May, 1871, it was barred as against the plaintiff. This could not have been held if the two years' Statute of Limitation had been regarded as one applying only in a suit brought by the assignee. It was said by the court that if the conveyance sought to be impeached was made in fraud of creditors, the equities in controversy were vested in the assignee in bankruptcy when he was appointed, and his right of action commenced at the time the assignment was made to him, and he might have pursued such right at any time thereafter; that, as the plaintiff claimed as purchaser from the assignee, he did not acquire, under the sale made to him by the assignee, any greater rights than those possessed by the latter; that those rights were acquired by the assignee in May, 1868; that throughout the period intervening between that date and May, 1871, the equities in controversy were held by the defendant adversely to the supposed right of the assignee; and that the right, if any, of the assignee, was barred by the two years' Statute of Limitation, before the purchase by the plaintiff.

In Wisner v. Brown, 123 U. S. 214 [30:1205], it was held that an assignee in bankruptcy cannot transfer to a purchaser the bankrupt's adverse interest in real estate in the possession of another claiming title to it, if two years have elapsed from the time when the cause of action therefor accrued to the assignee; and that the right of the purchaser in such case is as fully barred by the Bankruptcy Statute of Limitation as is that of the assignee. In that case, the suit was brought by a person who had purchased property of the estate from the assignee in bankruptcy, and received a conveyance thereof, more than seven years after the title of the assignee accrued. The defendants pleaded the two years' Bankruptcy Statute of Limitations. At the time of the appointment of the assignee the property sued for was held adversely by the defendants. The court held that the assignee could not, after two years from the time of his appointment had expired, himself bring an action to recover the property, or, by selling the lands to a third person after such time had expired, enable the latter to maintain an action therefor; and it quotes with approval the remark made in Gifford v. Helms, supra, that the purchaser from the assignee did not acquire by his purchase any greater rights than those possessed by the latter.

These cases show that a conveyance by the assignee in bankruptcy cannot prevent the operation of the bar of the Statute against the grantee, when it has already run against the assignee, or bring into action a new period of limitation dating from the time of the conveyance. Nor can it interrupt the running of the Statute against the claim or right, when it has once commenced to run as against the assignee. The purchaser takes the right cum onere, subject to the continuance of the running of the Statute, and subject to the fact that a part of the two years has already run, as against the claim or right, while it was in the hands of the assignee, and to the consequence that when sufficient additional time shall have run against it, in the hands of the purchaser, to make up the entire two years, the claim or right will be wholly barred. No initiation of a new period of limitation, under any statute, begins to run in favor of the purchaser at the time of his purchase, whether the two years wholly elapsed, or only a part thereof elapsed, while the claim was owned by the assignee.

But the plaintiffs seek to take the case out of the bar of the Statute by alleging that they were ignorant of their rights, and did not discover the facts relating to the sale by Peabody as trustee, and the other matters set up in their supplemental bill, until the 24th of April, 1880, which was within two years of September 17, 1881; and that the sale by Peabody was kept secret by the defendants, as far as possible, although the plaintiffs used diligence to discover the facts.

Even if the allegations in the supplemental bill and in the amendments thereto be regarded as sufficiently charging a fraudulent concealment by the defendants of the facts of the case, from the assignee in bankruptcy, or from Pratt, or from the plaintiffs, we do not think the evidence establishes any such fraudulent concealment.

With the petition in bankruptcy, filed August 31, 1878, there was filed a schedule naming the creditors of Robertson holding securities, giving the name of David R. Greene as one of such creditors, his place of residence, the date of the contracting of his debt, its amount, a statement that the security was a trust deed on property in Chicago, a description of such property, the street and number where it was situated, and the name of Peabody as trustee. It also disclosed the fact that the only incumbrance on the property was the trust deed to Peabody, thus excluding the idea that the trust deed to Gallup was in force.

Here was information, accessible to the assignee in bankruptcy when he was appointed, information which he was bound to take notice of, information equally accessible to the plaintiffs, being in a public record, which information referred the assignee and the plaintiffs to David R. Greene for full particulars as to the property in question, and the transactions in regard to the trust deed. The petition in bankruptcy was filed thirty-seven days before the sale of the property to Greene by Peabody as trustee. Moreover, in the petition of the plaintiffs, filed in the bankruptcy court October 5, 1878, two days before the sale by Peabody, and sworn to by the agents of the plaintiffs, the contents of the schedules in bankruptcy of Robertson are referred to, and it is stated that among the assets set forth in such schedules is the property in question, identifying it. This shows that information was actually had by such agent, at that time, of the facts before set forth as contained in one of such schedules, as to the particulars of the trust deed to Peabody, and as to who was the holder of the note secured by it and where he resided. That petition was filed more than nine months before the assignee in bankruptcy was appointed.

The rights of the plaintiffs must depend wholly upon such right of redemption as existed in Robertson, and passed to his assignee in bankruptcy, and from the latter to the plaintiffs. That being extinguished, no other right exists, and the plaintiffs have no right to redeem through any separate title acquired under their judgment against Robertson. They did not become, by the recovery of their judgment, or by anything done under it, the successors of Robertson in respect of any right of redemption, but they must follow and acquire their only title to such right through the assignee in bankruptcy. Moreover, whatever right to redeem they could have acquired by virtue of their judgment was waived by them by their petition of March 25, 1880, to the bankruptcy court, and by their procuring the property in question to be sold by the assignee in bankruptcy, and its proceeds to be applied on their judgment. At their own suggestion the equity of redemption, which was sold by the assignee, was thus put beyond their reach.

The result of these views is, that the decree of the Circuit Court must be reversed, and the case be remanded to that court, with a direction to enter a decree dismissing the bill, with costs.

JOHN F. DRAVO ET AL., Assignees, etc., App'ts.,
v.

PHILIP FABEL ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 487-490.)

Sworn answer, evidence—Pennsylvania Statute as to practice does not apply to suits in equity in U. S. courts—depositions of parties—finding of fact, not reviewed.

1. A sworn answer in an equity suit, which is responsive to the bill, is evidence for defendant, where plaintiff has not waived an answer under oath.
2. The Pennsylvania Statute that a party may examine the adverse party "as under cross-examination", does not apply to suits in equity in United States courts.
3. Where the plaintiff uses the depositions of defendant taken by plaintiff "as under cross-examination" under that Statute, he makes defendant his own witness, and, though not concluded by the evidence, he cannot contend that defendant is unworthy of belief.
4. Where the finding of the district court, upon a mere question of fact, was affirmed by the circuit court on appeal, this court will not reverse such finding unless the error is clear.

[No. 142.]

Argued Dec. 4, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

APPPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania, affirming a decree of the District Court dismissing a suit to set aside deeds as fraudulent and void as to creditors and requiring defendants to release their apparent title to the assignees in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 25 Fed. Rep. 116.

Messrs. D. T. Watson and William S. Pier for appellants.

Mr. G. A. Jenks for appellees.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

By two deeds, one dated January 22, 1876, reciting a consideration of $10,000, and the other dated January 26, 1876, reciting a consideration of $18,000, and both executed, acknowledged and delivered to the grantees on the last-named day, John Dippold and wife conveyed to Philip Fabel and Kate Fabel, his wife (the latter being a daughter of the grantors), two tracts of land in the County of Beaver, State of Pennsylvania. Both deeds were recorded in the proper office, but not until the 16th day of February, 1878.

On the 1st of March, 1878, John Dippold, John H. Dippold, Martin Dippold and Jacob H. Dippold, doing business under the name of John Dippold & Sons, were adjudged bankrupts by the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania. Their assignees in bankruptcy, duly appointed and qualified, were the present appellants, who, June 13, 1879, brought this suit in the same court against the appellees.

The bill alleged that neither of the grantees possessed means sufficient for the purchase of these lands, and that the deeds to them were executed with the intent and purpose of hindering, delaying and defrauding the creditors of John Dippold, and to prevent the lands from going to, and being distributed by, his assignees in bankruptcy. It also alleged a conspiracy and combination between Dippold and the grantees, pursuant to which the former was to make said conveyances in order that the lands could be held by the grantees for the benefit of themselves and of John Dippold, discharged from the claims of his creditors; and that the deeds were a mere contrivance between him and them, whereby the lands "were to be in such condition as to the title thereof that if at any time the said John Dippold should become seriously and financially embarrassed it might be made to seem" that he "was not the owner of said properties."

It further alleged that, in January, 1876, John Dippold, as a member of his firm, was largely engaged in business, borrowing large sums of money down until the date of the petition in bankruptcy, and that during all that time he and the respondents conspired to have it believed by the public generally and by creditors dealing with him that he was the owner of these lands, and, by reason of such belief, creditors would be, and were, induced to trust and confide in his financial responsibility.

The relief sought was a decree declaring the deeds null and void, fraudulent as to creditors, and vesting no right in the grantees, as against Dippold's creditors and assignees in bankruptcy, and requiring Fabel and wife to release and convey their apparent title to the assignees in bankruptcy.

The bill was sworn to, and did not waive the oath of the defendants to their respective answers.

The answers, which were under oath, besides putting in issue all the material allegations of the bill, averred that the transactions evidenced by the deeds were bona fide; that the deeds were executed and delivered at their respective dates; and that the consideration named in each was paid by the grantees to Dippold in money.

The district court dismissed the bill with costs, and a similar decree was rendered upon appeal in the circuit court.

The only error assigned is the refusal of the circuit court to declare the deeds to Philip Fabel and his wife to be fraudulent and void as to the creditors and assignees in bankruptcy of John Dippold.

This case does not present any difficult question of law. Its determination depends entirely upon the special facts and circumstances disclosed by the evidence.

Conceding that the case was an uncommon one, and that some of its circumstances tended to excite suspicion as to the integrity of the transaction between Dippold and his grantees, the conclusion of the district court was that the clear weight of the evidence was on the side of the defendants, and that the bill should be dismissed. It was accordingly so decreed. Dravo v. Fabel, 25 Fed. Rep. 116. A similar decree was passed in the circuit court.

The answers of the defendants, being directly responsive to the bill, are evidence in their behalf, the plaintiffs not having waived, as they might have done, answers under oath.

Conley v. Nailor, 118 U. S. 127, 134 [30: 112, 115]; 41st Eq. Rule, as amended.

Besides, the depositions upon which the plaintiffs must rely to sustain the charge of fraud are those of the principal defendants, John Dippold and Philip Fabel. These depositions were taken and read by the plaintiffs. It is true they were taken "as under cross-examination," pursuant to a Statute of Pennsylvania which declares that "a party to the record of any civil proceeding in law or equity, or a person for whose immediate benefit such proceeding is prosecuted or defended, may be examined as if under cross-examination, at the instance of the adverse party, or any of them, and for that purpose may be compelled, in the same manner, and subject to the same rules for examination as any other witness, to testify; but the party calling for such examination shall not be concluded thereby, but may rebut it by counter testimony." 1 Brightly's Purdon's Digest, 728. But that Statute has no application to suits in equity in the courts of the United States. The Act of Congress providing that the practice, pleadings, forms and modes of proceedings in civil causes in the courts of the United States shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, forms and modes of proceedings existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the State, expressly excepts equity and admiralty causes. 17 Stat. 197, chap. 255, § 5; R. S. § 914. So that, when the plaintiffs used the depositions of Dippold and Fabel, taken "as under cross-examination," they made those parties their own witnesses. While the plaintiffs were not concluded by their evidence, and might show they were mistaken, it could not be properly contended by the plaintiffs that they were unworthy of credit. The evidence must be given such weight as under all the circumstances it is fairly entitled to receive. The case comes within the ruling in Lammers v. Nissen, U. S. Sup. Ct. L. ed. Bk. 25, p. 562,* where the finding of the court of original jurisdiction, upon a mere question of fact, was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State. Chief Justice Waite said: "Under such circumstances, we ought not to disturb the judgment of the state court unless the error is clear. No less stringent rule should be applied in cases of this kind than that which formerly governed in admiralty appeals, when two courts had found in the same way on a question of fact."

Without stating the evidence in detail, we content ourselves with saying that upon a careful review of all the circumstances disclosed by the record, we do not feel justified in disturbing the conclusion reached by the district and circuit courts upon mere questions of fact.

Decree affirmed.

*Not elsewhere reported.

EDWARD M. MCGILLIN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MILTON H. BENNETT ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 445-454.)

Admission of evidence, when cannot be alleged as error—payment in land becomes, by omission to deed, payable in money—application of payments—payments in land and notes.

1. Defendant cannot allege as error the admission of evidence introduced by himself.
2. Where a person is to pay an agreed sum of money by conveying a piece of land on a certain day, if he declines to make the conveyance or is unable to give a good title, such agreed sum, on that day, becomes payable in cash.
3. A credit or payment is to be applied to the one of two sums first due.
4. Where a payment of a sum of money is to be made in land and it becomes a cash payment by failure to deliver the deed, and at the same time another payment is to be made on the same matter in notes payable at a future day, and the notes are not given, which last payment is secured by a vendor's lien, a credit must be first applied on the payment to be made in land, and not on the deferred payments to be evidenced by notes.

[No. 146.]

Argued Dec. 5, 6, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment for the plaintiffs in an action to recover the unpaid purchase money of property sold. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 28 Fed. Rep. 411.

Messrs. Charles W. Gould and S. V. White for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John L. Peak, A. McCoy, Charles B. McCoy, J. B. Johnson and C. E. Pope, for defendants in error:

Neither the evidence upon which the findings are based, nor the findings, will be examined by this court, except to determine whether the facts found by the court are sufficient to support the judgment.

U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 700, 1011; Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Folsom, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 237 (21:827); Booth v. Tiernan, 109 U. S. 205 (27:907); Meath v. Miss. Levee Comrs. 109 U. S. 268 (27:980); Tyng v. Grinnell, 92 U. S. 467 (23:783).

The finding of the court below on a mixed question of law and fact is final and conclusive.

Cooley v. O'Connor, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 391 (20:446); Wiggins v. Burkman, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 139 (19:884); Coquillard v. Hovey, 23 Neb. 622; Etting v. Bank of U. S. 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 74 (6:420); First Nat. Bank v. Dana, 79 N. Y. 108; Edelman v. Yeakel, 27 Pa. 26; Martinton v. Fairbanks, 112 U. S. 674 (28:864); Norris v. Jackson, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 125 (19:608).

The contract in question is a simple contract for the sale of the ranch, ranch outfit and cattle therein described, and not a cross-contract for the purchase of land.

Croome v. Lediard, 2 Myl. & K. 251; Atkinson v. Smith, 14 Mees. & W. 695; McDaniels v. Whitney, 38 Iowa, 60.

Where property is taken at a fixed money price, the transfer amounts to a sale, whether the property is to be paid for in money or goods.

Picard v. McCormick, 11 Mich. 68; Herrick v. Carter, 56 Barb. 41; Butcher v. Carlisle, 12 Gratt. 520; Crockett v. Moore, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 145.

If from any cause defendant failed to tender a good and sufficient conveyance of the land upon the day named in the contract, then the whole sum of $168,000 became due and payable in money.

Church v. Peterow, 2 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 801; Sessions v. Ainsworth, 1 Root (Conn.) 181; Troubridge v. Holcomb, 4 Ohio St. 88; Brooks v. Hubbard, 3 Conn. 58; Jones v. Gilbert, 13 Conn. 507; Bush v. Canfield, 2 Conn. 485; McAlpin v. Lee, 12 Conn. 129; Gregory v. McDowell, 8 Wend. 485; Dey v. Dox, 9 Wend. 129; West v. Wentworth, 3 Cow. 82; Clark v. Pinney, 7 Cow. 681; Pinney v. Gleason, 5 Wend. 898; Berry v. Nall, 54 Ala. 448; Weiss v. Maunch; Chunck Iron Co. 58 Pa. 295; Stewart v. Donnelly, 4 Yerg. 177; Fleming v. Potter, 7 Watts (Pa.) 880; Townsend v. Wells, 3 Day (Conn.) 327; White v. Perley, 15 Me. 470; Powe's Admrs. v. Powe, 42 Ala. 118.

Where an immediate credit is to be given, it must be given upon a debt due at the time.

Field v. Holland, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 8-28 (3:136-143); McDowell v. Blackstone Canal Co. 5 Mass. 11; Gass v. Stimson, 3 Sumn. 112; Caldwell v. Wentworth, 14 N. H. 431-439; Bacon v. Brown, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 384-386; Seymour v. Seaton, 10 Watts (Pa.) 255-257; Effinger v. Henderson, 38 Miss. 449; Lau v. Sutherland, 5 Gratt. 357; Brown v. Shirk, 75 Ind. 266-271; Baker v. Stackpoole, 9 Cow. 420; Hunter v. Osterhoudt, 11 Barb. 83; Bobs v. Stickney, 36 Ala. 482-495; Richardson v. Coddington, 49 Mich. 1.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action at law, brought in the Superior Court of Cook County, Illinois, by Milton H. Bennett and Robert L. Dunman against Edward M. McGillin, and removed by the defendant into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois. The suit was brought to recover the sum of $108,150, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from the 15th of July, 1885. The defendant pleaded the general issue and sundry special pleas. The plaintiffs demurred to the latter, the demurrer was sustained, and leave to amend the pleas was denied. There was also a plea of set-off, to which there was a replication, joining issue; and there was a similiter to the plea of the general issue. On the written waiver of a jury, the case was tried before the court, which found the issues for the plaintiffs, and also made special findings, and assessed the damages of the plaintiffs at $115,580.55; for which amount, with costs, judgment was entered in their favor. To review that judgment, the defendant has brought a writ of error.

The suit was founded on a written instrument, dated April 16, 1885, a copy of which, as set out in the first count of the plaintiffs' declaration, is contained in the margin.*

There is a bill of exceptions, which contains all the evidence offered on the trial by either party, and the special findings made by the court. The material parts of those findings are as follows: The parties executed the contract sued on. At the date of its execution, the defendant paid to the plaintiffs $25,000, and also delivered to them his promissory notes of that date for $75,000, due and payable July 25, 1885, with interest at 8 per cent per annum. Those notes were thereafter, and before maturity, transferred for value, and were, after the commencement of this suit, paid in full by the defendant to the legal holders thereof. On and prior to July 14, 1885, the plaintiffs delivered to the defendant, and he accepted, the ranch and ranch outfit, as called for and described in the contract, and he took possession of the same; and at the same time they delivered to him 4,854 head of the cattle called for by the contract, which were accepted by him, and were the only cattle delivered by them to him on the contract. There was a deficiency of 7,646 cattle in the number called for by the contract. This deficiency, at the rate of $25 per head, amounted to $191,150, which the defendant was entitled to have credited upon the $400,000 which he was, by the contract, to pay to the plaintiffs for the ranch, ranch outfit and cattle. The failure of the plaintiffs to deliver the full number of cattle called for by the contract was by reason of heavy losses of cattle sustained by them, from cold and starvation, during the winter of 1884 and the spring of 1885, whereby their herd was reduced from about the number called for by the contract to the number actually delivered. When they made the contract, they in good faith believed that they had, and should be able to deliver to the defendant, the full number of 12,500 head, and were not aware of the losses until they attempted to round up or collect their cattle, at about the time the delivery was to be made. Neither the defendant nor his agents or employes had any information that the plaintiffs would not be able to deliver the 12,500 head of cattle, until notified by the latter, on the 14th of July, 1885, that they had delivered all the cattle belonging to the ranch, and could not deliver any more. Before the 1st of July, 1885, the defendant had caused a deed to be made out, and signed and acknowledged by himself and his wife, conveying to the plaintiffs the 84 acres of land in Cook County, Illinois, mentioned in the contract; but there was an apparent incumbrance upon the land, as shown by the record of land titles in Cook County, by a trust deed dated June 28, 1878, to one Manning, as trustee, to secure the payment of $40,000 from the defendant to one Sawyer, and that trust deed was not released and discharged until December 5, 1885; but, in fact, the indebtedness

* "Know all men by these presents that we, Milton H. Bennett and Robert L. Dunman, composing the firm of Bennett & Dunman, for and in consideration of the sum of four hundred thousand dollars, to be paid as hereinafter provided, have this day sold, and do by these presents sell, transfer, assign and convey, unto Edward M. McGillin, of Cleveland, State of Ohio, the following described personal property, to wit:

"All our ranch, cattle, horses, wagons, mules, hogs and ranch outfit, located in the Indian Territory, at or near the junction of the Arkansas and Cimarron Rivers, and more particularly described as follows, to wit, twelve thousand and five hundred head of cattle, to be counted, and averaging in age and sex about as follows: Three thousand head of three, four and five-year-old steers; three thousand head of two-year-olds, mixed; five thousand head of one-year-olds, mixed; and fifteen hundred head of cows and bulls, calves born in 1885 not to be counted; all of said cattle being branded in one or more of the following brands, to wit." [Here secured thereby had been fully paid on or before July 1, 1885. On the 15th of July, 1885, the plaintiffs did not transfer, or offer to transfer, to the defendant the two leases mentioned in the contract; and the parties agreed to meet at Kansas City, Missouri, within a few days after the said 15th of July, and then endeavor to adjust and settle all differences between them in regard to the contract. They did so meet in Kansas City on the 17th of July, and the defendant then offered to convey to the plaintiffs the 94 acres of land in Cook County, on their paying to him $59,150, which conveyance the plaintiffs refused to accept on those terms. Thereupon the defendant, to avoid litigation and as a compromise, as he said, offered to convey to the plaintiffs 54 acres of the Cook County land, in full payment of the balance due from him to them for the ranch and cattle. The plaintiffs refused to accept such offer; but the defendant did not tender any deed, either of the whole or of any part of the land. After such delivery of the ranch, ranch property and cattle to the defendant, the plaintiffs insisted that there was due to them from him $108,850, which should be divided into two equal amounts and secured by the notes of the defendant, one payable on July 1, 1886, and the other on November 1, 1886, with interest on each note at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. The plaintiffs also insisted that the sum of $191,150, to be credited to the defendant on the $400,000 purchase price to be paid for the ranch and cattle, should be applied as a credit to extinguish the payment to be made in the Cook County land. But the defendant refused to give the notes for $108,850, as demanded by the plaintiffs, and insisted that there was no cash payment or money due from him to them. The defendant declined to settle unless the plaintiffs would take in settlement the Cook County land. Thereupon the defendant, by way of compromise, offered to the plaintiffs that if they would repay to him the $25,000 cash paid by him, and would return to him his notes for $75,000, given under the contract, he would surrender to them the possession of all property delivered, throw up the contract, and stand the loss of all moneys, amounting to about $5,000, expended by him on the ranch. The plaintiffs declined this offer, stating that they had used the money and parted with the notes, and that the acceptance of the offer was entirely beyond their control. At the meeting in Kansas City, the plaintiffs advised the defendant of the amount which they had advanced for rent on the leases named in the contract, subsequently to July 15, 1885, follow the brands.] "One hundred and twenty-five head of horses, branded in one or more of the above described brands, and all the mules, wagons, harness, hogs and ranch outfit located on their said ranch and used in connection therewith, and all their right, title and interest in and to the above-described brands; also all their right, title and interest in and to a certain lease for one hundred and twenty-eight thousand acres of land, known as the Cherokee Lease, dated October, 1883, and running five years from date thereof, at a yearly rental of two and one-half cents per acre; also all their right, title and interest in and to a certain lease for one hundred and twenty-seven thousand and two hundred and sixty-five acres of land, known as the Pawnee Lease, dated June 1, 1884, and running five years from date thereof, at a yearly rental of three cents per acre; and if the Cherokee Stock Association shall get their lease extended we guarantee an extension of said lease on same terms and at the same prices secured by other members of said association; also three good ranch houses, three good corrals, corn-cribs, stables, blacksmith shop, and everything used in operating said ranch; also twenty-two and one half miles of wire fence, Glidden wire, four strands, and nearly all black-walnut posts, and one horse pasture, two miles square, near ranch headquarters, to be fenced and completed; to have and to hold the said property above described, unto him, the said Edward M. McGillin, his heirs and assigns, forever.

"We agree to deliver possession of all the above-described property to the said Edward M. McGillin on the ranch on or before the 15th day of July, 1886, we to pay all ranch expenses, taxes and rental on lease up to date of delivery, the said Edward M. McGillin to refund to us all money paid by us on leases beyond date of delivery.

"Should the number of cattle delivered by us to the said Edward M. McGillin exceed twelve thousand and five hundred head, the said Edward M. McGillin is to pay us in cash the sum of twenty-five dollars per head for such excess, in addition to the other consideration herein provided for; and should said number fall short of twelve thousand five hundred head, we are to credit the said Edward M. McGillin on the amount herein provided to be paid, at the rate of twenty-five dollars per head for such deficit.

"The consideration of four hundred thousand dollars above specified is to be paid by the said Edward M. McGillin as follows, to wit: The sum of twenty-five thousand dollars paid cash in hand, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged; the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars to be paid July 25, 1886, for which the said Edward M. McGillin is to execute his negotiable promissory notes of even date herewith, payable to us or our order at the Fourth National Bank of New York City on said 25th day of July, 1886, with eight per cent interest from date; sixty-six thousand dollars to be paid July 1, 1886; sixty-six thousand dollars to be paid November 1, 1886; for which said two last-named amounts the said Edward M. McGillin is to execute his several negotiable promissory notes bearing date on July 15, 1885, and payable to us or our order at the Fourth National Bank of New York City on said 1st day of July, 1886, and 1st day of November, 1886, with eight per cent interest per annum from date of said notes; the remaining one hundred and sixty-eight thousand dollars is to be paid by the said Edward M. McGillin on the 15th day of July, 1886, as follows, to wit: On said 15th day of July, 1886, the said Edward M. McGillin is to convey to us, the said Milton H. Bennett and Robert L. Dunman, by deed of general warranty, free and clear from all incumbrances, taxes and liens of every kind and character, eighty-four acres of land lying and situate in the County of Cook and State of Illinois, more particularly described as being in certain blocks of Crosby's and others' subdivision of the south half of section five, township thirty-seven, N. R. thirteen, lying west of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway; we, the said Milton H. Bennett and Robert L. Dunman, hereby covenanting that the property herein sold and conveyed to the said Edward M. McGillin is free and clear from all incumbrance, and that we will warrant and defend the title to the said cattle, horses and stock unto the said Edward M. McGillin, his heirs and assigns, forever; we, the said Milton H. Bennett and Robert L. Dunman, hereby expressly reserving a vendor's lien on all the property herein sold and conveyed for the security and payment of the two amounts of sixty-six thousand dollars each herein provided to be paid, respectively, on the 1st day of July, 1886, and the 1st day of November, 1886; hereby expressly reserving the right, power and authority to advertise and sell any or all of said property by giving thirty days' notice of the time and place of such sale in some daily newspaper published in the City of Kansas, Jackson County, Missouri, if said sums, together with all the interest due thereon, are not paid when due, according to the terms and tenor of the notes to be executed by the said Edward M. McGillin therefor.

"In testimony whereof, witness our hands and seals, this 16th day of April, 1886.

"Milton H. Bennett, [Seal.]

"Robert L. Dunman, [Seal.]

"I accept the above conveyance, and am bound by the terms and conditions thereof. Witness my hand and seal.

"Edward M. McGillin, [Seal.]" and which was to be refunded by the defendant; and thereafter the latter paid said rental, and the plaintiffs duly transferred the leases to him. In the preliminary negotiations between the parties, which resulted in the contract, the defendant insisted that he would not purchase the ranch and cattle at the price of $400,000, unless the plaintiffs would take his Cook County land at the sum of $168,000, and the plaintiffs insisted that they would not sell for $400,000, unless they could receive about $250,000 in money, being willing to take the balance of such purchase price in the 84 acres of Cook County land. Before the contract was entered into, and while the negotiations for it were going on, the plaintiff Bennett visited Chicago and examined the Cook County land.

On these findings of fact, the court found against the defendant, and he made a motion to set aside such finding, and for a new trial. The motion was denied, and the defendant excepted. He then moved in arrest of judgment; but the motion was denied, and he excepted. The court then rendered judgment upon the findings, in favor of the plaintiffs and against the defendant, and the latter excepted. There is no exception by the defendant to any ruling of the court in the course of the trial; and the only question open for consideration is whether the judgment is supported by the special findings.

The opinion of the circuit court, held by Judge Blodgett, accompanying its findings and forming part of the record, is reported as Bennett v. McGillin, 28 Fed. Rep. 411. The opinion states that the controversy in the case is as to whether the plaintiffs were bound to accept the Cook County land at the price of $168,000, and make up in cash the deficiency in that price, or whether the plaintiffs could insist that the credit for the $191,150 shortage on the cattle should be applied first to extinguish the payment of $168,000 to be made in Cook County land, and then upon the amount to be secured by the $182,000 of notes to fall due in July and November, 1886, thus leaving a balance of $108,150 due to the plaintiffs; and that the suit to recover that balance was brought on the ground that, the defendant having refused to give his notes, such balance became at once a money demand.

The court took the view that when the actual count of the cattle showed a shortage of 7,646 head in the number necessary to make up the 12,500 the defendant might properly have refused to accept the property, and have put the plaintiffs in default on their part of the contract; but that he elected to accept what the plaintiffs had to deliver, and must be held to have assented thereby to such readjustment of the terms of the contract as was made necessary by the changed facts; that the contract gave to the defendant the option of paying $168,000 of the purchase money by conveying the Cook County land; that if the defendant declined to make the conveyance, or was unable to give a good title, the $168,000 would at once become a money payment, payable in cash on the 15th of July, 1885; and that, if the plaintiffs delivered the whole number of 12,500 cattle, they would be entitled to the two notes of $66,000 each, and also to a deed of the Cook County land; or to the $168,000 in cash in case the defendant should refuse, or be unable, to make a deed.

The court was therefore of opinion that the $168,000 was to be treated as a present or cash payment; that the deficiency in cattle, of $191,150, being 7,646 head at $25 per head, which was to be credited to the defendant, should be appropriated in liquidation of the cash payment of $168,000, such credit being thus applied to the cash payment which the defendant would be called upon to make in case he should be unable to make the title at the time called for; that the $168,000 to be liquidated by the land was a present payment, whether made in money or land; that if, by the terms of the contract, the defendant was entitled to a credit equal to or exceeding the $168,000, that credit should be applied thereon, rather than upon the deferred payments to be evidenced by notes, because the $168,000 was a payment down, to be made on the 15th of July, 1885; that, therefore, as $100,000 had been paid in cash on the $400,000 purchase price, leaving $300,000 due, a credit thereon of the $191,150 deficiency in cattle left due to the plaintiffs $108,850, for which amount the court held that the defendant should have given his notes, payable in July and November, 1886, with interest at 8 per cent per annum; and that, as he declined to give such notes, or any notes, such balance became a present demand, for which the plaintiffs could sue. It therefore ordered judgment for the plaintiffs, for $108,850, with interest at 6 per cent from July 15, 1885.

Although, as appears by the bill of exceptions, the defendant at the trial introduced evidence, under the objections and exceptions of the plaintiffs, of the circumstances attending the execution of the contract, of the relative situation of the parties, and of the negotiations, correspondence and interviews between them and their agents, leading up to its execution, to enable the court better to understand and construe the contract, the defendant now seriously alleges as error the admission of such parol evidence. The point is not tenable. It appears, from the findings of fact, that the court considered the evidence so introduced by the defendant; and he cannot now object to it.

We are of opinion that the conclusion of law of the circuit court, from the findings of fact, was correct. Of course, the credit of $191,150 for the 7,646 head of cattle deficient, at $25 per head, was not intended by the contract to be applied on the cash payment of $25,000, made April 16, 1885, or on the payment of $75,000 provided for by the promissory notes made April 16, 1885, and due July 25, 1885. The question of a shortage in the number of cattle was not to be determined, and was not determined, before the 15th of July, 1885, and the contract does not provide for repaying any part of the $100,000. Therefore, the credit of $191,150 could be applied only on the $300,000 remaining unpaid on the 15th of July, 1885. On that day the payment of $168,000 was to be made. By the contract, if there was an excess of cattle over 12,500 head, the payment to be made by the defendant on that day would be more than $168,000 (exclusive of the $182,000 payable in 1886), but that excess was to be paid in cash. If there was a shortage in the number of cattle, and a credit to be made to the defendant therefor on the $400,000 purchase price, the amount of that credit was to be made on the 15th of July, 1885, the same day the $168,000 was to be paid. It is clear, therefore, that the amount of the excess was to be added to that payment, or the amount of the credit was to be deducted therefrom. The payment to be made on the 15th of July, 1885, would be greater or less than the $168,000, as the number of cattle exceeded or fell short of 12,500 head. The $108,850 became due July 15, 1885, and the defendant, according to the terms of the contract, ought then to have given his notes therefor, payable, one half July 1, 1886, and one half November 1, 1886. He refused to give such notes. As the payments to be made July 1, 1886, and November 1, 1886, were not due on July 15, 1885, and a vendor's lien was expressly reserved in respect of those payments, there is no solution of the problem except to deduct from the $191,150 deficiency in cattle the $168,000 payment to be made in land or money, July 15, 1885, leaving $23,150, and to deduct that from the $182,000 payable in 1886, leaving $108,850 due to the plaintiffs, with interest from July 15, 1885, for which sum judgment was had. On the facts found, showing that the defendant was not prepared or able to deliver to the plaintiffs, on the 15th of July, 1885, a deed for the 84 acres of land in Cook County, Illinois, the $168,000 became on that day a cash payment.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

JAMES C. PENNIE, Administrator, etc.,
Pff. in Err.,

C. REIS, Treasurer of the POLICE LIFE AND HEALTH INSURANCE FUND of the City and County of San Francisco.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 464-472.)

Admissions by demurrer—construction of statute not admitted by—fund created by law for police officers may, by law, be devoted to other purposes—vested right—repeal of law.

1. A demurrer admits only allegations of fact and not conclusions of law.
2. A demurrer does not admit that the construction of a statute set forth in the pleading demurred to is the correct one, nor that the statute imposes the obligations or confers the rights which the pleading alleges.
3. Where a statute for the pay of police officers provided that two dollars a month be retained from the pay of each officer, for a fund, a certain sum of which should, on the death of each officer, be paid to his representatives, such fund, until such death, can be applied to a different purpose by the Legislature.
4. There was no contract by the State that the disposition of the fund should always continue as originally provided; and until the event happens upon which the money was to be paid, there is no vested right in the representatives of such officer to such payment.
5. Such statute having been repealed before the death of the intestate, his expectancy in such fund was thereby revoked, and the sum claimed therefrom by his representatives was no longer subject to the provisions of such statute, and cannot be recovered by them.

[No. 1260.]

Submitted Dec. 2, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California, to review a judgment denying a writ of mandate to compel the Treasurer of San Francisco, California, to pay to the administrator of a police officer a sum of money claimed to be due from a fund created under the California Act of April 1, 1878, for the benefit of police officers, and dismissing the petition for said writ. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Field:

This case comes from the Supreme Court of the State of California. The petitioner is the administrator of one Edward A. Ward, deceased, who was a police officer of the City and County of San Francisco from the 24th of September, 1869, until his death, which occurred on the 13th of March, 1889.

On the 1st of April, 1878, an Act of the Legislature of California was approved, entitled "An Act to Enable the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco to Increase the Police Force of said City and County, and Provide for the Appointment, Regulation and Payment thereof." (Statutes of California of 1877-78, p. 879.) The first section of this Act authorized the Board of Supervisors to increase the existing force of the police, which consisted of one hundred and fifty members, not exceeding two hundred and fifty more, the whole number not to make in all more than four hundred; and provided that they should be appointed and governed in the same manner as the then existing force. The second section declared that the compensation of the two hundred and fifty, or such part thereof as the board might allow, should not exceed $102 a month for each one, and that the compensation of those then in office should continue at the rate prescribed by the Acts under which they were appointed until June 1, 1879, when their pay should be fixed by a board of commissioners created under the Act; that the police officers then in office should be known as the "old police," and those appointed under the Act as the "new police;" and that the officers subsequently appointed to fill vacancies on the old police should receive the same pay as the new police, subject to the condition that the treasurer of said city and county should "retain from the pay of each police officer the sum of two dollars per month, to be paid into a fund to be known as the 'Police Life and Health Insurance Fund,'" to be administered as provided in the Act. The mayor, auditor and treasurer of the City and County of San Francisco were constituted a board to be known as the "Police Life and Health Insurance Board," and required from time to time to invest, as it might deem best, the moneys of the Police Life and Health Insurance Fund in various designated securities, to be held by the treasurer, subject to the order of the board. The Act declared that upon the death of any member of the police force after the first day of June, 1878, there should be paid, by the treasurer, out of the said Life and Health Insurance Fund, to his legal representative, the sum of one thousand dollars; that in case any officer should resign from bad health or bodily infirmity, there should be paid to him, from that fund, the amount of the principal which he may have contributed thereto; and that, in case such fund should not be sufficient to pay the demand upon it, such demand should be registered and paid in the order of its registry, out of the funds as received. Ward having been a police officer whilst this Act was in force, the administrator of his estate demanded of the treasurer the one thousand dollars provided by it. There was in the treasury at the time the sum of forty thousand dollars. The treasurer having refused to pay the demand, the administrator applied to the supreme court for a writ of mandate upon him to compel its payment. To the petition for that writ the treasurer demurred on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, or entitle the petitioner to the writ of mandate, or to any relief whatever; and that the Act of the Legislature, passed March 4, 1889, entitled "An Act to Create a Police Relief, Health and Life Insurance and Pension Fund in the Several Counties, Cities and Towns, Cities and Towns of the State," was a valid and constitutional enactment. (Statutes of California, 1889, p. 56.) This Act creates a board of trustees of the police relief and pension fund of the police department in each county, city and county, city or town, to be known as the board of police pension-fund commissioners; and provides for its organization and the administration of the fund, and for pensions to officers over sixty years of age, who have been in the service over twenty years, to those who have become physically disabled in the performance of their duties, and to the widows and children of those who lose their lives in the discharge of their duties, and for the payment of certain sums of money to the widows or children of those who die from natural causes after ten and less than twenty years' service, and regulates the evidence of disability; and that retired officers shall report to the chief of police at certain stated periods, and perform duty under certain circumstances, and for the forfeiture of pensions by misconduct, and for the meetings of the board, and prescribes their duties as to the fund.

Sections 12 and 13 of the Act are as follows:

"Sec. 12. The board of supervisors, or other governing authority, of any county, city and county, city or town, shall, for the purposes of said 'police relief and pension fund' hereinbefore mentioned, direct the payment annually, and when the tax levy is made, into said fund of the following moneys:

"First. Not less than five nor more than ten per centum of all moneys collected and received from licenses for the keeping of places wherein spirituous, malt or other intoxicating liquors are sold.

"Second. One half of all moneys received from taxes or from licenses upon dogs.

"Third. All moneys received from fines imposed upon the members of the police force of said county, city and county, city or town, for violation of the rules and regulations of the police department.

182 U. S.

"Fourth. All proceeds of sales of unclaimed property.

"Fifth. Not less than one fourth nor more than one half of all moneys received from licenses from pawnbrokers, billiard-hall keepers, second-hand dealers and junk stores.

"Sixth. All moneys received from fines for carrying concealed weapons.

"Seventh. Twenty-five per centum of all fines collected in money for violation of county, city and county, city or town ordinances.

"Eighth. All rewards given or paid to members of such police force, except such as shall be excepted by the chief of police.

"Ninth. The treasurer of any county, city and county, city or town shall retain from the pay of each member of police department the sum of two dollars per month, to be forthwith paid into said police relief and pension fund, and no other or further retention or deduction shall be made from such pay for any other fund or purpose whatever.

"Sec. 13. Any police, life and health insurance fund, or any fund provided by law, heretofore existing in any county, city and county, city or town for the relief or pensioning of police officers, or their life or health insurance, or for the payment of a sum of money on their death, shall be merged with, paid into, and constitute a part of the fund created under the provisions of this Act; and no person who has resigned or been dismissed from said police department shall be entitled to any relief from such fund: Provided, That any person who, within one year prior to the passage of this Act, has been dismissed from the police department for incompetency or inefficiency, and which incompetency or inefficiency was caused solely by sickness or disability contracted or suffered while in service as a member thereof, and who has, prior to said dismissal, served for twelve or more years as such member, shall be entitled to all the benefits of this Act."

The Act also repealed all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict with its provisions. Under this Act the treasurer refused to pay the money demanded by the administrator of Ward. The Supreme Court of the State held that this latter Act was a valid law, and that it repealed the former Act, and denied the prayer of the petitioner and dismissed the writ.

From that judgment the administrator has brought the case to this court on a writ of error.

Messrs. Alfred Clarke and James A. Johnson, for plaintiff in error:

The validity of a contract cannot be impaired by state legislation.

Douglass v. Pike Co. 101 U. S. 677 (25: 988); McCracken v. Hayward, 48 U. S. 2 How. 606, 612 (11: 397, 399); Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 218 (6: 606); People v. Ingersoll, 58 N. Y. 1; Goggins v. Turnispeed, 1 S. C. 80, 7 Am. Rep. 23; Stein v. Mobile, 49 Ala. 362, 20 Am. Rep. 263; Von Baumbach v. Bado, 9 Wis. 559.

The Legislature cannot alter the legal effect of a contract or violate its obligation.

King v. Dedham Bank, 15 Mass. 447; Ohio C. Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 57 U. S. 16 How. 416 (14: 997); Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 175 (17: 520); Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 294 (18: 88); Thompson v. Lee County, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 327 (18: 177); Mitchell v. Burlington, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 270 (18: 350); Lee County v. Rogers, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 181 (19: 160); Kenosha v. Lamson, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 477 (19: 725); Chicago v. Sheldon, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 55 (19: 597); White v. Hart, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 647 (20: 686); Osborn v. Nicholson, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 655 (20: 693); Olcott v. Suprs. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 678 (21: 382); Boyes v. Tabb, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 646 (21: 757).

If the law is so changed that the means of enforcing it are materially impaired, the obligation of the contract no longer remains the same.

Bronson v. Kinsie, 42 U. S. 1 How. 311 (11: 143); McCracken v. Haynard, 43 U. S. 2 How. 612 (11: 399); Gantly's Lessee v. Ewing, 44 U. S. 3 How. 717 (11: 798); Curran v. Arkansas, 56 U. S. 15 How. 804 (14: 705); Butz v. Muscatine, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 588 (19: 494); Walker v. Whitehead, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 814 (21: 357); Olcott v. Suprs. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 678 (21: 382); Gunn v. Barry, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 628 (21: 215); Jackson v. Lamphire, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 280 (7: 679); Green v. Biddle, 21 U. S. 8 Wheat. 1 (5: 547); Edwards v. Kearney, 96 U. S. 601 (24: 797); Taylor v. Stearns, 18 Gratt. 244; Nevitt v. Bank, 14 Miss. 513; Von Baumbach v. Bade, 9 Wis. 559.

These salary rights have been always enforced.

People v. Smyth, 28 Cal. 26; People v. Outton, Id. 51; Dolan v. Mayor, 68 N. Y. 274; McVeany v. Mayor, 80 N. Y. 185; Fitzsimmons v. Brooklyn, 102 N. Y. 536; Andrews v. Portland, 79 Me. 484; Nichols v. MacLean, 101 N. Y. 526; Andrews v. King, 77 Me. 281; Rule v. Tavt, 88 Kan. 765; Shaw v. Pima County (Ariz.) 18 Pac. 276; People v. Potter, 68 Cal. 127; Carroll v. Siebenhaier, 37 Cal. 195.

The Act of March 4th, 1889, deprives the plaintiff of property without due process of law.

This fund is a trust fund created by law for the uses and objects stated in the creative Act, and it ceases to be applicable to any other purpose.

People v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 85; Babcock v. Middleton, 20 Cal. 659; Creighton v. Pragg, 21 Cal. 119; Nevada Bank v. Steinmiz, 64 Cal. 816; Meyer v. Porter, 65 Cal. 69.

The Act of March 4, 1889, impairs the obligation of our contract with respondent, and thereby violates article 1, section 10, of the Federal Constitution.

Com. v. Wetherbee, 105 Mass. 149; Brady v. King, 58 Cal. 45; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15; Kelly v. Luning, 76 Cal. 811; Hutson v. Woodbridge Protection Dist. 79 Cal. 90; Floyd v. Blanding, 54 Cal. 45; Wolff v. New Orleans, 108 U. S. 367 (26: 399); Chas Chan Ping v. U. S. 130 U. S. 581 (32: 1068); Oakland Paving Co. v. Barstow, 79 Cal. 45; U. S. v. Reisinger, 128 U. S. 898 (32: 480); Jack v. Anderson, 57 Cal. 251; Boyd v. U. S. 116 U. S. 635-88 (29: 753).

Messrs. Davis Louderback and W. W. Morrow, for defendant in error:

The provision in the former Act, the Act of April 1st, 1878, that upon the death of a police officer the treasurer shall pay one thousand dollars to his legal representatives, does not create a vested right or property, and therefore does not fall within the protection of that provision of the National Constitution that a person shall not be deprived of his property without due process of law.

Randall v. Kreiger, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 143 (23: 126); Brenham v. Story, 89 Cal. 185; Re Lawrence, 1 Redf. 310; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 214; Guerin v. Moore, 25 Minn. 464, 465; Wallace v. Reddick, 119 Ill. 151, 6 West. Rep. 769; Morrison v. Rice, 35 Minn. 486.

It is like the wife's right to dower, which does not vest till death of husband. Prior thereto it may be changed or destroyed by legislation.

Re Lawrence, 1 Redf. 310; Merrill v. Sherburne, 1 N. H. 214; Barbour v. Barbour, 48 Me. 13, 14; Mages v. Young, 40 Miss. 169, 170; Guerin v. Moore, 25 Minn. 464, 465; Randall v. Kreiger, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 143 (23: 126); Boyd v. Harrison, 36 Ala. 588; Ware v. Owens, 42 Ala. N. S. 212; Bennett v. Harms, 51 Wis. 257; Morrison v. Rice, supra.

Till the payment of the price, Congress may withdraw the public lands from entry or sale.

Hale v. Gaines, 63 U. S. 22 How. 144 (16: 264); People v. Shearer, 30 Cal. 645; Hutton v. Frisbie, 37 Cal. 475; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Garcia, 64 Cal. 515.

Officers' emoluments, salaries, pensions and incidents are not contracts within those provisions of the Constitution of the United States and of the State of California which prohibit legislation impairing the obligation of contracts.

State v. Deves, R. M. Charlton's Rep. (Ga.) 400, 401; Miller v. Kister, 68 Cal. 144; Butler v. Pennsylvania, 51 U. S. 10 How. 416 (13: 478); Com. v. Mann, 5 Watts & S. 418; Com. v. Bacon, 6 Serg. & R. 22; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 518, 629 (4: 629, 657); Connor v. N. Y. 2 Sandf. 870; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 157; Connor v. Mayor, 5 N. Y. 285; Benford v. Gibson, 15 Ala. 524; Koontz v. Franklin County, 76 Pa. 157; County Comrs. v. Jones, 18 Minn. 202; Williams v. Newport, 12 Bush (Ky.) 438; State v. Douglas, 26 Wis. 432; Alexander v. McKenzie, 2 S. C. 81, 93; Newton v. Comrs. 100 U. S. 557, 558 (25: 711); Farrell v. Bridgeport, 45 Conn. 195; Smith v. Mayor, 37 N. Y. 520; Donahue v. Will County, 100 Ill. 108, 104; Standeford v. Wingate, 2 Duvall (Ky.) 443; Knoup v. Piqua Bank, 1 Ohio St. 616; Toledo Bank v. Bond, 1 Ohio St. 653, 656; Barker v. Pittsburg, 4 Pa. 49; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 47 U. S. 6 How. 548 (12: 552).

All affairs that concern state policy are under immediate control of the sovereignty of the State through the legislative department.

People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 68-103; People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 490; Park Comrs. v. Common Council, 28 Mich. 285, 286; Burch v. Hardwicke, 30 Gratt. 24; State v. Hunter, 38 Kan. 578; State v. Kansas City, 38 Kan. 593; Chicago v. Wright, 69 Ill. 326; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 554; Mayor v. State, 15 Md. 455, 456; Police Comrs. v. St. Louis, 3 Bush (Ky.) 597; Diamond v. Cain, 21 La. Ann. 309; State v. Leovy, 21 La. Ann. 538; People v. Draper, 25 Barb. 344;

People v. Shepard, 86 N. Y. 285; Farrell v. Bridgeport, 45 Conn. 195; Cobb v. Portland, 55 Me. 883; Andrews v. King, 77 Ma. 280; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 85.

Public funds may be appropriated by the State to such public uses or purposes as it may determine.

Creighton v. San Francisco, 42 Cal. 450; Ex parte Reis, 64 Cal. 238; Sangamon County v. Springfield, 68 Ill. 70; Aid Society v. Reis, 71 Cal. 681; Darlington v. Mayor, 81 N. Y. 164; Guilford v. Cornell, 18 Barb. 615; U. S. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 332 (21: 601); New Orleans v. Clark, 95 U. S. 654 (24: 528); Palmer v. Fitts, 51 Ala. 492; Matter of Buffalo, 68 N. Y. 171; State v. St. Louis County Court, 84 Mo. 670; St. Louis v. Shields, 52 Mo. 354; Sinton v. Ashbury, 41 Cal. 530; Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 612; Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 288; People v. Burr, 18 Cal. 351; Beals v. Amador County, 85 Cal. 632, 638; San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 558; People v. Kerr, 27 N. Y. 189; People v. Alameda County, 26 Cal. 649; Litchfield v. Vernon, 41 N. Y. 128; People v. Pucheco, 27 Cal. 209.

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

It was contended in the court below that this latter Act of March 4, 1889, violated that provision of the Constitution of the United States, and of the State, which declares that no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law. The Supreme Court of the State held that this contention went on the theory that the deceased police officer had, at the time of his death, a vested property right in the one thousand dollars of public money which the former Statute had directed to be paid to his legal representative upon his death. The petitioner now insists that this statement of his contention below is erroneous; that he did not then contend and does not now contend that the fund in the hands of the treasurer was public money, but private money accumulated from the contributions of the members of the police force, and that by Ward's contribution the sum claimed became, on his death,—like money due on a life insurance policy,—property of his estate. Such, at least, is his position, if we rightly understand it. Some plausibility is given to it by the language of the petition to which the treasurer demurred. The petition alleges that Ward, the deceased, contributed, out of his salary as a police officer, to the Police Life and Health Insurance Fund, the sum of two dollars per month for each month from April 1, 1878, to and including the month of March, 1889, and that the whole amount of his contribution to that fund was $264; that, upon his death, there was due to the petitioner, as the legal representative of Ward, the sum of one thousand dollars, payable out of that fund; that it was the duty of the treasurer of that fund to pay it; and that there was in his possession, at the time, forty thousand dollars applicable to its payment.

The petitioner now contends that these several allegations are to be taken as literally true, from the fact that the treasurer demurred to the petition. But a demurrer admits only allegations of fact and not conclusions of law. When, therefore, a plaintiff relies for recovery upon compliance with the provisions of a statute, and attempts to set forth conformity with them, the court will look to that statute and take the allegations as intended to meet its provisions, notwithstanding the inaccuracy of any statement respecting them. If the pleading misstates the effect and purpose of the statute upon which the party relies, the adverse party, in demurring to such pleading, does not admit the correctness of the construction, or that the statute imposes the obligations or confers the rights which the party alleges. Dillon v. Barnard, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 430, 437 [22: 673, 676]. Notwithstanding, therefore, in this case, the petitioner avers that the deceased police officer contributed out of his salary two dollars a month, pursuant to the law in question, and, in substance, that the fund which was to pay the one thousand dollars claimed was created out of like contributions of the members of the police, the court, looking to the Statute, sees that, in point of fact, no money was contributed by the police officer out of his salary, but that the money which went into that fund under the Act of April 1, 1878, was money from the State retained in its possession for the creation of this very fund, the balance—one hundred dollars—being the only compensation paid to the police officer. Though called part of the officer's compensation, he never received it or controlled it, nor could he prevent its appropriation to the fund in question. He had no such power of disposition over it as always accompanies ownership of property. The Statute, in legal effect, says that the police officer shall receive as compensation, each month, not exceeding one hundred dollars, or such sum as may be fixed after June 1, 1879, by a board of commissioners created under the Act, and that, in addition thereto, the State will create a fund by appropriating two dollars each month for that purpose, from which, upon his resignation for bad health or bodily infirmity, or dismissal for mere incompetency not coupled with any offense against the laws of the State, a certain sum shall be paid to him, and, upon his death, a certain sum shall go to his legal representative.

Being a fund raised in that way, it was entirely at the disposal of the government, until, by the happening of one of the events stated—the resignation, dismissal or death of the officer—the right to the specific sum promised became vested in the officer or his representative. It requires no argument or citation of authorities to show that, in making a disposition of a fund of that character, previous to the happening of one of the events mentioned, the State impaired no absolute right of property in the police officer. The direction of the State, that the fund should be one for the benefit of the police officer or his representative, under certain conditions, was subject to change or revocation at any time, at the will of the Legislature. There was no contract on the part of the State that its disposition should always continue as originally provided. Until the particular event should happen upon which the money or a part of it was to be paid, there was no vested right in the officer to such payment. His interest in the fund was, until then, a mere expectancy created by the law, and liable to be revoked or destroyed by the same authority. The law of April 1, 1878, having been repealed before the death of the intestate, his expectancy became impossible of realization; the money which was to pay the amount claimed had been previously transferred and mingled with another fund, and was no longer subject to the provisions of that Act. Such being the nature of the intestate's interest in the fund provided by the Law of 1878, there was no right of property in him of which he or his representative has been deprived.

If the two dollars a month, retained out of the alleged compensation of the police officer, had been in fact paid to him, and thus become subject to his absolute control, and after such payment he had been induced to contribute it each month to a fund on condition that, upon his death, a thousand dollars should be paid out of it to his representative, a different question would have been raised with respect to the disposition of the fund, or at least of the amount of the decedent's contribution to it. Upon such a question we are not required to express any opinion. It is sufficient that the two dollars retained from the police officer each month, though called in the law a part of his compensation, were, in fact, an appropriation of that amount by the State each month to the creation of a fund for the benefit of the police officers named in that law, and, until used for the purposes designed, could be transferred to other parties and applied to different purposes by the Legislature.

Judgment affirmed.

R. H. PAUL, Appt.,

v.

HENRY B. CULLUM.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 559-553.)

Partnership—who is partner—profits and losses—power of partner to assign partnership assets for benefit of creditors—agency.

1. The contribution of money or property by an incoming partner is not essential to the creation of a partnership. It is competent for the prior partners, in consideration of the new partner undertaking the entire charge and control of the business of the company, to give him an interest as partner in the property which is to constitute, at the outset, the whole capital as a partnership.
2. One who is to receive a certain share of the profits and bear a like share of the losses in the business of selling goods of a firm is a partner.
3. A partner to whom is committed the entire direction and supervision of the partnership property can, in a general assignment of the partnership effects for the benefit of the firm creditors, represent another partner who has expressly authorized him to bargain, sell, hypothecate, and in every way deal with the partnership property. Such assignment executed by him binds the other partner.

[No. 107.]

Argued Nov. 13, 14, 1889. Decided Dec. 16, 1889.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona, affirming a judgment of a District Court of that Territory in favor of plaintiff in an action of replevin. Affirmed.

480

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. W. Hallett Phillips and Benj. Morgan, for appellant:

Harlow had no interest in the stock from the fact that he was to share profits and losses, as there were no profits to share and the business was terminated by the assignment.

Blanchard v. Coolidge, 23 Pick. 151; Alfaro v. De La Torre, 24 Week. Rep. 510.

Whether the agreement constituted a partnership in the stock is a question of construction, and therefore one of law.

Kingsbury v. Tharp, 61 Mich. 216.

Sharing profit and loss is not proof of partnership in stock.

Donnell v. Harsha, 67 Mo. 170; Clifton v. Howard, 89 Mo. 192.

The agreement looked merely to the future association, and until then no interest in the new associate accrued.

Drennan v. London Assurance Co. 113 U. S. 51 (28:919); London Assurance Co. v. Drennan, 116 U. S. 461 (29:688).

The power of attorney to C. E. Harlow does not purport to empower Harlow to perform any partnership act for Lord, much less such an act as the assignment in question. For this a special authorization was necessary.

Woodbridge v. Irving, 23 Fed. Rep. 676; Hook v. Stone, 84 Mo. 329; Wells v. March, 30 N. Y. 844; Palmer v. Myers, 48 Barb. 511.

While the partner who did not join in the assignment may ratify it, such ratification cannot relate back so as to invalidate intervening attachments.

Holland v. Drake, 29 Ohio St. 445; Stein v. La Dow, 18 Minn. 412.

Mr. Lucien Birdseye, for appellee:

An assignee for the benefit of creditors can maintain an action in his individual character to recover a claim due the assignor. He is not required to sue as trustee.

Ogden v. Prentiss, 33 Barb. 160; Richardson v. Mead, 27 Barb. 178; Eastern Plank Road Co. v. Vaughan, 14 N. Y. 546, 555; Merritt v. Seaman, 6 N. Y. 168; Marie v. Garrison, 83 N. Y. 14, 30; Western R. Co. v. Nolan, 48 N. Y. 513; Litchfield v. Flint, 104 N. Y. 543; Stillwell v. Carpenter, 62 N. Y. 639; Beers v. Shannon, 73 N. Y. 292; Thompson v. Whitmarsh, 100 N. Y. 85; Buckland v. Gallup, 105 N. Y. 453; Bingham v. Marine Bank, 112 N. Y. 661.

Mr Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

In an action brought in a District Court of the Territory of Arizona, by G. H. Thompson against C. H. Lord and W. W. Williams, partners under the name of Lord & Williams, an attachment was sued out, October 28, 1881, and levied by the sheriff, the present appellant, upon "certain goods, wares and merchandise, being the entire stock of Lord & Williams." H. B. Cullum, claiming to be the owner of the property at the time the attachment was levied, brought this action against the sheriff to recover possession thereof, or its value, in case delivery could not be had. The answer put in issue the plaintiff's ownership of the goods, and averred that, when taken under the attachment, they were owned by and in possession of Lord & Williams. The pleadings, therefore, raised the question of the ownership of the goods attached.

182 U. S.

The district court made the following finding of facts:

"1. That on the 25th day of October, A. D. 1881, at the City of Tucson, Charles H. Lord, W. W. Williams and C. E. Harlow, then, and for several months before that time, composing the mercantile firm of Lord & Williams Company, and exclusively engaged in general commercial business, viz., buying and selling goods, being insolvent, made and executed as such firm a general assignment of all their property, not exempt from execution, for the equal benefit of all their creditors, to Henry B. Cullum, the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff immediately accepted said assignment and took possession of the property conveyed by it, including the property mentioned in the complaint, which property was a portion of the property of the said Lord & Williams Company at the time of the assignment. The assignment was executed in the firm name by W. W. Williams, and also signed by said Williams and said Harlow individually, and by the said Lord by his attorney, the said C. E. Harlow, the said Harlow then holding a general power of attorney from him, and the said Lord being then absent from the Territory, and sick, and his whereabouts being entirely unknown at that time to his partners and family, though every reasonable effort had been made to discover it, and that said assignment was ratified and approved by said Lord at the earliest opportunity.

"2. That on the said 25th day of October, A. D. 1881, and for a long time previous thereto, at said city, the said Charles H. Lord and W. W. Williams were copartners in the banking business and in dealing in live stock under the firm name of Lord & Williams; that on said last mentioned day the said firm of Lord & Williams, being then insolvent, made and executed a general assignment of all its property, not exempt from execution, for the general benefit of all its creditors, to the said Henry B. Cullum, who thereupon immediately entered upon the possession of the same and accepted the trust. Said assignment was executed in the firm name by said Williams, and also signed by him, individually, and by said Harlow, as Lord's attorney in fact.

"3. That said assignments were made in good faith by the said firms respectively, and that at the time of making the same the assignors had full confidence in the ability and integrity of said Henry B. Cullum.

"4. That on the 28th day of October, A. D. 1881, one G. Howard Thompson commenced a suit in this court against the said Lord & Williams, and sued out an attachment therein against the property of the said Lord & Williams, and placed the same in the hands of the defendant, Robert H. Paul, who was then the sheriff of Pima County aforesaid; and the said Paul, claiming that the said goods and property in the complaint mentioned and described were then the property of the said Lord & Williams, and not the property of Cullum, the plaintiff, seized and attached the same on October 28, 1881, and held the same until replevied in this suit.

"5. That at the time the property was so seized and attached it was the property of the plaintiff, and not subject to such seizure or attachment.

"6. That its value was $35,000."

The plaintiff having taken the property into possession, the judgment was that he retain possession and recover his costs. That judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the Territory, the record in that case containing an agreed "statement on appeal," upon which, in connection with the finding of facts, the case was heard and determined in that court.

The appellant contends that there was no evidence in the record of an assignment by Lord & Williams, and insists that the second paragraph of the finding of facts could only have reference to the assignment made, on the 25th of October, 1881, by the Lord & Williams Company. But the finding plainly imports that there were two assignments to Cullum on the same day, one by the Lord & Williams Company, and the other by Lord & Williams. The absence from the record, as prepared for the Supreme Court of the Territory, of the deed of assignment by Lord & Williams—if any such deed was executed—is explained by the fact that the real contest between the parties was in respect to the assignment in the name of the Lord & Williams Company for the benefit of its creditors. But it is not essential in this case to inquire whether an assignment was made by the firm of Lord & Williams as distinguished from the Lord & Williams Company; for it is not claimed that the goods seized under the attachment were embraced by any other assignment than the one made by the latter firm.

It appears that prior to March 1, 1881, C. H. Lord and W. W. Williams were engaged as partners, under the style of Lord & Williams, in the buying and selling of goods, as well as in the business of banking. The latter business was kept distinct from the former, although both were carried on in the same building.

On the day last named the following written agreement was entered into between the parties signing it:

"Tucson, A. T., March 1st, 1881.

"This agreement, entered into by and between Lord and Williams and C. E. Harlow, all of Tucson, Arizona Territory, witnesseth: That the said Lord and Williams have this day and date taken into partnership the said C. E. Harlow under the following conditions: They agree that an inventory of their stock of merchandise shall be taken under the supervision of said Harlow and after its value shall be agreed upon by the parties interested the same shall be turned over and delivered to the said Harlow as a capital stock, to be sold with his entire direction and supervision under the name and style of Lord & Williams Company for the term of one year from the date of this agreement. The said Harlow shall attend to all the business of the new concern, such as the payment of debts, employment of help, purchase of goods, payment of same, and all expenses attending the proper and legitimate carrying on of the business; shall open a new set of books, in which a complete and true exhibit of the business shall be kept, and always open to the parties interested for inspection; shall, as far as possible, do a cash business; shall remit money to pay debts incurred as fast as the same may be realized from sales; shall not sign, indorse or negotiate any notes, bonds or agreements using the new firm name unless strictly in connection with the business of the house, and only then after consultation with one or both the other members of the firm; shall cause, at the end of each month, an exhibit to be made of the condition of the firm in the shape of a balance-sheet; and finally, every six months shall cause an inventory to be taken of all the property and the books balanced, after which any profit there may be shall be divided as follows: The said Lord and Williams shall have eight tenths of the same, and the said Harlow two tenths of the same. In case of loss, the same ratio shall prevail in sharing the same. In this contract it is distinctly understood by the parties interested that the partnership only pertains to that of merchandising, and has no connection in any shape or manner with any business the said Lord and Williams may have jointly or severally outside. Any trade or business they may be able to direct to the new concern they shall do so, any profits to be derived from same to be considered identical with those arising from business with other parties. They, however, shall have at cost price any merchandise they may need or require for their own individual account. In case said Harlow shall add any cash to the capital stock he shall receive for same ten per cent interest per year, which amount shall be charged to the general exchange and interest account.

"C. H. LORD,
"W. W. WILLIAMS,
"C. E. HARLOW."

The goods whose ownership is herein involved constituted a part of the stock of merchandise referred to in the above agreement. Nevertheless, appellant contends they were liable to be taken under the attachment sued out by Thompson against the property of Lord & Williams.

This contention rests, in part, upon the assumption that the agreement of March 1, 1881, did not work a change in the ownership of the goods, or establish a partnership between Lord and Williams and Harlow, or pass any interest whatever in the property to Harlow; but constituted the latter simply an agent for the other parties in respect to their mercantile business, thereafter to be carried on under the name of the Lord & Williams Company, as distinguished from their banking business, to be carried on, as before, under the name of Lord & Williams. It is, consequently, insisted that the goods levied upon belonged to the firm of Lord & Williams at the time the attachment was levied.

The words of the agreement forbid such an interpretation of its provisions. The only fact tending to support the position of appellant is, that Harlow did not put any goods into the new concern, nor pay any money for an interest in the property, or for the privilege of becoming a partner with Lord & Williams in their mercantile business to be conducted under his direction and supervision. But that is not a controlling fact in view of all that is disclosed by the agreement. The contribution by Harlow of money or property was not essential to the creation of the partnership. It is competent for Lord & Williams, in consideration of his undertaking the entire charge and control of the business of the Lord & Williams Company, to give him an interest—though not necessarily an equal interest—in the property which was to constitute, at the outset, the whole capital of the partnership. And that is what they did. The agreement, it will be observed, prescribes the conditions upon which Harlow was "taken into partnership" by Lord & Williams in respect to the property placed in his hands "as a capital stock" for the Lord & Williams Company. He was to open "a new set of books," exhibiting therein the business of the "new concern" or the "new firm," the profits of such business to be divided, at stated periods, upon the basis of eight tenths to Lord and Williams and two tenths to Harlow, and the losses to be borne in the same ratio. That which Harlow was to receive when the books were balanced cannot be regarded merely as compensation for services rendered as agent or manager for Lord and Williams, but as the stipulated part of the profits, as profits, accruing to him as a partner in the new firm of the Lord & Williams Company, the owner of the partnership property. He became, by the agreement, one of the joint owners and possessors of that property. That instrument does not so declare, in terms, but such is the necessary implication of its words.

While, in the absence of written stipulations or other evidence showing a different intention, partners will be held to share equally both profits and losses, it is entirely competent for them to determine, as between themselves, the basis upon which profits shall be divided and losses borne, without regard to their respective contributions, whether of money, labor or experience, to the common stock. Story on Partnership, §§ 23, 24. Such matters are entirely within the discretion of parties about to assume the relation of partners. If anything further was needed to prove that Harlow became a partner with, and not a mere agent or employé for, Lord and Williams in their mercantile business, it is found in that clause of the agreement providing that "the partnership only pertains to that of merchandising, and has no connection in any shape or manner with any business the said Lord and Williams may have jointly or severally outside."

A different conclusion, it is contended, is required by the decisions of this court in Drennan v. London Assurance Co. 113 U. S. 51 [28:919], and London Assurance Co. v. Drennan, 116 U. S. 461, 472 [29:688]. The principal question in that case was whether one Arndt became, by virtue of a certain written agreement, a member of an existing partnership, so as to give him an interest in its property within the meaning of a contract of fire insurance, which provided that the policy should be void if the property insured "be sold or transferred, or any change takes place in title or possession (except by succession by reason of the death of the insured), whether by legal process or judicial decree, or voluntary transfer or conveyance."

When the case was first before this court it was held that the agreement there in question did not make Arndt a member of the existing partnership, but only contemplated his becoming a member of the firm at a future time and after the performance of certain conditions, one of which was the creation of an incorporated company. It was observed in the same case that the parties ex industria excluded the possibility of Arndt's acquiring an interest in or control over the property insured in advance of the formation of such corporation.

When that case was brought here a second time, the court, after stating that mere participation in profits would not give an interest in the property contrary to the real intention of the parties, said: "Persons cannot be made to assume the relation of partners as between themselves, when their purpose is that no partnership shall exist. There is no reason why they may not enter into an agreement whereby one of them shall participate in the profits arising from the management of particular property without his becoming a partner with the others, or without his acquiring an interest in the property itself, so as to effect a change of title."

The case now before us is altogether different. It cannot be said that the parties excluded the possibility of Harlow's acquiring an interest in the property. They did not form a partnership in which, as between themselves, there was to be a community of interest only in profits and losses, leaving the property in the goods to remain in Lord and Williams. On the contrary, the written agreement shows a purpose to put the goods themselves into partnership, and to establish a community of property, as well as a community of profit and loss among its several members.

For the reasons stated we are of opinion that the agreement of March 1, 1881, created between the parties signing it a partnership by the name of the Lord & Williams Company, and that the stock of merchandise therein mentioned became the property of such partnership. It results that, if the deed of assignment of October 25, 1881, was not invalid upon the ground urged by the defendant and to be presently adverted to, the right of property passed by that instrument to the appellee, for the benefit of the creditors of the Lord & Williams Company, before the goods were seized under the attachment against the property of Lord & Williams.

Thus far we have assumed that the deed of assignment in question was executed by Lord. But the appellant contends that it was void, as against Thompson, the plaintiff in the attachment; because not so executed as to become a valid assignment of the property described in it. The deed was signed by Williams and Harlow, and by the Lord & Williams Company. It was executed for Lord by Harlow, as his attorney in fact. Harlow acted for him under a written authority, dated April 6, 1881, which, among other things, constituted Harlow attorney in fact for Lord, with power "to bargain and agree for, buy, sell, mortgage, hypothecate, and in any and every way and manner deal in and with goods, wares and merchandise, choses in action, and other property in possession or in action, and to make, do and transact all and every kind of business of what nature and kind soever, and also for me and in my name, and as my act and deed, to sign, seal, execute, deliver and acknowledge such deeds, covenants, indentures, agreements, mortgages, hypothecations, bottomries, charter-parties, bills of lading, bills, bonds, notes, receipts, evidences of debt, releases and satisfactions of mortgage, judgment and other debts, and such other instruments in writing of whatever kind and nature as may be necessary or proper in the premises."

The argument of the appellant upon this branch of the case is, that the authority of one partner to make a general assignment of the partnership effects to a trustee for the benefit of creditors cannot be implied from the partnership relation merely; that Lord's general power of attorney did not authorize Harlow to act for him in a general assignment either of the property of the Lord & Williams Company or that of Lord & Williams; and that a special authorization was necessary to enable him to represent Lord in such a matter; further, that while Lord might subsequently ratify, as he did, the act of Harlow, such ratification occurred after the levy of Thompson's attachment, and could not relate back so as to invalidate that intervening attachment.

It is not necessary to consider all of these propositions; for we are of opinion that the above power of attorney, interpreted in the light of the relations in business of the parties to it, gave Harlow ample authority to represent Lord in any general assignment, made in good faith, of the property of the Lord & Williams Company for the benefit of its creditors. In respect to goods, wares, merchandise, choses in action and other property in possession or in action, and in respect to all business of whatever nature and kind, Harlow, for Lord, and in his name, was expressly authorized to bargain, agree for, buy, sell, mortgage and hypothecate the same, and in any and every way and manner to deal in and with such property and rights. And this authority was conferred while Harlow had, by another written agreement, to which Lord was a party, the entire direction and supervision of the property and business of the Lord & Williams Company. It would be extraordinary if a partner to whom was committed such direction and supervision of partnership property could not, in the matter of a general assignment of the partnership effects for the benefit of firm creditors, represent an absent partner who had given him the broad authority expressed in the above power of attorney.

Judgment affirmed.

THE IDAHO AND OREGON LAND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, Ptf. in Err. and Appt.,

v.

W. C. BRADBURY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 509-518.)

Motion to dismiss—review of territorial judgment—writ of error, or appeal—appeals from territorial courts—mechanics' lien—writ of error dismissed—findings of jury in equity suit—court may disregard findings—settlement—evidence.

1. Where a motion to dismiss for want of clerk's signature to authentication of record is made after it is too late to take a new appeal or writ of error, the court may allow the certificate of authentication to be perfected by adding the signature of the clerk.
2. A judgment or decree of the highest court of a Territory can be reviewed by this court, upon writ of error, only on the exceptions or questions of law presented by the record; and upon an appeal, on the rulings of the court below.
3. The Act of April 7, 1874, chapter 80, section 2 (18 Stat. 27, 28), permitting a writ of error to territorial courts, applies only to trial by jury in an action at common law, and does not apply to a trial of special issues by a jury in a suit in equity; suits in equity in the territorial courts, and actions in which the trial was not by jury, can be reviewed by this court only by appeal, and not by writ of error.
4. In appeals from a territorial court, the evidence taken at large cannot be brought up, but only a statement of facts and the rulings made at the trial and duly excepted to on the admission or rejection of evidence; and the authority of this court is limited to determining whether the court's findings of fact support its judgment or decree, and whether there is any error in such rulings, and does not extend to a consideration of the weight of evidence or its sufficiency to support the conclusions of the court.
5. A suit to enforce a mechanics' lien in Idaho Territory is a suit in equity, and therefore the writ of error in this case is dismissed, and the case considered as pending upon the appeal alone.
6. In an equity suit, the court may disregard the verdict and findings of a jury upon issues of fact submitted to them, either by setting them or any of them aside, or by letting them stand, and allowing them more or less weight in its final hearing and decree, according to its own view of the evidence in the cause. It is not necessary that a court of equity should formally set aside the verdict or finding of a jury, before proceeding to enter a decree which does not conform to it.
7. The action of the territorial district court in setting aside the general verdict in this case, and substituting its own findings of fact for the special findings of the jury, was a lawful exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, the propriety of which cannot be reviewed by this court; and it is immaterial whether the general verdict was consistent with the findings of the jury or with the evidence introduced at the trial.
8. The defendant in this case, having accepted the ditch made by plaintiff as completed, and used it, and made a settlement with the plaintiff therefor, cannot, in an action to enforce a lien thereon for the sum due on such settlement, object that the ditch was made wider and deeper than agreed in the original contract set out in the complaint.
9. It was not error on the trial to exclude testimony that the plaintiffs were told that defendant's vice-president and general manager had no authority to vary the dimensions of the ditch, where the offer of such testimony was not accompanied by an offer to show that such officer had, in fact, no such authority, and where the offer of the testimony was not renewed after the want of authority of the officer had been shown.
10. If the whole evidence is recited in the statement of the case, this court can consider it only for the purpose of passing upon the exceptions taken to the admission or rejection of parts of it, and not for the purpose of deciding whether the whole evidence supports the findings of the court.

[No. 105.]

Argued Nov. 13, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

IN ERROR AND APPEAL from a decree of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Idaho to review a decree for the foreclosure of a lien for the amount found due for its construction upon a ditch and the lands adjacent thereto, and for a sale of the premises and the payment out of the proceeds, to the plaintiffs, of such amount, and protest damages, and interest.

On motion to dismiss the writ of error, and on the merits. Writ of error dismissed and case considered as pending upon the appeal alone; and ordered that the record may be withdrawn and amended by procuring the signature of the clerk of the Supreme Court of the Territory to the certificate of authentication, and that, upon the return of the record so amended, the decree be affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. W. Holcomb and J. H. McGowan for plaintiff in error and appellant.

Messrs. Samuel Shellabarger and Jeremiah M. Wilson, for defendants in error and appellees:

In a case not tried by a jury the appellate jurisdiction can only be exercised by appeal.

On appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, the case, if otherwise properly here, will be determined upon the facts in the statement.

Neslin v. Wells, 104 U. S. 429 (26:808); Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618 (26:849); Gray v. Howe, 108 U. S. 18 (27:684); Eilers v. Boatman, 111 U. S. 357 (28:455).

This court is required to accept the findings of fact by the Supreme Court of the Territory as true on appeal to this court.

Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610 (25:421); Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 235 (26:1018); Cannon v. Pratt, 99 U. S. 619 (25:446); Story v. Black, 119 U. S. 285 (30:341); U. S. v. Hailley, 118 U. S. 238 (30:178); Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 35 (29:54).

There having been no exceptions taken to the verdict, findings of fact or conclusions of law, the assigned errors thereto will not be considered by this court.

Cogland v. Beard, 67 Cal. 308, Ainslie v. Idaho World Pr. Co. 1 Idaho, 641; People, Huston, v. Hunt, Id. 438; Fox v. West, Id. 782; Guthrie v. Phelan (Idaho) 6 Pac. 107; Young v. Martin, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 354 (19:418); Bacon v. Robson, 58 Cal. 399; Thatcher's Pr. 308, §§ 75, 81.

There being no exceptions to the findings, this court will presume that they are supported by the evidence.

Moyes v. Griffith, 85 Cal. 556; Hastings v. Cunningham, 85 Cal. 549; Wilson v. Dougherty, 45 Cal. 84; Putnam v. Sea, 8 Colo. 298; Merrill v. Chapman, 84 Cal. 251.

To be of any avail, exceptions must be drawn up so as to present distinctly the ruling or point raised, and must be signed by the presiding judge.

Young v. Martin, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 354 (19:

182 U. S.

418); Thatcher's Pr. p. 800, §§ 62, 63, p. 804, §§ 83, 85.

Where the statement or bill of exceptions does not purport to set out all the evidence given on the trial, an appellate court will not reverse the judgment for an instruction which depends upon the evidence for its correctness.

Thatcher's Pr. 800, §§ 63, 65; Wiggins v. Burkham, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 129 (19:884).

In equity cases like this the verdict is merely advisory; the judge may qualify, alter or set aside the verdict and find the facts.

Sweetser v. Dobbins, 65 Cal. 529; Bates v. Gage, 49 Cal. 126.

When a jury renders a general verdict and a special verdict, the latter will control the former if there is any inconsistency between them.

Leese v. Clark, 20 Cal. 888; Code Civ. Proc. § 385.

A corporation that has received and retained the consideration of a contract for its benefit cannot deny its liability thereon on the ground that the contract was ultra vires.

Main v. Casserly, 67 Cal. 127; Sedgwick on Stat. and Const. L. 73; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 418; Pisley v. Western P. R. Co. 38 Cal. 198; Foulke v. San Diego & G. S. R. Co. 15 Cal. 865.

Where the charge of the court, taken as a whole, fairly submitted the case to the jury, the judgment will not be disturbed because some instructions were refused which properly could have been given, or some of those given.

Boanston v. Gunn, 99 U. S. 660 (25:306); Thatcher's Pr. 153, § 19; Brooks v. Crosby, 23

Cal. 42; Conroy v. Duane, 45 Cal. 597; Siemers v. Eisen, 54 Cal. 418; Higgins v. Dewey, 107 Mass. 494, 9 Am. Rep. 63.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was commenced by Bradbury and Reinhart against the Idaho and Oregon Land Improvement Company by a complaint filed in a district court of the Territory of Idaho on September 24, 1888, alleging, in substance, that on April 13, 1883, the parties made an agreement in writing, by which the plaintiff agreed to construct, upon the defendant's land, and on a line designated by the defendant's engineer in charge of the work, a ditch four miles long, eight feet wide and two feet deep, and of a certain grade and slope, at certain prices by the cubic yard for the material moved, and on other terms expressed in the agreement (a copy of which was annexed); that on May 17, 1883, the parties made a supplemental agreement (a copy of which was also annexed) increasing the rate of compensation in some respects; that on June 1, 1883, after the ditch had been completed by the plaintiffs and accepted by the defendant, the parties came to a settlement, upon which it was ascertained and agreed that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiffs the sum of $16,774.49, of which $10,000 was paid, and for the rest of which the defendant gave its acceptance for the sum of $6,774.49, payable in fifteen days, which was duly presented at maturity, but in no part paid, and on June 27, 1883, was protested for nonpayment, and that sum, with interest at the rate of one and a half per cent a month, was now due from the defendant to the plaintiffs; and that the plaintiffs, in order to perfect a lien on the ditch and adjoining land as security for the payment of that sum, on July 13, 1883, filed with the recorder of the county, as required by chapter 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure of Idaho Territory, a claim (a copy of which was annexed to the complaint) stating the substance of the original and supplemental contracts, and the balance due as aforesaid.

132 U. S.

The complaint prayed for judgment directing a sale of the premises, and the application of the proceeds to the payment of the plaintiffs' claim, with interest as aforesaid, and costs, and twenty per cent damages, as provided by the statutes of the Territory, and also to the payment of the holders of any other liens who might come in; and that the plaintiffs might have judgment against the defendant for any deficiency in the proceeds of such sale to satisfy the amount due them, and for further relief.

The answer denied the completion of the ditch by the plaintiffs and its acceptance by the defendant, or that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiffs more than the sum of $500; and alleged that, if any settlement was made between the parties, it was under a misapprehension of facts caused by false and fraudulent statements of the plaintiffs that the ditch had been completed according to the contracts.

The court submitted several special issues to a jury, who found some of them in favor of the plaintiffs and failed to agree upon others, and returned a general verdict for the plaintiffs in the sum of $4,274.49 and interest.

The court set aside the general verdict, and made and filed findings of fact, adopting as part thereof the findings of the jury as far as they went, and substantially supporting all the allegations of the complaint; and from the facts so found made the following conclusions of law:

"1st. That the plaintiffs are entitled to a judgment for the sum of $10,107.52, and for costs, which includes the sum found due, interest and protest damages.

"2d. That the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree of foreclosure of the lien set forth in their complaint, and it is so ordered."

By the final decree, rendered at a hearing upon the pleadings "and upon the proofs, records and evidence produced by the respective parties, and the court having heard the proofs necessary to enable it to render judgment herein, and it appearing to the court from the proofs herein that there is now due to the plaintiffs from the defendant the sum of $10,107.52, for principal, damages and interest upon the debt set forth in the complaint, and that all the allegations in the complaint are true," the court ordered a sale of the premises by public auction; the payment, out of the proceeds, to the plaintiffs, of the sum of $10,107.52, with costs, and interest at the rate of ten per cent from the date of the decree; and the amount of any deficiency to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs.

The defendant moved for a new trial for "insufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict and findings," as well as for "errors in law, occurring at the trial, and excepted to."

485.

Upon this motion, the defendant filed a statement, which was certified by the judge as "the statement of the case," and contained parts of the testimony given and offered at the trial, and exceptions of the defendant to its admission or exclusion; instructions given to the jury and excepted to by the defendant; and a specification of twenty-one errors, touching the rulings upon evidence and the instructions to the jury, and the sufficiency of the evidence in the case and the findings of the jury to support the court's findings of fact and conclusions of law.

The defendant's motion for a new trial was overruled; and the defendant excepted to the ruling, and appealed "from the judgment and decree of foreclosure and sale" to the Supreme Court of the Territory, which adjudged "that the judgment of the court below be affirmed, and that the decree for foreclosure of mechanics' lien be modified so as that the lien shall hold only for the judgment, less the protest damages." (10 Pacific Reporter, 620). The defendant claimed an appeal, and sued out a writ of error.

In order to give this court jurisdiction of an appeal or writ of error, "an authenticated transcript of the record" of the court below must doubtless be filed in this court at the return term. Rev. Stat. § 997; Edmonson v. Bloomshire, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 806 [19: 91].

In the case before us, a motion to dismiss is now made, on the ground that the record is not authenticated, because neither the clerk nor the deputy clerk made the return "under his hand," as well as under the seal of the court, as required by Rule 8 of this court.

In support of this motion, reliance is placed on Blitz v. Brown, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 698 [19: 280], in which the only certificate of authentication was a blank form, wanting both the seal of the court below and the signature of the clerk, so that there was really no authentication whatever; and this court therefore dismissed the writ of error, but permitted the plaintiff in error to withdraw the record for the purpose of suing out a new writ.

But in the case at bar the certificate not only begins with setting out the name and office of the clerk as the maker of the certificate, but has appended to it the seal of the court, and lacks only the clerk's signature to make it conform to the best precedents. The question presented is not one of no authentication, but of irregular or imperfect authentication; not of jurisdiction, but of practice. It is therefore within the discretion of this court to allow the defect to be supplied. Considering that the motion to dismiss was not made until it was too late to take a new appeal or writ of error, justice requires that the record should be permitted to be withdrawn for the purpose of having the certificate of authentication perfected by adding the signature of the clerk.

In Idaho, as in other Territories, there is but one form of civil action, in which either legal or equitable remedies, or both, may be administered, through the intervention of a jury, or by the court itself, according to the nature of the relief sought, provided, however, that no party can be "deprived of the right of trial by jury in cases cognizable at common law." Rev. Stat. § 1868; Act of Congress of April 7, 1874, chap. 80, § 1 (18 Stat. 27); Idaho Code of Civil Procedure of 1881, §§ 138, 139, 280, 309, 358;

Ely v. New Mexico & A. Railroad, 129 U. S. 291 [82: 688].

Congress has prescribed that the appellate jurisdiction of this court over "judgments and decrees" of the territorial courts, "in cases of trial by jury, shall be exercised by writ of error, and in all other cases by appeal;" and "on appeal, instead of the evidence at large, a statement of the facts of the case in the nature of a special verdict, and also the rulings of the court on the admission or rejection of evidence when excepted to, shall be made and certified by the court below," and transmitted to this court with the transcript of the record. Act of April 7, 1874, chap. 80, § 2 (18 Stat. 27, 28).

The necessary effect of this enactment is that no judgment or decree of the highest court of a Territory can be reviewed by this court in matter of fact, but only in matter of law. As observed by Chief Justice Waite, "We are not to consider the testimony in any case. Upon a writ of error, we are confined to the bill of exceptions, or questions of law otherwise presented by the record; and upon an appeal, to the statement of facts and rulings certified by the court below. The facts set forth in the statement which must come up with the appeal are conclusive on us." Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 285, 286 [26: 1018].

The provision of this Act, permitting a writ of error "in cases of trial by jury" only, evidently has regard to a trial by jury, as in an action at common law, in which there is and must be a trial by jury, and the court is not authorized to try and determine the facts for itself, unless a jury is waived by the parties according to statute, and has no application to a trial of special issues submitted to a jury in a proceeding in the nature of a suit in equity, not as a matter of right, or to settle the issues of fact, but at the discretion of the court, and simply to inform its conscience, and to aid it in making up its own judgment upon the facts; and the real trial of the facts is by the court and not by a jury. In all proceedings in the territorial courts in the nature of suits in equity, therefore, as well as in those proceedings in the nature of actions at common law in which no trial by jury is had (either because the jury has been duly waived, or because the issues tried are issues of law only), the appellate jurisdiction of this court must be invoked by appeal, and not by writ of error. Davis v. Atwood, 94 U. S. 545 [24: 283]; Davis v. Fredericks, 104 U. S. 618 [26: 849]; Story v. Black, 119 U. S. 285 [30: 341].

It must also be borne in mind that (as already seen) in either class of cases, whether equitable or legal, coming up by appeal from a territorial court after a hearing or trial on the facts, the evidence at large cannot be brought up (as it is in cases in equity from the circuit courts of the United States), but only "a statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict," and rulings made at the trial, and duly excepted to, on the admission or rejection of evidence. Consequently the authority of this court, on appeal from a territorial court, is limited to determining whether the court's findings of fact support its judgment or decree, and whether there is any error in rulings, duly excepted to, on the admission or rejection of evidence; and does not extend to a consideration of the weight of evidence, or its sufficiency to support the conclusions of the court. Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610 [25:421]; Cannon v. Pratt, 99 U. S. 619 [25:446]; Neslin v. Wells, 104 U. S. 428 [26:802]; Hecht v. Boughton, 105 U. S. 285, 286 [26:1018]; Gray v. Howe, 108 U. S. 12 [27:634]; Eilers v. Boatman, 111 U. S. 856 [28:454]; Zeckendorf v. Johnson, 128 U. S. 617 [31:277].

The present suit was brought to enforce a mechanics' lien created by the statutes of the Territory, which authorize the court in such a suit to order both a sale of the real estate that is subject to the lien, and judgment against the owner thereof for any deficiency in the proceeds of the sale, "in like manner and with like effect as in actions for the foreclosure of mortgages." Idaho Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 815, 826. The relief provided for in those statutes, sought by the complaint, and granted by the court, was purely equitable, and the proceeding was in the nature of a suit in equity. South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 561 [18:894]; Davis v. Alvord, 94 U. S. 545 [24:283]; Brewster v. Wakefield, 63 U. S. 22 How. 118, 128 [16:301,304]; Walker v. Dreville, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 440 [20:429]; Marin v. Lalley, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 14 [21:591]; Rule 92 in Equity.

The district court so treated the case, as is evident from its having made its own findings of fact on some of the questions at issue, and having based its decree, not upon the findings of the jury, but upon the proofs produced at the final hearing—neither of which would it have been authorized to do, had the suit been in the nature of an action at common law, the parties not having waived a trial by jury. Morgan v. Gay, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 81 [22:100]; Hodges v. Easton, 106 U. S. 408 [27:169]; Baylis v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 113 U. S. 316 [28:989]; Act of Congress of April 7, 1874, chap. 80, § 1 (18 Stat. 27); Idaho Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 861, 889.

The writ of error must therefore be dismissed, and the case considered as pending upon the appeal alone. Stringfellow v. Cain, 99 U. S. 610, 612 [25:421].

The case being one of equitable jurisdiction only, the court was not bound to submit any issue of fact to the jury, and, having done so, was at liberty to disregard the verdict and findings of the jury, either by setting them or any of them aside, or by letting them stand, and allowing them more or less weight in its final hearing and decree, according to its own view of the evidence in the cause. By the settled course of decision in this court, it is not necessary that a court of equity should formally set aside the verdict or finding of a jury, before proceeding to enter a decree which does not conform to it. Prout v. Roby, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 471, 475 [21:58]; Bacey v. Gallagher, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 670 [22:452]; Garsed v. Beall, 92 U. S. 684, 695 [23:686,690]; Johnson v. Harmon, 94 U. S. 871, 872 [24:271]; Watt v. Starke, 101 U. S. 247, 252 [25:826]; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 424 [26:800]; Wilson v. Riddle, 128 U. S. 608, 615 [31:280,288].

The case of Bacey v. Gallagher, just cited, is quite analogous to the case at bar. In a suit brought in a district court of the Territory of Montana for an injunction against the diversion of a running stream in which the plaintiff asserted a right by prior appropriation for the purpose of irrigation, the court submitted specific issues to a jury, and afterwards heard the case upon the pleadings and proofs and the findings of the jury, and rendered a decree for the plaintiffs, in which it disregarded some of those findings and adopted others; and that decree was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the Territory, and by this court on appeal, notwithstanding a provision in the statutes of that Territory (similar to § 861 of the Idaho Code of Civil Procedure), that in civil actions "an issue of fact must be tried by a jury, unless a jury trial is waived."

The action of the District Court of the Territory of Idaho, therefore, in setting aside the general verdict, and substituting its own findings of fact for the special findings of the jury, was a lawful exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, the propriety of which cannot be reviewed by this court; and it is quite immaterial whether the general verdict was consistent with the findings of the jury, or with the evidence introduced at the trial.

The only other matters specified or argued in the brief of the appellant are two exceptions to the admission or rejection of evidence.

The first exception was to the admission of evidence, offered by the plaintiffs, tending to show that by the direction and with the consent of one Case, the defendant's vice-president and general manager, and under the supervision of the defendant's engineer, the ditch was made ten feet wide and three feet deep, whereas the original contract annexed to the complaint was for a ditch eight feet wide and two feet deep. But the supposed variance between the complaint and the proof did not exist. The complaint did not proceed upon the written contracts alone, but upon the defendant's acceptance of the ditch and the subsequent settlement between the parties. And the court found, as facts, that the changes in the dimensions of the ditch were made with the knowledge and consent of Case, and before the execution of the supplemental agreement; that the ditch, when completed, was accepted by the defendant through its general manager, and had ever since been appropriated and used by the defendant; that the settlement between the parties was based upon estimates and measurements made by the defendant's engineer in charge of the construction of the ditch; and that there was no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiffs in or concerning that settlement.

The other exception was to the exclusion of testimony, offered by the defendant, of one Strahorn, its general manager at the time of the completion and acceptance of the ditch, and who had previously been its treasurer, tending to show that, at the time of the execution of the original contract, the plaintiffs were informed by him that Case had no authority from the defendant to contract for a ditch of larger dimensions than those specified in that contract. But it was a sufficient reason for excluding that testimony that the offer was only to show that the plaintiffs were told that Case had no authority to vary the dimensions of the ditch, and was unaccompanied by any offer of evidence that Case had in fact no such authority, and at the time of the offer no evidence as to the actual authority of Case appears to have been introduced; and the offer to prove the information given to the plaintiffs was not renewed after the court had allowed Strahorn, against objection and exception by the plaintiffs, to testify that neither he nor Case had any authority from the defendant's board of directors to enlarge the dimensions of the ditch, and that the board had never ratified the enlargement of the ditch.

It does not appear that the whole evidence at the trial is recited in the statement of the case; and if it had been, this court, as already shown, could have considered it for the single purpose of passing upon the exceptions taken to the admission or rejection of parts of it, and not for the purpose of deciding whether the whole evidence supported the findings of the court.

The result is that the appellant has not been prejudiced by the rulings and decree below in any particular within the appellate jurisdiction of this court.

Ordered, that the record may be withdrawn and amended by procuring the signature of the clerk of the Supreme Court of the Territory to the certificate of authentication, and that, upon the return of the record so amended, the decree of that court be affirmed.

THE RIO GRANDE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

JOHN B. VINET, Executor, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 565-571.)

Fraudulent mortgage.

A mortgage made by a partner on his homestead, which was used to raise money by the firm of which he was a member, to pay its debts and save its credit, is not fraudulent as to creditors of the firm.

[No. 114.]

Argued Nov. 16, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana dismissing a suit in chancery brought to remove an incumbrance on real property and to procure the cancellation of notes. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George L. Bright, for appellant:

An assignee, before the maturity of a negotiable note secured by mortgage, takes the mortgage as he takes the note, free from objections to which it was liable in the hands of the mortgagee.

Carpenter v. Logan, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 271 (21:314); Sawyer v. Prickett, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 165 (22:109); Succession of Dolhonde, 21 La. Ann. 8.

But the holder must be an innocent holder, without knowledge of the objections to the mortgage.

2 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 608.

Barker is not an innocent holder.

Garner v. Gay, 26 La. Ann. 876; Butler v. Slocomb, 33 La. Ann. 175; Schepp v. Smith, 35 438

La. Ann. 4; Carpenter v. Logan, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 271 (21:314); Sawyer v. Prickett, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 147 (22:105).

If anything appears to a party, calculated to attract attention or stimulate inquiry, the person is affected with the knowledge of all that the inquiry would have disclosed.

Carpenter v. Logan, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 271 (21:314); Sawyer v. Prickett, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 165 (22:109); Succession of Dolhonde, 21 La. Ann. 8; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 608.

Messrs. J. D. Rouse and Wm. Grant, for appellees:

The mere fact that the mortgagees were nominal parties and not creditors did not destroy the validity of the mortgage.

Roberts v. Daur, 35 La. Ann. 453; Billgery v. Ferguson, 30 La. Ann. 89; Richardson v. Cramer, 28 La. Ann. 558; Brewer v. Gay, 24 La. Ann. 86; D'Meza v. Generes, 22 La. Ann. 285.

An individual member of a firm may grant a mortgage to the firm, and the notes and mortgage will be valid in the hands of a bona fide holder.

Pike v. Hart, 30 La. Ann. 868; Billgery v. Ferguson, 30 La. Ann. 84, 89.

The appellees, therefore, who loaned their money in good faith on the security of the notes, are entitled to the same rights they would have had if the mortgage had been executed to them. They are bona fide holders of the notes and mortgage.

Carpenter v. Logan, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 271 (21:314); Swift v. Tysen, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 1 (10:865); Brooklyn C. & N. R. Co. v. Nat. Bk. 102 U. S. 14 (26:61).

A debtor may borrow money and give security therefor, even when insolvent.

Tiffany v. Lucas, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 410 (21:198); Cook v. Tullis, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 333 (21:933).

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant, which was plaintiff below, obtained in the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana on January 5, 1885, a judgment against the partnership firm of Gomila & Co., and against Anthony J. Gomila and Larned Torrey, who constituted the partnership, for the sum of $26,731.97. It caused an execution to be issued upon the judgment, and had it levied upon a house, and the grounds belonging to it, in the City of New Orleans, a description of which is set forth in the bill filed in this case. It was discovered that there existed a mortgage upon this property for the sum of $18,000, made by A. J. Gomila, and the Railroad Company brought the present suit by way of a bill in chancery to remove this incumbrance, as an obstruction to the successful exercise of its right to sell the property for the payment of its debt. The action commenced in the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, was afterwards removed by Gomila into the circuit court of the United States, and the plaintiff there filed a new bill in equity substantially the same as the petition filed in the state court.

This bill, after reciting the judgment in favor of the Railroad Company, already mentioned, and the levy of the execution under it on the property described, proceeds to state: "That there is inscribed on the books of the recorder of mortgages for the Parish of Orleans, against the name of Anthony J. Gomila, and against said property, an inscription of a mortgage made by said Anthony J. Gomila in favor of the commercial firm of Gomila & Co., by act before Samuel Flower, a notary public, dated the 8th of February, 1884, to secure the sum of $18,000." According to the bill, this act recited an indebtedness by A. J. Gomila to the firm of Gomila & Co. for that much money loaned and advanced to him on that day, and that for said $18,000 he had made his four promissory notes to the order of, and indorsed by, himself. Three of these notes were for $5,000 each, and one for $3,000. The $5,000 notes were payable in one, two and three years after date respectively, and the $3,000 note was payable three years after date.

The bill then alleges that "said mortgage is fictitious, and is a fraud committed by said A. J. Gomila to cover his property and to prevent the seizure and sale thereof; that it is not true, as stated in said act of mortgage, that on the 8th of February, 1884, the said firm of Gomila & Co. loaned and advanced to A. J. Gomila the sum of $18,000, or any other sum of money; and your petitioner alleges that by reason of said fraud the aforesaid notes, amounting in all to $18,000, are null and void; that after they were made and received by Larned Torrey, who accepted the act of mortgage, they were surrendered to A. J. Gomila, and thereby were canceled, and they have been ever since in his custody or under his control, or in the custody and control of some confederate, whom, when discovered, your petitioner prays leave to make a party hereto;" and the prayer of the bill is that these notes be canceled and annulled, and that Gomila be required to surrender them up, and for such further relief as the nature of the case may require.

Supplemental and amended bills were filed making defendants to the suit J. Ward Gurley, Jr., and C. D. Barker, upon the allegation that they claim to be the owners of the notes, and assert the sufficiency and validity of the mortgage by which they are pretended to be secured, and they are required to answer the allegations of the original bill and to set forth the nature of their claim. A. J. Gomila answered the bill, and to special interrogatories propounded to him in it he answered under oath as follows:

"To the first of said interrogatories, which reads as follows, viz.:

"To whom did you deliver the notes described in the original bill on file, and when did you do so? Give his full name and address.

"He answers, viz.:

"Ans. The notes were all delivered to Larned Torrey, the other member of the firm of Gomila & Co., when they were made or executed, Feb'y 8th, 1884.

"To the second of said interrogatories, which reads as follows, viz.:

"In whose possession have said notes been at all and any time up to the present time?

"He answers, viz.:

"Ans. The said notes were immediately thereafter delivered to J. Ward Gurley, Jr., of this city, from whom Gomila & Co. received the following sums of cash, viz., on 6th Feb'y, 1884 ($3,496.50), three thousand four hundred and ninety-six and 50-100 dollars; on Feb'y 11th, 1884 ($1,496.50), one thousand four hundred and ninety-eight and 50-100 dollars; on 20th Feb'y, 1884 ($1,000), one thousand dollars, besides some city bonds at various dates just before and subsequently, other small sums of money for costs in different suits, etc., all of which is still due said Gurley, with interest thereon; that $5,000 of said sums of money was obtained from said Gurley for the purpose and used to pay the balance of the purchase price of the property in question to the Hibernia Ins. Co.

132 U. S.

"That some months after the said notes were so delivered to said Gurley two of them—viz., the note for $5,000, due in two years after its date, and the note for $5,000, due in three years after date—were withdrawn from the said Gurley by Gomila & Co., through the said Torrey, and pledged on the 21st Aug., 1884, with and to the Teutonia Ins. Co. of this city, to secure a loan then made by said Ins. Co. to Gomila & Co. of $5,000 in cash; that on the 3d Sept., 1884, the said loan was renewed with said Ins. Co., and on the 10th Oct., 1884, the said loan of $5,000 was renewed in the State Nat'l Bank of this city, and said two mortgage notes were withdrawn by Gomila & Co., through the said Torrey, from said Ins. Co. and pledged with and to the State Nat'l Bank to secure said loan.

"Subsequently Gomila & Co., through said Torrey, withdrew said two notes from the State Nat'l Bank and placed them with C. D. Barker of this city, on or about 3d November, 1884, from whom said firm of Gomila & Co. received, through said Torrey, the sum of two thousand dollars in cash November 3d, 1884, and the additional sum of one thousand dollars in cash Nov. 5th, 1884, and the additional sum of one thousand dollars in cash Nov. 7th, 1884.

"And, so far as deponent knows, the said last two mentioned notes are still held by said Barker, and the other two notes, one for $5,000, due in one year after its date, and one for $3,000, due in three years after its date, are now, and have always been, held by said Gurley since they were first delivered to him as aforesaid.

"To the third of said interrogatories, which reads as follows, viz.:

"Who is now the holder of said notes? Give his name and address.

"He answered, viz.:

"Ans. This interrogatory is answered by the answer just given above.

"A. J. GOMILA."

Gurley answered the bill under oath, setting forth the matter pretty much as Gomila's answer does, and averring that the notes and mortgage were true, real and bona fide, and that those which he owned are not now and have not at any time since the issue thereof been under the control or in the possession of A. J. Gomila, and that he took them for money advanced to the firm of Gomila & Co. before they were due; and he sets forth the amount of his advance with precision and particularity, showing that $5,000 of the money which he advanced went to pay the purchase price of the house and lot mentioned in the mortgage; and he says that said notes were acquired by him for a full and valuable consideration in due course of business, and that they were issued in the interest and for the benefit of Gomila & Co. and their creditors, to enable them to continue business, and that the said notes and the full amount of them are still justly and fully due to the defendant.

Caleb D. Barker, the other defendant, in whose possession some of the notes were, files an answer also under oath, in which he shows that Torrey, as a member of the firm of Gomila & Co., sold him two of the notes for $5,000 before they were due, pledging them to secure a loan, in November, 1884, and they have been in his actual possession ever since, except for a short time when Torrey received possession of them to see if he could not raise the money on them to pay the existing loan of Barker. Failing in this, Torrey returned the notes to Barker, with an agreement that if the money was not paid on the 8th of January, 1885, they should become the property of Barker; that the loan was not repaid and never has been, and the said notes are now the property of Barker; and he avers that the notes were negotiable paper taken by him before maturity in good faith, for valuable consideration, in due course of business, without any intention to defraud the creditors of Gomila or Gomila & Co.

Replications were filed which made issue on these averments, and testimony was taken. Gomila died, and the suit was revived against his wife and one Wiltz, who had been made dative testamentary executor of Gomila, after which it was heard and decided by the court below rendering the decree from which this appeal is taken. That court finds that the transaction by which these notes and the mortgage were made and issued and came to the hands of Gurley and of Barker was in every respect an honest transaction; that the mortgage is a valid mortgage; and that the sums secured by it to the defendants Gurley and Barker are valid liens upon the property prior to that of the complainant; and on these grounds it dismissed the bill. Wiltz having died, the present appellee, as his successor, has been substituted in this court.

We concur entirely with the view of the evidence taken by the circuit court. There is nothing but the barest suspicion of fraud or unfairness in the making of these notes and mortgage and in the use afterwards made of the notes. Mr. Gomila, in his efforts to save the credit of his firm, consented that the house and grounds in which he lived might be mortgaged to raise money for that purpose. He accordingly made the four notes and the mortgage to secure them, covering that property. Five thousand dollars of the money first raised on these notes went immediately to pay a prior incumbrance in the nature of a vendor's lien on the property mortgaged. The remaining notes were handed to Mr. Torrey, the partner of Gomila in the firm of Gomila & Co., and he raised the sums due to Gurley by delivering to him part of the notes. He also raised money from certain banks by delivering some of the notes as security for the indebtedness of Gomila & Co. These notes he redeemed, and ultimately turned them over to Barker as security for the loans advanced by him for the benefit of the firm of Gomila & Co. It is distinctly denied by A. J. Gomila that, after he delivered these notes to Torrey to be used for the benefit of Gomila & Co., they ever came back to his possession or under his personal control, and no evidence of that fact is produced, nor are we aware that, if such had been the case, it would impair the rights of their present holders, who received them in the regular course of business, paying a valuable consideration for them before their maturity. It is idle to pursue the subject further. A recital in this opinion of the testimony of each witness examined could lead to no useful results. That Mr. Gomila covered his homestead with a mortgage, which was used to raise money by the firm of which he was a member to pay its debts, is surely not a transaction that should be branded as a fraud.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

KATIE RAHN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 518-524.)

Imputed negligence—master's liability for servant's negligence—relation of master and servant—servant, who is—restriction.

1. A master is liable to third persons injured by negligent acts done by his servant in the course of his employment, although the master did not authorize or know of the servant's act or neglect, or even if he disapproved of or forbade it.
2. The relation of master and servant exists whenever the employer retains the right to direct the manner in which the business shall be done, as well as the result to be accomplished, or, in other words, not only what shall be done, but how it shall be done.
3. Where a person, for certain commissions to be paid him, agrees to give his whole time and services to the business of a company in selling its machines, and the company reserves to itself the right of prescribing and regulating not only what business he shall do, but the manner in which he shall do it, such person is the company's servant for whose negligence, in the course of his employment, the company is responsible.
4. A provision of the contract, that such servant shall not use the name of the company in any manner whereby the public or any individual may be led to believe that it is responsible for his actions, does not and cannot affect its responsibility to third persons injured by his negligence in the course of his employment.

[No. 122.]

Submitted Nov. 20, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Minnesota to review a judgment for the plaintiff in an action to recover for personal injuries caused by defendant's servant carelessly driving a horse and wagon against her. Affirmed.

Opinion below, 26 Fed. Rep. 912.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

The original action was brought by Katie Rahn, a citizen of Minnesota, against the Singer

Manufacturing Company, a corporation of New Jersey, for personal injuries done to the plaintiff by carelessly driving a horse and wagon against her, when crossing a street in Minneapolis. The complaint alleged that the driver of the wagon was the defendant's servant and engaged in its business. The answer denied this, and alleged that the driver, one Corbett, was engaged in selling sewing-machines on commission, and not otherwise, for the defendant. The replication denied the allegations of the answer.

At the trial before a jury, after the plaintiff had introduced evidence to maintain the issues on her part, the defendant put in evidence the contract between itself and Corbett, headed "Canvasser's Salary and Commission Contract," the material provisions of which were as follows:

"1st. The party of the first part agrees to pay unto the party of the second part, for his services in selling and leasing the Singer sewing-machines, five dollars for each and every acceptable sale of a new machine sold by him; and in addition to said five dollars a further sum of ten per cent of the gross price realized for said sales so made shall be paid to said second party, which, in addition to the five dollars on each acceptable sale, shall be deemed a selling commission.

"2d. The party of the first part shall pay unto the second party, for his further services, a collecting commission of ten per cent on the amounts or balances due from customers having purchased machines from him, payable as the cash shall be collected and paid over to the said first party or its authorized representatives at Minneapolis; and the said per centum so paid shall be in full for the services of said second party in collecting or other service rendered to date thereof."

"7th. The said first party agrees to furnish a wagon, and any damage to said wagon through negligence shall be at the cost and expense of said second party; and the said second party agrees to furnish a horse and harness, to be used exclusively in canvassing for the sale of said machines and the general prosecution of said business; and said second party agrees to give his exclusive time and best energies to said business, and pay all expenses attending same.

"8th. The said second party agrees to employ himself under the direction of the said Singer Manufacturing Company, and under such rules and instructions as it or its manager at Minneapolis shall prescribe, and in all respects to comport himself to the best interests of the business of the said first party, and to neither sign nor to make use of the name of the said Company in any manner whereby the public or any individual may be led to believe that the said Company is responsible for his actions, said party's power being simply to make sales and turn over the proceeds to the said first party. If any special acts are required of said second party, the power to perform the same will be specially delegated."

"10th. It is further agreed that if said second party sells any other than the machines furnished to him by said first party, it shall work a forfeiture of any commissions that accrue under this agreement, if violated prior to the termination of the same."

182 U. S.

"12th. This agreement may be terminated by the first party at any time, and by said second party by giving first party ten days' notice in writing."

The defendant requested the court to instruct the jury "that the contract under which Corbett, the driver of the horse causing the accident, was operating made him an independent contractor, and the defendant could not be liable for any damage done through his negligence, if he was negligent." The court declined to give the instruction requested, and instructed the jury that the contract established the relation of servant and master between Corbett and the defendant, and that the defendant was answerable for Corbett's negligence while engaged in its service.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $10,000, upon which judgment was rendered; and the defendant tendered a bill of exceptions, and sued out this writ of error.

Messrs. Joseph S. Auerbach and Grosvenor Lowry, for plaintiff in error:

A partial reservation of authority or control in certain respects does not transform the contractor into a mere servant.

Wood's Master and Servant, 618; Cooley on Torts, 548; Whart. on Agency, §§ 19, 20.

He is principal and not a master who retains the right to direct what ends shall be attempted, leaving the means to the management of the agent.

Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 48; Pack v. Mayor, 8 N. Y. 222; Kelly v. Mayor, 11 N. Y. 482.

Reservation of control is not sufficient to create the master's liability.

Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. 882; Painter v. Mayor, 46 Pa. 218; Hunt v. Pa. R. Co. 51 Pa. 475; Reed v. Alleghany City, 79 Pa. 300; Erie v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. 247; Edmondson v. Pittsburgh, McK. & Y. R. Co. 111 Pa. 816; Cuff v. Newark & N. Y. R. Co. 35 N. J. L. 17; Connors v. Hennessy, 112 Mass. 96; Wood v. Cobb, 95 Mass. 58; Samuelson v. Cleveland Iron Min. Co. 49 Mich. 184; Reedie v. London & N. W. R. Co. 4 Exch. 243; Steel v. Southeastern R. Co. 13 C. B. 550.

The stipulation to supply to the canvasser a wagon was one way of making compensation to the canvasser.

Murray v. Currie, L. R. 6 C. P. Div. 24; Stevens v. Armstrong, 6 N. Y. 435; Jones v. Mayor, L. R. 14 Q. B. Div. 890.

Messrs. John W. Willis, Charles A. Ebert and W. P. Clough, for defendant in error:

The power to discharge the servant is said to be the test by which to determine whether the relation of master and servant exists.

Pawlet v. Rutland & W. R. Co. 28 Vt. 297; Michael v. Stanton, 8 Hun, 462, S. C. 5 Thomp. & C. 634; Fenton v. Dublin Steam Packet Co. 8 Ad. & El. 835; Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 900; Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 48.

The contract was one for services and not for the performance of a particular piece of work. It was not a contract for "results."

Regina v. Turner, 11 Cox, Cr. Cas. 551; Fink v. Mo. Furnace Co. 10 Mo. App. 61, S. C. 82 Mo. 276.

The plaintiff in error did not, by the contract, part with the right to control the mode and manner of the work.

Speed v. At. & P. R. Co. 71 Mo. 308; Huff v. Ford, 126 Mass. 24; Carter v. Berlin Mills Co. 58 N. H. 52; Forsyth v. Hooper, 98 Mass. 419; St. Paul v. Seitz, 8 Minn. 297.

A master is responsible for the wrongful acts of his servants which were done in his service.

McGuire v. Grant, 25 N. J. L. 356; Quarman v. Burnett, 6 Mees. & W. 499; Brackett v. Lubke, 86 Mass. 138; Campbell v. Lunsford, 83 Ala. 512.

The employer retained the power to control the work.

Sadler v. Henlock, 4 El. & Bl. 570; Dalyell v. Tyrer, El. Bl. & El. 899; Blake v. Thirst, 2 Hurl. & C. 20; New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. Hanning, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 649, 657 (21:220, 228); Linnehan v. Rollins, 137 Mass. 123; Cincinnati v. Stone, 5 Ohio St. 38; Eriss v. Caulkins, 85 Pa. 247; Edmundson v. Pittsburgh, McK. & Y. R. Co. 111 Pa. 316; Hunt v. Pa. R. Co. 51 Pa. 475; Allen v. Willard, 57 Pa. 374.

The fact that Corbett was paid by a commission on machines sold has no controlling force.

Regina v. Turner, 11 Cox, Cr. Cas. 551; Patten v. Rea, 2 C. B. N. S. 605; Venables v. Smith, L. R. 2 Q. B. Div. 279; Joslin v. Grand Rapids Ice Co. 50 Mich. 516; Mulochill v. Bates, 31 Minn. 364.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

The general rules that must govern this case are undisputed, and the only controversy is as to their application to the contract between the defendant Company and Corbett, the driver, by whose negligence the plaintiff was injured.

A master is liable to third persons injured by negligent acts done by his servant in the course of his employment, although the master did not authorize or know of the servant's act or neglect, or even if he disapproved or forbade it. Philadelphia & Reading Railroad v. Derby, 56 U. S. 14 How. 468, 486 [14:502, 509]. And the relation of master and servant exists whenever the employer retains the right to direct the manner in which the business shall be done, as well as the result to be accomplished, or, in other words, "not only what shall be done, but how it shall be done." Railroad Co. v. Hanning, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 649, 656 [21:220, 223].

The contract between the defendant and Corbett, upon the construction and effect of which this case turns, is entitled "Canvasser's Salary and Commission Contract." The compensation to be paid by the Company to Corbett, for selling its machines, consisting of "a selling commission" on the price of machines sold by him, and "a collecting commission" on the sums collected of the purchasers, is uniformly and repeatedly spoken of as made for his "services." The Company may discharge him by terminating the contract at any time, whereas he can terminate it only upon ten days' notice. The Company is to furnish him with a wagon; and the horse and harness to be furnished by him are "to be used exclusively in canvassing for the sale of said machines and the general prosecution of said business."

But, what is more significant, Corbett "agrees to give his exclusive time and best energies to said business," and is to forfeit all his commissions under the contract, if while it is in force he sells any machines other than those furnished to him by the Company; and he further "agrees to employ himself under the direction of the said Singer Manufacturing Company, and under such rules and instructions as it or its manager at Minneapolis shall prescribe."

In short, Corbett, for the commissions to be paid him, agrees to give his whole time and services to the business of the Company; and the Company reserves to itself the right of prescribing and regulating not only what business he shall do, but the manner in which he shall do it; and might, if it saw fit, instruct him what route to take, or even at what speed to drive.

The provision of the contract, that Corbett shall not use the name of the Company in any manner whereby the public or any individual may be led to believe that it is responsible for his actions, does not and cannot affect its responsibility to third persons injured by his negligence in the course of his employment.

The circuit court therefore rightly held that Corbett was the defendant's servant, for whose negligence in the course of his employment the defendant was responsible to the plaintiff. Railroad Co. v. Hanning, above cited; Linnehan v. Rollins, 137 Mass. 123; Regina v. Turner, 11 Cox, Crim. Cas. 551.

Judgment affirmed.

HENRY M. HALE ET AL., Executors, Piffs.
in Err.,
v.

STEPHEN AKERS ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 554-555.)

Review of state judgment—federal question.

Where two defenses were made in the state court, either of which, if sustained, barred the action, and one involved a federal question, and the other did not, and the state court sustained them both, and gave its judgment for defendant, this court will affirm the state judgment without considering the federal question, although it may have been erroneously decided.

[No. 270.]

Submitted Dec. 6, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment of that court, affirming a judgment of the Superior Court of the County of Sonoma, California, in favor of defendant in an action to recover possession of a piece of land in Sonoma County. Dismissed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Reported below, 69 Cal. 160.

Mr. W. W. Cope, for plaintiffs in error:

The grant of Huichica to Jacob P. Leese was such as to divest the pueblo of all title in that portion thereof in suit.

U. S. v. Hare, 4 Sawy. 653, 655; Grisar v. McDowell, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 363 (18: 868); Townsend v. Greeley, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 326, 336, 337 (18: 547, 549); Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530.

The approval of the Departmental Assembly was not an essential requisite to the vesting of an interest in the grantee.

U. S. v. Reading, 59 U. S. 18 How. 1 (15: 291);
U. S. v. Cervantes, 59 U. S. 18 How. 553 (15:
 484); U. S. v. Johnson, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 326
 (17: 597); U. S. v. White, 64 U. S. 23 How.
 249, 258 (16: 560, 561).

In a controversy between the parties claiming under two patents, each of which reserves the rights of other parties, the inquiry must extend to the character of the original concessions.

Henshaw v. Bissell, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 266 (21: 889).

Mr. Frank W. Hackett, for defendants in error:

This court has no jurisdiction.

McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578 (24: 390);
De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 232 (32: 723); Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 636 (22: 444); Jenkins v. Loewenthal, 110 U. S. 222 (28: 129); Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 327 (28: 511); Citizens Bk. v. Bd. of Liquidation, 98 U. S. 140 (25: 114); Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 (28: 400); Adams Co. v. Burlington & M. R. Co. 112 U. S. 123 (28: 678); Detroit City Ry. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133 (29: 118); New Orleans Water Works Co. v. La. Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18 (31: 607).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought, August 22, 1879, in the Superior Court in and for the County of Sonoma, in the State of California, by Henry M. Hale and Georgiana L. Schell, executors of the will of Theodore L. Schell, deceased, against Stephen Akers and Montgomery Akers, to recover the possession of a piece of land in Sonoma County, being a portion of the Huichica rancho, and described as follows: "Beginning at a point on the northerly line of the lane which runs from the dwelling-house of said Schell, westerly to the road leading from the Sonoma Plaza to the Embarcadero called 'Montgomery Street,' or 'Broadway,' which place of beginning is distant 23.24 chains from the point of intersection of said lane and said road; thence north, 50 deg. and 45 min. west, along a fence 18.98 chains; thence south, 87 deg. 15 min. west, about 25 chains to a point on the northerly line of said lane, distant 3.68 chains easterly from the point of intersection aforesaid; thence north, 78 deg. 30 min. east, along said northerly line 19.61 chains to the place of beginning, containing eighteen and a half acres."

The answer of the defendants set up, among other defenses, that Stephen Akers entered into possession of the premises more than twenty-five years before the suit was brought, under a claim of title by a written conveyance made in 1858 by the City of Sonoma, in Sonoma County, which city was then in the possession of, and claimed title to, the premises, under a decree of confirmation by the Board of Land Commissioners, dated January 22, 1856, and by the judgment and decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, made November 16, 1864; that he was the owner in fee of the premises; that on the 11th of October, 1860, he entered into a written agreement with Schell, the testator of the plaintiffs, whereby he released to Schell one half of a piece of land then in the possession of Akers, and containing 111 182 U. S.

acres and 2 rods of land, and Schell agreed thereby that, in the event the City of Sonoma should establish its claim to any part of such released tract of land, he would deliver the possession of the same, or such portions thereof as might be so established, together with a yearly rent of $5 per acre for the land so to be delivered, and that Akers thereby agreed that, in the event of the City of Sonoma not being able to establish its claim beyond the present line of the Huichica Patent, he would deliver possession to Schell of all or such portion of the remainder of such tract of land as might be within the line of the Huichica Patent, and would pay a yearly rent for the same, at the rate of $5 per acre, to Schell; that by that agreement Schell relinquished all claim to the premises in question, and acquiesced in Akers' title and right of possession; that previous to October 11, 1860, and then and ever since, the City of Sonoma claimed the said lands as its pueblo lands, adversely to Schell, and was then, and ever since had been, prosecuting its claim before the Land Department of the government; that, before that time, the said city conveyed by deed to Akers the premises for which the suit was brought, and by virtue thereof he was, on the 11th of October, 1860, in possession of the premises and claiming the same adversely to Schell; that at that time Akers claimed that the premises were within the pueblo lands of the City of Sonoma, and that that city would establish before the Land Department of the United States and the commissioner of the General Land Office its claim thereto; that the defendants and the said city then and ever since claimed that the pueblo extended on the southeast to the Arroyo Seco, and that the Arroyo Seco formed the boundary line between the pueblo lands of the city and the lands of Schell, whilst Schell then claimed that the Arroyo Seco did not form such boundary line, but extended beyond it on the north and included the lands of Akers; that to settle the difficulties and avoid litigation, Akers and Schell made said agreement to await and abide the decision of the Land Department of the United States on the application of the city to have its title to its lands confirmed; that Schell then agreed with Akers that Schell should never claim any title to the lands described in the complaint, until it was determined by a decree of the Land Department of the United States that the city could not establish its title thereto; that Akers, for the purpose of avoiding litigation and to await and abide the decision of said Land Department, delivered over to Schell other land within the pueblo, to await such decision, and Schell then agreed that, in the event the city established its claim to any of the land, he would forever release all claim of title or possession thereto, deliver up to Akers all the lands claimed by Akers within the pueblo, and pay to Akers $5 per acre per year for the use thereof; that Akers was to hold the land until the city should so fail to establish its title thereto; that the city had not failed to do so, but had established its claim; that on the 31st of March, 1880, and since the suit was commenced, the United States issued and delivered to the city and the trustees thereof a patent for the land described in the complaint; that the plaintiffs claimed the land by virtue of a patent issued by the United States to one Leese, and known as the Huichica Patent; that said patent does not include the premises; that if it does, the same was made without authority of law; that the only authority on which the Huichica Patent issued was a decree of the said circuit court of the United States, made December 24, 1856; and that said decree did not authorize the issuing of a patent by the United States for the land described in the complaint, or for any land on the west side of the Arroyo Seco, but made the Arroyo Seco the boundary between the pueblo and the Huichica rancho.

The cause was tried by the court without a jury, and it made a finding of facts comprising the facts set forth in the answer, with additional matters, the only material ones being as follows: A grant to one Leese of the place called Huichica was made by the Mexican governor of California, in 1841; and embraced all the land between the Arroyo Seco, the Arroyo de los Carneros, and the swamp land, containing two square leagues, the western boundary being the Arroyo Seco. Subsequently the governor adjudged this grant to be void, because the land of which judicial possession was attempted to be given under it was much more than the quantity granted. Under a subsequent petition by Leese, and on July 6th, 1844, the then governor of California made to Leese a second grant of 8½ leagues of the land called Huichica, bounded on the north by the crossing of the upper road to Napa, on the east by the Arroyo de los Carneros, on the south by the swampy lands on the bay, on the west by Estero de Sonoma as far as the Trancas, taking the direction of the Arroyo Seco as far as the Little Hills of Huichica. This grant was made subject to approval by the Departmental Assembly, but was never placed before it for approval, although the first grant was approved by it after the second grant had been made. A claim of Leese to the whole Huichica tract of 5½ leagues was confirmed by the Board of Land Commissioners April 18th, 1853, and by the district court of the United States April 22d, 1856. An appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States was dismissed in December, 1856, no decree respecting the claim having ever been made by the circuit court of the United States. The decree of confirmation contained this clause: "The land of which confirmation is hereby made is known by the name of 'Huichica,' containing five and one half square leagues, and no more, and is bounded and described as follows, to wit: Bounded on the north by the upper road which goes to Napa, on the east by the Arroyo de Los Carneros, on the south by the marshy land adjoining the Bay of San Francisco, and on the west by the Estero of Sonoma, as far as the Trancas, taking the direction (el rumbo—direction or course) of the Arroyo Seco." A survey of the Huichica grant was made in December, 1858, and approved by the surveyor-general in June, 1859, and, in accordance therewith, a patent for the Huichica rancho, containing 18,704 acres, was issued by the United States to Leese August 3d, 1859, reciting the second grant, the confirmation and the survey. The westerly boundary, as shown on the plat in that patent, is "the Sonoma Creek, from a post marked L at the lower landing as far as a post marked L at the Trancas; thence a straight line running north, 87 degrees east, 156 chains to a post marked L on the Arroyo Seco, at the Huichica Hills. This last line is known as the 'Trancas line.'" By quit-claim deeds under Leese, Schell claimed title to 470 acres of the Huichica rancho.

The title of Akers was derived as follows: In 1835 General Vallejo, (director of colonization, under previous instructions from the Mexican governor of California, established the pueblo of Sonoma, and made a survey thereof, with the following boundaries: "On the east the Arroyo Seco, from the vineyard of Salvador Vallejo to the salt marsh on the bay; thence along the salt marsh westerly to Sonoma Creek; thence up said creek to the Agua Caliente Creek; thence easterly by the hills north of the city to place of beginning." He laid out the tract into lots and blocks, and established families on it, occupying the tract along the Arroyo Seco, in 1835, down to the point where it entered the said salt marsh. On a report of his acts, made by him to the governor, they were approved by the latter. In May, 1853, the authorities of the City of Sonoma presented to the Board of Land Commissioners their claim, as successors of the pueblo, for all of its land, as established by Vallejo. The claim was confirmed by the board, and afterwards, on appeal, by the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, November 2d, 1864. These decrees fixed the Arroyo Seco, from the vineyard aforesaid to the salt marsh, as the eastern boundary of the pueblo. A survey of the land was made in September, 1868, and reported to the Land Department of the United States for approval, in August, 1872. In March, 1876, the commissioner of the General Land Office, on a conflict before him on the approval of the survey as to the location of the southeasterly line, being the boundary common to the land confirmed to the City of Sonoma and the land known as the Huichica Grant, adjudged and determined that such boundary should be established as follows: "A direct line running from the point marked 'Trancas,' on Sonoma Creek, to the point where the Arroyo Seco enters the salt marsh (Station No. 43 in the amended survey of Rancho Huichica), and thence following the direction of the Arroyo Seco to the Little Huichica Hills, should constitute the southeasterly boundary of the pueblo of Sonoma;" and directed the surveyor-general to make survey of the confirmed claim of the City of Sonoma in accordance with such decision. A resurvey was made, and the commissioner approved it and his former decision of March, 1876, fixing the Arroyo Seco as the boundary between the pueblo of Sonoma and the Huichica grant. No appeal having been taken from that decision, the same became final, and a patent for the pueblo lands was issued by the United States, March 31, 1880, to the mayor and common council of the City of Sonoma, in accordance with the decrees of confirmation and the survey, containing 6063.95 acres. The plat in the patent showed that it covered 423 acres of land embraced in the Huichica Patent, being the tract bounded by the "Trancas line," so called, running from post L at the Trancas north, 87

deg. east, 156 chains to post L, on the Arroyo Seco, by the Arroyo Seco from said post to where it enters the marsh at station 48 aforesaid, and by a line from said station south, 70 deg. 45 min. west, 81.50 chains to post L at the Trancas. Akers entered into possession of the land described in the complaint, under a contract with the City of Sonoma to purchase it, in 1851, and had occupied it ever since. On the 18th of May, 1858, the city conveyed to him by deed 111 acres of land within the limits of the city as so confirmed and patented, the land sued for being part of such 111 acres. He continued to reside upon, cultivate and improve the whole of the same up to October 11, 1860, and resided upon, cultivated and improved the west part of the tract so conveyed to him, including the portion sued for by the plaintiffs, ever since 1851. In September, 1860, Schell sued Akers in the Seventh District Court of the State of California, for the County of Sonoma, to recover all of the said tract of land, claiming title thereto under the Huichica patent; and Akers, by his answer in that action, claimed title to the whole thereof under his deed from the City of Sonoma. Whilst the action was pending, and on the 11th of October, 1860, the agreement in writing, before mentioned, was made. On the execution of that agreement, Schell dismissed his action, and a fence was built by the parties, from the lane mentioned in the complaint, extending northerly across the said 111-acre tract and dividing it into two fields of nearly equal size, and Akers surrendered to Schell the possession of all that portion of the 111-acre tract lying east of said fence and embracing about fifty acres, and retained the possession of all the land on the west side of said fence. The Trancas line, being the western boundary of the line patented to Leese, divides the 111-acre tract into two three-cornered pieces, the line running from the southwest to the northeast and crossing the said fence, leaving a portion within the Huichica Patent on the west side of the fence in the possession of Akers, and also leaving a portion on the east side of the fence, not embraced within the patent of the Huichica, in the possession of Schell, held by him under the said contract.

Finding 25 was as follows: A piece of land described as follows: Beginning at a point on the northerly line of the lane leading from the house of Theodore L. Schell, deceased, westerly to the road commonly called "Broadway," 7.53 chains easterly from the intersection of said lane and road, the point where the Trancas line crosses said lane; thence north, 37 deg. east, along the Trancas line to a point where the said Trancas line crosses the fence heretofore constituting the division fence between Akers and Schell; thence south, 5 deg. 45 min. east, along said fence to the said lane; thence westerly along the northerly side of said lane 15.61 chains to the place of beginning,—is included within the land described in the complaint. Said piece of land is situated between Arroyo Seco and the Trancas line, and is within the boundaries described in the grant of the Huichica rancho of July, 1844; the decrees of confirmation, the surveys and the patent thereof of August 8d, 1859; also the three deeds under which Schell claimed title to the 470 acres; and is not within the exceptions mentioned in the first of said deeds. Said piece of land is also within the boundaries of the pueblo of Sonoma, established by Vallejo; the decrees of confirmation, the final survey, and the patent of said pueblo, issued March 31, 1880; also the 111-acre tract; and is on the west side of the fence built by the parties.

The court found as follows, as matter of law: That the City of Sonoma has established its claim to the land in controversy, within the meaning of the said contract between Schell and Akers. That, by the terms of said contract, each agreed with the other to abide by the decision of the United States on the said claim of the City of Sonoma for said lands, as then pending before the United States courts, and to abide by the boundary line between them as established on the final confirmation of pueblo lands to the City of Sonoma. That the defendant Stephen Akers is entitled to the possession of all the lands and premises described in the complaint. That all the right, title and interest of Leese in and to all the piece of land described in finding 25, derived to him under the patent of the Huichica rancho, passed to and became vested in Schell on the 18th of January, 1859. That all the title of the City of Sonoma passed to and became vested in Stephen Akers, by deed dated May 18th, 1858, in and to the said tract described in said finding 25. That defendants are entitled to judgment for the possession of all the land described in the plaintiffs' complaint, with costs of suit.

The judge of the Superior Court of Sonoma County, in a short opinion given in the case, said: "The court is of the opinion that the contract of the 11th of October, 1860, is conclusive of this controversy. The Huichica Patent had issued when that agreement was made, and covered the land in dispute. Plaintiffs' testator had then all the title which he ever could acquire. The parties must have referred to the final location of the patent of the pueblo of Sonoma, when they, in their agreement, used the phrase 'in the event the City of Sonoma establishes her claim to any portion' of said land. That patent has been finally located, and embraces the land which is the subject of this suit. It follows that the defendants should prevail."

The judgment of the superior court was that the defendants recover costs from the plaintiffs. The latter took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the State, which affirmed the judgment of the superior court, by a judgment to review which the plaintiffs have brought a writ of error.

The opinion of the supreme court, found in the record, and also reported as Hale v. Akers, 69 Cal. 160, recites the facts as found by the superior court, and then states that there are two sufficient answers to the claims made by the plaintiffs. In its first answer, the court considered the meaning of the words, "taking the direction of the Arroyo Seco," found in the second grant of July 6, 1844, and in the decree of confirmation, and stated that it seemed to it, as it did to the commissioner of the General Land Office, that the line was to run from the Trancas to the nearest point on the Arroyo Seco, and thence up that creek or gulch; that, if that were so, then it is clear that the line as run by the surveyor did not conform to the decree, but took in lands not covered by the decree; and that it must follow that, to the lands so taken in, the original concession to the pueblo, and the patent issued upon confirmation thereof, carried the better right.

The second answer which the supreme court made to the claims of the plaintiffs was that the written agreement, before mentioned, was intended to be, and was, binding upon the parties, and was decisive of their rights, when it was executed. The view taken by the court was that when Schell and Akers executed the agreement, in October, 1860, the Huichica Patent had been issued to Leese, in August, 1859, and Schell has his deed of January, 1859; that the Sonoma claim had been confirmed by the Board of Land Commissioners, in January, 1866, and took in the land lying between the Trancas line and the Arroyo Seco; that the city was asserting a right to that land, and the case was pending before the courts; that Akers had a deed, given by the city in May, 1858, of 111 acres of the land, and was in possession of them; that under these circumstances the parties compromised the pending suit, by dividing the 111 acres about equally between them, Akers releasing to Schell the eastern half and retaining the western half; that under the terms of the agreement, the only establishment of the Sonoma claim which the parties contemplated was such as would result from the action of the courts upon it, and the issuing of a patent by the government in pursuance of their decrees; that the parties evidently thought that if the city should finally succeed in establishing its claim, and receive a patent for any of the land within the lines of the Huichica Patent, it would have the better title to the land, and that they could, therefore, avoid litigation and expense, and safely await the issue of the city's contest; that they rightly interpreted the law; and that Schell, so long as he lived, acquiesced in the arrangement.

It is contended for the defendants that this court has no jurisdiction of this case. For the plaintiffs it is contended that not only was a federal question raised in the Supreme Court of the State, but it was decided adversely to the plaintiffs; and that both parties claimed under titles acquired from the Mexican government prior to the cession of California to the United States.

The errors assigned by the plaintiffs are that the Supreme Court of the State erred in adjudging that the Trancas line did not conform to the decree of confirmation of the claim of Leese to the Huichica rancho, made April 22, 1856, by the district court of the United States; in adjudging that the patent of March 31, 1880, to the mayor and common council of the City of Sonoma, established that the title to the land in controversy was in the defendants, and gave to them a title superior to the title of the plaintiffs under the patent of August 3, 1859, issued to Leese; and in adjudging that Schell and Akers, by their written agreement of October 11, 1860, intended that any patent which should be thereafter issued to the City of Sonoma, conveying any portion of the land to which Schell then had title under the Huichica Patent of August 3, 1859, would or could divest Schell of his title to the land under the Huichica patent, or establish a superior title thereto in the City of Sonoma.

After contending that court below erred in its decision of the federal question; that such decision was based upon the facts (1) that the land in dispute was a portion of the pueblo land, and (2) that the lines of the survey of the Huichica Grant did not conform to the decree of confirmation; and that, in so doing, the court ignored (1) the power of the Mexican government to divest the pueblo title, and (2) the findings of the lower court that the survey did conform to the decree, the plaintiffs urged that the interpretation by that court of the agreement between Schell and Akers was incorrect, and that it would not have so interpreted the agreement had it not been for its erroneous deductions of law regarding the federal question, and, therefore, that the decision of the federal question was the controlling decision of the case.

But we cannot take this view. Both of the courts below decided that, irrespective of the federal question, the agreement of October 11, 1860, was decisive of the case. The construction of that agreement involved no federal question, and controlled the whole case.

In Murdock v. City of Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 590, 636, [22:444], this court announced, as one of the propositions which flowed from the provisions of the second section of the Act of February 5, 1867 (14 Stat. 886), embodied in section 709 of the Revised Statutes of 1874, and still in force, that even assuming that a federal question was erroneously decided against the plaintiff in error, the court must further inquire whether there was any other matter or issue adjudged by the state court, which is sufficiently broad to maintain the judgment of that court, notwithstanding the error in deciding the issue raised by the federal question; and that, if that is found to be the case, the judgment must be affirmed, without inquiring into the soundness of the decision on such other matter or issue.

This principle has since been repeatedly applied. In Jenkins v. Loewenthal, 110 U. S. 222, [28:129], where two defenses were made in the state court, either of which, if sustained, barred the action, and one involved a federal question and the other did not, and the state court in its decree sustained them both, this court said that as the finding by the state court of the fact which sustained the defense which did not involve a federal question was broad enough to maintain the decree, even though the federal question was wrongly decided, it would affirm the decree, without considering the federal question or expressing any opinion upon it, and that such practice was sustained by the case of Murdock v. City of Memphis, supra. See also McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578 [24:390]; Brown v. Atwell, 92 U. S. 827 [28:511]; Citizens Bank v. Board of Liquidation, 98 U. S. 140 [25:114]; Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 [28:400]; Adams County v. Burlington & Mo. R. Co. 112 U. S. 128 [28:678]; Detroit City Railway v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133 [29:118]; New Orleans Water Works Co. v. La. Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18 [31:607]; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 234 [32:127, 135].

It appears clearly from the opinion of the supreme court that it was not necessary to the judgment it gave that the words "taking the direction of the Arroyo Seco" should be construed at all. It is, therefore, of no consequence whether or not that court was wrong in its conclusions as to the meaning of the Hui-chica Grant.

The writ of error is dismissed.

JOEL D. SUGG ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

JAMES T. THORNTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 524-531.)

Texas judgment—against nonresident—against partners—due process of law.

1. Under the statutes of Texas, in a suit against partners, where one of them was a nonresident and notice was addressed to him under article 1230, Rev. Stat. of Texas, and the other partner was served personally, the judgment is not a personal judgment against the nonresident partner, but a judgment against the partner individually who was personally served, and against the firm as a distinct legal entity.
2. So far as the nonresident partner is concerned, such judgment binds the firm assets only, and cannot be enforced by execution against his individual property.
3. The notice addressed to the nonresident partner, under article 1230, was not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States as not being due process of law; it does not have any binding effect personally on the party served therewith.

[No. 1141.]

Submitted Dec. 9, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

ERROR to the Supreme Court of Texas to review a judgment of that court affirming a judgment of the District Court of Cooke County, Texas, in favor of plaintiffs, on a promissory note.

On motion to dismiss or affirm. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William Warner, O. H. Dean and James Hagerman, for defendant in error, for motion:

Where a party defendant in a suit appears at the term when judgment by default has been rendered against him, and moves to set aside or vacate the judgment on both jurisdictional and non-jurisdictional grounds, he thereby appears to the action and is effectually bound by the decision upon his motion.

Burdette v. Corgan, 26 Kan. 104; Cohen v. Troubridge, 6 Kan. 385; Ee v. Big Sand Iron Co. 18 Ohio St. 563; Grantier v. Rosencrance, 27 Wis. 491; Alderson v. White, 32 Wis. 309; Meizell v. Kirkpatrick, 29 Kan. 679; Kaw Valley Life Assn. v. Lemke, 40 Kan. 142, 661.

The record in the court below must show that there was drawn in question the validity of the statutes of Texas, on the grounds that they were repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and that such question was decided in favor of the validity of the state statutes.

Crowell v. Randell, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 368 (9: 458); Armstrong v. Treasurer, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 281 (10: 965); Lawler v. Walker, 55 U. S. 14 How. 149 (14: 364); Maxwell v. Neubold, 59 U. S. 18 How. 511 (15: 506); Messenger v. Mason, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 507 (19: 1038); Hoyt v. Sheldon, 66 U. S. 1 Black. 518 (17: 65); Spies v. Illinois, 128 U. S. 131, 181 (31: 80, 91); Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52-57 (32: 640-642).

Messrs. Sawmle Robertson and W. O. Davis, for plaintiffs in error, in opposition: The court was without jurisdiction to render the judgment.

D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 52 U. S. 11 How. 165 (13: 643); Public Works v. Columbia College, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 521 (31: 687); Mason v. Eldred, 6 Wall. 239 (18: 785); Hull v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160 (23: 271); Wood v. Watkinson, 17 Conn. 500, 44 Am. Dec. 562; Freeman on Judgments, § 574; Tay v. Hawley, 39 Cal. 95.

It was not due process of law to adjudge a claim a joint demand against two when only one had been cited.

Harper v. Brink, 24 N. J. L. 383; Oakley v. Aspinwall, 4 N. Y. 525; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 732 (24: 572).

If a federal question is fairly presented by the record, and its decision is actually necessary to the determination of the case, a judgment which rejects the claim but avoids all reference to it is as much against the right within the meaning of section 709 of the Revised Statutes as if it had been specifically referred to and the right directly refused.

Chapman v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 540 (31: 235); Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432 (24: 760); Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 590 (22: 429); Crowell v. Randell, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 368 (9: 458); Klinger v. Missouri, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 257 (20: 636).

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

James T. Thornton filed his petition in the District Court of Cooke County, Texas, against J. W. Sacra, J. W. Wilson, Isaac Cloud and E. C. Sugg & Bro., averring the latter to be a copartnership composed of E. C. Sugg and Iker Sugg, and that E. C. Sugg resided in Tarrant County, Texas, and Iker Sugg in Johnson County, Wyoming Territory, to recover on a promissory note for $26,964.05, purporting to have been signed by Sacra, Wilson, Cloud and E. C. Sugg & Bro. The petition prayed for a citation to the defendants and a notice to the defendant Iker Sugg, as provided by section 1230 of the Revised Statutes of Texas, and for judgment for the amount of the note, and for costs, and for general and special relief. All of the defendants were served in Texas except Iker Sugg, to whom notice and a certified copy of the petition were delivered under the statute in Wyoming Territory.

Sections 1224, 1230 and 1346 of the Revised Statutes of Texas are as follows:

"Art. 1224. In suits against partners the citation may be served upon one of the firm, NOTE.—As to what is due process of law, see note to Pearson v. Yewdall, 24: 433.

As to conclusiveness of judgments, see note to Bank of U. S. v. Beverly, 11: 75.

Service of notice to appear and defend, when necessary to validity of judgment, see note to Hollingsworth v. Barbour, 7: 622.

132 U. S.

447

and such service shall be sufficient to authorize a judgment against the firm and against the partner actually served."

"Art. 1230. Where the defendant is absent from the State, or is a nonresident of the State, the clerk shall, upon the application of any party to the suit, his agent or attorney, address a notice to the defendant requiring him to appear and answer the plaintiff's petition at the time and place of the holding of the court, naming such time and place. Its style shall be 'The State of Texas,' and it shall give the date of the filing of the petition, the file number of the suit, the names of all the parties and the nature of the plaintiff's demand, and shall state that a copy of the plaintiff's petition accompanies the notice. It shall be dated and signed and attested by the clerk, with the seal of the court impressed thereon, and the date of its issuance shall be noted thereon; a certified copy of the plaintiff's petition shall accompany the notice."

"Art. 1348. Where the suit is against several partners jointly indebted upon contract, and the citation has been served upon some of such partners, but not upon all, judgment may be rendered therein against such partnership and against the partners actually served, but no personal judgment or execution shall be awarded against those not served." 1 Sayles' Texas Civil Statutes, 417, 418, 448.

Judgment was rendered by the district court in these words:

"This day came the plaintiff by his attorney, and the defendants having failed to appear and answer in this behalf, but wholly made default, wherefore, the said James T. Thornton, plaintiff, ought to recover against the said J. W. Sacra, J. W. Wilson, Isaac Cloud and E. C. Sugg & Bro., a copartnership composed of E. C. Sugg and 'Iker' or I. D. Sugg, the said 'Iker' Sugg and I. D. Sugg being one and the same person, and E. C. Sugg the partner served, defendants, his damages by occasion of the premises, and it appearing to the court that the cause of action is liquidated and proved by an instrument of writing, it is ordered that the clerk do assess the damages sustained by said plaintiff; and the said clerk now here having assessed the damages aforesaid at the sum of twenty-eight thousand one hundred and thirty-four dollars and ninety-nine cents, it is adjudged by the court, that the said plaintiff do have and recover of the said defendants the sum of twenty-eight thousand one hundred and thirty-four dollars and ninety-nine cents, with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum, together with his costs in this behalf expended, and that he have his execution.

"It is further ordered by the court that execution issue for the use of the officers of court, against each party respectively for the costs by him in this behalf incurred."

On December 5, 1885, J. D. Sugg filed a petition to vacate the judgment so far as it affected him, and his individual property, and so far as it affected the property of the partnership of E. C. Sugg & Bro., upon the grounds: That the note was not given for a partnership liability of his firm, but that the firm name was signed thereto as surety for Sacra, and without authority, it being outside the scope of the partnership; that the judgment did not dispose of the case as to him; that his name was not "Iker" or I. D. Sugg, but J. D. Sugg, sometimes called "Ikerd Sugg;" that the partnership of E. C. Sugg & Bro. owned property in the State of Texas, and was largely indebted; and that the assets of the firm would be required to pay its debts. The petition was sworn to, and sustained by the affidavits of E. C. Sugg and others.

In reply, Thornton filed an answer asking that the judgment be corrected as to the name of J. D. Sugg, and alleging that J. D. Sugg and Iker Sugg were one and the same person, who, with E. C. Sugg, composed the partnership of E. C. Sugg & Bro.; that E. C. Sugg & Bro. owned property in Texas, Wyoming and the Indian Territory, of the value of about a million dollars, and were attempting to dispose of their property with intent to defraud their creditors; that plaintiff had obtained a judgment lien against their property in Texas; and various facts tending to show that the note was properly signed "E. C. Sugg & Bro.;" and affidavits were filed in support of this answer.

The district court proceeded to determine the issues thus raised, upon the affidavits, without objection, and overruled the motion to vacate and set aside the judgment, and entered an order directing the clerk to correct the judgment as asked by Thornton, so as to give J. D. Sugg's name correctly. To this action J. D. Sugg and E. C. Sugg & Bro. excepted, and gave notice of an appeal to the supreme court.

Article 1037 of the Revised Statutes of Texas provides:

"The appellant or plaintiff in error shall in all cases file with the clerk of the court below an assignment of errors, distinctly specifying the grounds on which he relies, before he takes the transcript of the record from the clerk's office, and a copy of such assignment of errors shall be attached to and form a part of the record; and all errors not so distinctly specified shall be considered by the supreme court or court of appeals as waived." 1 Sayles' Texas Civil Statutes, 339.

The defendants J. D. Sugg and E. C. Sugg & Bro. filed such assignment of errors in these words:

"Now come the defendants J. D. Sugg and E. C. Sugg & Bro., and assign errors as follows: 1. The court erred in overruling the motion of defendant J. D. Sugg to vacate the judgment herein. 2. The judgment is erroneous in not showing any disposition of the case as to defendant J. D. Sugg, otherwise called 'Iker Sugg.' 3. Though defendant J. D. Sugg was a party to this suit there was no discontinuance as to him, or any disposition of the case as to him in said judgment. 4. The record shows that the court had no jurisdiction of defendant J. D. Sugg. 5. The pretended notice served upon defendant J. D. Sugg was without authority and a nullity. 6. The court erred in permitting the judgment herein to be corrected."

The case was then taken by appeal to the Supreme Court of Texas, and on the eighth day of May, 1888, that court adopted the opinion of the commission of appeals, which is certified as part of the record, and affirmed the judgment of the district court.

The opinion, after stating the facts, points out that J. D. Sugg, having submitted to a trial of the issues raised upon his petition and upon affidavits, could not then be heard to complain of the result; and as the affidavits were conflicting in regard to the want of authority to sign the firm name to the note, holds that the judgment should not be disturbed; and thus concludes:

"It is contended that the judgment is erroneous, because it makes no disposition of the case as to appellant. The judgment is not against him, does not discontinue the case as to him, nor does it contain any allusion to him, except in the use of his name as descriptive of the partnership of E. C. Sugg & Bro. If the judgment does not in terms or legal effect dispose of the case as to all defendants, it is not a final judgment, and this appeal could not be entertained. Appellant was a nonresident of this State, and the court could acquire no jurisdiction of his person, except by his appearance and voluntary submission to the jurisdiction. This he might have done and made any defense to the suit that any citizen of this State would have been entitled to make. The judgment rendered was the only judgment that could have been rendered, and we think it a final judgment. The court retained complete control of the judgment during the term at which it was rendered, and did not err in permitting it to be amended as to the name of appellant, so as to correctly describe the partnership against which the judgment was rendered.

"We find no error in the record requiring reversal, and are of the opinion that the judgment of the court below should be affirmed."

The cause was thereupon brought to this court by writ of error, allowed by the chief justice of the Supreme Court of Texas, by indorsement upon the application therefor, in which it is stated that the allowance is made without assent being given to all the statements contained in the application. The case now comes before us on a motion to dismiss or affirm.

Plaintiffs in error contend that the judgment against the firm of E. C. Sugg & Bro., under which the property of the partnership might be seized and sold, was not due process of law under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and that articles 1224 and 1280 of the Revised Statutes of Texas, under which the judgment was sought to be sustained, were repugnant to that Amendment. It does not appear that any such question was raised in the state courts.

It is stated in the assignment of errors in the supreme court that "the record shows that the court had no jurisdiction of the defendant J. D. Sugg," and that "the pretended notice served upon defendant J. D. Sugg was without authority and a nullity," but there was no error assigned that the district court had no jurisdiction of the copartnership of E. C. Sugg & Bro.

As the Supreme Court of the State was only authorized to review the decision of the trial court, for errors committed there, and as J. D. Sugg challenged the judgment on the merits, and the decision was against him, it is clear that there is color for the motion to dismiss predicated upon a denial of the existence of a federal question so presented as to be available.

182 U. S.

The rule applied by the supreme court in respect to the action of the district court on the motion to vacate is thus expressed by Judge Brewer in Burdette v. Corgan, 26 Kan. 102, 104:

"The motion challenged the judgment, not merely on jurisdictional, but also on non-jurisdictional grounds; and whenever such a motion is made the appearance is general, no matter what the parties may call it in their motion. (Cohen v. Trowbridge, 6 Kan. 885; Fee v. B. S. Iron Co. 18 Ohio St. 568; Grantier v. Rosecrance, 27 Wis. 491; Alderson v. White, 82 Wis. 809.) Such a general appearance to contest a judgment on account of irregularities will, if the grounds therefor are not sustained, conclude the parties as to any further questioning of the judgment. A party cannot come into court, challenge its proceedings on account of irregularities, and after being overruled be heard to say that he never was a party in court, or bound by those proceedings. If he was not in fact a party, and had not been properly served, he can have the proceedings set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction, but he must challenge the proceedings on that single ground."

The record shows that there was a conflict of testimony in the district court upon the question whether the signature of E. C. Sugg & Bro. to the note sued upon, was an authorized partnership act. This was a question of fact simply, determined against the plaintiffs in error in the district court, and that determination affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State. And with its judgment in that regard we have nothing to do.

If, however, the validity of the Texas Statute and the judgment rendered thereunder was necessarily drawn in question, and must have been passed on in order to a decision, we find no ground to question the conclusion reached because of repugnancy to the Constitution. The notice authorized by article 1280 cannot, of course, have any binding effect personally on the party served therewith; but if the suit or proceeding is intended to affect property in Texas belonging to him, or in which he is interested, the notice may be very proper to apprise him of it and give him an opportunity to look after his interests if he chooses. For this purpose it might be to his advantage to receive it. It cannot legitimately serve any other purpose; and it does not appear to have been used for any other purpose in this case.

The judgment was not a personal judgment against J. D. Sugg, but a judgment against E. C. Sugg individually, and against E. C. Sugg & Bro., treating the partnership as a distinct legal entity. So far as J. D. Sugg was concerned, it bound the firm assets only, and could not be proceeded on by execution against his individual property. Burnett v. Sullivan, 68 Tex. 585; Texas & St. L. R. Co. v. McCaughey, 62 Tex. 271; Alexander v. Stern, 41 Tex. 193; Sanger v. Overmier, 64 Tex. 57.

The position taken by plaintiffs in error is not tenable (Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714 [24: 566]), and the judgment is affirmed.

THE PACIFIC EXPRESS COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
 v.
 MALIN & COLVIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 531-538.)

Remitter of part of judgment—counter-claim, overruling of—exception to—exceptions, when taken—motion to dismiss or affirm.

1. Under the statutes of Texas, a party recovering a judgment may remit any part of it; and where the remitter does not appear to have been made in open court, the court may, at the same term and before any writ of error is sued out, correct the record in that particular according to the fact.
2. Reconvention, as the term is used in practice in Texas, means a cross-demand, and the title of Counter-Claim, in the Revised Statutes of that State, is descriptive of such cross-action, which is more extensive than set-off, or recoupment.
3. In a suit to recover for goods destroyed by fire through defendant's negligence, where defendant pleaded, as a counter-claim or cross-demand, that the fire was set by plaintiff's negligence and the suit was without cause, and that other suits were brought against defendant, and in defending this and the other suits defendant had been obliged to pay out $3,000 in attorneys' fees and expenses and thereby defendant had also been damaged by loss of business and reputation $5,000, amounting in all to a damage of $8,000, a verdict and judgment for plaintiff determined defendant's negligence and plaintiff's want of it, and against defendant's right to recover on the counter-claim; therefore defendant suffered no injury by the court's sustaining an exception to such counter-claim or cross-demand.
4. The exception to the counter-claim or cross-demand was also properly sustained because a recovery on it would be confined to the natural and proximate consequences of the act complained of and would not include such damages as are claimed in the counter-claim or cross-demand.
5. While exceptions may be reduced to form and signed after the trial, they must appear affirmatively to have been taken before the jury withdrew from the bar.
6. As the cross-demand was not set up until after the plaintiffs had reduced the amount claimed below the jurisdiction of this court, there is color for the contention on the part of the defendants in error that it was put forward for the purpose of giving this court jurisdiction. But assuming this not to have been so, the motion to affirm must be sustained under the circumstances.

[No. 1801.]

Submitted Dec. 2, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover the value of goods destroyed by fire occasioned by the negligence of the defendant.

On motion to dismiss or affirm. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for defendants in error, for motion:

NOTE.—For jurisdiction of United States Supreme Court, dependent on amount, see note to Gordon v. Ogden, 7: 502.

Exception, when must be taken to be available on review, see note to Phelps v. Mayer, 14: 643.

A case will be dismissed where it is apparent that the amount inserted was for the sole purpose of giving this court jurisdiction.

Lee v. Watson, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 387 (17: 557); Bowman v. Chicago & N. R. Co. 115 U. S. 611 (29: 502).

To make them available, it should have appeared that the exceptions were made to the charge while the jury was at the bar.

Phelps v. Mayer, 56 U. S. 15 How. 160 (14: 643); U. S. v. Carey, 110 U. S. 51 (28: 67).

When error is assigned upon instructions given, the bill must set forth so much of the evidence as tends to prove the facts out of which the question is raised and to which the instructions apply, otherwise the bill will not be considered.

U. S. v. Hough, 103 U. S. 73 (26: 806); Worthington v. Mason, 101 U. S. 149 (25: 848).

Messrs. John Johns and D. A. McKnight, for plaintiff in error, in opposition: A remittitur entered after judgment will not divest this court of jurisdiction.

Thompson v. Butler, 95 U. S. 694 (24: 540).

The reformed judgment in the court below, after deduction of the sum remitted, was $4,656.65. The counter-claim set out in the plea was for $8,000. It was demurred to, the demurrer was sustained, and it is now before this court upon the exception to said ruling. The sum of said two amounts is $12,656.65, and this is the matter in dispute on the writ of error.

Hilton v. Dickinson, 106 U. S. 165, 175 (27: 688, 691); Bradstreet Co. v. Higgins, 112 U. S. 227 (28: 715); New York El. R. Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 118 U. S. 608 (30: 259).

The language of the court in the charge to the jury, which is excepted to, presented distinct propositions of law and had reference to facts set out in the pleadings. It is therefore unnecessary that any of the evidence should appear in the record.

Pennock v. Dialogue, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 1, 15 (7: 327, 332); Jones v. Buckell, 104 U. S. 554, 556 (26: 841).

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was commenced by Sam. Malin and George Colvin, partners doing business under the firm name and style of Malin & Colvin, in the District Court of Mitchell County, Texas, to recover of the defendant the sum of five thousand nine hundred and seventy dollars, the alleged value of certain goods and chattels destroyed by a fire, occasioned, as averred, by the negligence of the defendant. The defendant filed various pleas and exceptions to the plaintiffs' petition, including the general issue. The cause was then removed from the state court to the United States Circuit Court for the Western District of Texas, and the defendant filed an amended original answer, and as special exceptions stated various grounds upon which it alleged the plaintiffs' original petition was insufficient, and, among other things, that all the items of the property charged to have been destroyed were not sufficiently described, and again pleaded the general issue; and also set up, with particularity, contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs thereupon filed an amended petition, recapitulating with greater precision the items of the property alleged to have been consumed, which reduced the aggregate of the claim from $5,970 to $4,656.71, and prayed judgment for the latter amount and costs, "and for all such other and further relief as the said plaintiffs may be entitled to in the premises in law or equity."

To this amended petition the defendant interposed, on the 5th day of October, 1888, a second amended original answer and exceptions, reiterating the exceptions formerly taken, and further answering, "by way of counter-claim and reconvention," charged that the plaintiffs were themselves guilty of negligence in keeping a dangerous lamp in a careless manner, by reason of which the fire was occasioned; and that thereupon the plaintiffs, "without probable or adequate cause," instituted this suit, and divers other parties have instituted and maintain suit against the defendant, by reason whereof the defendant has been compelled to pay out a large sum of money, to wit, three thousand dollars, for attorneys' fees and expenses in defending this and said other suits; and further, that by reason of said fire and the institution of said suits, the reputation of the defendant had become "damaged and bad, and defendant has thereby lost custom and business upon which it would have realized a net revenue of, to wit, five thousand dollars. Wherefore defendant says that it has been damaged by reason of the premises in the sum of eight thousand dollars, actual damages, and defendant pleads said damages herein by way of set-off, counter-claim and reconvention, and asks for judgment," etc.

On the same day, October 5th, plaintiffs filed an exception to the cross-demand. The case came on for trial on the 8th day of October, when the defendant's exceptions to the plaintiffs' petition were overruled, except the fourth special exception objecting that the bill of particulars was too vague, in respect to which the plaintiffs were allowed to amend at once, so as to meet such exception. The plaintiffs' exception to defendant's plea in reconvention and counter-claim was also sustained by the court, and the defendant excepted. A jury was called and trial had, resulting in the return of a verdict on said 6th of October in favor of the plaintiffs for the sum of $4,300, "with interest from the 17th day of June, A. D. 1886," and judgment was thereupon rendered for the sum of $4,800, and the further sum of $792.15, interest since the 17th day of June, 1886, making in all the sum of $5,092.15 with costs; and the judgment record then proceeds thus: "And then came the plaintiffs and remit of and from the foregoing judgment the sum of four hundred and thirty-five dollars and fifty cents, leaving said judgment, as above rendered, to stand for the sum of four thousand six hundred and fifty-six dollars and sixty-five cents in favor of the said plaintiffs and against the said defendant; for which execution may issue." The charge of the court at length was filed the same day.

On the 8th day of October, 1888, a paper entitled "Defendant's Bill of Exceptions to the Charge of the Court" was filed, which commenced: "Now comes the defendant and ex-cepts to the charge of the court to the jury, wherein and whereby the jury are instructed to find for plaintiffs, if at all, the value of the goods and property, together with 8 per cent interest thereon from the time and date of such said destruction;" and after stating the reasons for objection to that part of the charge, thus concludes: "And for said reasons defendant objects and excepts to that portion of the charge of the court, and tenders herewith its bill of exception thereto and thereof, and asks that the same be signed and filed herein and made a part of the record in this cause, this 8th day of Oct., 1888."

And also another paper entitled "Bill of Exceptions Tended by the Defendant," commencing: "Now comes the defendant in said above cause and excepts to that portion of the charge of the court to the jury relative and appertaining to defendant's interposition and allegation of contributory negligence," etc., etc., stating the words excepted to, and concluding thus: "And defendant tenders this its bill of exception to such said charge so given by the court to the jury, and asks that same be signed and filed herein and made a part of the record in this said cause this 8th day of Oct., 1888." Both these papers were signed by the judge presiding.

There appears on the same 8th of October, a motion by the plaintiffs for leave to enter a remittitur for the sum of four hundred and thirty-five dollars and fifty cents, and an order of court allowing said remittitur as of the 6th day of October, 1888, and stating that the plaintiffs had on that day voluntarily remitted said amount of and from said judgment; but it not appearing to have been done in open court, or with leave of the court, the plaintiffs are now permitted, as of the 6th of October, to remit the amount in question; and it is ordered that the judgment of the 6th day of October, 1888, be corrected and reformed, so that upon the verdict and the remittitur the plaintiffs recover of the defendant the sum of four thousand six hundred and fifty-six dollars and sixty-five cents and costs, "and that this judgment take effect and be of force of and from the 6th day of October, 1888."

On the 9th of October, 1888, a motion for a new trial was overruled by the court, and the defendant excepted. To review the judgment the defendant sued out November 23, 1888, a writ of error from this court, and a motion is now made to dismiss the writ because the matter in dispute is less than five thousand dollars, with which is united a motion to affirm, "on the ground that, even if this court has jurisdiction, it is apparent that the questions involved are so frivolous as not to need further argument, and that the writ of error is sued out for delay only."

Sections 1351, 1352, 1354, 1355 and 1357 of the Revised Statutes of Texas are as follows:

"Art. 1351. Any party in whose favor a verdict has been rendered may in open court remit any part of such verdict, and such remitter shall be noted on the docket and entered in the minutes, and execution shall thereafter issue for the balance only of such judgment, after deducting the amount remitted.

"Art. 1352. Any person in whose favor a judgment has been rendered may in open court remit any part of such judgment, and such remitter shall be noted on the docket and entered in the minutes, and execution shall thereafter issue for the balance only of such judgment, after deducting the amount remitted."

"Art. 1854. Where there shall be a mistake in the record of any judgment or decree, the judge may, in open court, and after notice of the application therefor has been given to the parties interested in such judgment or decree, amend the same according to the truth and justice of the case, and thereafter the execution shall conform to the judgment as amended."

"Art. 1855. Where, in the record of any judgment or decree of any court, there shall be any mistake, miscalculation or mis-recital of any sum or sums of money, or of any name or names, and there shall be among the records of the cause any verdict or instrument of writing, whereby such judgment or decree may be safely amended, it shall be the duty of the court in which such judgment or decree shall be rendered, and the judge thereof, in vacation, on application of either party, to amend such judgment or decree thereby, according to the truth and justice of the cause; but the opposite party shall have reasonable notice of the application for such amendment."

"Art. 1857. A remitter or correction made as provided in any of the six preceding articles shall, from the making thereof, cure any error in the verdict or judgment by reason of such excess." 1 Sayles' Texas Civil Statutes, 450, 451.

The record of the 6th of October states the remittitur in proper form and the judgment for $4,656.65 thereupon, but if we are to understand that the remittitur of that date was believed to be ineffective because it did not appear to have been made in open court or with leave of court, it was entirely within the power of the circuit court, on the 8th of October, at the same term and before any writ of error had been sued out, to correct the record according to the fact. As the judgment as it stands is for less than $5,000, if there were nothing else in the case, we should grant the motion to dismiss. Pacific Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. O'Connor, 128 U. S. 394 [32: 488].

But it is contended that the plea or answer by way of reconvention or counter-claim affords sufficient ground for jurisdiction, and that the questions arising thereon cannot be disposed of on a motion to affirm.

Reconvention, as the term is used in practice in Texas, means a cross-demand, and the title of Counter-Claim, in the Revised Statutes of that State, is referred to by counsel as descriptive of such cross-action, which is more extensive than set-off or recoupment.

Under this title, section 645 of the Revised Statutes of Texas provides:

"Whenever any suit shall be brought for the recovery of any debt due by judgment, bond, bill or otherwise, the defendant shall be permitted to plead therein any counter-claim which he may have against the plaintiff, subject to such limitations as may be prescribed by law."

452

By section 649, if plaintiff's cause of action be a claim for unliquidated or uncertain damages, founded on a tort or breach of covenant, the defendant is not permitted to set off any debt due him by the plaintiff; and if the suit be founded on a certain demand, the defendant is not permitted to set off unliquidated or uncertain damages founded on a tort or breach of covenant on the plaintiff's part.

Section 650 is in these words:

"Nothing in the preceding article shall be so construed as to prohibit the defendant from pleading in set-off any counter-claim founded on a cause of action arising out of, or incident to, or connected with, the plaintiff's cause of action." 1 Sayles' Texas Civil Statutes, 236, 237.

The present alleged counter-claim is founded on the converse of the same cause of action as that counted on by the plaintiffs, and inasmuch as the verdict and judgment determined that the defendant had been guilty of negligence, and that the plaintiffs had not, it may be assumed that the defendant suffered no injury through the action of the court in sustaining the exception to it. Had the verdict been otherwise, the defendant might perhaps have complained that it had not been allowed to recover such damages on its cross-demand as could have been properly thereby claimed. A denial of the right of recovery over did not cut the defendant off from establishing plaintiffs' negligence, if it could. As that question was settled in plaintiffs' favor, the particular ruling became immaterial; but it may be added that the exception was properly sustained, because the recovery by the defendant, if successful on such a cross-action, would have been confined to the natural and proximate consequences of the act complained of, and would not have included such damages as are referred to in its pleading, and as therein claimed. Plumb v. Woodmansee, 34 Iowa, 116, approved in Pinson v. Kirsch, 46 Tex. 28.

It may be further remarked that the alleged bills of exception do not show that the exceptions were taken on the trial. While exceptions may be reduced to form and signed after the trial, they must appear affirmatively to have been taken before the jury withdrew from the bar. United States v. Carey, 110 U. S. 51 [28: 67], and cases cited.

Here it is expressly stated that the exceptions were taken on the 8th day of October, two days after the return of the verdict. This was too late, and, as to the motion for a new trial, the action of the circuit court thereon was in the exercise of its discretion and cannot be reviewed here.

As the cross-demand was not set up until after the plaintiffs had been compelled by the defendant to make their items of loss more specific, and had thus reduced the amount claimed below the jurisdiction of this court, there is color for the contention on the part of the defendants in error that it was put forward for the purpose of giving this court jurisdiction. But assuming this not to have been so, and that the writ of error should not be dismissed, we are of opinion that the motion to affirm must be sustained under the circumstances, and it is so ordered.

182 U. S.

THE FORBES LITHOGRAPH MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ROLAND WORTHINGTON, Collector of Customs for THE DISTRICT OF BOSTON AND CHARLESTOWN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 655-661.)

Duty on iron show cards.

1. Iron show cards are liable to a duty of 45 per centum ad valorem under the last paragraph of schedule C of section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, as manufactures of iron not specially enumerated in the Act of March 3, 1883.
2. They are not dutiable as printed matter under schedule M of that Act.

[No. 163.]

Submitted Dec. 13, 1889. Decided Dec. 23, 1889.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action to recover back duties, alleged to have been illegally exacted by him as the Collector of the Port of Boston, on iron show cards.

Affirmed.

Opinion below, 25 Fed. Rep. 899.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This cause was heard by the district judge for the District of New Hampshire, holding the circuit court, upon the following agreed statement of facts:

"This was an action in which the writ was dated April 18, 1884, brought by the Forbes Lithograph Manufacturing Company, a corporation located at Boston, in said district, to recover back $1,081.42, the amount of duties alleged by them to have been illegally exacted by the defendant Worthington, as Collector of the Port of Boston, on certain merchandise described in the invoice and entries as 'iron show cards' imported by them. The pleadings may tiffs paid the assessed duties under protest, and duly filed such protest with the Collector and their appeal with the Secretary of the Treasury. A copy of one of the protests, which may stand for all, is hereto annexed and marked 'A,' and this action was seasonably brought.

"The Collector exacted a duty of forty-five per centum ad valorem (amounting in the aggregate to $2,482.62), under the clause in schedule C (last section) of the Tariff Law of March 3, 1883, which is as follows: 'Manufactures, articles or wares, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, composed wholly or in part of iron, . . . or any other metal, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, forty-five per centum ad valorem,' while the said importers claimed that the goods were dutiable at twenty-five per centum ad valorem only (the aggregate amounting to $1,851.20), under the clause in schedule M (first section), which is as follows: 'Books, pamphlets, bound or unbound, and all printed matter, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, engravings, bound or unbound, etchings, illustrated books, maps and charts, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.'

"The difference between the amount of said duties, at forty-five per cent and at twenty-five per cent, is $1,081.42, which is the amount that the plaintiffs claim in this case.

"All the goods charged with the duties were iron show cards or advertising cards or signs.

"They were manufactured in Paris on orders given by the said importers to fill orders from parties here, who used them for advertising purposes (to hang on the walls or in windows or in public places, to give to customers, etc.). The importers imported and sold them to the consumers here for such advertising purposes only. The cards were of different sizes, being on the average about a foot long by six inches wide, and contained generally the name of the person and of the article advertised, with some picture or ornament thereon—for example as follows:

BREWERY
ESTABLISHED

ROBERT SMITH'S

A. D.
1875.

INDIA PALE ALE & BROWN STOUT,

IN BOTTLE.

PHILADELPHIA.
U. S. A.

ON DRAUGHT.

LITH. MAX CREMITZ, PARIS.

FORBES CO., BOSTON, SOLE AGENTS.

be referred to. The plaintiffs imported these cards into the Port of Boston from Paris, in France, by different steamers from Liverpool, the importations being made in ten separate lots, and extending from December 19, 1888, to April 2, 1884.

"On each importation as received the plain-

"These cards were prepared in different colors on plates of sheet iron. It is agreed, if relevant to the issue, that the value of the iron plates before the printing was put upon them was about two or three cents each, and that the other material of the card as material was of like trifling value, while that of the completed card or sign was about twenty to twenty-five cents.

"These cards or signs were lithographed (that is to say, printed) from lithographic stones on hand presses in the same way that lithographing is done on paper or on cardboard. Samples of said cards are filed herewith, marked 'Exhibit B,' and may be referred to at the hearing.

"The case is submitted by the parties on the above as an agreed statement of facts.

"If upon the foregoing facts the merchandise should have been assessed at 25 per cent, judgment is to be rendered for the plaintiffs for $1,081.42 and costs; otherwise for defendant for costs."

Copy of the protest was attached to the statement, and samples of the cards accompanied it as exhibits.

The court found for the defendant and entered judgment accordingly, and a writ of error was sued out from this court upon exceptions to the findings and rulings. The opinion is reported in 25 Fed. Rep. 899.

Mr. Selwyn Z. Bowman, for plaintiff in error:

In the interpretation of statutes imposing duties on imported goods, the language adopted, particularly in the denomination of articles, is according to the commercial understanding of the terms used.

Maillard v. Lawrence, 57 U. S. 16 How. 251 (14: 925); Elliott v. Swartwout, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 137 (9: 873); U. S. v. 112 Casks of Sugar, 33 U. S. 8 Pet. 277 (8: 944); Curtis v. Martin, 44 U. S. 8 How. 106 (11: 516).

The commercial designation, to have any legal effect in construing the law, must be clearly established.

Arthur v. Lahey, 96 U. S. 112 (24: 766); Arthur v. Morrison, 96 U. S. 108 (24: 764); Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S. 75 (31: 645).

The "commercial understanding" under the Tariff Acts refers rather to specific articles than designation of classes.

Two Hundred Casks of Tea, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 430 (6: 128); Barlow v. U. S. 32 U. S. 7 Pet. 404 (8: 728); Elliott v. Swartwout, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 137 (9: 873); Lawrence v. Allen, 43 U. S. 7 How. 785 (12: 914); De Forest v. Lawrence, 54 U. S. 18 How. 274 (14: 143); Curtis v. Martin, 44 U. S. 8 How. 106 (11: 516); Schmieder v. Barney, 118 U. S. 645 (28: 1180); Maillard v. Lawrence, 57 U. S. 16 How. 251 (14: 925).

The use, especially when an article is new and a substitute for other articles, may be and often is an important guide to the classification.

Koch v. Seiberger, 30 Fed. Rep. 424; Arthur v. Moller, 97 U. S. 368 (24: 1047); Arthur v. Swartwout, 96 U. S. 129 (24: 773); Arthur v. Jacoby, 108 U. S. 677 (26: 454); Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. 384.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Atty-Gen., for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

We concur with the district judge in his conclusion that these iron show cards were properly assessed as manufactures of iron, not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act of March 3, 1863, and as such liable to duty under the last paragraph of schedule C of section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by that Act, which reads:

"Manufactures, articles or wares, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, composed wholly or in part of iron, steel, copper, lead, nickel, pewter, tin, zinc, gold, silver, platinum or any other metal, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, forty-five per centum ad valorem." (22 Stat. 501).

This is conceded by plaintiff in error unless the articles were dutiable as "printed matter" under the first paragraph of schedule M of that section (22 Stat. 510), which is quoted in the statement of facts, and given hereafter.

The diligence of counsel has furnished us with definitions, from many dictionaries and encyclopedias, of the words "print," "printing" and "printed matter," from which it is argued that the essential feature of printing is not the substance on which the printing is done, but the mode of making the impression. But the question here is not whether these iron show cards, being lithographed or printed, could be styled "printed matter" within the meaning of these words as given by lexicographers, but whether they were "printed matter" as those words are used in schedule M of the Act of March 3, 1863.

There was no evidence that signs of this kind were known commercially, or by printers, bookbinders, dealers in books, pamphlets or periodicals, or others, as "printed matter."

In Arthur v. Moller, 97 U. S. 365 [24: 1046], certain chromo-lithographs printed from oil stones upon paper were held subject to the duty levied upon printed paper; and Mr. Justice Hunt, in delivering the opinion of the court, says that "the term 'print' or 'printing' includes the most of the forms of figures or characters or representations, colored or uncolored, that may be impressed on a yielding surface;" and that "the pictures in question were printed from lithographic stones, by successive impressions, each impression giving a different portion of the view and of a different color. Like other pictures, they are made and used for the purpose of ornament. Equally with engravings, copper plates and lithographs, they are printed, and properly fall within the statutory designation of printed matter. If further argument were needed it would be found in the principle noscit a sociis. 'Printed matter' is named in the list with engravings, maps, charts, illustrated papers. With these printed pictures are naturally associated."

Undoubtedly the words "printed matter" are popularly considered as applying to paper or some similar substance commonly used to receive the impression of letters, characters or figures by type and ink, and reference to the legislation of Congress demonstrates that the phrase was used in the schedule in question in this sense.

By section 18 of the Act of March 2, 1861, fixing duties on imports, etc., a duty of fifteen per centum ad valorem was levied "on all books, periodicals and pamphlets, and all printed matter and illustrated books and papers." (12 Stat. 187).

In section 94 of the Act of June 30, 1864, appears this paragraph:

"On all printed books, magazines, pamphlets, reviews, and all other similar printed publications, except newspapers, a duty of five per centum ad valorem." (13 Stat. 267).

By "Schedule M, Sundries," of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes, it is provided:

"Books, periodicals, pamphlets, blank books, bound or unbound, and all printed matter, engravings, bound or unbound, illustrated books and papers, and maps and charts: twenty-five per centum ad valorem." (R. S. 2d ed. 474).

In section 2502 of title XXXIII of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883, the first paragraph of the schedule headed "Schedule M, Books, Papers, etc.," reads:

"Books, pamphlets, bound or unbound, and all printed matter, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, engravings bound or unbound, etchings, illustrated books, maps and charts: twenty-five per centum ad valorem." (22 Stat. 510).

And then follow nine paragraphs, making ten in all in this schedule, relating to blank books, bound or unbound, and blank books for press copying; paper, sized or glued, suitable only for printing paper; printing paper, unsized, used for books and newspapers exclusively; manufactures of paper not specially enumerated; sheathing paper; paper boxes, and all other fancy boxes; paper envelopes; paper hangings and paper for screens or fire-boards, paper antiquarian, demy, drawing, elephant, foolscap, imperial, letter, note and all other paper not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act; pulp, dried, for paper-makers' use.

It is very clear that these iron signs were not dutiable under a schedule headed "books, papers, etc.," and confined throughout to the subject matter thus indicated.

If a duty had been imposed on iron show cards eo nomine, the latter would not have been dutiable as "manufactures of iron," any more than "braces and suspenders," though made of rubber, were dutiable as "manufactures of rubber" (Arthur v. Davies, 96 U. S. 135 [24: 810]), or "artificial flowers," though made of cotton, were dutiable as "manufactures of cotton." (Arthur v. Rheims, 96 U. S. 148 [24: 813]). The specific designation would prevail over the general words which otherwise embraced the article. In Arthur v. Jacoby, 108 U. S. 677 [26: 454], decorated porcelain were being subject to one rate of duty and pictures to another, it was held that where it appeared that certain pictures had been painted by hand on porcelain, which, it was proved, "did not in itself constitute an article of chinaware, being manufactured simply as a ground for the painting, and not for any use independent of the paintings," they were taxable as pictures and not as decorated porcelain ware. The question decided, as stated by Mr. Chief Justice Waite at the close of the opinion, was that "the goods were not chinaware, but paintings."

But here the articles were clearly manufactures of iron, and were not "printed matter," within the meaning of the clause relied on by the plaintiff, because those words, as there used, applied only to articles eiusdem generis 132 U. S.

with books and pamphlets, which iron show cards were not.

We find no difficulty in concluding that the case was properly decided, and the judgment is affirmed.

NEPHI W. CLAYTON, Appt.,

THE PEOPLE OF THE TERRITORY OF UTAH, ex rel. WILLIAM H. DICKSON, U. S. Attorney.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 632-643.)

Jurisdiction over territorial judgments—authority exercised under the United States—Utah Act of 1878 for election of auditor—conflict with Organic Act—void Act—general office—acquiescence—part of Act valid.

1. This court has jurisdiction to review a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah in which there was drawn in question an authority exercised under the United States within the meaning of the Act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat. 448), such as an authority exercised by the governor of that Territory in the appointment of an auditor of public accounts of said Territory, in the place of one who had been elected as such officer.
2. Where the Supreme Court of said Territory based its decision upon the power conferred upon the governor by the 7th section of the Organic Act of Utah to make appointments, this power was drawn in question and gives the defendant a right to have the judgment of this court upon it.
3. The Act of the Legislature of Utah of 1878, declaring that the auditor of public accounts shall be elected by the voters of the Territory, is void so far as it is in conflict with the Organic Act of September 9, 1850, creating the Territory of Utah, which provides that the governor with the consent of the Legislative Council shall appoint such officer.
4. In case of a conflict between the Organic Act creating the Territory and any Act of the Territorial Legislature, the Act of Congress must prevail.
5. The office in question is a general office, the appointment to which is provided for in the Organic Act creating the Territory, and the Legislature of Utah cannot change the appointing power and confer it upon anybody but the governor and Council.
6. The acquiescence of the people or of the Legislature of Utah or of any of its officers in the mode for appointing the auditor of public accounts is not sufficient to do away with the clear requirements of the Organic Act on that subject.
7. So much of the Territorial Statute of Utah as creates the office of auditor of public accounts and treasurer is valid.

[No. 148.]

Argued Dec. 5, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah affirming a judgment of the District Court of the Third Judicial District of that Territory overruling a demurrer to the complaint and adjudging that the defendant, Nephi W. Clayton, is usurping and unlawfully holding and exercising the office of territorial auditor of Utah Territory, and that he be excluded from said office, and that he do yield and deliver up the said office to Arthur Pratt, and the books, papers and records belonging to said office. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Eppa Hunton and Jeff. Chandler, for appellant:

It is the established policy of the federal government to permit the Territories to enjoy the privilege of self government.

Clinton v. Englebrecht, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 434 (20: 659); Snow v. U. S. 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 317 (21: 784).

The governor has no power to appoint these territorial officers.

If one part of the Legislative Act was void, the whole was void.

Morris v. Carter, 46 N. J. L. 260; Quinton v. Rogers, 12 Mich. 163.

No part of the Act creating the office can be separated from the part directing how the officers are to be chosen.

Morris v. Carter, 46 N. J. L. 260; Quinton v. Rogers, 12 Mich. 163; State v. New Brunswick Street & S. Comrs. 38 N. J. L. 322; Lathrop v. Mills, 19 Cal. 513; State v. Wheeler, 25 Conn. 290; Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 483; State v. Dousman, 28 Wis. 541; Cooley, Const. Lim. 214, 219.

Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor-Gen., for appellees.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

The action was commenced in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake, by a complaint in the name of the People of the Territory of Utah, by William H. Dickson, United States attorney of said Territory, against the present appellant, then defendant, Nephi W. Clayton, under the allegation that he had usurped and intruded into the office of auditor of public accounts in and for said Territory in the year 1879, and ever since that time had held and does still hold and exercise the functions of said office without authority of law.

An additional allegation in the complaint is that, on the 13th day of March, 1886, and after the final expiration and adjournment of the Legislative Assembly and Council of the Territory, Eli H. Murray, governor of said Territory, duly appointed Arthur Pratt to be auditor of public accounts of said Territory, and that thereupon said Pratt was qualified by taking the oath of office and the execution of an official bond, with sufficient sureties, as required by law, and, on the 17th of March aforesaid, was commissioned as such officer; and that, after being so appointed and commissioned, and so qualified, the said Pratt, on the day last mentioned, demanded of defendant that he surrender to him the office and the insignia thereof, which demand was then and there refused by the defendant.

The petition also states that on several occasions during the session of the Legislative Assembly previous to March, 1886, the governor had nominated and presented to said Council the name of a fit person to fill the office of auditor of public accounts, but the Council, at each of said sessions, failed and refused to take any action thereon, and that this was done with the full knowledge of said Council that the defendant was then unlawfully holding the office and exercising its functions.

The defendant answered this complaint, denying almost every allegation of the petition specifically, or by stating that he is without knowledge on the subject of its averments; and then proceeded to say, that on the 1st day of August, in the year 1880, he was a citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years and was eligible to hold office under the laws of Utah Territory; that at the regular election of that year, on the 2d day of August, 1880, he was duly elected auditor of public accounts for the Territory of Utah; and that thereafter, to wit, in September, 1880, Eli H. Murray, the governor of Utah, issued to him, under his hand and the seal of said Territory, a commission as auditor, which was also signed by the secretary of the Territory. And he further alleged that since said election of 1880 no one had been elected to fill the office, nor had defendant resigned, and that he is, by virtue of that election and the commission of the governor, acting as auditor of public accounts of said Territory.

The defendant also demurred to the complaint, and the case was afterwards heard upon the demurrer of the defendant upon the pleadings on file and on the motion of plaintiff for judgment of ouster against the defendant.

In regard to the motion, the court rendered the following judgment:

"It is now ordered and adjudged that the said demurrer of the said defendant be, and the same is hereby, overruled and denied; and it is further ordered and adjudged that the answer of the said defendant is insufficient as a defense or justification for his holding and exercising the functions of said office; that the said defendant, Nephi W. Clayton, is guilty of usurping and unlawfully holding and exercising the said office of territorial auditor of Utah Territory, and that said defendant be, and he is hereby, excluded from the said office and from exercising any of the duties pertaining thereto."

As to the application of Pratt to be admitted into and hold the office of territorial auditor it rendered the following judgment:

"It is further considered, ordered and adjudged that the said Arthur Pratt is the lawfully appointed and commissioned auditor of said Territory, and is entitled, after taking the oath of office and executing such official bond as by law required, to use, hold and exercise the said office, and perform the duties thereof and receive the emoluments thereto belonging, until his successor is duly appointed and qualified.

"And it is further ordered and adjudged that the said defendant, Nephi W. Clayton, do forthwith yield and deliver up to the said Arthur Pratt the said office of territorial auditor, and all the books, papers, keys, safes, furniture, property, moneys and records belonging or pertaining to the said office or the business thereof, and that the said plaintiff have and recover of and from said defendant the costs herein, taxed at twenty-two dollars and fifty cents."

On appeal to the Supreme Court of the Territory, taken by Clayton, both these judgments were affirmed.

The Legislature of Utah, by an Act approved January 20, 1852, created the offices of treasurer and auditor of public accounts, and defined the duties of each. It declared that those officers should be elected by the joint vote of both houses of the Legislative Assembly, and that their term of office should be four years, and until their successors were elected and qualified, unless sooner superseded by legislative election. An Act of the Legislature, approved February 22, 1878, declares that the territorial treasurer and auditor of public accounts shall be elected by qualified voters of the Territory at the general election in August, 1878, and biennially thereafter.

The case being tried on complaint and answer, the allegation of the defendant Clayton, that he was elected under that law in 1880 to the office of auditor of public accounts, received the commission of the governor upon that election, was duly qualified, gave bond and entered upon the duties of his office, must be taken as true. Also the allegation that no other person has since been elected to the same place, and that he holds over under the Act of 1852, is to be taken as correct. It must also be considered as established in the case that the governor undertook to exercise the power to appoint a suitable man auditor of public accounts, and that he made proper and fit nominations to fill that office to the Council of the Territory at various times, upon which they declined to act; that on the 18th of March, 1886, when such legislative body was not in session, he duly appointed Arthur Pratt to be auditor of public accounts of said Territory; that Pratt thereupon qualified by taking the proper oath and executing a sufficient official bond, and was on the 17th of March aforesaid commissioned as such officer; that he demanded of the defendant that he surrender to him the said office, which demand was then and there refused.

The District Court of the Third Judicial District decided that the Act of 1852, which vested the appointment of the auditor of public accounts in the Legislature by a joint vote of its two branches, and the Act of 1878, which transferred the power to fill this office to an election by the people of the Territory at a general election, were void, as being in conflict with the seventh section of the Organic Act of September 9, 1850, creating the Territory of Utah. That Act is the fundamental law which confers upon the Territory, upon its Legislature, and upon its territorial officers, all the powers which the government of the United States intended they should exercise. 9 Stat. 453. The seventh section is in the following language:

"That all township, district and county officers, not herein otherwise provided for, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah. The governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for; and in the first instance the governor alone may appoint all said officers, who shall hold their offices until the end of the first session of the Legislative Assembly, and shall lay off the necessary districts for members of the Council and House of Representatives, and all other offices."

This part of the Statute is reproduced almost verbatim in section 1857 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as applicable to all the Territories.

1. The first question presented to us for decision concerns the jurisdiction of this court to entertain the appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory. The law which governs that jurisdiction now is the Act of Congress of March 8, 1885 (23 Stat. 443), and is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That no appeal or writ of error shall hereafter be allowed from any judgment or decree in any suit at law or in equity in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, or in the Supreme Court of any of the Territories of the United States, unless the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, shall exceed the sum of five thousand dollars.

"Sec. 2. That the preceding section shall not apply to any case wherein is involved the validity of any patent or copyright, or in which is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States; but in all such cases an appeal or writ of error may be brought without regard to the sum or value in dispute."

In regard to the amount in controversy required by the first section of this Act, we are not at all satisfied that any such value can be applied to the office of auditor of public accounts; but we have no difficulty in holding that the record before us presents a case in which there was drawn in question an authority exercised under the United States, within the meaning of the second section. This authority was that exercised by the governor in the appointment of Arthur Pratt, acting upon the hypothesis that there was a vacancy in that office which he had a right to fill.

If the legislation of the Territory of Utah, vesting this appointment at first in the Legislature of the Territory, and afterwards in the votes of the people at a popular election, is valid, of course the governor had no right to make such appointment, and the commission issued upon the election of Clayton in 1880 continues him in the office until his successor is appointed. Under the pleadings in the case as presented to us, it must be held that no successor has been appointed, unless the appointment of Pratt be a valid one. If, therefore, the governor had authority and was the only person who had authority, under the Act organizing the Territory of Utah, and under section 1857 of the Revised Statutes, to make this appointment, then Clayton never was legally appointed, never was auditor of public accounts de jure, and the action of the governor in appointing another person to the place was valid.

It will be observed that this second section of the Statute, while it is based upon the general principle which is found in the Act of Congress allowing writs of error from this court to the highest courts of a State, namely, to protect parties against the exercise of an unlawful power on the part of the state authorities, does not use the language which is found in that Act, that to give this court jurisdiction the decision of the state court must be against the right or power set up by the party under the laws of the United States. On the contrary, this peculiar feature of the appellate jurisdiction of this court over that of the state courts is left out when the matter comes to be applied to the Territories, and it is held sufficient that there should be drawn "in question the validity of a treaty or statute of or an authority exercised under the United States;" and it is not required that the decision of the state court should be against the validity of treaty, statute or authority so exercised or claimed. We are therefore very clear that as the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah based its decision upon the power conferred upon the governor by the seventh section of the Organic Act of Utah to make appointments to office, this power was drawn in question, and gives the defendant Clayton a right to have the judgment of this court upon it.

The motion to dismiss the case for want of jurisdiction is therefore overruled.

2. The next question presented to us is the alleged error of the Supreme Court of the Territory in holding that this power was vested exclusively in the governor and Council as regards the office of auditor of public accounts. We are at some loss to see how there can be any doubt upon this question, if it be admitted that in case of a conflict between the Organic Act creating the Territory, of September 9, 1850 (9 Stat. 458), and any Act of the Territorial Legislature, the Act of Congress must prevail. That Statute is not at all ambiguous in its division of the power of appointment. "All township, district and county officers, not herein otherwise provided for, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah." This defines very clearly the power of the Legislature of Utah in providing for appointments to office. The next sentence in the same section declares that the governor shall nominate and, with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for; that is to say, all officers of the Territory who are township officers, district officers or county officers, shall be appointed in such manner as shall be provided by law, namely, by a statute made by the governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory; but all other officers, all which are not local or confined in their duties to some particular township, district or county, shall be nominated by the governor and by and with the advice and consent of the Council appointed.

That this mode of dividing the power of appointing to offices within the Territories is one to which Congress attached importance, is seen by the fact that it was subsequently adopted in the Organic Acts establishing the Territories of Washington, 10 Stat. 175; Colorado, 12 Stat. 174; Arizona, 12 Stat. 665; Dakota, 12 Stat. 241; Idaho, 12 Stat. 811; Montana, 18 Stat. 88; Wyoming, 17 Stat. 180; and it is reproduced as applicable to all the Territories by section 1857 of the Revised Statutes.

The office in question is not a township office, nor is it a district office, nor is it a county office. It is not in any sense a local office. It is a general office, whose duties concern and pervade the entire Territory of Utah, and whose functions are performed for the benefit of the whole Territory.

The sixth section of the Organic Act is relied on as conferring upon the Legislature of Utah the authority to pass the Act of 1852 and the Act of 1878 in question. The language of section six of that Act is "that the legislative power of said Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this Act;" and it is immediately following this section that it is declared that the governor shall nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint all officers of the Territory, except township, district and county officers. The inconsistency of an Act which declares that the Legislature shall appoint these officers, or that they shall be appointed by a popular election, with an express provision of the Organic Act that they shall be nominated by the governor and appointed by him with the consent of the Council, is too obvious to require illustration. The governor of the Territory, the secretary of the Territory, the judges of the Territory, the United States marshal and the United States district attorney are all appointed by the President,—these all being general officers, and not local. The law then continues this control of the federal authorities over the officers in the Territory by declaring that wherever the office is a general office and pervades the whole Territory, and is not a township, district or county office, the appointment shall be made by the governor. It is utterly inconsistent, both with the policy and the express language of the Statute, that the Legislature of the Territory of Utah can change the appointing power and vest it in any other body whatever, however popular, or that in the creation of officers of this general character, whose duties and functions pervade the whole Territory, they can confer the appointing power upon anybody else but the governor and Council.

The question of the conflict of a law passed by the Legislature of Utah Territory with this same Organic Act is considered at some length in the case of Ferris v. Higley, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 875 [22: 888]. The Act of Congress contains the provision that "the judicial power of said Territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and in justices of the peace;" and that "the jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appellate and original, and that of the probate courts and of justices of the peace, shall be as limited by law." It was urged in that case that an Act of the Legislature of Utah was valid which conferred upon the probate courts of the Territory power to exercise original jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, as well in chancery as at common law, when not prohibited by legislative enactment. This proposition was supported by a reference to the same clause of the Organic Act which is relied on in this case, namely, that the legislative power of the Territory extends to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and with that Act. It became a question in that case, as in this, whether the law conferring this extraordinary power upon the probate courts was consistent with the Organic Act which conferred the same powers upon the supreme and district courts of the Territory. That law was evidently intended to dispense with the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States appointed by the President and Senate, as far as it could be done, by investing the probate courts, which were under the control of the Legislature of the Territory, with the same powers which the former courts had.

While there was no definition of the powers of probate courts in the Organic Act, this court held that the essential nature of probate courts was not such as to justify the conclusion that they were intended to exercise such powers, and especially it was held that it was not competent for the Legislature to create other courts, or vest in other courts created by the Organic Act powers which had already been vested in the district and supreme courts of the Territory, and that therefore the Statute of the Territory conferring common-law and equity jurisdiction on the probate courts was void, as being in conflict with that provision of the Act of Congress. We think the present case is much clearer than that, because the Act of Congress in unequivocal terms declares where the appointing power to all offices shall be deposited, and the power of appointment to the office now under consideration is distinctly reposed in the governor and Council. The Council, which we have so often referred to, was a body constituting a part of the Legislature of the Territory, which answers to the place of a senate in the general political system of the several States and of the federal government. See section 4 of the Act to Establish Territorial Government for Utah, 9 Stat. 454.

The case of Snow v. United States, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 817 [21: 784], is supposed to conflict with these views. In that case, the office of attorney-general was created by an Act of the Legislature of Utah, whose duty it should be to attend to all legal business on the part of the Territory before courts where the Territory was a party, and prosecute individuals accused of crime in the judicial district in which he kept his office, in cases arising under the laws of the Territory, and such other duties as pertained to his office. This was supposed to be in conflict with the provision of the Organic Act, which authorized the appointment of an attorney for the Territory by the President. The court, however, held that the duties of the office created by the Territorial Legislature were not identical with those of the attorney for the Territory created under the Organic Act, and that it differed especially in that his functions only extended to the prosecution of individuals accused of crime in the judicial district in which he kept his office, in cases arising under the laws of the Territory, and that for other districts a district attorney should be elected in like manner and with like duties.

182 U. S.

And the court with some hesitation based its decision on this ground, and on the fact that the Act had been in operation without contest for many years.

It is true that in a case of doubtful construction the long acquiescence of Congress and the general government may be resorted to as some evidence of the proper construction, or of the validity, of a law. This principle is more applicable to questions relating to the construction of a statute than to matters which go to the power of the Legislature to enact it. At all events, it can hardly be admitted as a general proposition that under the power of Congress reserved in the Organic Acts of the Territories to annul the Acts of their Legislatures the absence of any action by Congress is to be construed to be a recognition of the power of the Legislature to pass laws in conflict with the Act of Congress under which they were created.

The question of the appointing power, which is the matter in controversy here, was not before the court in that case. We do not think that the acquiescence of the people, or of the Legislature of Utah, or of any of its officers, in the mode for appointing the auditor of public accounts, is sufficient to do away with the clear requirements of the Organic Act on that subject. It is also, we think, very clear that only that part of the Statute of Utah which is contrary to the Organic Act, namely, that relating to the mode of appointment of the officer, is invalid; that so much of it as creates the office of auditor of public accounts and treasurer of the Territory is valid; and that it can successfully and appropriately be carried into effect by an appointment made by the governor and the Council of the Territory, as required in the Act of Congress. The judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah is affirmed.

JAMES JACK, Appt.,

v.

THE PEOPLE OF THE TERRITORY OF UTAH, ex rel. WILLIAM H. DICKSON, U. S. Attorney.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 643, 644.)

1. The same principles govern this case as govern the case of Clayton v. The People of the Territory of Utah, ex rel. Dickson, ante, p. 445.
2. This case differs from that case only in that it concerns the office of territorial treasurer for the Territory of Utah.

[No. 144.]

Argued Dec. 5, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah affirming the judgment of the District Court of the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, overruling a demurrer and adjudging that the defendant, James Jack, usurps and unlawfully holds the office of territorial treasurer of Utah Territory, and that he be excluded therefrom, and that Bolivar Roberts is entitled to hold said office, and that defendant deliver to him said office, and all the books, property and records pertaining thereto. Affirmed.

450

The facts are stated in the opinion.
Messrs. Eppa Hunton and Jeff. Chandler, for appellants.
Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor Gen., for appellees.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This case, which is an appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah, differs from the preceding case of Clayton against the same appellees, in the fact that Jack was charged with usurping and intruding into the office of territorial treasurer for the Territory of Utah, as Clayton was alleged to be an intruder into the office of auditor of public accounts. These two offices were created by the same Statute of the Territory, at the same time, and the mode of election prescribed by that Statute was changed at the same time by the same Statute to an election by the people, and Jack claims to have been elected treasurer at the same general election in which Clayton was elected auditor; that he received the commission of the governor of the Territory, and that he has held the office ever since by reason of the fact that no other election had been held and no other person had been lawfully appointed to the office. The same principles govern this case as govern the other. The judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah was based upon the same grounds, and for the reasons given by us in that case we affirm the judgment in this.

WILLIAM F. PATRICK ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES H. GRAHAM ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 627-632.)

Objection to evidence, when stated—objection to a model as evidence—personal knowledge—refusel to give instructions.

1. It cannot be permitted that, after the case has gone to a hearing, testimony submitted to the jury and a verdict rendered, a party, for the first time, shall state a reason for his objection to that evidence which would make good the objection.
2. This court cannot assume that the ruling of the court below sustaining an objection to a model as evidence was incorrect, where this court has no copy nor description of the model, and the witness who produced it in court below did not swear to its correctness nor that it would illustrate the subject.
3. Testimony of a witness as to the quantity of ore taken out of a mine is properly rejected where it does not appear that the witness personally knew anything about the quantity.
4. An exception will not be sustained to the refusal of the court to give certain instructions to the jury, where the same instructions were substantially given, though in different language, to which no exception was taken.

[No. 152.]

Argued Dec. 10, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover the value of mineral ores converted by defendants to their own use. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. T. M. Patterson and C. S. Thomas for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. A. W. Rucker for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado.

In that court, Graham and Guggenheim sought to recover of Patrick and others the value of certain mineral ores taken from the Minnie lode mining claim of the plaintiffs and converted to their own use, alleging that the defendants were guilty of a trespass, and that the quantity taken amounted to five hundred tons of gold, silver and lead-bearing ore of the value of $60,085. To this the defendants answered, admitting that plaintiffs were owners in fee of the Minnie lode mining claim, but denying that they were sole owners of said claim, and insisting that Samuel Harsh was a co-owner and co-tenant with them. They deny the trespass and conversion of the five hundred tons or any quantity of the ore, and deny that the ore was of the value of $60,085 or any other sum.

A replication was filed by plaintiffs denying the co-ownership of Harsh, and the cause came on for hearing and was submitted to a jury, who found in favor of the plaintiffs, and assessed their damages at the sum of $20,779. A motion was made to set aside this verdict and grant a new trial, which was overruled, and a judgment entered for the amount of the verdict in favor of plaintiffs. To this judgment the present writ of error is prosecuted.

It seems to have been conceded at the trial that the defendants, who owned the adjoining mineral claim, called the Colonel Sellers lode, in pursuing that lode, had broken into the vein of the plaintiffs, known as the Minnie lode, which was the prior and superior claim, and that they had taken therefrom a very considerable quantity of valuable ore, which they had mixed with the ore from their own lode and converted to their own use, by selling it with theirs.

The only question in contest before the jury was the rule by which the damages of the plaintiff should be ascertained. As to that subject, the plaintiffs took one or two exceptions to the ruling of the court in regard to the admission of testimony.

The ground of the first assignment of error is, that the court admitted, against the objection of the defendants, certain testimony of Meyer Guggenheim, one of the plaintiffs. In his testimony Guggenheim undertook to detail a conversation which he had had with Patrick and Whiting, two of the defendants, before the bringing of the suit and with regard to the trespass. The question was asked him: "What was said between you upon the subject, commencing with the first conversation you had, if you had more than one? State what the conversation was." To this question, "the defendants, by counsel, then and there objected on the grounds——." But the court overruled the objection, and permitted the witness to answer. In his answer he stated that Patrick admitted that they had mixed the ores from the Minnie mine and from the Colonel Sellers mine, and he said that he had written to the parties in control of the mine that they should get off the ground.

The objection taken here to this testimony is, that it was part of a conversation had with a view to a compromise of the controversy and that it could not be used as evidence against the party for that reason. The testimony itself, being evidence of the conversion of the ore by the defendants, with a knowledge that it was the property of plaintiffs, was pertinent as to the measure of damages. It was, therefore, only to be excluded, if at all, on some ground other than its want of relevancy to the issue.

The record before us does not show that the defendants at the time of the trial and at the time that the objection was made to the introduction of this evidence gave any reason at all why it should be rejected; much less the reason which they now insist on.

It cannot be permitted that, after the case has gone to a hearing, testimony submitted to the jury and a verdict rendered, a party, for the first time, shall state a reason for his objection to that evidence which would make the objection good. The record is precisely as we have copied it, showing that while defendants "then and there objected on the grounds —," the record is then silent. No grounds were stated so far as we know. For this reason we think there is no error in the record on that subject.

If we were inclined to have any doubt upon this point, it would be satisfied by the language of the court in its charge to the jury, where it is said that "it is in proof that in going over into the plaintiffs' territory the defendants' foreman was in ignorance of the fact that he was upon plaintiffs' ground, and the question is whether, under the circumstances in evidence, this amounts to gross negligence on the part of the defendants." This charge of the court accords with the statement in the bill of exceptions, that in reply to further objection to the testimony relating to the effort to agree, the court said that the "part which is not competent under the rule will be stricken out." It is obvious that the jury were in effect told to disregard any testimony showing that the trespass on the part of defendants was intentional and with knowledge of the rights of plaintiffs.

The next assignment of error is that a witness called by the defendants to testify as to the value and quantity of the ore taken out of plaintiffs' mine (after stating that he had made measurements of the stope from which the plaintiffs' ore had been taken, by which measurement he calculated the amount of ore that had been so taken) had introduced a plat of the mine and of these measurements. He was then asked the question:

"What proportion of the vein comprised in the Minnie and A. Y. mines does this stope bear, according to your measurement? Have you a model that would show that?"

"A. I have a model here.

"Q. Produce it."

To the production and exhibition of this model the plaintiffs objected. The objection was sustained by the court, and to this an exception was taken by the defendants. This exception is now urged as sufficient to reverse the judgment. But we have no copy of the model here. We have no description of it. The witness did not swear to its correctness. He did not even say that it would illustrate the subject about which he was testifying. He simply said "I have a model here." It is impossible for this court to assume that the judge at the trial was incorrect in refusing to permit such a model to go in evidence.

The defendant J. C. Whiting was introduced as a witness, and in the course of his testimony he was asked: "What companies or smelters were purchasing ores from the Colonel Sellers mine during the months of March, April, May and June, 1883?" to which he answered as follows:

"A. We had in these months a contract running with the Harrison smelter, with the Arkansas Valley, with the Colorado Smelting and Refining Company, the Pueblo, with the Kansas City, and with the Argentine Smelting and Refining Company. I can't remember all.

"Q. In making settlements during this time did you receive duplicate statements from them of the amounts of ore sold?

"A. Ordinarily we didn't get duplicate statements; we got the original statements."

"Q. You received a statement?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Can you state what the gross receipts of ore sold from the Colonel Sellers mine for the month of April, 1885, were?

"A. I can.

"Q. Now state what they were.

"Plaintiffs object to the question on the ground that ore shipments from the Colonel Sellers mine certainly can throw no light upon this case; also the point argued at length that a mixture of high-grade ore from the stope in question with the low-grade ores from the grounds of the Colonel Sellers mine would so reduce the value per ton of ore from plaintiffs' property as to make the statement on that basis manifestly unjust to the plaintiffs.

"The objection was sustained."

The counsel for defendant then said: "I have a stipulation from the other side that the evidence, if received at all, may be introduced in the shape of ore statements verified by the officers of the smelters furnishing them, so as to dispense with the necessity of producing so many witnesses." But this stipulation is nowhere produced in the record. Nor is there any verification of these ore receipts, nor any proof whatever of their truth. The court, we think, very properly rejected the testimony of Mr. Whiting on that subject, for it does not appear that he himself personally knew anything about the quantity of ore taken out during the period alluded to.

These seem to be all the errors assigned on which counsel for plaintiffs in error rely. An exception was taken to the refusal of the court to grant certain prayers for instructions offered by defendants, but these were substantially given, although in different language, in the charge of the court to the jury. This charge presented in a clear and, as we believe, correct light a sound view of the question of damages as it relates to this case. To it no exception was taken, nor to any part of it. On the whole, we do not find any error in the record, and the judgment of the Circuit Court is accordingly affirmed.

JULIUS K. GRAVES, Appt.,

v.

CHESTER C. CORBIN.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, Appt.,

v.

CHESTER C. CORBIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 571-592.)

Removal of cause from state to federal court—right of removal—single controversy—diversity of citizenship—separate defenses—reversal—when question arises.

1. The case as made by the complaint, and as it stood at the time of the petition for removal, is the test of the right to remove the suit from a state to a federal court.
2. Where a suit is brought to reach the entire property of a limited partnership, and to declare certain judgments against the same void, there is, in the suit, but a single controversy between the plaintiff on the one side and the defendants who have adverse claims against the property on the other, although there are various defendants and various claims by the several defendants.
3. Such suit is not removable for diversity of citizenship from a state to a federal court, by some of the defendants who reside in a State different from the State of the plaintiff, where the other defendants reside in the same State as plaintiff.
4. Where there is but a single cause of action it is not divisible, although each of the several defendants has a separate defense.
5. Separate defenses do not create separate controversies, within the meaning of the Removal Act.
6. Where it appears to this court that the case is one which is not removable, and of which the circuit court should not have taken jurisdiction, it is the duty of this court to reverse any judgment given below and remand the cause, with costs against the party who wrongfully invoked the jurisdiction of the circuit court.
7. The court, in such a case, can review a question as to the jurisdiction of the circuit court only in reviewing its final judgment or decree.

[Nos. 155, 990.]

Argued Dec. 10, 12, 13, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

APPPEALS from decrees of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois declaring certain judgments, entered on confession, fraudulent as to creditors of a limited partnership, and directing the moneys collected by execution on said judgments to be paid into court for the benefit of the creditors of such partnership. Reversed, and remanded to state court.

NOTE.—As to removal of cause by one of two or more defendants, and as to separable controversies, see note to Sloane v. Anderson, Bk. 29, p. 899.

As to removal of causes to United States court for local prejudice, see notes to Gaines v. Fuentes, Bk. 23, p. 524, and to Jefferson v. Driver, Bk. 29, p. 897.

The plaintiff, Corbin, and four of the defendants are citizens of Massachusetts. One of the defendants, the First National Bank of Chicago, is a citizen of the State of Illinois. Twelve of the defendants are citizens of Illinois; four are citizens of Iowa; one is a citizen of New York, one of Ohio, two of Michigan, three of Wisconsin and one of Colorado. The suit was commenced in the Circuit Court of Cook County, State of Illinois. It was removed to the Circuit Court of the United States on a petition of the First National Bank of Chicago on the ground that in the suit there is a controversy wholly between citizens of different States and which can be fully determined as between them, to wit: a controversy between said Bank, which is a citizen of the State of Illinois, and plaintiff, who is a citizen of the State of Massachusetts.

The facts are more fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. M. Flower, for appellant:

The record must show citizenship in order to confer jurisdiction when that is the ground relied upon. All of the defendants must be citizens of a different State from that of the plaintiff.

Capron v. Van Noorden, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 126 (2: 229); Breithaupt v. State Bank of Georgia, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 238 (7: 127); Brown v. Keene, 33 U. S. 8 Pet. 112 (8: 885); American Bible Soc. v. Price, 110 U. S. 61 (28: 70).

Nor can a suit be removed from the state court into the United States court unless all the parties on one side of the controversy are citizens of different States from those on the other, or unless the controversy is a separable one.

Grover & B. Sewing Machine Co. v. Florence Sewing Machine Co. 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 553 (21: 914); Vannevar v. Bryant, 89 U. S. 21 Wall. 41 (22: 476); American Bible Soc. v. Price, 110 U. S. 61 (28: 70).

Mr. Wm. J. Manning, for appellee:

The application for removal takes with it to the federal court the whole case.

Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 205 (26: 514); Langdon v. Fogg, 18 Fed. Rep. 5; Kerling v. Cotshausen, 16 Fed. Rep. 705; Sheldon v. Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co. 9 Biss. 307; Des Moines Nat. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552 (31: 202).

When a separable controversy is removed the whole suit is carried with it, and no part is left to the determination of the state court.

Bushnell v. Kennedy, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 387 (19: 736); Edwards v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 452.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 1st of March, 1888, Chester C. Corbin filed a bill in equity in the Circuit Court of Cook County, in the State of Illinois, against William A. Boies, Benjamin B. Fay, Lucius W. Conkey and Julius K. Graves, who had

As to removal of causes from state to federal court, where a federal question arises, see note to Little York G. W. & Water Co. v. Keyes, Bk. 24, p. 656.

As to removal of causes under Act of 1875 on account of citizenship, see note to Meyer v. Delaware Railroad Construction Co. Bk. 25, p. 593.

composed the limited partnership of Boies, Fay & Conkey, in which Graves was the special partner and the three others were the general partners, the partnership being formed under a statute of Illinois, and doing business in Chicago as wholesale grocers and importers. The First National Bank of Chicago, Illinois, Alvin F. Shumway, The Bay State Sugar Refining Company of Massachusetts, The First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, Walter Potter, James M. Flower, Curtis H. Remy and Stephen S. Gregory, the last three being a firm of attorneys-at-law, under the name of Flower, Remy & Gregory, Seth F. Hanchett, sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, and twenty-one other persons and corporations were also made defendants to the bill.

The bill set out that the plaintiff was the creditor of the said limited partnership, as being the owner of two promissory notes made and indorsed by it, and made the following averments: The limited partnership carried on business at Chicago from March, 1882, until January, 1883, and contracted debts during that time amounting to about $400,000. On the 13th of January, 1883, its assets were insufficient to pay more than about 50 cents on the dollar of its liabilities, and during the time named it borrowed large sums of money, by loans and discounts of commercial paper made by it. On or about December 2, 1882, the members of the partnership, knowing it to be insolvent, and with the intent to hinder, delay and defraud such of its creditors as they did not see fit to prefer, and in contemplation of its insolvency, and with the intent to prefer certain of their creditors, or pretended creditors, and to evade the provisions of the statute of Illinois, pretended to dissolve the partnership, and recorded in the office of the county clerk of Cook County a paper purporting to be a dissolution of it; but the paper was a mere device contrived by them to evade the provisions of the statute, and to give color of validity to the acts of Fay and Conkey, thereafter set forth, in executing the judgment notes, warrants of attorney and confessions of judgment therein-after described. After the pretended dissolution Fay and Conkey pretended to carry on the business under the firm name of "Fay & Conkey," and assumed to be the owners of all the assets of the limited partnership. Boies and Graves pretended to release and convey to Fay and Conkey all their interest in such assets; but such release was void as against the creditors of the limited partnership. By the statute of Illinois under which the partnership was formed, all of its assets were pledged to the payment of its debts ratably, and it was the duty of the four partners, when they first had knowledge of its insolvency, or at the time of its pretended dissolution, to appoint a trustee to take charge of its assets and convert them into money and distribute the same ratably among its creditors. Fay and Conkey, on or about the 22d of January, 1883, in pursuance of said fraudulent scheme, executed in favor of six of the defendants seven promissory notes payable on demand, with warrants of attorney annexed to confess judgment for such amount as might appear to be unpaid thereon, with costs and 5 per cent attorneys' fees, the notes amounting to $91,353.18, of which one note, for $40,000, was in favor of the First National Bank of Chicago, and one note, for $17,500, was in favor of the defendant Graves. On the 22d of January, 1883, judgments were entered in the Superior Court of Cook County, Illinois, against Fay and Conkey upon each of the seven notes, together with the costs, and 5 per cent attorneys' fees, in favor of the six defendants mentioned, there being seven judgments in all, amounting in the aggregate to $95,965.88, of which one judgment was in favor of the First National Bank of Chicago, for $42,000, and one in favor of Graves, for $18,875. On or about the 22d of January, 1883, Fay and Conkey, in further pursuance of said fraudulent scheme, executed in favor of fifteen of the defendants fifteen promissory notes, payable on demand, with warrants of attorney to confess judgment annexed, amounting in the aggregate to $120,999.61, of which one note, for $27,000, was made in favor of Graves, one for $6,990 in favor of Shumway, one for $10,000 in favor of The Bay State Sugar Refining Company of Massachusetts, one for $12,000 in favor of the First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, and one for $4,800 in favor of Potter. On the 22d of January, 1883, or between that day and the 26th of January, 1883, inclusive, there were entered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois judgments against Fay and Conkey upon each of the last-named fifteen notes, in pursuance of said warrants of attorney, together with the costs and 5 per cent attorneys' fees, in favor of fifteen of the defendants, amounting in the aggregate to $127,044.61, of which judgments one was in favor of Graves for $28,350, one in favor of Shumway for $7,839.50, one in favor of The Bay State Sugar Refining Company for $10,500, one in favor of the First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, for $12,600, and one in favor of Potter for $4,515. On or about the 22d of January, 1883, and immediately after the entry of the judgments in the Superior Court of Cook County, the defendants Flower, Remy & Gregory, as attorneys for the defendants Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves, and as attorneys of record for the respective plaintiffs in those judgments, caused execution to be issued on each of them against the property of Fay and Conkey, to the sheriff of Cook County, who, by direction of the attorneys, seized and levied on a large quantity of merchandise, of the value of about $75,000, part of the assets of the limited partnership. The levy and seizure were made in further pursuance of said fraudulent scheme, and with intent to delay, hinder and defraud the plaintiff and other creditors of the limited partnership, and to give a preference to each of the defendants in whose favor the judgments were entered. The sheriff has sold the property seized, with the exception of about $12,000 worth which was replevied, and has in his possession about $54,000 as the proceeds of said sales. Immediately after four of the judgments in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois were entered, namely, that in favor of the Commercial National Bank of Dubuque, Iowa, for $14,962.50, that in favor of Graves for $28,350, that in favor of the Dubuque County Bank of Dubuque, Iowa, for $12,495, and that in favor of the Importers and Traders' National Bank of New York City for $16,800, the defendants Flower, Remy and Gregory, on the 22d of January, 1888, as the attorneys of Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves, and as the attorneys of the plaintiffs in those four judgments, caused execution to be issued on each of them, directed to the marshal of the district, against the property of Fay and Conkey. The marshal, on the same day, returned those executions nulla bona. Thereupon, Flower, Remy and Gregory, as attorneys for the plaintiffs in those four judgments, filed a creditors' bill in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, alleging divers frauds on the part of Fay and Conkey, and praying for the appointment of a receiver. That court appointed as receiver the defendant Hancock, a brother-in-law of Flower, and the books of account and assets of the limited partnership were delivered to him by Fay and Conkey, and he has possession of them, and is collecting them, the drafts, notes, accounts and choses in action amounting to more than $210,000. Immediately after the entry of the judgments in the circuit court of the United States in favor of seven of the defendants, including Shumway, The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, the First National Bank of Westboro' and Potter, Flower, Remy and Gregory, as attorneys of Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves, and as attorneys for the plaintiffs in said seven judgments, caused executions to be issued upon them to the marshal, against the property of Fay and Conkey. The marshal returned them nulla bona, and thereupon Flower, Remy and Gregory, as such attorneys and on behalf of the plaintiffs in the seven judgments, filed a creditors' bill in the said circuit court of the United States, alleging that Fay and Conkey had concealed their property, and praying the appointment of a receiver. Hancock was appointed such receiver, or his first receivership was extended. The judgments of the circuit court of the United States were rendered in pursuance of the said fraudulent scheme on the part of Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves. Upon the entry of each of the judgments before mentioned, there was added to and included therein a sum equal to 5 per cent of the original demand on which the judgment was rendered, as attorneys' fees for the entry thereof, the aggregate amount of such attorneys' fees being $10,657.65. That amount was an excessive charge for the service, and was charged for the purpose of absorbing to that extent the assets of the limited partnership, and Fay and Conkey are interested therein, and have some secret agreement with said attorneys for a division of that sum. Flower, Remy and Gregory are and have been the attorneys of Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves, and are the attorneys of Hancock, receiver. The plaintiff has applied to Hancock, receiver, for an examination of the books of the limited partnership, for the purpose of ascertaining what settlement, if any, Boies, Fay and Conkey have made with Graves, or what settlement Fay and Conkey have made with Boies. But Hancock refused such examination, and said that such refusal was in accordance with directions given him by Flower, Remy and Gregory, as his attorneys. The judgments so entered on confession are, or some one or more of them is or are, fictitious, and rendered for more than was due to the plaintiffs therein respectively; and this excess is alleged to exist in regard to twenty-two of the judgments, including the two in favor of Graves and those in favor of the First National Bank of Chicago, Shumway, The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, the First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, and Potter. Fay and Conkey, at the time the notes and warrants of attorney were made and the judgments were entered, knew that the limited partnership was insolvent; and they executed the notes and warrants, and confessed the judgments, with the intention of paying and securing to each of the persons in whose favor the notes and warrants were executed and the judgments were confessed a preference over any other creditors of the limited partnership. The confessions were unlawful acts, prohibited by the statute of Illinois, and the judgments and all acts done in pursuance thereof, and all process issued thereon, and all acts done under such process, are void. None of the persons or firms in whose favor the notes were given knew of the execution of them until after judgment had been entered thereon, and all of the judgments were entered without the knowledge or consent of the persons mentioned as plaintiffs therein. None of the notes were made in the ordinary course of business, but they were all made with intent on the part of Fay and Conkey to carry out the said fraudulent scheme; and all of the judgments were entered by Flower, Remy and Gregory, by direction of Fay and Conkey or of Fay. The property so taken on execution by the sheriff of Cook County, and the assets so transferred to the possession of Hancock as receiver, constitute the whole of the assets of the limited partnership; and its bona fide debts amount to about $400,000.

The bill waives answers on oath, and prays for a decree that the pretended transfer of the assets of the limited partnership to Fay and Conkey was fraudulent and void; that each of the judgments so entered on confession, the executions issued and the proceedings thereon, or on their return, and everything done under the judgments and executions, or in any suit based on any of the judgments, and every sale or transfer involving any of them, be declared void; that it be decreed that all of the goods levied upon under the executions, and the assets taken possession of by Hancock as receiver, are the property of the limited partnership, and as such subject to the lien, and charged with the payment, of the debt due to the plaintiff, and all other debts owed by the limited partnership, ratably; that each of the defendants be decreed to pay to the receiver to be appointed in this suit whatever money they have received by virtue of their respective judgments or any suit based thereon, out of said property; that such money and all moneys realized by such receiver from the assets of the limited partnership be paid to its creditors ratably; that such receiver be appointed, to convert the property into money and distribute it; that the defendants Flower, Remy, Gregory and the sheriff be temporarily enjoined from paying over to any person any proceeds of the property of the limited partnership, which they now have or may hereafter receive under any of said judgments, executions or creditors' bills; and that such injunction be made perpetual on a hearing.

Boies, Fay, Conkey, the First National Bank of Chicago, Flower, Remy and Gregory, the sheriff of Cook County, and four others of the defendants, were served with a summons. Flower, Remy and Gregory entered an appearance in the suit for Boies, Fay and Conkey on the 21st of March, 1888, and on the 2d of April, 1888, also entered an appearance for themselves, the sheriff of Cook County and two others of the defendants.

On the 2d of April, 1888, Flower, Remy and Gregory, as solicitors for the defendant the First National Bank of Chicago, served on the solicitors for the plaintiff a notice that, on the 4th of April, 1888, they would present to the Circuit Court of Cook County a petition and bond, on behalf of that Bank, for the removal of the cause to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, and ask for an order removing the cause.

The petition and bond were presented, both of them dated April 2, 1888. The petition was sworn to by the defendant Flower, one of the firm of Flower, Remy & Gregory, who also executed the bond as surety. The petition is made by the First National Bank of Chicago, Illinois, and is entitled in the suit, naming as defendants those against whom the bill prays process. It states "that the controversy in said suit is between citizens of different States, and that your petitioner was at the time of the commencement of this suit and still is a citizen of the State of Illinois; that Chester C. Corbin, the complainant, was then and still is a citizen of the State of Massachusetts;" that twelve of the defendants "were then and still are citizens of the State of Illinois;" that four of them "were then and still are citizens of the State of Iowa;" that one of them was then and still is a citizen of the State of New York; one, of the State of Ohio; two, of the State of Michigan; three, of the State of Wisconsin; one, of the State of Colorado; "that the defendants, The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, the First National Bank of Westboro', Alvin F. Shumway and Walter Potter, were then and still are citizens of the State of Massachusetts;" and that "in the said suit above mentioned there is a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined as between them, to wit, a controversy between the said petitioner, who is a citizen of the State of Illinois, and the said complainant, Chester C. Corbin, who is a citizen of the State of Massachusetts."

No order appears to have been made by the state court on the presentation of the petition and bond, but the clerk of that court, on the 9th of April, 1888, signed a certificate under its seal to a transcript of the record in that court, which was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois on the 11th of April, 1888; and the cause has since proceeded in the latter court.

The cause was put at issue, proofs were taken by the respective parties, and, on the 17th of November, 1888, a decree was made by the court, finding as facts that on or about the 20th of August, 1882, the limited partnership composed of Boies, Fay, Conkey and Graves was insolvent, and so continued to the termination of its business, with the knowledge of each of the members thereof; that, with such knowledge, such members continued to do business until the 22d of January, 1888, when Fay and Conkey, assuming to be successors of Boies Fay & Conkey, confessed seven judgments in the Superior Court of Cook County, one of them in favor of the First National Bank of Chicago and one in favor of Graves, and fifteen judgments in the said circuit court of the United States, one of them in favor of Graves, one in favor of The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, one in favor of Shumway, one in favor of the First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, and one in favor of Potter; that the members composing the limited partnership of Boies, Fay & Conkey went through the form of a dissolution thereof, for the purpose of defeating the statute of Illinois which prohibited insolvent limited partnerships from preferring creditors, and to defraud a part of their creditors; that such partnership was still subsisting at the time of the confession and entry of each of the judgments; that the judgments were confessed to prefer certain creditors, but chiefly to save Graves from loss on account of said partnership or on account of liabilities incurred by him on commercial paper made by or on behalf of it; that immediately after the judgments were entered in the Superior Court of Cook County, Graves and Fay caused executions to be issued thereon to the sheriff of that county, who levied them on all the stock in trade and merchandise of the limited partnership, and sold the property at public sale, and with its proceeds, on February 26, 1888, paid to the First National Bank of Chicago, on its judgment, $40,000, and on the same day paid to Graves, on his judgment in the Superior Court of Cook County, $9,791.18; that the defendants Flower, Remy and Gregory were employed as counsel by the limited partnership, and by Graves on his own behalf, to enter the judgments by confession, and to advise and represent the said firm and Graves in and about all matters and things affecting it and Graves, and received from them $2,500 for services rendered and to be rendered in that behalf; that each of the judgments were confessed for the full amount due the several preferred creditors, and in some cases for more than was due, and for 5 per cent in addition thereto for attorneys' fees, which latter amount was intended as a provision for Flower, Remy and Gregory out of the assets of the limited partnership; and that they received without right, out of such assets, on account of attorneys' fees, $8,559.80.

The decree further found that Fay and Conkey had each taken from the assets of the firm, and fraudulently appropriated to his own use, certain specified sums of money; that Graves had, on the 21st and 22d days of January, 1888, fraudulently appropriated to his own use drafts and checks belonging to the limited partnership, amounting to $2,741.38; that on the 22d and 23d days of January, 1888, and after the levy of the executions aforesaid, Flower, Remy and Gregory collected drafts and checks belonging to the limited partnership, amounting to $1,927.96, which they still held; that the judgments in favor of the Dubuque County Bank, the Commercial National Bank and the Importers and Traders' National Bank were confessed at the special instance of Graves; that the judgment in favor of the Commercial National Bank was not an indebtedness due from the limited partnership to the bank; that Graves owes that partnership a sum equal to its assets which had been applied by his direction in payment of the last-named three judgments; that in a creditors' suit brought by Graves and the last-named three banks against Fay and Conkey, Hancock as receiver, and with the funds in his hands as such, paid to said three banks in the aggregate $41,525.50, and to Graves, on his judgment in the circuit court of the United States, $27,232.50; that in a certain other suit by creditors' bill in said circuit court of the United States, wherein The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, Shumway, the First National Bank of Westboro', Massachusetts, Potter and three other persons were plaintiffs, and Fay and Conkey were defendants, and in which also Hancock was receiver, he paid, out of the assets in his hands as such receiver, to The Bay State Sugar Refining Company, on its judgment, $2,000, to that company on the judgment in favor of Shumway, $1,598, to the First National Bank of Westboro', on its judgment, $2,400, to Potter, on his judgment, $860, and to the other three persons $2,060 in all; that the two creditors' bills above named, one brought by the Commercial National Bank and others, and the second brought by The Bay State Sugar Refining Company and others, were each brought and prosecuted with the intention of defrauding the creditors of the limited partnership of their just rights; that Fay and Conkey consented to the filing of said bills and the appointment of a receiver thereunder; and that the limited partnership was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $4,359.31.

The decree then proceeded to adjudge that all the property and effects held by the limited partnership on the 20th of August, 1882, and subsequently thereto, and when the judgments were confessed, were a special trust fund for the payment of the firm debts ratably among its creditors; that Graves pay to the clerk of the court within thirty days, for the benefit of the plaintiff and such other creditors of the limited partnership as should prove their right to share in the distribution of the assets of the firm, $100,796.71, with interest; that Flower, Remy and Gregory in like manner pay to the clerk of the court $9,886.57; that Fay and Conkey pay in like manner $2,728.92; that execution issue against the property of such defendants respectively, in case of nonpayment; referring it to a master to take proof of the debts of the creditors of the limited partnership; charging Graves, Fay and Conkey with the costs of the cause; and reserving all matters not decreed upon, including the right to decree against the creditors in whose favor the judgments were confessed, with leave to the plaintiff to apply for such further order as might be necessary in relation to any matter not finally determined by that decree.

Graves and Flower, Remy and Gregory prayed separate appeals to this court, which were allowed. The appeal of Flower, Remy and Gregory was afterwards dismissed while it was pending in this court.

On the 23d of January, 1888, the plaintiff and other creditors of the limited partnership, having proved their claims before the master to the amount of $125,737.34 (and the master having reported in favor of said claims on the 9th of July, 1886), filed a petition in the cause, stating that Graves had failed to pay any part of the amount decreed against him; that but very little more had been realized under the decree of November 17, 1885, than sufficient to pay the costs, expenses and solicitors' fees incurred in the suit; and that the petitioners insisted that, under the proofs already taken, they were entitled to a decree against the First National Bank of Chicago for $50,000. They therefore prayed for a decree against that Bank, requiring it to pay, within thirty days, to the receiver in the cause, $50,000, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from March 1, 1883.

On the 23d of April, 1888, the circuit court, held by Judge Gresham, delivered an opinion (34 Fed. Rep. 692), in which it recited the grounds on which the decree of November 17, 1885, had been made, and ordered a decree against the First National Bank of Chicago.

The decree was entered on the 3d of May, 1888. It found that on the judgment for $40,000 in favor of the Bank, confessed by Fay and Conkey as successors of the limited partnership, on January 22, 1883, the Bank had, on or about February 26, 1883, received out of the sale of the assets of that partnership by the sheriff, on an execution in its favor, $38,708.35; that at the time of the pretended dissolution of the partnership, in October, 1882, and on the 2d of December, 1882, and later, the Bank knew that such partnership was insolvent and unable to pay all its creditors, and knew that the contract for its dissolution was a pretended one and entered into for the purpose of protecting Graves from liability as special partner and as indorser for the firm; that the Bank co-operated with the members of the partnership for the accomplishment of such purpose; and that the judgment was confessed for that purpose, and to obtain an illegal preference over other creditors. It decreed that the Bank pay to the receiver within thirty days the sum so received, with interest at 6 per cent from February 26, 1883, amounting in all to $50,721.95; and that, if it were not paid, execution should issue against the property of the Bank.

The Bank prayed an appeal to this court. The record on the appeal of Graves was filed in this court October 11, 1886, and the record on the appeal of the Bank was filed October 17, 1888.

Both of the appeals have been argued in full on the merits. But the preliminary question arises as to the jurisdiction of the circuit court in the case, by virtue of the removal of the cause from the state court on the petition of the Bank; and the point is taken by the respective appellants that the circuit court acquired no jurisdiction, because at the time of the commencement of the suit and at the time of its removal, as appears by the petition for removal, the plaintiff and four of the defendants, namely, Shumway, Potter, The Bay State Sugar Refining Company and the First National Bank of Westboro', were all of them citizens of Massachusetts. The determination of this question must depend upon whether, at the time of the commencement of the suit, there was a separable controversy between the plaintiff and the petitioner for removal, the First National Bank of Chicago. If there was but a single controversy in the entire cause, of course there could be no separable controversy between the plaintiff and the Bank.

By section 2 of the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137 (18 Stat. 470), under which the removal took place, it was provided that when, in any suit mentioned in the section, "there shall be a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined as between them, then either one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants actually interested in such controversy may remove said suit into the circuit court of the United States for the proper district." The petition for removal states that in the suit "there is a controversy which is wholly between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined as between them," namely, a controversy between the plaintiff and the Bank. But we are of opinion that there was in the suit but a single controversy, and that that controversy was not wholly between citizens of different States. There were various branches of the controversy, various defendants, and various claims by the several defendants; but the controversy was between the plaintiff, on the one side, and the defendants who were alleged by the bill to have claims adversely to the plaintiff against the property of the limited partnership, as a whole, on the other side.

The case as made by the bill, and as it stood at the time of the petition for removal, is the test of the right to removal. The bill was filed to reach the entire property of the limited partnership. In order to do that, it was necessary to sweep away not some but all of the confessed judgments and all the rights obtained by executions and levies thereunder, and to restore to the assets and moneys of the partnership in the hands of the court the assets and moneys which had been fraudulently diverted therefrom by the members of the partnership, with the co-operation of the various defendants. The bill states that promissory notes were given in favor of the four defendants who were citizens of Massachusetts; that judgments on confession, in pursuance of warrants of attorney, were rendered in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, against Fay and Conkey, in favor of the four Massachusetts defendants; that, immediately after the entry of those judgments, Flower, Remy and Gregory, as the attorneys of the members of the limited partnership, and as the attorneys of record for the plaintiffs in those judgments, caused executions to be issued thereon to the marshal of the district, against the property of Fay and Conkey; that the same were returned nulla bona; that thereupon Flower, Remy and Gregory, as such attorneys, and on behalf of the plaintiffs in said four judgments and in three others, filed a creditors' bill in the circuit court of the United States, to reach the property of Fay and Conkey, in which suit a receiver was appointed; that the said four judgments were entered in pursuance of the fraudulent scheme alleged in the bill, on the part of the members of the limited partnership, to hinder, delay and defraud its creditors, and evade the provisions of the statute of Illinois, and to prefer the plaintiffs in those several judgments over other creditors; that the four judgments in favor of the citizens of Massachusetts were largely in excess of the amount due to them respectively at the time of the entry of the judgments; and that those judgments are void. It prays for a decree declaring the four judgments to be void, and directing the payment to the receiver of all moneys received by such four defendants under the judgments or under any proceedings based thereon. These allegations, with the others contained in the bill, made but a single controversy, as to all of the defendants. The relief asked could not have been granted unless all who were made defendants were parties. Therefore, all of them were necessary parties.

In Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. 189, it was held that a creditors' bill could be filed against several persons relative to matters of the same nature, forming a connected series of acts, all intended to defraud and injure the plaintiffs, and in which all the defendants were more or less concerned, though not jointly in each act. The case there arose on a demurrer to the bill. It was urged that the bill was multifarious in uniting all the defendants and distinct and unconnected matters. Fraud was charged against the five trustees of the Genesee Company, in confessing judgments and causing the property of the company to be sold. There was a charge of a combined fraud, affecting seven of the defendants, two of whom were not concerned in every part of the fraudulent conduct. All the acts sought to be impeached were alleged to have been done with a fraudulent intent as respected creditors. The court says: "There was a series of acts on the part of the persons concerned in this Genesee Company, all produced by the same fraudulent intent and terminating in the deception and injury of the plaintiffs. The defendants performed different parts in the same drama; but it was still one piece—one entire performance, marked by different scenes; and the question now occurs, whether the several matters charged are so distinct and unconnected as to render the joining of them in one bill a ground of demurrer." The court then reviews the leading cases on the subject, and says that the principle to be deduced from them is, "that a bill against several persons must relate to matters of the same nature and having a connection with each other, and in which all the defendants are more or less concerned, though their rights in respect to the general subject of the case may be distinct;" that the general right claimed by the bill was a due application of the capital of the company to the payment of the judgments of the plaintiffs; that the subject of the bill and of the relief, and the only matter in litigation, was the fraud charged in the creation, management and disposition of the capital of the company; that in that charge all the defendants were implicated, though in different degrees and proportions; and that the case fell within the reach of the principle stated, and the demurrer could not be sustained.

This ruling of Chancellor Kent was considered, recognized and approved by the Court of Errors of New York, without a dissenting voice, in Fellows v. Fellows, 4 Cow. 682. See also New York & N. H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 17 N. Y. 592, and 84 N. Y. 30.

The principle above stated has been applied by this court, in considering the question of removal, in cases like the present.

In Ayers v. Chicago, 101 U. S. 184 [25: 888], a bill was filed in a state court of Illinois, by the City of Chicago against citizens of Illinois, to enforce a deed of trust. A citizen of Alabama, having a judgment against one of the defendants and claiming a lien on the property covered by the deed of trust, was admitted as a party defendant to the suit, and filed a cross-bill to enforce such lien, and removed the suit into the federal court, on the ground that in the original suit there was a controversy wholly between him and the original plaintiff, and that in the cross-suit the controversy was wholly between citizens of different States. The cause was remanded, and on appeal this court affirmed that decision, saying that the original bill and the cross-bill constituted one suit; that the intervenor was allowed to take part in a controversy between the city and the debtor; that he had no dispute with the debtor, and none separately with the city; that he and the debtor had a controversy with the city as to its lien on the property; that the debtor, who was on the same side of the controversy with him, was a citizen of the same State with the city; and that, such being the case, the suit was not removable.

In Fidelity Ins. T. & S. D. Co. v. Huntington, 117 U. S. 280 [29: 898], it was held that a creditor's bill to subject incumbered property to the payment of the judgment of the creditor, by selling it and distributing its proceeds among lienholders according to priority, created no separate controversy as to the separate lienholders, parties defendant, within the meaning of the Removal Act, although their respective defenses might be separate. The court said: "The suit as brought by Huntington is a creditor's bill to subject incumbered property to the payment of his judgment, by a sale and distribution of the proceeds among lienholders according to their respective priorities. There is but a single cause of action, and that is the equitable execution of a judgment against the property of the judgment debtor. This cause of action is not divisible. Each of the defendants may have a separate defense to the action, but we have held many times that separate defenses do not create separate controversies, within the meaning of the Removal Act. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52 [29: 63]; Putnam v. Ingraham, 114 U. S. 57 [29: 65]; Pirie v. Treadt, 115 U. S. 41 [29: 381]; Starin v. New York City, 115 U. S. 248 [29: 888], and Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275 [29: 899]. The judgment sought against the Fidelity Company is incident to the main purpose of the suit; and the fact that this incident relates alone to this company does not separate this part of the controversy from the rest of the action. What Huntington wants is not partial relief, settling his rights in the property as against the Fidelity Company alone, but a complete decree, which will give him a sale of the entire property, free of all incumbrances, and a division of the proceeds as the adjusted equities of each and all the parties shall require. The answer of this company shows the questions that will arise under the branch of the one controversy, but it does not create another controversy. The remedy which Huntington seeks requires the presence of all the defendants, and the settlement, not of one only, but of all the branches of the case."

To the cases above cited may be added Plymouth Gold Mining Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264 [30: 282]; Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596, 601 [30: 269, 271]; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Grayson, 119 U. S. 240 [30: 382]; Brooks v. Clark, 119 U. S. 502, 511 [30: 482, 485]; Laidly v. Huntington, 121 U. S. 179 [30: 883]; Peninsular Iron Co. v. Stone, 121 U. S. 631 [30: 1020]; Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535 [30: 1285], and Young v. Ewart, 132 U. S. 267 [33: 352]. The transcript of the record from the state court in the present case was filed in the circuit court of the United States on the 11th of April, 1888. The decisions of this court above cited were all but one of them made at and after October Term, 1884.

There is nothing in the record before us which shows that the question of the removability of the present case, on the petition for removal which was filed, was raised in the circuit court, either at the time the transcript from the state court was presented to be filed, or afterwards by a motion to remand, except what may be inferred from a statement in the record in the Graves case, at the conclusion of the testimony of a witness taken April 6, 1888, that the counsel for the plaintiff stated that he had been before Judge Drummond, in the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois, and the judge had taken jurisdiction of the cause under the petition for removal by the First National Bank of Chicago. We find reported, however, the case of Corbin v. Boies, 18 Fed. Rep. 3, the present case, where Judge Drummond, in an opinion which appears to have been given on an application to order the transcript from the state court to be filed in the circuit court and the case to be docketed in the latter court, held that there was in the case a controversy which was wholly between the plaintiff and the First National Bank of Chicago, namely, a controversy as to whether the judgment in favor of that Bank was a valid judgment as against the limited partnership, and the plaintiff as one of its creditors; and that the Bank was not interested in any controversy which the plaintiff might have with other creditors of the firm. But, as already shown, this view was erroneous.

Under the provision of section 5 of the Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 472), that if in any suit removed from a state court to a circuit court of the United States, it shall appear to the satisfaction of said circuit court, at any time after such suit has been removed thereto, that it does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of said circuit court, it shall proceed no further therein, but shall remand the suit to the court from which it was removed, as justice may require, this court has held that when it appears to this court that the case is one of which, under that provision, the circuit court should not have taken jurisdiction, it is the duty of this court to reverse any judgment given below, and remand the cause, with costs against the party who wrongfully invoked the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Williams v. Nottawa Twp. 104 U. S. 209 [26: 719]. This rule has been recognized by this court to the extent even of taking notice of the want of jurisdiction in the circuit court, although the point has not been formally raised in that court, or in this court, in Turner v. Farmers Loan & Trust Co. 106 U. S. 552, 555 [27: 273, 274]; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 386 [28: 462, 465]; Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 188, 144 [29: 114, 116], and King Bridge Co. v. Otse County, 120 U. S. 325, 226 [30: 623, 624].

In Stevens v. Nichols, 180 U. S. 230 [32: 914], it was held that if a proper diversity of citizenship does not appear by the record to have existed, both at the commencement of the suit and at the time of the filing the petition for removal, this court will remand the cause to the circuit court with directions to send it back to the state court, with costs against the party at whose instance the removal was made. This same principle was asserted in Oregho v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 131 U. S. 240 [33: 144], where it was also held that where a suit is entered upon the docket of a circuit court as removed on the ground of the diverse citizenship of the parties, and was never in law removed, no amendment of the record made in the circuit court can affect the jurisdiction of the state court or put the case rightfully on the docket of the circuit court as of the date when it was so docketed.

This same rule was applied at the present term in Jackson v. Allen, 132 U. S. 27 [33: 249], where the judgment of the circuit court was reversed at the cost of the parties who attempted to remove the cause, and it was remitted to the circuit court, with directions to remand it to the state court.

There is nothing in the foregoing views which involves the decision of this court in Barney v. Latham, 108 U. S. 205 [26: 514], which was to the effect that where in a case there was in fact an entirely separate controversy between the plaintiffs and several defendants petitioning for removal, with which controversy another defendant, a citizen of the same State with one of the plaintiffs, had no necessary connection, and which controversy could be fully determined as between the parties actually interested in it, without the presence as a party in the cause of such other defendant, not only could there be a removal, but the removal carried with it into the federal court all the controversies in the suit between all parties to it.

It is suggested that it is a hardship to the plaintiff to reverse his decrees for want of jurisdiction in the circuit court after he has prosecuted his suit in that court successfully, on his being taken into that court adversely more than six years ago. The answer is that the jurisdiction of this court in the present case to review the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court could only arise on the hearing of an appeal from a final decree of the latter court, because by § 5 of the Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 472), this court was authorized to review only an order of the circuit court remanding a cause, and not one retaining jurisdiction over it. Even that provision was repealed by § 6 of the Act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 555); and this court can now review a question as to the jurisdiction of a circuit court only in reviewing a final judgment or decree, although by the Act of February 25, 1889 (25 Stat. 693), it may do so in a case not involving over $5,000.

It results from the foregoing considerations that both of the decrees of the Circuit Court, as well that against Graves as that against the First National Bank of Chicago, must be reversed, and the case be remanded to the Circuit Court with a direction to remand it to the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, the costs of this court to be paid by the First National Bank of Chicago, the petitioner for removal.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller did not sit in this case or take any part in its decision.

EDWARD AVERY, Administrator, Plff.
in Err.,

WILLIAM W. CLEARY, Assignee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604-612.)

Sec. 5057, U. S. Rev. Stat.—suit by assignee in bankruptcy—barred in two years—fraudulent concealment—laches—rights of cestui que trust.

1. A suit by an assignee in bankruptcy, against the administrator of the bankrupt, to recover the proceeds, received by the latter, of policies on the life of the bankrupt, which he had before his bankruptcy assigned in trust for his daughters, of whom the administrator is the guardian, is a suit between the assignee in bankruptcy and one claiming an adverse interest, within the meaning of section 5057, U. S. Rev. Stat.
2. Such suit is therefore barred by the two years' limitation provided by such section.
3. That the bankrupt omitted to mention such policies in his schedules in bankruptcy, and that neither he nor his administrator informed the assignee of them, but took no means to conceal them, does not establish fraudulent concealment of them so as to prevent the running of such Statute of Limitations.
4. There must be no negligence or laches by the assignee in bankruptcy in coming to the knowledge of the fraud, which is the foundation of his suit, the concealment of which is relied upon to defeat the limitation of two years.
5. The rights of a cestui que trust under a written transfer in trust do not depend upon the formal acceptance by the trustee of the trust imposed upon him; such rights will be protected by a court of equity even if the trustee declines to act. [No. 162.]

Argued Dec. 13, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment in favor of the plaintiff to recover the proceeds of policies of insurance. Reversed.

NOTE.—As to Statute of Limitations in cases of fraud in equity, see note to Stearns v. Page, Bk. 12, p. 928.

The action was brought by Cleary, assignee in bankruptcy of Ellis, to recover from Ellis' administrator the moneys received by him on policies of insurance upon the life of Ellis. Before the proceedings in bankruptcy, Ellis assigned the policies to one Morse, in trust to pay the proceeds thereof to Ellis' daughters. He subsequently was adjudged a bankrupt, and, after his death, the insurance company paid to his administrator, the defendant in this action, the proceeds of said policies. Such administrator was also guardian of the daughters for whose benefit the policies were assigned. This action, brought by the assignee in bankruptcy to recover from the administrator the proceeds of said policies received by the latter, proceeds upon the ground that the policies constituted part of the bankrupt's estate and passed to his assignee. The declaration alleges that the existence of the policies was concealed from the assignee and that they remained in the bankrupt's possession until his death, and that the assignee had no knowledge of the policies until shortly before the commencement of this suit, when he demanded the proceeds thereof from the defendant. The answer, besides the general denial, sets up the Statute of Limitations of two years against the assignee under section 5057, Rev. Stat. U. S.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Joshua D. Ball and Edward Avery, for plaintiff in error:

As the defendant took no pains to conceal his acts, his mere neglect to go to the plaintiff and give information of what he had done is not such concealment on his part as the Statute contemplates.

Nudd v. Hamblin, 8 Allen, 130, 134.

Acts of Limitations of the several States, where no special provision has been made by Congress, form a rule of decision in the courts of the United States.

McCluny v. Stillman, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 270 (7: 676); Ross v. Duval, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 45 (10: 51).

The Statute applies not only to suits to recover property belonging to the bankrupt or conveyed in fraud, but also to actions to recover money or debts owing to the bankrupt.

Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571 (27: 304); Bailey v. Glover, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 346 (22: 638); Gifford v. Helms, 98 U. S. 252 (25: 59); Wisner v. Brown, 122 U. S. 214 (30: 1205).

When there has been no negligence or laches on the part of the plaintiff in coming to the knowledge of the fraud, and the fraud has been concealed, the Statute does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered.

Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185 (28: 395); Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528 (29: 467).

Mere failure to discover the cause of action, where there is no element of concealment, does not take the case out of the Statute.

Nudd v. Hamblin, 8 Allen, 133; Cole v. McGlathry, 9 Me. 131; McKown v. Whitmore, 31 Me. 448; Rouse v. Southard, 89 Me. 404; Yancy v. Cothran, 32 Fed. Rep. 687; Norton v. De La Villebeuve, 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 304.

Even had the assignment never been delivered to Morse, the trust would have been supported and upheld. Its delivery was not essential to its validity.

Adams v. Adams, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 185 (22: 504).

Even had Morse declined the trust, the assignment would still be upheld and a new trustee appointed.

Perry on Trusts, §§ 38, 45; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 976; Bailey v. Kilburn, 10 Met. 176, 179.

An assignment to a person who has no insurable interest in the life of the assured passes nothing.

Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775 (26: 924); Cammack v. Lewis, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 643 (21: 244); Bayne v. Adams, 81 Ky. 374, 375; Missouri Valley L. Ins. Co. v. Sturges, 18 Kan. 93; Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Hazzard, 41 Ind. 116; Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Sefton, 58 Ind. 380.

The only interest that an assignee in bankruptcy has in the money paid on a policy on the life of the bankrupt issued to the bankrupt, where the bankrupt dies after the institution of proceedings in bankruptcy, is the surrender value of the policy.

Re McKinney, 15 Fed. Rep. 535; Holt v. Everall, 84 L. T. N. S. 602.

It is only in cases where the facts are clear and not in dispute that the court can direct the jury to render a verdict.

Richardson v. Boston, 60 U. S. 19 How. 263 (15: 639); Hickman v. Jones, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 197, 201 (19: 551, 553); Bevans v. U. S. 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 57 (20: 531); Klein v. Russell, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 435 (22: 116); Moulton v. American L. Ins. Co. 101 U. S. 708 (25: 1077); Manchester v. Ericsson, 105 U. S. 347 (26: 1099); Phenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30 (27: 65); Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612 (28: 536); Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676 (25: 404); Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478 (27: 1003); Central Nat. Bank v. Royal Ins. Co. 103 U. S. 733 (26: 459); Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615 (29: 224).

Messrs. Nathan Morse and E. M. Johnson, for defendant in error:

The policies of insurance belonged to the assignee in bankruptcy, and not to Ellis; they can be clearly traced and distinguished from Ellis' own property, if any, in the hands of the administrator.

Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 16; Johnson v. Ames, 11 Pick. 173; Harlow v. Dehon, 111 Mass. 195; Simmons v. Almy, 100 Mass. 239; Bancroft v. Consen, 13 Allen, 50; Troy Nat. Bank v. Stanton, 116 Mass. 435, 439.

Section 5057 of the Revised Statutes of the United States has no application to a suit against the bankrupt.

Clark v. Clark, 58 U. S. 17 How. 315 (15: 77); Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298 (25: 473); Re Conant, 5 Blatchf. 54; French v. Merrill, 132 Mass. 525; Minot v. Tappan, 127 Mass. 333, 339.

That the policies were omitted from the schedules was a concealment of the property by the bankrupt.

Re Goodridge, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 105; Re Rathbone, Id. 89; Re Huseman, Id. 140.

No instruction should be given to a jury which assumes as a matter of fact that which is not conceded or established by uncontradicted proof.

Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Foley, 105 U. S.

850 (26: 1055); Leavenworth Bank v. Hunt, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 891 (20: 190); Washington & G. R. Co. v. Gladmon, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 401 (21: 114).

The policies in question were on Ellis' own life, and were assets belonging to his estate, and upon his adjudication in bankruptcy passed to his assignee.

Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169 (31: 400); Re Newland, 7 Ben. 63; Brigham v. Home L. Ins. Co. 121 Mass. 319.

If the assignment to Morse was made without consideration, and Ellis was insolvent at the time, no title passed under it as against the assignee in bankruptcy.

U. S. Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304 (24: 954); Hinde v. Longworth, 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 199-213 (6: 454); Walcott v. Almy, 6 McLean, 23; Rundle v. Murgatroyd, 4 U. S. 4 Dall. 304 (1: 843); Parish v. Murphree, 54 U. S. 18 How. 92 (14: 65).

The policy passed to the assignee under the assignment.

Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169 (31: 400); Bunyon on Life Assurance, 2d ed. 211; Brigham v. Home L. Ins. Co. 131 Mass. 319; Schondler v. Wace, 1 Camp. 487.

The court was justified in instructing the jury that upon the evidence they must find for the plaintiff.

North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 123 U. S. 727 (31: 287); Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S. 415 (29: 919); Montclair Twp. v. Dana, 107 U. S. 162 (27: 436); Griggs v. Houston, 104 U. S. 553 (26: 840); Bowditch v. Boston, 101 U. S. 16 (25: 990); Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 241 (28: 966, 971).

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

In the year 1867 the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company issued three policies of insurance upon the life of Matthias Ellis, numbered respectively 68,428, 68,429 and 68,480, the first two being for $10,000 each, and the last for $5,000. Each policy was payable to the executors, administrators and assigns of the assured, upon proof of his death.

On the 19th of May, 1877, the assured, in writing, transferred and assigned these policies, and all profits, dividends, nonforfeiture policies, money or other property that might arise from or be paid for or on account of them, to E. Rollins Morse, in trust, to pay the income, profits or proceeds thereof to his two daughters, Helena and Marie. This assignment was lodged with the insurance company, though it does not clearly appear by whom, nor when, except that it must have been prior to March 1, 1879.

Ellis filed, July 3, 1878, in the District Court of the United States for the District of Kentucky, his petition in bankruptcy, and, having been adjudged a bankrupt, his estate was transferred by the register to Horace W. Bates, who acted as assignee until May, 1882. He was succeeded by the present defendant in error.

The schedules in bankruptcy made no mention of the above policies of insurance.

On the 1st day of March, 1879, policy 68,430 was surrendered to the company for the sum of $1,054, which amount was applied in payment.

ment as well of the premiums due in that year on policies 68,428 and 68,429 as of future premiums, in cancellation of premium note or credit, and in discharge of the accrued interest on that note. The receipt showing the details of this transaction was signed by Ellis, and by Morse as trustee.

The bankrupt died November 21, 1879, and on the 31st of December in the same year the company paid to his administrator, the plaintiff in error (he being also the guardian of the children of the assured), the sum of $9,390.43, the proceeds of policy 68,428, and $258.21, the balance of the surrender value of policy 68,430.

The present action was brought September 30, 1882, by the assignee in bankruptcy to recover from Ellis' administrator the sums so received by the latter. It proceeds upon the ground that the policies constituted part of the bankrupt's estate, and passed to his assignee. The declaration alleges that the existence of the policies was concealed and withheld from the assignee, and remained in Ellis' possession and control until his death, when they were taken possession of by the defendant, in his capacity as administrator, except that policy No. 68,430 had been surrendered by Ellis, on or about March 2, 1879; that the assignee in bankruptcy had no knowledge or information concerning the policies until shortly before the commencement of this suit, "the same being concealed by said Ellis in his lifetime, and since his death by his administrator; and that immediately upon being informed of the existence of said property he demanded the same or the proceeds thereof from the defendant."

The answer puts in issue the material allegations of the declaration, and pleads specially that the cause of action did not accrue to the assignee, nor against the defendant as administrator, within two years before the suing out of the plaintiff's writ.

The court refused to grant any of the defendant's requests for instructions, including one based upon the Statute of Limitations, and instructed the jury that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the two sums claimed by him, with interest on each from the date of the writ. A verdict was thereupon returned in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $11,539.56, upon which judgment was rendered.

It is provided by section 5057 of the Revised Statutes of the United States that "no suit, either at law or in equity, shall be maintainable in any court between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest, touching any property or rights of property transferable to or vested in such assignee, unless brought within two years from the time when the cause of action accrued for or against such assignee. And this provision shall not in any case revive a right of action barred at the time when an assignee is appointed." 14 Stat. 518, chap. 176, § 2.

The court below was asked to rule that the action was barred by this section, "unless the defendant fraudulently concealed from Bates, the first assignee, the alleged cause of action, and that mere omission on the part of the defendant to disclose to Bates, the assignee, the facts, would not amount to a fraudulent concealment." It was also asked to rule that mere ignorance upon the part of the assignee of the cause of action would not take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. If these instructions, or either of them, ought to have been given, the judgment must be reversed.

The first question to be examined is whether this is a suit "between an assignee in bankruptcy and a person claiming an adverse interest." It is contended that section 5057 has no application to a suit against a bankrupt, and, consequently, none to a suit against his administrator, who takes no greater right in property transferable to or vested in the assignee than the bankrupt had at his death. Without stopping to examine the authorities bearing upon this proposition, it is clear that the rule contended for ought not to control the present case. More than a year prior to the bankruptcy of Ellis he had, by written assignment, transferred these policies to Morse, in trust to pay the income, profits or proceeds thereof to the two infant daughters of the assured. That instrument was delivered to the insurance company many months before the death of the assured. This is manifest from the receipt taken by the company on the first of March, 1879, and which was signed by the assured and by Morse, as trustee. The company must have been aware at that time of the assignment. As it does not appear on what day the written transfer to Morse, for the benefit of the daughters of the assured was delivered to the company, it may be argued that there is an entire absence of proof showing that Ellis had parted with his interest in the policies prior to his bankruptcy. Still, the daughters of the assured must be held as claiming an interest in the policies adverse to the assignee in bankruptcy, at least from the time the written transfer to Morse, as their trustee, was lodged with the insurance company. That must have occurred as early as March 1, 1879, more than three years prior to the commencement of this suit.

This conclusion is not at all affected by the fact that Morse had no recollection, when he testified in this case, of ever having had in his possession the written transfer to him of May 19, 1877. His want of recollection cannot outweigh the fact that on the first of March, 1879, as trustee for the daughters of Ellis, he co-operated with the latter in surrendering policy 68,430, and in applying the amount allowed on account of such surrender to the payment, among other things, of the premiums due and to become due on the other two policies. It is hardly to be supposed that he would have assumed to act as trustee, in matters of such importance, without knowing by whom, and for whose benefit, he was made such trustee. Besides, the rights of the daughters under the above written transfer did not depend upon his formal acceptance of the trust imposed upon him. Those rights would have been protected by a court of equity, even if he had declined to act as trustee.

Nor is it a material circumstance that Morse, after the death of Ellis, stated, in his letter to the insurance company of December 29, 1879, that he could not "find" any assignment of policies 68,429 and 68,430, and did not claim any interest in them. Neither his inability to find the assignment under which he had acted nor his disclaimer of an interest in the policies, could affect the rights of Ellis' daughters. Further, it is quite manifest that this letter was written merely to facilitate the collection of the proceeds of the policies by the administrator, who was also the guardian of the infant children of the assured. Although the present suit is against the administrator, the latter, in respect to the policies in question, really represents his wards, to whom, so far as we can see from the present record, he must account for the moneys collected from the insurance company.

For the reasons stated, we are of opinion that within the meaning of section 5057 this is a suit between the assignee in bankruptcy and one claiming an adverse interest. It is therefore barred by limitation, unless it can be brought within the rule announced in Bailey v. Glover, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 342, 349 [22: 636, 638]. In that case, the court, construing section 5057, said: "We hold that when there has been no negligence or laches on the part of a plaintiff in coming to the knowledge of the fraud which is the foundation of the suit, and when the fraud has been concealed, or is of such character as to conceal itself, the Statute does not begin to run until the fraud is discovered by, or becomes known to, the party suing, or those in privity with him." See also Rosenthal v. Walker, 111 U. S. 185 [28: 395]; Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528 [29: 467].

The ground upon which the plaintiff claims exemption from the limitation of two years is that the schedules in bankruptcy omitted all mention of the policies in question, and that the fact that the policies existed was "concealed and withheld" by the bankrupt in his lifetime, and, since his death, by his administrator.

If it be assumed that Ellis had not, prior to his bankruptcy, delivered the assignment of May 19, 1877, and that his interests and rights in these policies were transferable to his assignee, the mere fact that he omitted any mention of the policies in his schedules in bankruptcy, and that neither he nor his administrator gave information of them to the assignee, would not establish fraud within the meaning of the rule announced in Bailey v. Glover. The omission from the schedules of any reference to the policies, and the failure to call the attention of the assignee to them, may have been caused by an honest belief, upon the part of Ellis, that they belonged to his children, or were not such property as the law required to be surrendered to the assignee; and, therefore, he lodged the assignment to Morse—possibly after his bankruptcy—with the insurance company. Be this as it may, the bankrupt's children are to be regarded as asserting an interest in the policies, at least from March 1, 1879, when the receipt of that date was executed. Fraud is not imputable to them, nor to the guardian, simply because neither they nor he informed the assignee in bankruptcy of their claims. Their silence, when they were not under any legal obligation to speak, and when they were unaware of any claim being asserted by the assignee, did not amount to concealment. They did nothing to prevent him from obtaining full information in reference to the assets of the bankrupt. The record discloses no circumstance tending to prove that they sought to keep their claim from the knowledge of the assignee.

On the contrary, it appears in proof that Bates, the first assignee, was well acquainted with Ellis, and knew that, for many years prior to the bankruptcy, he had carried a large amount of insurance upon his life. It is true he says that he got the impression from conversation with Ellis that many of those policies had lapsed because of the latter's inability to pay the premiums. But he admitted that about the time of the bankruptcy he "learned indirectly that an assignment of some policy or policies had been made to E. Rollins Morse of Boston." He stated that his understanding with said Ellis was, "after learning of the assignment to E. Rollins Morse, that such policy or policies had some time previously passed from his control and were not a part of his assets in bankruptcy, that from such information as he, witness, received, he concluded there was no value to the creditors in such policy or policies." He acted upon this belief as to the situation, and forebore to make such inquiries as due diligence required. He did not cease to be assignee until May, 1882, nearly four years after his appointment, and more than three years after the written transfer to Morse, in trust for Ellis' daughters, had been lodged with the insurance company. If he did not know of such transfer, he could easily have ascertained what policies upon the life of the assured were in force at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy. It is fundamental, in the rule announced in Bailey v. Glover, that there must not be negligence or laches upon the part of the assignee in bankruptcy in coming to the knowledge of the fraud which is the foundation of his suit, and which is relied upon to defeat the limitation of two years. A rigid enforcement of that condition is essential to meet the object of the Statute of Limitations. That object was to secure a prompt determination of all questions arising in bankruptcy proceedings and a speedy distribution of the assets of bankrupts among their creditors. A critical examination of the evidence leaves no room to doubt that, apart from any question as to concealment upon the part of the bankrupt or of his administrator, the assignee did not show such diligence as entitles him to exemption from the limitation of two years prescribed by the Statute. The court below would not have erred if it had given a peremptory instruction to find for the defendant upon the issue as to limitation.

The case presents another question raised by the defendant's requests for instructions, namely, whether, in view of the peculiar nature of contracts of life insurance, any interest which the bankrupt had in these policies—assuming that he had not, at the time of his bankruptcy, effectively transferred them for the benefit of his daughters—passed to his assignee. The defendant contended in the court below, and contends here, for the negative of this proposition, and insists that if any interest passed to the assignee, it was only such as was represented by the cash value of the policies at the time of the bankruptcy. We do not find it necessary to consider these questions, as what has been said will probably result in a disposition of the whole case under the issue as to the Statute of Limitations.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to grant a new trial, and for further proceedings consistent with this opinion

WILLIAM W. CLEARY, Assignee in Bankruptcy of MATTHIAS ELLIS, Pff. in Err.,

THE ELLIS FOUNDRY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 612-614.)

Affirmance on writ of error—suit by assignee in bankruptcy, when barred by Statute of Limitations.

1. Where plaintiff alone prosecutes a writ of error, the judgment will be affirmed if no error was committed to his prejudice. Although the court below erred in directing a verdict for plaintiff, by reason of the claim having been barred by the Statute of Limitations, yet the judgment will not be reversed if the defendant has not prosecuted a writ of error.
2. Where a bankrupt, at the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, has a policy of insurance on his life, and afterwards assigns the same as security for a debt; and after the death of the bankrupt, the creditor receives from the proceeds of such policy the moneys owing him, and the assignee in bankruptcy afterwards sues the creditor to recover back the moneys thus received,—such suit is a suit between the assignee and a person claiming an adverse interest, and is barred by the two years' limitation prescribed in section 5057, U. S. Rev. Stat.

[No. 79.]

Argued Dec. 13, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff for the cash surrender value of a policy of insurance at the date of filing the petition in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

The action was brought by the assignee in bankruptcy of Ellis to recover the amount of a policy of insurance which the bankrupt held on his life at the time of the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy and which he afterwards assigned to the Ellis Foundry Company as collateral security for the payment of a debt due to it from Ellis. After the death of Ellis, the Foundry Company received out of the proceeds of this policy, collected by the administrator of Ellis, the amount which Ellis, at his death, owed that corporation. The Company, in its answer, besides a general denial, pleaded, in bar of the action, the Statute of Limitations of two years. The petition in bankruptcy was filed July 3, 1878; the Company received the moneys Dec. 31, 1879; this action was brought Sept. 30, 1882. The plaintiff in the action, the assignee in bankruptcy, was the only party who prosecuted a writ of error. The defendant did not prosecute a writ of error. This court affirmed the judgment, as no error was committed to the prejudice of the plaintiff and as the defendant did not prosecute a writ of error, although the action was barred by limitation, as alleged by the defendant.

The further facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Nathan Moree and E. M. Johnson, for plaintiff in error:

The policy of insurance was an assignable chose in action, and had a market value.

Palmer v. Merrill, 6 Cush. 282; St. John v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. 81; Anthracite Ins. Co. v. Sears, 109 Mass. 888.

When a policy holder has been adjudged bankrupt, the policy becomes absolutely vested in the assignee, and he has like remedies to recover the same as the bankrupt would have if he had not been adjudged a bankrupt. He has, in addition, the right to set aside a fraudulent transfer of the policy.

Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169 (31:400); Re Newland, 7 Ben. 63; West v. Reid, 2 Hare, 249; Bunyon on Life Assur. 2d ed. 211; Brigham v. Home L. Ins. Co. 131 Mass. 819.

An assignment of a policy to a creditor, made by a party having a right to assign, carries the entire policy and the right to recover from the company for the whole amount due thereon.

Burroughs v. State Mut. L. Assur. Co. 97 Mass. 359; Bailey v. New England Mut. L. Ins. Co. 114 Mass. 177.

Mr. Joshua D. Ball, for defendant in error:

It is only in cases where the facts are clear and not in dispute, and there is substantially nothing in dispute to go to the jury, that the court will interpose and direct a verdict.

Richardson v. Boston, 60 U. S. 19 How. 263 (15:639); Hickman v. Jones, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 197, 201 (19:551, 553); Beans v. U. S. 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 57 (20:531); Klein v. Russell, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 433 (22:116); Moulor v. American L. Ins. Co. 101 U. S. 708 (25:1077); Manchester v. Ericsson, 105 U. S. 847 (26:1099); Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 80 (27:65); Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612 (28:536); Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676 (25:404); Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478 (27:1003); Central Nat. Bank v. Royal Ins. Co. 103 U. S. 783 (26:459); Schofield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615 (29:224).

The Statute of Limitations applies, not only to suits to recover property belonging to the bankrupt or conveyed in fraud, but also to actions to recover money or debts owing to the bankrupt.

Jenkins v. International Bank, 106 U. S. 571 (27:804); Bailey v. Glover, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 346 (22:638); Gifford v. Helms, 98 U. S. 253 (25:59); Wisner v. Brown, 122 U. S. 214 (30:1205).

Mere failure to discover the cause of action, where there is no element of concealment, does not take the case out of the Statute.

Norton v. De La Villebeuve, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 304.

If he had the means of discovering the fact, his want of knowledge is to be attributed to his own want of vigilance, and not to concealment by others.

Nudd v. Hamblin, 8 Allen, 133; Cole v. McGlathry, 9 Me. 181; McKown v. Whitmore, 31 Me. 448; Rouse v. Southard, 39 Me. 404; Fancy v. Cothran, 82 Fed. Rep. 687.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The statement of facts made in Avery v. Cleary [ante, p. 469], just decided, is, in the main, 474 applicable to the present case. The additional facts necessary to be stated are these:

On the 21st of May, 1879, Ellis made a written assignment to the Ellis Foundry Company, a Massachusetts corporation, of policy 68,429, and all his rights under it, with all moneys payable or which might be payable thereon. That corporation, at the same time, gave a writing to Ellis showing that it received the above policy as collateral security for the payment of a debt due to it from Ellis of $5,540.14 within one year from March 1, 1879, with interest, and of all other sums of money that he might owe that Company within four years thereafter. Out of the proceeds of this policy collected by Avery as administrator of Ellis, the Foundry Company received, December 31, 1879, the sum of $5,901.64, the amount which Ellis, at his death, owed that corporation.

The present action was brought September 30, 1882, to recover from the Company the entire amount received by it on policy 68,429. It proceeds upon the same grounds substantially as those set forth in the other suit. The defendant denied that it had collected such proceeds, and, besides controverting the material allegations of the declaration, pleaded in bar of the action the Statute of Limitations of two years.

At the close of the evidence it claimed the right to go to the jury, and presented certain prayers for instructions which the court declined to give. This claim was denied, and the court ruled, as matter of law, that upon the evidence the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant only the amount the insurance company would have paid the assignee in bankruptcy as the cash surrender value of the policy at the date of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, namely, July 8, 1878. It being agreed that such value was $1,200, the jury were instructed to return a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for that amount, with interest from December 31, 1879, the date of the payment by Ellis' administrator to the defendant of the sum of $5,901.64. To that instruction the plaintiff excepted, but did not present any prayers for instructions. A verdict was returned in conformity with the direction of the court, and judgment was entered thereon.

For the reasons given in the opinion in Avery v. Cleary, the peremptory instruction to the jury to find a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the surrender value of policy 68,429 was erroneous. But as the defendant did not prosecute a writ of error, the judgment below must be affirmed upon the ground that no error was committed to the prejudice of the plaintiff. His action was barred by limitation; for, there can be no doubt that this suit is between the assignee and a corporation claiming an adverse interest.

Judgment affirmed.

THE LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.
LUCINDA WANGELIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599-603.)

Removal of cause from state to federal court—joint action of trespass—condition of case at time of removal—trespass by two corporations—matter affecting the merits—fraudulent joinder of defendants.
132 U. S.

1. An action brought in a state court against two jointly for a tort cannot be removed by either of them into the circuit court of the United States, under the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, § 2, upon the ground of a separable controversy between the plaintiff and himself, although the defendants have pleaded severally, and the plaintiff might have brought the action against either alone.
2. The question whether there is a separable controversy which will warrant a removal is to be determined by the condition of the record in the state court at the time of the filing of the petition for removal, independently of the allegations in that petition or in the affidavit of the petitioner, unless the petitioner both alleges and proves that the defendants were wrongfully made joint defendants for the purpose of preventing a removal into the federal court.
3. A declaration which charges two corporations with having jointly trespassed on plaintiff's land, does not show a separable controversy between plaintiff and either defendant.
4. That one corporation is the only real defendant because the other defendant was not in existence at the time of the trespass complained of, is a matter affecting the merits of the case and not the jurisdiction, and cannot be tried on the petition to remove.
5. In this case, it was not alleged in the petition for removal, or offered to be proved, that one of the defendants was fraudulently joined for the purpose of depriving the other defendant of the right to remove the case.

[No. 169.]

Submitted Dec. 19, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Illinois to review a judgment remanding this cause to the state court. Affirmed.

The original action was trespass, brought in a state court of Illinois against a corporation of Kentucky and a corporation of Illinois, for breaking into and entering plaintiff's close and tearing up and taking away a railroad switch. The case was removed into the circuit court of the United States upon the petition of the Kentucky corporation on the ground that there was a separate controversy between it and the plaintiff which could be fully determined between them. The petition of removal also alleged that the Illinois corporation was not incorporated at the time of the alleged trespass, that the railroad was sold under a mortgage foreclosure and conveyed by the purchasers to that corporation and was since occupied by the Kentucky corporation under a lease from the receiver.

Statement by Mr Justice Gray:

The original action was trespass, brought in a court of the State of Illinois on May 10, 1883, by Lucinda Wangelin, a citizen of Illinois, against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, a corporation of Kentucky, and the Southeast and St. Louis Railway Company, a corporation of Illinois, for breaking and entering her close, and tearing up and carrying away a railroad switch, and thereby destroying the connection between a coal mine of the plaintiff and the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway, and injuring the value of the mine, to her damage in the sum of $6,000. The defendant corporations after being duly served with process severally pleaded not guilty.

The case was removed into the circuit court of the United States upon a petition of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, alleging that there was a separate controversy between it and the plaintiff, which could be fully determined between them; and specifically alleging that the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway Company, an Illinois corporation, built and owned the railway and the switch mentioned in the declaration in 1870, and operated the railway until November 1, 1874; that thenceforth that railway was held and operated by a receiver appointed in a suit to foreclose a mortgage from that company until January 1, 1880; then by the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway Company under a lease from such receiver until May 1, 1880, and by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company under an assignment of that lease until January 27, 1881; and on November 16, 1880, was sold under a decree of foreclosure to purchasers for the Southeast and St. Louis Railway Company, and by such purchasers conveyed on January 27, 1881, to that company; that the Southeast and St. Louis Railway Company was incorporated under the Law of Illinois on November 12, 1880, and not before; that the supposed trespasses alleged in the declaration were committed, if at all, in August, 1880; that at that time "the defendant, the Southeast and St. Louis Railway Company, had no corporate or legal existence, and no existence in fact, had no stockholders, officers, agents, employes or servants, and had taken no steps whatever to become a corporation, and was not in any way acting as a corporation or otherwise;" that that company never came into possession of that railway until January 27, 1881, when it entered into a contract with the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, under which this Company had since operated that railway; and that at the time of the supposed trespasses this Company was in the sole and exclusive possession of that railway, operating it under the aforesaid assignment of lease.

Annexed to the petition for removal was an affidavit of the vice-president of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company to the truth of its allegations.

In the circuit court of the United States, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, by leave of the court, filed additional pleas, setting up, among other things, the matters alleged in the petition for removal.

Upon a motion of the plaintiff to remand the cause to the state court "for reasons apparent upon the face of the record," the court on April 7, 1886, ordered it to be remanded; and on April 9, 1886, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company sued out this writ of error.

Mr. J. M. Hamill, for plaintiff in error:

The joinder by plaintiffs in a state court of defendants, citizens of the same State, who have no interest in the controversy and whose relation to the suit appears from the record, will not deprive the defendants in interest, citizens of another State, of the right to remove the cause to the federal courts.

Wood v. Davis, 59 U. S. 18 How. 467 (15:460); Carnel v. Banks, 28 U. S. 10 Wheat. 181 (6:297); Broune v. Strode, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch. 303 (3:108); Boon v. Chiles, 88 U. S. 8 Pet. 532 (8:1034).

The courts of the United States will not consider any others as parties to the suit than the persons between whom the litigation before them exists.

McNutt v. Bland, 48 U. S. 2 How. 9 (11:159).

This court will not suffer its jurisdiction to be ousted by the mere joinder or nonjoinder of formal parties.

Wormley v. Wormley, 21 U. S. 8 Wheat. 421 (5:651); Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 589 (25:967); Arapahoe County v. Kansas Pac. R. Co. 4 Dill. 277-288; Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457 (25:593); Bacon v. Rives, 106 U. S. 99 (27:69).

This case does not fall within the rule laid down in Peper v. Fordyce, 119 U. S. 469 (30:435); Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535 (30:1235); Plymouth Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264 (30:232); Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 340 (29:907); Thayer v. Life Assn. of America, 112 U. S. 717 (28:664).

It cannot be claimed that a defendant who had no existence at the time the right of action accrued is an indispensable party to a suit.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ide, 114 U. S. 52 (29:63); Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41 (29:331); Starin v. New York City, 115 U. S. 248 (29:388); Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275 (29:899).

Mr. Charles W. Thomas for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

It has been often decided that an action brought in a state court against two jointly for a tort cannot be removed by either of them into the circuit court of the United States, under the Act of March 3, 1875, chap. 137, § 2, upon the ground of a separable controversy between the plaintiff and himself, although the defendants have pleaded severally, and the plaintiff might have brought the action against either alone. 18 Stat. 471; Pirie v. Tvedt, 115 U. S. 41 [29:331]; Sloane v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 275 [29:899]; Plymouth Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co. 118 U. S. 264 [30:232]; Thorn Wire Hedge Co. v. Fuller, 122 U. S. 535 [30:1235].

It is equally well settled that in any case the question whether there is a separable controversy which will warrant a removal is to be determined by the condition of the record in the state court at the time of the filing of the petition for removal, independently of the allegations in that petition or in the affidavit of the petitioner—unless the petitioner both alleges and proves that the defendants were wrongfully made joint defendants for the purpose of preventing a removal into the federal court.

In Plymouth Gold Min. Co. v. Amador & S. Canal Co., above cited, a suit by a canal company against a mining corporation and its agents, for polluting a stream of water belonging to the plaintiff, was held to have been rightly remanded to the state court in which it had been commenced, although the corporation's petition for removal alleged that it was the only real defendant, and that the other defendants were nominal parties only, and were sued for the purpose of preventing the corporation from removing the cause into the circuit court of the United States. Chief Justice Waite in delivering judgment said: "It is possible, also, that the company may be guilty and the other defendants not guilty; but the plaintiff in its complaint says they are all guilty, and that presents the cause of action to be tried. Each party defends for himself, but until his defense is made out the case stands against him, and the rights of all must be governed accordingly. Under these circumstances the averments in the petition, that the defendants were wrongfully made [parties] to avoid a removal can be of no avail in the circuit court upon a motion to remand, until they are proven; and that, so far as the present record discloses, was not attempted. The affirmative of this issue was on the petitioning defendant. That corporation was the moving party, and was bound to make out its case." 118 U. S. 270, 271 [30:233, 234].

In Little v. Giles, 118 U. S. 596 [30:269], where a bill in equity charged the defendants jointly with having fraudulently deprived the plaintiff of her property, Mr. Justice Bradley, delivering the opinion of the court, said that one of the defendants "could not, by merely making contrary averments in his petition for removal, and setting up a case inconsistent with the allegations of the bill, segregate himself from the other defendants, and thus entitle himself to remove the case into the United States court." 118 U. S. 600, 601 [30:270, 271].

So in East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Grayson, 119 U. S. 240, 244 [30:382, 388], in a suit in equity against two corporations, the question was whether there was a separable controversy between one of them and the plaintiff which would warrant a removal into the circuit court of the United States; and it was said by Chief Justice Waite, and adjudged by this court, that the allegations of the bill must, for the purposes of that inquiry, be taken as confessed. To the same effect is Graves v. Corbin (ante, p. 462), just decided.

In the case at bar, the declaration charged two corporations with having jointly trespassed on the plaintiff's land. Whether they had done so or not was a question to be decided at the trial; and it is not contended, and could not be, in the face of the decisions already cited, that the record of the state court, as it stood at the time of the filing of the petition for removal, showed a separable controversy between the plaintiff and either defendant.

The argument in support of the jurisdiction of the federal court is that the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company was the only real defendant, because, at the time of the trespass complained of, the other defendant was not in existence. But this was a matter affecting the merits of the case, and one which the plaintiff was entitled to deny and disprove at the trial upon the issues joined by the pleadings. Both the defendants were sued and served as corporations, and pleaded as such, in the state court; and it is not denied that each of them was a corporation when the action was brought. The question whether one of them was in existence as a corporation at the time of the alleged trespass did not affect the question whether it could be now sued, but the question of its liability in the action; in other words, not the jurisdiction, but the merits, to be determined when the case came to trial. It could not be tried and determined in advance, as incidental to a petition by a co-defendant to remove the case into the circuit court of the United States.

As to the suggestion, made in argument, that the Southeast and St. Louis Railway Company was fraudulently joined as a defendant in the state court for the purpose of depriving the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company of the right to remove the case into the circuit court of the United States, it is enough to say that no fraud was alleged in the petition for removal, or pleaded, or offered to be proved, in the circuit court.

Judgment affirmed.

WILLIAM H. ROBERTSON, Collector of the PORT OF NEW YORK, Plff. in Err.,

CHARLES A. EDELHOFF ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 614-626.)

Duty on ribbons for hats—directing verdict for plaintiff.

1. Ribbons composed of silk and cotton, in which silk is the component part of chief value, used exclusively as trimmings for ornamenting hats and bonnets, and which have a commercial value only for that purpose, are liable to a duty of only twenty per cent ad valorem under "Schedule N,—Sundries" of section 2502 of title 33, Rev. Stat. (22 Stat. 511), as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883.
2. It is proper for the circuit court to direct a verdict for the plaintiff, where there is no question of fact for the jury, and where the defendant does not ask to go to the jury.

[No 170.]

Argued Dec. 19, 20, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff for the excess of duties collected on hat ribbons or hat bands and upon certain charges and commissions and coverings. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor Gen., for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Joseph H. Choate and Tremain & Tyler for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought in the Superior Court of the City of New York, by Charles August Edelhoff and Emil Rinke against William H. Robertson, Collector of the Port of New York, on the 25th of March, 1884, and removed by the defendant into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, to recover an excess of duties paid under protest on goods entered at the custom-house on the 20th of August, 1883, the duty having been paid on the same day.

The case was tried by Judge Coxe and a jury, on April 12th, 1886. The articles in dispute were ribbons, composed of silk and cotton, in which silk was the component material of chief value. There was due protest and appeal. The Collector assessed a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem upon the goods, under the following clause in "Schedule L,—Silk and Silk Goods," in section 2502 of title 33 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 510): "All goods, wares and merchandise, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, fifty per centum ad valorem." The plaintiffs claimed in their protest and upon the trial that the goods were liable to only 20 per cent duty, under the following provision in "Schedule N,—Sundries," of the same title (Id. 512): "Hats, and so forth, materials for: Braids, plaits, flats, laces, trimmings, tissues, willow sheets and squares, used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, hair, whalebone or any other substance or material not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, twenty per centum ad valorem."

On the trial the undisputed evidence was that the articles in question were used exclusively as trimmings for ornamenting hats and bonnets, and had a commercial value only for that purpose. The defendant offered no evidence on that subject in contradiction of that put in by the plaintiffs. At the close of the testimony, the defendant asked the court to direct a verdict in his favor, upon the ground that the foregoing provision in schedule N, in regard to "Hats, and so forth, materials for," should be construed as embracing only articles made of a substance or material not elsewhere specially enumerated or provided for in the Act of 1883, and articles made only of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, hair, whalebone or some other like substance or material; but this request was denied by the court, and the defendant excepted. The court then, at the request of the plaintiffs, directed the jury to find a verdict in their favor, for the excess of duties collected on the hat-ribbons or hat-bands, and upon certain charges, commissions and coverings, in regard to which there was no dispute; and the defendant excepted to such action of the court. The jury found a verdict accordingly for the plaintiffs, on which a judgment was entered in their favor, to review which the defendant has brought a writ of error.

That the articles in question, silk being their component material of chief value, were liable to a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem, as "goods, wares and merchandise not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value," if they were not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act of 1883, is plain. The question, and the only question, therefore, is whether they come under the clause, "Hats, and so forth, materials for," as being "trimmings," "used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods," composed of any of the seven substances specifically named, "or any other substance or material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act," and were thus liable to a duty of only 20 per cent ad valorem.

It is to be especially noted that the Act of 1888 does not, in schedule L, in regard to silk and silk goods, or elsewhere, impose any duty upon silk ribbons by that name, or upon ribbons made of silk or of which silk is the component material of chief value, otherwise than as they may be covered by the clause above quoted in regard to 50 per cent duty.

We think it perfectly clear that the words "composed of," in the 20 per-cent clause above quoted, relate to the eight articles previously specifically mentioned in that clause, and not to the words, "hats, bonnets and hoods," also, that the words in the same clause, "not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act," relate to the same eight articles, and not to the words, "hats, bonnets and hoods," or to the words, "any other substance or material." The clause is to be read as if the word "and" were inserted before the word "composed," and again after the word "material," so that the clause, as far as the question involved in the present case is concerned, would read: "Trimmings used for ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, and composed of" any of the seven articles specially named, "or any other substance or material, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act."

We cannot agree with the contention of the defendant that the words "any other substance or material" are to be read as if they were "any other like substance or material," because, while "straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow" are vegetable substances, "hair" and "whalebone" are animal substances. There is no identity of genus among the two descriptions of articles specifically mentioned; and we see no warrant for interpolating the word "like," and applying it distributively to each of the two classes of substances specifically mentioned. The contention that, in the presence of the words "any other substance or material," the naming of seven substances specifically is surplusage and without meaning, because the words "any other substance or material" are adequate to cover those seven substances, seems to us without force in view of the well-known tautological phraseology of provisions in Tariff Acts.

There is a clause in schedule N of section 2502 of title 38 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 511), which it is proper to consider in connection with the clause in regard to "Hats, and so forth, materials for," and which reads as follows: "Bonnets, hats and hoods, for men, women and children, composed of chip, grass, palm leaf, willow or straw, or any other vegetable substance, hair, whalebone or other material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, thirty per centum ad valorem."

It will conduce to the solution of the question in hand to consider prior legislation on the subject.

In section 22 of the Act of March 2, 1861, chap. 68 (12 Stat. 192), a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem was imposed on "flats, braids, plaits, sparterre and willow squares, used for making hats and bonnets," and on "hats and bonnets for men, women and children, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow or any other vegetable substance, or of hair, whalebone or other material, not otherwise provided for," and by section 16 of the same Act (p. 186), the following duties were imposed on silk and silk articles: "On silk in the gum, not more advanced in manufacture than singles, tram, and thrown or organzine, fifteen per centum ad valorem; on all silks valued at not over one dollar per square yard, twenty per centum ad valorem; on all silks valued at over one dollar per square yard, thirty per centum ad valorem; on all silk velvets or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, valued at three dollars per square yard, or under, twenty-five per centum ad valorem; valued at over three dollars per square yard, thirty per centum ad valorem; on floss silks, twenty per centum ad valorem; on silk ribbons, galloons, braids, fringes, laces, tassels, buttons, button cloths, trimmings, and on silk twist, twist composed of mohair and silk, sewing silk in the gum or purified, and all other manufactures of silk, or of which silk shall be the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, thirty per centum ad valorem." By this provision, a duty of 30 per cent was imposed on "silk ribbons" by name. No question of the kind before us could have arisen under that Statute.

In section 8 of the Act of July 14, 1862, chap. 163 (12 Stat. 551), are found the following clauses in regard to duties: "On bonnets, hats and hoods, for men, women and children, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow or any other vegetable substance, or of silk, hair, whalebone or other material, not otherwise provided for, forty per centum ad valorem; On braids, plaits, flats, laces, trimmings, sparterre, tissues, willow sheets and squares, used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow or any other vegetable substance, or of hair, whalebone, or other material not otherwise provided for, thirty per centum ad valorem." There was no provision in that Act in regard to silk, or silks, or silk ribbons, other than the one in the first of the two clauses above quoted, in regard to bonnets, hats and hoods composed of silk. So the provision of the Act of 1861, in regard to silk, silks and silk ribbons, remained in force, and the provision in the second clause above quoted, in regard to trimmings, could not apply to silk ribbons, because they were "otherwise provided for" in the Act of 1861; though the question would not have been material, because silk ribbons were, under the Act of 1861, subject to 30 per cent duty, and the trimmings were, under the Act of 1862, subject to the same duty.

By the Act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat. 202), duties on imports were increased, and by section 8 of that Act (p. 210), from July 1, 1864, in lieu of existing duties, the following were imposed on silk and articles of silk: "On spun silk for filling in skeins or cops, twenty-five per centum ad valorem. On silk in the gum not more advanced than singles, tram, and thrown or organzine, thirty-five per centum ad valorem. On floss silks, thirty-five per centum ad valorem. On sewing silk, in the gum or purified, forty per centum ad valorem. On all dress and piece silks, ribbons and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem. On silk vestings, pongees, shawls, scarfs, mantillas, pelerines, handkerchiefs, veils, laces, shirts, drawers, bonnets, hats, caps, turbans, chemisettes, hose, mitts, aprons, stockings, gloves, suspenders, watch-chains, webbing, braids, fringes, galloons, tassels, cords and trimmings, sixty per centum ad valorem. On all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, fifty per centum ad valorem.¹ Thus the duty on silk ribbons by name was advanced from 80 per cent, as in the Act of 1861, to 60 per cent.

No subsequent legislation until the Revised Statutes of June 22, 1874, affected the duty on silk ribbons. In "Schedule M.—Sundries," of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes (2d ed. p. 474), were contained the following provisions: "Bonnets, hats and hoods, for men, women and children, composed of chip, grass, palm leaf, willow or any other vegetable substance, hair, whalebone or other material, not otherwise provided for: forty per centum ad valorem; composed of straw: forty per centum ad valorem;" and (p. 476): "Hats, etc., materials for.—Braids, plaits, flats, laces, trimmings, tissues, willow sheets and squares, used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, and hoods, composed of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, or any other vegetable substance, or of hair, whalebone, or other material, not otherwise provided for: thirty per centum ad valorem;" and in "Schedule H.—Silks and Silk Goods" (p. 469): "Silk in the gum not more advanced than singles, tram and thrown or organzine: thirty-five per centum ad valorem. Spun silk for filling in skeins or cops: thirty-five per centum ad valorem. Floss silks: thirty-five per centum ad valorem. Sewing silk in the gum or purified: forty per centum ad valorem. Silk twist, twist composed of mohair and silk: forty per centum ad valorem. Dress and piece silks, ribbons and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value: sixty per centum ad valorem. Silk vestings, pongees, shawls, scarfs, mantillas, pelerines, handkerchiefs, veils, laces, shirts, drawers, bonnets, hats, caps, turbans, chemisettes, hose, mitts, aprons, stockings, gloves, suspenders, watch-chains, webbing, braids, fringes, galloons, tassels, cords and trimmings, and ready-made clothing of silk, or of which silk is a component material of chief value: sixty per centum ad valorem. Buttons and ornaments for dresses and outside garments made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, and containing no wool, worsted or goats' hair: fifty per centum ad valorem. Manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for: fifty per centum ad valorem."

Thus, in the clause in regard to "Bonnets, hats and hoods," the word "silk," found in the Act of 1862, was omitted in the Revised Statutes; and silk ribbons, or ribbons of which silk was the competent material of chief value, were made by the Revised Statutes dutiable eo nomine at 60 per cent, as in the Act of 1864.

Then came the Act of February 8, 1875 (18 Stat. 807), by the first section of which the following provision was made in regard to duties on silk and articles of silk, in lieu of then existing duties: "On spun silk, for filling, in skeins or cops, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; on silk in the gum, not more advanced than singles, tram and thrown or organzine, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; on floss silks, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; on sewing silk, in the gum or purified, forty per centum ad valorem; on lastings, mohair cloth, silk twist, or other manufactures of cloth, woven or made in patterns of such size, shape or form, or cut in such manner, as to be fit for buttons exclusively, ten per centum ad valorem; on all goods, wares and merchandise not otherwise herein provided for, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, irrespective of the classification thereof for duty by or under previous laws, or of their commercial designation, sixty per centum ad valorem: Provided, That this Act shall not apply to goods, wares or merchandise which have, as a component material thereof, twenty-five per centum or over in value of cotton, flax, wool or worsted."

By that Act, ribbons of silk, or ribbons in which silk was the component material of chief value, were not made dutiable eo nomine, but were dutiable at 60 per cent, as "goods, wares and merchandise not otherwise herein provided for, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value." They were not otherwise provided for in the Act of 1875. This Act superseded all prior statutes in regard to goods made of silk, or of which silk was the component material of chief value. Of course, under the Act of 1875, the goods in question here would have been dutiable at 60 per cent.

Then came the Act of 1888, the three provisions in which, in regard to "Bonnets, hats and hoods," "Hats, and so forth, materials for," and "Silk and silk goods," have been before quoted. The changes made in that Act from the Revised Statutes of 1874, in regard to "Bonnets, hats and hoods," were these: Those articles were qualified with the words "not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act," and the duty was reduced from 40 per cent to 80 per cent. The changes made in regard to "Hats, and so forth, materials for," were these: the words, "Willow, or any other vegetable substance, or of hair, whalebone or other material not otherwise provided for," were changed to the words, "Willow, hair, whalebone or any other substance or material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act," and the rate of duty was reduced from 80 per cent to 20 per cent. Changes were made in the schedule in regard to "Silks and silk goods." The duty of 60 per cent on silk ribbons eo nomine was omitted, and also the like duty on silk trimmings, or of which silk was the component material of chief value; and the duty of 50 per cent on "Manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," was changed to a like duty on "All goods, wares and merchandise, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value."

Section 6 of the Act of March 3, 1888, provides that, on and after the 1st of July, 1888, "the following sections," being twenty-three sections, one of which is section 2502, with schedules A to N, "shall constitute and be a substitute for title thirty-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States," thus abolishing all enactments found in the original title 33, in regard to duties on imports.

It is thus seen that, by the Act of 1888, no duty is imposed upon silk ribbons by name. Under the Revised Statutes of 1874 silk ribbons, being charged by name with a duty of 60 per cent, were not charged with a duty of 50 per cent as "manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," because they were otherwise provided for; and they could not have been liable to a duty of 30 per cent as "trimmings . . . used for . . . ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods," and not otherwise provided for, because they were otherwise provided for, in schedule H, as silk ribbons by name, at 60 per cent. But when we come to the Act of 1888, silk ribbons are not therein specifically named in schedule L or elsewhere, and are not dutiable at 50 per cent, as silk goods not specially enumerated or provided for in the Act of 1888, because in the clause in regard to "Hats, and so forth, materials for," they are specially enumerated and provided for in that Act, as trimmings used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, and composed of some other substance or material than the seven substances specially named, and are not otherwise specially enumerated or provided for in that Act, and are therefore dutiable at 20 per cent.

The question, however, is not only clear on principle on a review of the statutory provisions, but it is disposed of by decisions of this court.

In Arthur v. Zimmerman, 96 U. S. 124 [24: 770], the articles imported were composed of cotton, and were known commercially as "hat braids." The collector imposed duty upon them under that clause of section 6 of the Act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat. 209), which provided for a duty of 85 per cent on "cotton braids, insertings, lace trimmings or bobbins, and all other manufactures of cotton." The importers claim that they were dutiable at only 30 per cent. It appeared that the articles were used exclusively for making and trimming hats and bonnets, and the circuit court and this court held them to be dutiable at only 30 per cent, under that clause of section 8 of the Act of July 14, 1862, chap. 163 (12 Stat. 557), and of schedule M of section 2504 of the Revised Statutes (2d ed. p. 476), which imposed that rate of duty on trimmings used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, and composed of other material than the substances specifically named, and not otherwise provided for.

But the question in regard to goods substantially identical with those in question in the present case was presented to this court and decided by it in the case of Hartranft v. Langfeld, 125 U. S. 128 [31: 672]. The goods in that case were imported into Philadelphia, and entered at the custom-house there in September and October, 1883. The suit was begun on the 28th of February, 1884. It was tried on April 6th, 1886. The writ of error was sued out August 5th, 1886, while the writ of error in the present case was brought September 29th, 1886. The two transcripts of record were filed in this court the same day, October 18, 1886, but the Langfeld Case was advanced, on motion, and heard February 15, 1888, while the present case has stood on the docket until reached in its regular order.

The articles in the Langfeld Case were velvet ribbons made of silk and cotton, in which silk was the material of chief value. The collector assessed upon them a duty of 50 per cent, under that clause of schedule L of section 2502 of title 33 of the Revised Statutes, as enacted by the Act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. 510), before quoted, which reads as follows: "All goods, wares and merchandise, not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, made of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, fifty per centum ad valorem." The plaintiffs in the suit claimed, and the jury found, under the instructions of the court, that the duty ought to have been assessed under the paragraph in schedule N of section 2503 of the same title, providing for "Hats, and so forth, materials for," above quoted, and that the duty should have been only 20 per cent. The goods in question there were "trimmings," and were used "for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods." There was no evidence that they were used exclusively for that purpose. The testimony on the part of the plaintiffs tended to show that they were used chiefly for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, but that they might also be, and sometimes were, used for trimming dresses. The testimony on the part of the defendant tended to show that they were dress trimmings equally with hat trimmings, and were commonly used as much for the one purpose as the other. The circuit court charged the jury that the use to which the articles were chiefly adapted and for which they were used, determined their character within the meaning of the Statute; and that, if the articles were hat trimmings, chiefly used for making and ornamenting hats, the jury should find a verdict for the plaintiffs, the suit having been brought by the importers against the collector, to recover the difference between 20 per cent and 50 per cent. The defendant had requested the court to charge the jury that if the articles were not specially enumerated or provided for, and silk was their component material of chief value, they were dutiable at 50 per cent, under the clause before quoted, and the verdict should be for the defendant; also, that if the jury should find that silk was the component material of chief value in them, and they were not exclusively or specially used for hat trimmings, they were not subject to the 20 per cent duty; also, that if the jury should find that the articles could properly be classified, under the above rules, as liable to 20 per cent duty, and also as liable to 50 per cent duty, they were dutiable at the higher rate, and the verdict should be for the defendant; and also that, unless the jury should find that the articles were not specially provided for, and were fitted only for use for making or ornamenting hats, their verdict should be for the defendant. The circuit court declined to give those instructions, and the defendant excepted.

It appears by the opinion of this court that it was contended here, on the part of the defendant, that the true construction of the Statute was not only that the use of the material must be for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, but that the material itself must be in some one of the forms named in the clause regarding "Hats, and so forth, materials for." This court, however, held that, under the charge of the court as given, the objection was not well taken that the charge would have authorized a recovery if the goods in question were materials used for making or ornamenting hats, although not coming within the enumeration of the articles so specified. This court further said that the circuit court instructed the jury that they must find the goods in question to be "trimmings," chiefly used for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets and hoods, composed of a material not otherwise specially enumerated or provided for. This court also said that velvet ribbons were not specially mentioned as subject to a duty by that name or description; that they were manifestly trimmings, according to the natural meaning of that word, and because they were used to trim either hats or dresses; and that the real controversy was as to the purpose for which, as "trimmings," they were principally used. As to the request of the defendant to charge the jury that, if they should find that the articles could be classified properly as subject to 20 per cent duty and also as subject to 50 per cent duty, they were liable to duty at the higher rate, under the provision of section 2499 of the Revised Statutes, this court said that the principle of that section was not applicable to the case, because the ribbons were found by the jury to be trimmings chiefly used for making or ornamenting hats; that this brought them within the provision of schedule N, which fixed the duty at 20 per cent; and that, being thus specially provided for, they were excluded from the operation of all other provisions. On these views, this court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court.

Therefore, in addition to the conclusion which results from considering the history of the legislation on the points involved, we are of opinion that the decision in the case of Hartman v. Langfeld controls this case, and that it was proper for the circuit court to direct a verdict for the plaintiffs. Such practice has been often sanctioned by this court. There was no question of fact for the jury, and the defendant did not ask to go to the jury. Bevans v. United States, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 56 [20:531]; Walbrun v. Babbitt, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 577 [21:489]; Hendrick v. Lindsay, 98 U. S. 143 [28:855]; Arthur v. Zimmerman, 98 U. S. 124 [24:770]; Arthur v. Morgan, 112 U. S. 495 [28:825]; Anderson County v. Beal, 118 U. S. 227, 242 [28:966, 971]; Marshall v. Hubbard, 117 U. S. 419 [29:920]; North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Commercial Bank, 128 U. S. 727, 738 [31:287, 388].

Judgment affirmed.

DAVID RICHMOND, Plff. in Err.,
v.

MARSHALL B. BLAKE, Collector of Internal Revenue for the SECOND COLLECTION DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 592-599.)

Banker, who is—stocks received for sale—tax on capital of a banker.

182 U. S.

1. One who has a place of business where stocks are received for sale is, by section 3407, Rev. Stat. U. S., a banker.
2. Where one has a room or place indicated by a sign over the door, where his mail matter is received, and where he can be met by his clients, and where they can deliver stocks to be sold by him, and buys and sells stocks for his customers, stocks, when delivered to him at this place of business for sale, are "received" by him "for sale," within the meaning of the Statute.
3. One who, in his business of buying and selling stocks for others, regularly employs capital, by use of which interest is earned upon moneys advanced by him for his customers, is, under the Statute, a banker, whose capital, employed in his business, is liable to a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per cent per month under section 3408, U. S. Rev. Stat.

[No. 171.]

Argued Dec. 20, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment for the defendant in an action to recover moneys alleged to have been illegally exacted from him under an alleged illegal assessment made upon capital employed in his business. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry Edwin Tremain and Mason W. Tyler, for plaintiff in error:

The business of banking is distinguished from the business of a stock broker by many peculiarities.

Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 256; Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 216; Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 710 (28: 428); Clark v. Gilbert, 5 Blatchf. 333; Peabody v. Gilbert, 5 Blatchf. 334, note; U. S. v. Fisk, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 445 (18: 243).

Messrs. Alphonso Hart, Solicitor of Internal Revenue, and O. W. Chapman, Solicitor-General, for defendant in error:

What does and what does not constitute a banker, within the meaning of section 3407 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Selden v. Equitable Trust Co. 94 U. S. 419 (24: 249); Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 704 (28: 421); U. S. v. Bank of Montreal, 21 Fed. Rep. 236; Oulton v. German Sav. & Loan Soc. 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 109 (21: 618).

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought to recover certain sums of money paid under protest by the plaintiff in error to the United States in the years 1881, 1882 and 1883, and which he alleged were exacted from him under an illegal assessment made upon capital employed in his business.

If within the meaning of the Statutes under which the assessment was made the plaintiff was a banker, and if the capital assessed was employed in the business of banking, the judgment must be affirmed.

By section 3407 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, it is provided that "every incorporated or other bank, and every person, firm or company having a place of business where credits are opened by the deposit or collection of money or currency, subject to be paid or remitted upon draft, check or order, or where money is advanced or loaned on stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange or promissory notes, or where stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange or promissory notes are received for discount or for sale, shall be regarded as a bank or a banker." 13 Stat. 251, chap. 173, § 79; 14 Stat. 115, chap. 184, § 9.

Section 3408 provides that there shall be levied, collected and paid a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per centum each month upon the average amount of the deposits of money, subject to payment by check or draft, or represented by certificates of deposit or otherwise, whether payable on demand or at some future day, with any person, bank, association, company or corporation engaged in the business of banking; also, "a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per centum each month upon the capital of any bank, association, company, corporation, and on the capital employed by any person in the business of banking beyond the average amount invested in United States bonds: Provided, That the words 'capital employed' shall not include money borrowed or received from day to day, in the usual course of business, from any person not a partner of or interested in the said bank, association or firm." 13 Stat. 277, chap. 173, § 110; 14 Stat. 187, 146, chap. 184, § 9; 17 Stat. 625, chap. 315, § 37; 18 Stat. 311, chap. 36, § 19.

That the plaintiff, during the period covered by the assessment against him, employed a capital in his business is beyond dispute; for he distinctly states that the capital used by him in his business ranged from $30,000 to $50,000. Upon that basis he made his returns for taxation. But did he, during that period, have a place of business where stocks were received for sale? If he did, then, by the very terms of the Statute, he was a banker under the definition given in section 3047.

It is contended by him that he was only a stock broker, and, within the true meaning of section 3407, did not have "a place of business," nor "receive" stocks for sale. That he had a room or place, indicated by a sign over the door, where his mail matter was received, and where he was, or could be, met by his clients, and where the latter could deliver stocks to be sold by him, or under his supervision, and that he bought and sold stocks for his customers, is abundantly shown by his own testimony. Still, he insists that when stocks were delivered to him at this place of business for sale they were not "received" by him "for sale," within the meaning of the Statute. We cannot assent to this view.

In support of this position the plaintiff cites Warren v. Shook, 91 U. S. 704 [23: 421], and Selden v. Equitable Trust Co. 94 U. S. 419 [24: 249]. In the first of those cases the question was whether a firm, holding a special license as bankers, was liable to the tax imposed by section 99 of the Act of June 30, 1864. (13 Stat. 273.) That Statute imposed a tax of one twentieth of one per centum upon the par value of stock and bonds sold by "brokers and bankers doing business as brokers." It was held that Congress intended to impose the duty prescribed by section 99 upon bankers doing business as brokers, although a person, firm or company, having a license as a banker, might be exempted by subdivision nine of section 79 of the Act of 1864, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1865 (13 Stat. 472), from paying the special tax imposed upon brokers. Nothing more is decided in that case.

In Selden v. Equitable Trust Co. the question was whether corporations whose business was to invest their own capital—not that of others—in bonds secured by mortgage upon real estate, and to negotiate, sell and guarantee such bonds, were banks or bankers within the meaning of section 3407 of the Revised Statutes. It was held that they were not; that Congress did not intend that a person or corporation selling its own property, not that received from other owners for sale, should be classed as a banker or bank for the purposes of taxation. The court, in that case, referred to section 3407 as describing three distinct classes of artificial and natural persons, distinguished by the nature of their business: first, those who have a place of business where credits are opened by the deposit or collection of money or currency, subject to be paid or remitted upon draft, check or order; second, those having a place of business where money is advanced or loaned on stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange or promissory notes; third, those having a place of business where stocks, bonds, bullion, bills of exchange or promissory notes are received for discount or for sale. In respect to the third class it was said: "The language of the Statute is, 'where' such property is 'received' 'for discount or for sale.' The use of the word 'received' is significant. In no proper sense can it be understood that one receives his own stocks and bonds, or bills or notes, for discount or for sale. He receives the bonds, bills or notes belonging to him as evidences of debt, though he may sell them afterwards. Nobody would understand that to be banking business. But when a corporation or natural person receives from another person, for discount, bills of exchange or promissory notes belonging to that other, he is acting as a banker; and when a customer brings bonds, bullion or stocks for sale, and they are received for the purpose for which they are brought, that is, to be sold, the case is presented which we think was contemplated by the Statute. In common understanding, he who receives goods for sale is one who receives them as agent for a principal who is the owner. He is not one who buys and sells on his own account."

This language embraces the present case. The plaintiff was not a broker who, without employing capital of his own, simply negotiated purchases and sales of stocks for others, receiving only the usual commissions for services of that character. In his business of buying and selling stocks for others, he regularly employed capital, by the use of which interest was earned upon moneys advanced by him for his customers, substantially as it would be earned by a bank upon money loaned to its customers. In the parlance of the Stock Exchange, he might be called a stock broker; yet, here were all the conditions, which, under the Statute, made the case of a banker, whose capital, employed in his business, was liable to a tax of one twenty-fourth of one per centum each month. It is not a sufficient answer to this view to say that the business of a stock broker is ordinarily distinct from the business of a banker, or that according to the common understanding a stock broker is not a banker. A stock broker may do some of the kinds of business that are usually done by bankers, and many banks and bankers do business which, as a general rule, is only done by stock brokers. Congress did not intend that the question of taxation upon capital employed in the business of banking should depend upon the mere name given to such business, either by those engaged in it or by others. When the plaintiff admits, as he does, that his business was that of buying and selling stocks for his customers, and that in such business he employed capital, he proves that he was a banker within the statutory definition, and that, within the meaning of section 8408, his capital was employed in the business of banking. He brings himself within the rule that Congress prescribed for determining who, for the purposes of the taxation in question—though not necessarily in the commercial sense—were bankers and what was banking business. That rule is expressed in words that leave no doubt as to what was the intention of Congress. The judgment below gives effect to that intention, and it is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Field and Mr. Justice Miller dissent.

THE UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
JESSE D. CARR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 644-655)

Mail contract, construction of—acquiescence—presumption that public officers have done their duty, extent of—delinquency in carrying the mails—assumption.

1. Where, in a contract for carrying the mails, places are designated as on the line of the mail route from one point to another and back, the contractor is required to return through the same places on his way back. He cannot return by a shorter route.
2. In order to establish an acquiescence equivalent to assent in a certain mode of dealing with the subject matter of the contract, the burden is on the contractor to show knowledge or information, by the Department, of his conduct in the premises.
3. The presumption that public officers have done their duty is not a substitute for proof of an independent and material fact.
4. Although it is the duty of a postmaster to report to the Postmaster-General every delinquency of a contractor, yet it is not to be assumed that he reported a delinquency, unless proof is given that he had knowledge of it.
5. The certificate of the second assistant postmaster-general that the mails had been carried without any delinquencies so far as shown by the returns received, indicates that the "returns received" did not show the nonperformance of the contractor.
6. Where it appears from the findings that the first information received by the Postmaster-General that the mail was not carried as contracted for was at a certain date, it will not be assumed that the responsible officers of the Department knew of the manner of its being carried before that time, or acquiesced therein.

[No. 411.]

Submitted Dec. 3, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.
182 U. S.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of the petitioner to recover compensation for carrying the mail under a contract with the Postmaster-General to carry the United States mail from Salinas City to Gabilan, California, and back from Gabilan to Salinas City. Reversed.

Petitioner carried the mails from Salinas City to Gabilan by way of Santa Rita and Natividad, a circuitous route in length 15 miles, and, on the return trip he carried them directly from Gabilan to Salinas City, a distance of about 10 miles, without passing through Natividad and Santa Rita. The compensation named in the contract was paid to him for over three years and then was refused on the ground that he had not performed his contract as he had not carried the mails on his return trip through Natividad and Santa Rita. The Postmaster-General also deducted from other contracts for carrying the mails by him certain amounts, on account of moneys which had been paid him on the first-named contract, on account of his failure to carry the mails on the return trip over the same route; that he carried them on the outward trip.

Reported below, 22 Ct. Cl. 152.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Carr filed his petition against the United States in the Court of Claims on the 17th of February, 1885, averring that the Postmaster-General entered into a contract in writing with him in April, 1878, for carrying the mails of the United States from Salinas City, in the State of California, to Gabilan, in that State, and back from Gabilan to Salinas City, for the annual sum of $796, a copy of which contract he attached to his petition; that at the time of the letting of the contract, and for upwards of four years prior thereto, the mails were carried upon the route aforesaid, outward from Salinas to Santa Rita, a distance of three miles, and from Santa Rita to Natividad, a distance of four miles, and from the last-named place to Gabilan, a distance of eight miles, and on the return trip direct from Gabilan to Salinas, a distance of about ten miles, without passing through Natividad and Santa Rita; that he believed that the mode of transportation last aforesaid was established under the authority of the Postmaster-General for said route, and proposed to carry the mails upon said route for the compensation aforesaid, upon the understanding that the mails were, during the term of the contract, intended by said proposal to be carried in the manner before stated; that he commenced service under the contract July 1, 1878, and for four years, including the 30th day of June, 1882, carried the mails six times a week from Salinas, by way of Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, and back direct from Gabilan to Salinas, by a direct line, not passing through Natividad and Santa Rita; that the compensation was paid up to January 1, 1882, but not from the first of January to the first of July, 1883; and that the Postmaster-General has refused to pay petitioner the sum of $398, the amount of compensation due for the period last mentioned, upon the ground that petitioner had not performed his contract, inasmuch as he had not carried the mails from Gabilan to Salinas by way of Natividad and Santa Rita.

Petitioner further alleged that at the letting he presented proposals to the Postmaster-General for carrying the mails upon four other routes for the period of four years, namely, from July 1, 1878, to June 30, 1882, and obtained contracts therefor at certain compensation in the proposals named; that from the compensation due on the last-named contracts, $348.25 was withheld on account of the first-named contract, and there was also deducted from the four last contracts the sum of $35.92, for certain alleged delays in the transportation of the mail. Petitioner therefore prayed judgment for the sum of $782.17.

The findings of fact and conclusion of law are as follows:

"I.

"In April, 1878, the Postmaster-General and the claimant entered into a contract to carry the mails on route No. 46,118, in the State of California, from Salinas, by Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, and back, six times a week, for the annual sum of $796. The material portions of said contract are set forth in finding V.

"II.

"The mails were carried on said route under said contract for four years, commencing July 1, 1878, and ending June 30, 1882, as follows:

"The mails were carried by the claimant from Salinas, by way of Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, and back to Salinas, by a direct route from Gabilan to Salinas. The distance from Salinas, by Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan is 12 miles; the distance from Gabilan to Salinas by a direct route is 10 miles.

"That the said route was operated by the claimant since the year 1870, the mails being always carried in the same manner in which the same was carried by the claimant, namely, from Salinas, by way of Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, and from Gabilan to Salinas direct, and until the date of the certificate of inspection of the 12th of May, 1882, have always been certified as duly carried and paid for accordingly by the Postoffice Department. The provisions of the contract under which said service was performed were in all respects similar to the provisions of the contract sued on.

"III.

"For the failure of claimant to carry the mails via Santa Rita and Natividad, as aforesaid, from July 1, 1878, to March 31, 1882, the Postmaster-General, upon May 13, 1882, entered a deduction from his compensation of $746.25, which deduction equals one quarter of the total compensation fixed by the contract for whole service under it during the period covered by the alleged delinquency.

"There is no proof that any subsequent failure to said date of the claimant to carry the United States mail via Santa Rita and Natividad has ever come to the notice of the Postmaster-General or the Postoffice Department.

"IV.

"In the advertisement of November 1, 1877, inviting proposals for carrying the mails of the United States in certain States and Territories, the Postmaster-General invited bids for carrying said mails on the following route in California, to wit:

"'46,118. From Salinas, by Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, 15 miles and back, six times a week.

"'Leave Salinas daily, except Sunday, at 1 P. M.;

"'Arrive at Gabilan by 7 P. M.;

"'Leave Gabilan daily, except Sunday, at 6 A. M.;

"'Arrive at Salinas by 12 M.

"'Bond required with bid, $1,800.'

"V.

"'No. 46,118. $796.

"'This article of contract, made on the 15th of March, 1878, between the United States of America (acting in this behalf by the Postmaster-General) and J. D. Carr, contractor, and A. B. Jackson, of Salinas, Monterey County, California, and George Pomeroy, of Salinas, Monterey County, California, as his sureties, witnesseth: That whereas J. D. Carr has been accepted, according to law, as contractor for transporting the mail on route No. 46,118, from Salinas, Cal., by Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan and back, six times a week, at $796 per year, for and during the term beginning July 1, 1878, and ending June 30, 1882.

"'For which services, when performed, the said J. D. Carr, contractor, is to be paid by the United States the sum of $796 a year, to wit: Quarterly, in the months of November, February, May and August, through the postmasters on the route, or otherwise, at the option of the Postmaster-General; said pay to be subject, however, to be reduced or discontinued by the Postmaster-General, as hereinafter stipulated, or to be suspended in case of delinquency.

"'It is hereby stipulated and agreed by the said contractor and his sureties that the Postmaster-General may discontinue or extend this contract, change the schedule and termini of the route, and alter, increase, decrease or extend the service, in accordance with law, he allowing a pro rata increase of compensation for any additional service thereby required, or for increased speed, if the employment of additional stock or carriers is rendered necessary; and in case of decrease, curtailment or discontinuance of service, as a full indemnity to said contractor, one month's extra pay on the amount of service dispensed with, and a pro rata compensation for the service retained: Provided, however, That, in case of increased expedition, the contractor may, upon timely notice, relinquish the contract.

"'It is hereby also stipulated and agreed by the said contractor and his sureties as aforesaid that they shall forfeit—

"'1. The pay of a trip when it is not run, and, in addition, if no sufficient excuse for the failure is furnished, an amount not more than three times the pay of the trip.

"'2. At least one fourth of the pay of the trip when the running is so far behind time as to fail to make connection with a depending mail.

"'3. For violating any of the foregoing provisions touching the transmission of commercial intelligence more rapidly than by mail; or giving preference to passengers or freight over the mail or any portion thereof, or for leaving the same for their accommodation; or carrying, otherwise than in the mail, matter which should go by mail; or transporting persons engaged in so doing, with knowledge thereof, a penalty equal to a quarter's pay.

"4. For violating any other provision of this contract touching the carriage of the mails, or the time and manner thereof, without a satisfactory explanation of the delinquency, in due time, to the Postmaster-General, a penalty in his discretion. That these forfeitures may be increased into penalties of a higher amount, in the discretion of the Postmaster-General, according to the nature or frequency of the failure and the importance of the mail: Provided, That, except as herein otherwise specified, and except as provided by law, no penalty shall exceed three times the pay of a trip in each case."

* * * * *

[Duly signed, sealed and delivered.]

"VI.

" 'CERTIFICATE OF INSPECTION.

" 'POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,

" 'OFFICE OF THE SECOND ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,

" 'DIVISION OF INSPECTION,

" 'Washington, D. C., October 23, 1878.

" 'Sir: I hereby certify that the mails have been carried by contractors in accordance with provisions of contract, or orders, on routes stated herein by number in the State of California, without any failures or delinquencies, so far as shown by returns received, for the quarter ended September 30, 1878.

* * * "46,118 * * *

" 'J. L. French,

" 'Acting Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

" 'To the Auditor of the Treasury for the Postoffice Department.'

"On March 22, 1882, Second Assistant Postmaster-General addressed a letter to the postmaster at Natividad and received information from him on April 6, 1882, that the mail was not carried from Gabilan by way of Natividad and Santa Rita, and that such had been the practice since the present contractor had the contract. The postmaster at Santa Rita certified to the Postmaster-General that such had been the practice since he became postmaster. The date of the letters as to the continuance of the mode of carrying the mails was May 1, 1882.

"CONCLUSION OF LAW.

"Upon the foregoing facts the court determines, as a conclusion of law, that the claimant is entitled to recover the sum of $746.25."

Judgment was thereupon rendered in favor of the petitioner for $746.25, from which the defendant appealed to this court. The opinion of the Court of Claims will be found in 22 Ct. Cl. 152.

Messrs. W. H. H. Miller, Atty-Gen., and Heber J. May, Assistant Attorney, for appellant.

Messrs. A. J. Willard and Sam'l M. Lake for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The amount sued for was $782.17, of which the sum of $35.92, the aggregate of some small deductions upon other contracts, was disallowed by the Court of Claims, and that result accepted by the claimant.
182 U. S. U. S. Book 83.

It appears from the third finding that the Postmaster-General deducted from the claimant's compensation, under contract No. 46,118, $746.25, "which deduction equals one quarter of the total compensation fixed by the contract for whole service under it during the period covered by the alleged delinquency;" being the three years and three quarters from July 1, 1878, to March 31, 1882. It follows, then, that the contractor performed the service for the months of April, May and June, 1882, as required by the contract, as hereafter considered. As to $898 of the $746.25, that sum was withheld from the compensation under the contract in question, the last two quarters not having been paid, but the balance of $348.25 was deducted from moneys coming to the petitioner on other contracts, and he contends that it should not have been so deducted, because that amount had been voluntarily paid by the United States, and therefore could not be recovered back. But if the contractor was not entitled to $746.25 of the compensation provided by this contract, and if payments were made thereon up to the last two quarters by mistake, for service that had not been performed, or under such circumstances as brought them within section 4057 of the Revised Statutes, then the payments could be recovered back, and their deduction in part from other money coming to petitioner was proper in the settlement of the accounts between the parties.

Section 4057 is as follows:

"In all cases where money has been paid out of the funds of the Post-Office Department under the pretence that service has been performed therefor, when, in fact, such service has not been performed, or as additional allowance for increased service actually rendered, when the additional allowance exceeds the sum which, according to law, might rightfully have been allowed therefor, and in all other cases where money of the Department has been paid to any person in consequence of fraudulent representations, or by the mistake, collusion or misconduct of any officer or other employé in the postal service, the Postmaster-General shall cause suit to be brought to recover such wrong or fraudulent payment or excess with interest thereon."

This section was applied in United States v. Barlow, 132 U. S. 271, 281 [38:346, 851], and Mr. Justice Field, in delivering the opinion, quotes with approval the language of Baron Parke in Kelly v. Solari, 9 Mees. & W. 54, 58, that "where money is paid to another under the influence of a mistake, that is, upon the supposition that a specific fact is true, which would entitle the other to the money, but which fact is untrue, and the money would not have been paid if it had been known to the payer that the fact was untrue, an action will lie to recover it back, and it is against conscience to retain it;" and adds: "Reasons for the application of the rule are much more potent in the case of the contracts of the government than of contracts of individuals; for the government must necessarily rely upon the acts of agents, whose ignorance, carelessness, or unfaithfulness would otherwise often bind it, to the serious injury of its operations." Nothing more need be said on this point, and this brings us to the real question in the case.

Claimant contracted to carry the mails "from Salinas, by Santa Rita and Natividad, to Gabilan, 15 miles and back." The time to be taken on the trip was specified at six hours each way. There is no ambiguity in this contract, from which a doubt could arise as to whether the return route was to be identical with the outward route. Where places are designated as on the line of a mail route from one point to another and back, no reason is perceived for their omission on the return. There may be instances where retracing the road is not deemed important, or is impracticable in view of particular exigencies; but if so, the difference in route would be specified. And where the transportation is for a given number of miles and back, this does not mean the number named one way and an indefinite and less number the other.

The contractor was clearly required to return to Salinas from Gabilan by the same way he went to Gabilan from Salinas.

The Court of Claims did not take any other view of the language of the contract, but determined the case to the contrary upon the ground that the contract had been otherwise "construed by the claimant, and the responsible power of the defendants, and that construction became and was the contract at the time the services were performed covered by the period of deductions." This conclusion is reached as to the Post-Office Department upon the reasoning that as "it was the duty of the postmasters connected with the mail route at the termini to report to the Department the manner in which the service was performed, and the presumption is that they performed their duty and that the Department was advised, not only during the time of the performance of the contract in controversy, but the antecedent contracts, covering the same service embraced in contract No. 46,118," and as the evidence was "that on October 23, 1878, the acting second assistant postmaster-general certified to the auditor of the treasury for the Post-Office Department that for the quarter ending September 30, 1878, there had been no failure or delinquency in the execution of the contract upon the part of the contractor;" and as "it is safe to assume that for all preceding payments the same certificate was made, based upon reports furnished by the postmasters connected with route No. 46,118;" the acts of "the responsible officers of the Department being in possession of the same information and knowledge" as the postmasters, "commit the defendant to the construction of the agreement as placed upon it by the parties who performed the labor of its execution, and who were cognizant of the mode in which it was performed."

The Department did not direct or affirmatively permit the contractor to pursue the course he did, and if he could recover in whole or in part, upon the ground of an acquiescence equivalent to assent in a certain mode of dealing with the subject matter of the contract, the burden was on him to show knowledge or information by the Department of his conduct in the premises. No evidence to establish such knowledge or information having been adduced, the case was made to rest upon the presumption that the postmasters at the termini, where the schedules of the time of the arrival and departure of the mails were kept and registers thereof made and returned, were acquainted with the terms of the contract and claimant's noncompliance therewith, and, this being presumed, upon the further presumption that they must have reported the failure in performance to the Department.

In United States v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281, 284 [23: 707, 708] Mr. Justice Strong, speaking for the court, says:

"The presumption that public officers have done their duty, like the presumption of innocence, is undoubtedly a legal presumption; but it does not supply proof of a substantive fact. Best, in his Treatise on Evidence, section 300, says: 'The true principle intended to be asserted by the rule seems to be, that there is a general disposition in courts of justice to uphold judicial and other acts rather than to render them inoperative; and with this view, where there is general evidence of acts having been legally and regularly done, to dispense with proof of circumstances, strictly speaking, essential to the validity of those acts, and by which they were probably accompanied in most instances, although in others the assumption may rest on grounds of public policy.' Nowhere is the presumption held to be a substitute for proof of an independent and material fact."

Section 3849 of the Revised Statutes provides that "every postmaster shall promptly report to the Postmaster-General every delinquency, neglect or malpractice of the contractors, their agents or carriers, which comes to his knowledge."

By none of the findings of fact is it shown that the delinquency in question ever came to the knowledge of the postmasters at the termini of this mail route. But under finding VI. it appears that "on March 22, 1882, second assistant postmaster-general addressed a letter to the postmaster at Natividad and received information from him on April 6, 1882, that the mail was not carried from Gabilan by way of Natividad and Santa Rita, and that such had been the practice since the present contractor had the contract. The postmaster at Santa Rita certified to the Postmaster-General that such had been the practice since he became postmaster. The date of the letters as to the continuance of the mode of carrying the mails was May 1, 1882;" and from finding III., that the Postmaster-General instantly repudiated that manner of carrying the mails, and that they were not so carried for the remaining quarter under the contract.

Of course the postmasters at Santa Rita and Natividad knew that the mails did not come back through those places, but it does not follow that they were aware that the contractor was obliged so to carry them. Indeed, as they made no effort to have this state of things remedied, so far as appears, it is rather to be presumed that they were not aware that it was the result of the delinquency of the contractor.

The fact of knowledge on the part of the postmasters of the delinquency, from which the inference is drawn that they reported it, was a fact to be proven and not to be presumed. If they knew of the delinquency it was undoubtedly their duty to report it, but it is not to be assumed that they did report it, without some evidence of such knowledge; and upon this record the irresistible inference is that the delinquency, if reported, would not have been permitted to continue.

The certificate of the second assistant postmaster-general is dated October 23, 1878, and states that the mails had been carried "without any failures or delinquencies, so far as shown by returns received, for the quarter ended September 30, 1878." As the contract was a plain one, and was not performed according to its terms, we think this certificate indicates clearly that the "returns received" did not show the nonperformance. So far from strengthening the alleged presumption that the postmasters reported the facts as they existed, its effect is to the contrary. What they did report, in fact, is not shown; and, inasmuch as under finding VI. no other inference can be drawn than that the first information that the Postmaster-General had that the mail was not carried from Gabilan by way of Natividad and Santa Rita, was April 6, 1882, we cannot accept the conclusion that the responsible officers of the Department were in possession of information and knowledge of the conduct of the contractor before that time, and acquiesced in the manner in which he carried the mails during the period in question, or during the preceding years, in respect to which it is found that he so operated the route under a similar contract.

We can find nothing in the findings to justify us in holding that the Department paid this claimant the full measure of his compensation prior to March 31, 1882, with knowledge of the manner in which he was performing the work, or that the Department ever put the interpretation upon the contract which is now contended for, or induced the contractor to enter into the contract by reason of any such interpretation on its part. The deduction of $746.25 was properly made, and the conclusion of law on the facts found was erroneous.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded with directions to enter judgment for the United States.

THOMAS H. MILLER ET AL., Appls.,

v.

THE TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

MARTHA R. WORRALL ET AL., Appls.,

v.

THE TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY ET AL.

WILLIAM DUNLAP ET AL., Appls.,

v.

THE TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILWAY
COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 662-693.)

Texas' decree—contingent limitations and executory devises, when bound by decree—abandoned location of Texas land—rights of subsequent locator—compliance with statute—possession as notice—Rutledge title—land certificates, chattels—effect of location—estoppel by warranty in deed—Statute of Limitations.

done location of Texas land—rights of subsequent locator—compliance with statute—possession as notice—Rutledge title—land certificates, chattels—effect of location—estoppel by warranty in deed—Statute of Limitations.

1. A decree of the district court of a county of Texas having the proper jurisdiction, declaring a will of lands in Texas to be void, is a valid decree, where all the necessary parties were before the court when it was rendered.
2. Contingent limitations and executory devises to persons not in being may be bound by a decree against a person claiming a vested estate of inheritance; but a person in being claiming under an executory devise, not subject to any preceding vested estate of inheritance by which it may be defeated, must be made a party to a suit affecting his rights.
3. A settler may abandon one location of land in Texas and adopt another, and the land in the abandoned location then becomes public land, subject to location by other parties.
4. A subsequent locator having actual notice of a prior location will be postponed to the superior rights of the prior locator, although the subsequent location has passed into a patent.
5. The failure of the prior locator to comply with a statute requiring the survey to be returned to the land office within eight months under a penalty of being void, inures to the benefit of the State and not to the benefit of the subsequent locator.
6. Where one is in notorious possession of land, no other person can lay any new location upon it, without being charged with full knowledge of the claim of ownership of the possessor.
7. As between the parties in this suit, the Rutledge title must prevail, and it is a sufficient protection to the defendants against the title set up in the cross-bills.
8. Texas land certificates are chattels, and may be sold by parol agreement and delivery, whereby the purchaser acquires a right to locate the land and procure a patent in the name of the grantee, but for his own use, he becoming thereby the equitable owner of the land located.
9. A location of lands under such a certificate, by the owner or his agent, gives a title and possession good against the State and all other persons claiming by inferior title.
10. In Texas, the clause in a deed "to have and to hold to the grantee, his heirs and assigns forever, free from the just claim or claims of any and all persons whomsoever, claiming or to claim the same," is a general warranty and carries to the grantee, by estoppel, a subsequent title which comes by inheritance to the grantor.
11. In that State, where the Statute of Limitations has commenced to run against a party, it is not suspended by his death, and the period of limitation cannot be extended by the connection of one disability with another. The Statute of Limitations is a bar to the claims set up by the complainants, both in the original and in the cross-bills.

[Nos. 787, 867, 868.]

Submitted Jan. 2, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

APPEALS from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas dismissing the original and cross-bills; the bill being filed to maintain the alleged equitable title to land by Thomas H. Miller and others, claiming as devisees of Rutledge, and the cross-bills being filed by Dunlap and Worrall and others. Affirmed.

The action was brought originally in the District Court of Tarrant County, Texas, as an action of trespass to try title and to recover possession of 320 acres of land in the City of Fort Worth. Much of the land is laid out in streets and covered with buildings, and about 100 acres of it is occupied by tracks, station-houses, depots and shops of railroad companies. The suit was removed into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas. In that court a repleader took place on the equity side of the court. Thomas H. Miller and others, claiming as devisees of Rutledge, filed a bill to maintain their alleged equitable title to the land and made the other parties defendants, who all filed answers; and the intervenors, Dunlap and others, and Worrall and others, also filed separate cross-bills, to which the other parties filed answers. The land in question, when the title set up by the complainants originated, to wit, in 1852 and 1868, was of small value, but, having become the site of a portion of the City of Fort Worth, it has acquired a very great value.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. G. Morris, for Miller et al., appellants:

In proceedings in rem, notice of some kind, either general or special, actual or constructive, is essential to the exercise of jurisdiction.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274 (23: 914); Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 503 (23: 398); Woodruff v. Taylor, 20 Vt. 65.

The rules of common law and equity as to parties to suits apply in this State except in cases governed by statutes.

Whiting v. Turley, Dall. Dec. 454; Jackson v. Alexander, 8 Tex. 109; Denison v. League, 16 Tex. 399; Connell v. Chandler, 11 Tex. 249; Allison v. Shilling, 27 Tex. 450.

The rules of common law and equity as to the form and effect of judgments are administered in this State, in the absence of statutes governing a subject.

Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 300; McCoy v. Crawford, 9 Tex. 353; Hulme v. Janes, 6 Tex. 242; Morrison v. Loftin, 44 Tex. 22.

The executor, if sued as such in a suit to contest the will, did not so represent these plaintiffs' devisees as to bind them by the judgment.

Moore v. Guest, 8 Tex. 117; Parker v. Parker, 10 Tex. 83; Hagerty v. Bagerty, 12 Tex. 456; Vickery v. Hobbs, 21 Tex. 570; Becton v. Alexander, 27 Tex. 659; Franks v. Chapman, 61 Tex. 576.

In suits by or against the trustee for the recovery of the trust property, the beneficiary is a necessary party.

Boles v. Linthicum, 48 Tex. 224; Huffman v. Cartwright, 44 Tex. 296; Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 300; Holland v. Baker, 3 Hare, 72; Woodward v. Wood, 19 Ala. 213; Van Doren v. Robinson, 16 N. J. Eq. 256; Richards v. Richards, 9 Gray, 313; Ward v. Hollins, 14 Md. 158; 1 Daniell, Ch. Pr. (5th ed.) 220, and note; Story, Eq. Pl. § 207; 2 Perry, Trusts, § 878.

All devisees and legatees, as well as the executors, are necessary parties to a suit to set aside a will, and they would not be bound by the judgment unless they were made parties.

McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 340 (28: 1015); Reformed Presbyterian Church v. Nelson, 85 Ohio St. 642; Holt v. Lamb, 17 Ohio St. 384; McMaken v. McMaken, 18 Ala. 576; Brown v. Riffin, 94 Ill. 560; Vance v. Beam, 2 Dana (Ky.) 155; Rogers v. Thomas, 1 B. Mon. 890; Eddie v. Parke, 31 Mo. 513; Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. 340; Connolly v. Connolly, 32 Gratt. 657; Pomeroy, Remedies and Remedial Rights, § 264; Haws, Parties to Actions, § 22.

No person is bound by a judgment, in a collateral proceeding or elsewhere, to which he has not become a party in person or by representative.

Hulme v. Janes, 6 Tex. 242; Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 300; McCoy v. Crawford, 9 Tex. 353; Morrison v. Loftin, 44 Tex. 23.

William Rutledge did not represent these plaintiffs in said suit.

McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 340 (28: 1015); Lanchester v. Thompson, 5 Madd. 413; Calvert, Parties, 44, 169; Monarque v. Monarque, 80 N. Y. 320; Downin v. Sprecher, 35 Md. 474.

The survey in question presumed to be made by authority of the owner of the certificate until the contrary is shown.

Poor v. Boyce, 12 Tex. 440; Hollingsworth v. Holshausen, 25 Tex. 628; Steel v. Finley, 8 Yeates (Pa.) 169; Galt v. Galloway, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 332 (7: 876).

The forfeiture, if any, could only be enforced by due process of law.

Snider v. Melvin, 60 Tex. 487; Hamilton v. Avery, 20 Tex. 612; Sherwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex. Supp. 408; Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 452; Burleson v. Durham, 46 Tex. 157; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 44 (22: 551); Ruch v. Rock Island, 97 U. S. 693 (24: 1101).

No presumption from long possession against remaindermen.

Arnold v. Stevens, 24 Pick. 106; Salmons v. Davis, 29 Mo. 181; Wells v. Prince, 9 Mass. 508; Wallingford v. Hearl, 15 Mass. 471; Heath v. White, 5 Conn. 228; May v. Hill, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 313; Holt v. Lamb, 17 Ohio St. 374; Jackson v. Schoonmaker, 4 Johns. 390; Bradford v. Caldwell, 2 Head (Tenn.) 496; Williams v. Conrad, 11 Humph. 412.

No limitation against these plaintiffs while they were remaindermen, during the continuation of the life estate.

Holt v. Lamb, supra; Pendley v. Madison, 83 Ala. 484; McCorry v. King, 3 Humph. 267; McLtvain v. Porter (Ky.) 7 S. W. Rep. 309; Jackson v. Schoonmaker and Bradford v. Caldwell, supra.

If plaintiffs ever acquired the life tenant's right of entry, they also acquired another right of entry at her death which is not barred.

Hartley's Digest, art. 168, §§ 59, 60; Stevens v. Winship, 1 Pick. 318; Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 321; Hunt v. Burns, 2 Salk. 422.

The defendants' claim under the Rutledge title was not such "title or color of title" as would support the three years' Statute of Limitations.

Marsh v. Weir, 21 Tex. 97; Hussey v. Moser, 70 Tex. 42; Castro v. Wurzbach, 18 Tex. 128; Brownson v. Scanlan, 59 Tex. 222; Long v. Brennehan, 59 Tex. 210; Cannon v. Vaughan, 12 Tex. 399; Newman v. Dallas, 26 Tex. 642;

Smith v. Power, 28 Tex. 80; Thompson v. Cragg, 24 Tex. 582.

A deed to the wife's separate property without her separate acknowledgment is null and void, and will not support the three years' Statute of Limitations.

Berry v. Donley, 26 Tex. 787; Fitzgerald v. Turner, 43 Tex. 79; Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623.

No warranty, only non-claim, deed.

Pike v. Galvin, 29 Me. 185; Partridge v. Paten, 33 Me. 483; Loomis v. Pingree, 43 Me. 314; Jackson v. Bradford, 4 Wend. 622; Read v. Fogg, 60 Me. 481; Blanchard v. Brooks, 12 Pick. 47; Patterson v. Pease, 5 Ohio, 190; Kercheval v. Triplett, 1 A. K. Marsh. 493; Dougal v. Fryer, 3 Mo. 40; Raymond v. Holden, 2 Cush. 264; Wallace v. Miner, 6 Ohio, 370; Connor v. McMurray, 2 Allen, 204.

No estoppel from setting up the truth, when the truth does not contravene the deed or acts in making it.

Wheelock v. Henshaw, 19 Pick. 341; Cuthbertson v. Irving, 4 Hurl. & N. 742; Pelletreau v. Jackson, 11 Wend. 110, 118; Pargeter v. Harris, 7 Q. B. 708.

A survey by a valid land certificate is a right which the State could not take away.

Sherrwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex. Supp. 408; Wright v. Hawkins, 28 Tex. 471; Burleson v. Durham, 46 Tex. 157; Patrick v. Nance, 26 Tex. 301; Snider v. Methvin, 60 Tex. 499.

The United States court, after removal of the case to it, had power to grant full relief to plaintiffs, if they have shown a good equitable title.

Dewey v. West Fairmont Gas Coal Co. 123 U. S. 329 (81: 179); Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 111 U. S. 506 (28: 499); Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276 (28: 145).

Relief should be to compel conveyance to plaintiffs of the legal title and delivery of possession.

White v. Cannon, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 443 (18: 923); Silver v. Ladd, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 219 (19: 138); Meador v. Norton, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 442 (20: 184).

Defendants not entitled to affirmative relief without filing cross-bill.

Ford v. Douglas, 46 U. S. 5 How. 148 (12: 89); Bronson v. LaCrosse & M. R. Co. 67 U. S. 2 Black, 528 (17: 359); Hubbard v. Turner, 2 McLean, 519; Morgan v. Tipton, 3 McLean, 389; Chapin v. Walker, 6 Fed. Rep. 794, 2 McCrary, 175.

Mr. J. M. Morphis, for Martha R. Worrall et al., appellants:

The acknowledgment, for lack of any certificate of privity examination of Adaline S. Worrall, is neither in form nor substance a compliance with the Texas statutes, and the deed to which it is annexed is therefore wholly ineffectual to pass the title to the property attempted to be conveyed, which is recited to be the sole and separate property of Adaline S. Worrall, and is absolutely void.

Berry v. Donley, 26 Tex. 787; Fitzgerald v. Turner, 43 Tex. 79; Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623; Looney v. Adamson, 48 Tex. 619.

The court erred in holding that the heirs of I. R. Worrall were estopped by the warranty or assurance clause of the deed.

Schaffner v. Grutzmacher, 6 Iowa, 137; Childs

v. McChesney, 20 Iowa, 431; Blain v. Harrison, 11 Ill. 386; Pike v. Galvin, 29 Me. 185; Partridge v. Paten, 33 Me. 483; Loomis v. Pingree, 43 Me. 314; Jackson v. Bradford, 4 Wend. 622; Read v. Fogg, 60 Me. 481; Blanchard v. Brooks, 12 Pick. 47; Patterson v. Pease, 5 Ohio, 190; Kercheval v. Triplett, 1 A. K. Marsh. 493; Dougal v. Fryer, 3 Mo. 40; Raymond v. Holden, 2 Cush. 264; Wallace v. Miner, 6 Ohio, 370; Connor v. McMurray, 2 Allen, 204; Strawn v. Strawn, 50 Ill. 33; Jackson v. Vanderheyden, 17 Johns. 167; Griffin v. Sheffield, 38 Miss. 359; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. 543.

Mr. Sawnie Robertson, for Dunlap et al., appellants:

Where the present enjoyment of a chattel involves a consumption of the thing itself any future limitation over is void.

Annin v. Vandoren, 14 N. J. Eq. 187; Gray, Restraints on Alienation, §§ 53, 58; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 546; Washb. Real Prop. 724; Smith v. Bell, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 68 (8: 822).

The Millers, appellants, are bound by the order of the District Court of Gonzales County setting aside the probate of said will.

Newson v. Chrisman, 9 Tex. 117; Franks v. Chapman, 60 Tex. 50, 61 Tex. 577; Parker v. Parker, 10 Tex. 36; Moore v. Guest, 8 Tex. 117.

The failure to deny material averments is an admission of the facts contained in such averments, and such admission is conclusive against the pleader.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 605; Woods v. Morrell, 1 Johns. Ch. 107; Hunter v. Bradford, 3 Fla. 285; Barrow v. Bailey, 5 Fla. 23; Welcker v. Price, 2 Lea (Tenn.) 667; Robinson v. Stewart, 10 N. Y. 194; Jackson v. Hart, 11 Wend. 349; Hoboken Sav. Bank v. Beckman, 33 N. J. Eq. 53; Sayre v. Fredericks, 16 N. J. Eq. 205; Parkman v. Welch, 19 Pick. 234; Hudgins v. Kemp, 61 U. S. 20 How. 52 (15: 855).

The evidence clearly establishes an abandonment of the survey.

Johnson v. Eldridge, 49 Tex. 507; House v. Talbot, 51 Tex. 463; McKinney v. Grassmeyer, 51 Tex. 382; Wyllie v. Wynne, 26 Tex. 44; Booth v. Upshur, 26 Tex. 73; Frederick v. Hamilton, 38 Tex. 388.

The heirs of John Childress—John and George—taking under the legislative grant of the State of Texas, would take all of the title to the lands secured by virtue of that certificate.

McKinney v. Brown, 51 Tex. 94; Causici v. La Coste, 20 Tex. 269; Todd v. Masterson, 61 Tex. 619.

A tenant in common of a land certificate has a right to make a location for his own benefit to the extent of his interest.

Parker v. Spencer, 61 Tex. 155; Farris v. Gilbert, 50 Tex. 356; Glasscock v. Hughes, 55 Tex. 479; Galveston City Co. v. Scott, 42 Tex. 535.

The Statute as to an acknowledgment of a deed by a married woman has been repeatedly construed by the Supreme Court of Texas.

Cross v. Everts, 28 Tex. 532; Berry v. Donley, 26 Tex. 746; Langton v. Marshall, 59 Tex. 296; Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623; Looney v. Adamson, 48 Tex. 621.

The Statute of Limitations does not commence to run against a party claiming under the government until the right accrues to the claimant.

Smith v. Power, 23 Tex. 29; Lindsey v. Miller, 81 U. S. 6 Pet. 666-673 (8: 538); Chiles v. Calk, 4 Bibb, 354; Kimbro v. Hamilton, 28 Tex. 560.

When one holding a deed to land described by metes leases part of said land to a tenant by specified metes, then the possession of said tenant is only co-extensive with the bounds specified in the lease, and not with the whole tract.

Texas Land Co. v. Williams, 51 Tex. 61; Cunningham v. Frandteen, 26 Tex. 34; Read v. Allen, 68 Tex. 158.

The possession of one tenant in common is the possession of all.

Moody v. Butler, 68 Tex. 210; Towery v. Henderson, 60 Tex. 297; Teal v. Terrell, 58 Tex. 262.

The recital of one deed in another binds the parties and those who claim under them by matters subsequent.

Carver v. Jackson, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 82 (7: 761); Crane v. Morris, 81 U. S. 6 Pet. 611 (8: 514); Hardy v. De Leon, 5 Tex. 244; Kimbro v. Hamilton, 28 Tex. 561; Peters v. Clements, 46 Tex. 115; Sprig v. Bank of Mt. Pleasant, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 264 (9: 416); Deery v. Cray, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 802 (18: 655).

When a conveyance of land, purchased with community funds, or the separate funds of a husband, is made to the wife by the husband or by his direction, the presumption as between the husband and wife and against others not claiming as bona fide purchasers, is that the conveyance was intended as a gift to the wife.

Smith v. Strahan, 16 Tex. 314; Story v. Marshall, 24 Tex. 305; Smith v. Boquet, 27 Tex. 507; Peters v. Clements, 46 Tex. 114.

The cross-bill filed by William Dunlap and his co-appellants was proper, and the relief prayed should have been granted.

8 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. 416, § 1877, notes 2 and 3; Schenck v. Peay, 1 Woolw. 175-184; Freeman, Co-tenancy, §§ 504, 515.

Mr. A. S. Lathrop, for the Texas & Pacific Railway Company et al., appellees:

Unlocated land certificates, being personal property, are the subject of verbal sale and delivery, and such sales are not within the Statute of Frauds and need not be in writing.

Randon v. Barton, 4 Tex. 292; Cox v. Bray, 28 Tex. 247; Johnson v. Newman, 43 Tex. 640; Parker v. Spencer, 61 Tex. 164; Campbell v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. 2 Woods, 270, 271; Stone v. Brown, 54 Tex. 334.

Wm. Rutledge was "vested with a remainder over in fee."

Croxall v. Shererd, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 287 (18: 579); Buford v. Holkiman, 10 Tex. 572.

When the owner of the first vested estate of inheritance is a party to the proceedings, the decree is binding upon the remainderman.

Pomeroy, Rem. § 262; Freeman, Judgments, (8d ed.) § 172; Redmond v. Collins, 4 Dev. L. 430, 27 Am. Dec. 223, 224; Meade v. Rutledge, 11 Tex. 44, 45; Thomas v. Jones, 10 Tex. 54, 55; McAnear v. Epperson, 54 Tex. 223; Wheeler v. Ahrenbeak, 54 Tex. 536; Jones v. Parker, 67 Tex. 78.

A judgment of a domestic court of competent jurisdiction upon a subject matter within the ordinary scope of its power and proceedings, is entitled to absolute verity in a collateral action.

Fitch v. Boyer, 51 Tex. 336; Murchison v.

White, 54 Tex. 82, 83; Tennell v. Breedlove, 54 Tex. 543; Treadway v. Eastburn, 57 Tex. 213; Mikeeka v. Blum, 68 Tex. 44.

The probate proceedings were proceedings in rem, not subject to collateral attack, and binding upon and conclusive of the rights of complainants and all other persons.

Big. Est. (4th ed.) 211; 2 Redf. Wills. (3d ed.) *63, and note 39; Steele v. Renn, 50 Tex. 481; Hodges v. Baughman, 8 Yerg. 186; Scott v. Calvit, 3 How. (Miss.) 143, 153; State v. McGlynn, 20 Cal. 271; 3 Redf. Wills, 63; Orr v. O'Brien, 55 Tex. 156; Box v. Lawrence, 14 Tex. 555; Franks v. Chapman, 61 Tex. 579, 580; Parker v. Parker, 10 Tex. 86; Wells, Res Adjudicata, 340, § 426; Singleton v. Singleton, 8 B. Mon. 356; Ballou v. Hudson, 13 Gratt. 682; Irwin v. Scriber, 18 Cal. 504-507; Deslonde v. Darrington, 29 Ala. 95; Woodruff v. Taylor, 20 Vt. 65; Wooley v. Russ, 24 La. Ann. 482; Hunt v. Acers, 28 Ala. 580; Wills v. Spraggins, 3 Gratt. 555.

Bringing a suit to set aside a will is an election to claim against it.

George v. Bussing, 15 B. Mon. 559; Little v. Birdwell, 27 Tex. 688; 2 Redf. Wills (3d ed.) *253, § 66.

If the devisee of property for life declines to accept the devise, it vests in possession in those to whom it is limited in remainder.

Jarman, Wills (5th ed. by Bigelow) *574; Yeaton v. Roberts, 28 N. H. 459; Adams v. Gillespie, 2 Jones, Eq. 244; Macknet v. Macknet, 24 N. J. Eq. 277; 2 Washb. Real Prop. (4th ed.) top p. 719; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 396; Wms. Real Prop. *207; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 554, § 22; Holderby v. Walker, 3 Jones, Eq. 46; Thompson v. Hoop, 6 Ohio St. 480; Holt v. Lamb, 17 Ohio St. 387.

The legal title draws to itself the seisin and possession.

Whitehead v. Foley, 28 Tex. 289; Horton v. Crawford, 10 Tex. 888.

Under the Texas statutes, disabilities cannot be accumulated.

White v. Latimer, 12 Tex. 62; Thompson v. Cragg, 24 Tex. 588; Ford v. Clements, 13 Tex. 597; Huntton v. Nichols, 55 Tex. 217; Becton v. Alexander, 27 Tex. 659; Angell, Lim. (3d ed.) § 479.

The Statute begins to run from the time the cause of action first accrued.

Horton v. Crawford, 10 Tex. 890; Erhard v. Hearne, 47 Tex. 478; Harrison Machine Works v. Reigor, 64 Tex. 89; McDonald v. McGuire, 8 Tex. 369; McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 407 (28: 1086); Connolly v. Hammond, 58 Tex. 17; Thomas v. White, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 177; Holloway v. Holloway, 30 Tex. 175; Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 417.

The possession of Daggett was constructive notice of the nature of his claim; the registration of his deed from Johnson was notice. Such possession was notice to appellants and all other persons.

Woodson v. Collins, 56 Tex. 175; Heath v. White, 5 Conn. 228; Jackson v. Schoonmaker, 4 Johns. 390; Woodson v. Smith, 1 Head, 277.

The mere failure to sue, or to enter during the time limited, does not bar the title; but there must have been adverse possession, continued for the statutory length of time.

Neddy v. State, 8 Yerg. 249; Smith v. Mc

Call, 2 Humph. 168; Angell, Lim. (3d ed.) § 369, and note 4.

The saving of the Statute is only to those to whom the right of action first accrues.

Huntton v. Nichols, 55 Tex. 217; Becton v. Alexander, 27 Tex. 659; Angell, Lim. (3d ed.) § 479.

In a contest between two different grantees, both claiming under patents from the State, the junior patent will be color of title sufficient to support the three years' Statute of Limitations against the elder patent.

League v. Rogan, 59 Tex. 432, 438; Galan v. Goliad, 32 Tex. 776; Stafford v. King, 30 Tex. 277; Whitehead v. Foley, 28 Tex. 12.

A deed from a tenant in common to a specific portion of a tract held in common, is not void.

Arnold v. Cauble, 49 Tex. 533; Fitch v. Boyer, 51 Tex. 347; Camoron v. Thurmond, 56 Tex. 33; Rutherford v. Stamper, 60 Tex. 447.

Such a deed is color of title, and will be sufficient to support the plea.

League v. Rogan, 59 Tex. 429; Pearson v. Burditt, 26 Tex. 157; Wofford v. McKinna, 23 Tex. 43; Downs v. Porter, 54 Tex. 59.

However defective the title under which the party in possession claims, it is nevertheless such color of title as to make the possession adverse.

Angell, Lim. § 404; Pillow v. Roberts, 54 U. S. 18 How. 472 (14: 228); Wright v. Mattison, 59 U. S. 18 How. 56 (15: 283); Beverly v. Burke, 9 Ga. 448; Mossely v. Withie, 26 Tex. 726; Weisinger v. Murphy, 2 Head, 679; Wright v. Kleyla, 2 West. Rep. 217, 104 Ind. 228; Freeman, Co-Ten. and Part. (2d ed.) §§ 197, 224, and note 2; Wood, Lim. 526, § 259, note 10; Angell, Lim. (3d ed.) § 404, note 1; Downs v. Porter, 54 Tex. 59; Erhard v. Hearne, 47 Tex. 478.

Daggett's possession was continuous and extended to the limits of the boundaries, as described in the deed under which he held.

Cantagrel v. Von Lupin, 58 Tex. 578; Whitehead v. Foley, 28 Tex. 285; Parker v. Baines, 65 Tex. 608, 609.

The demand of appellants was stale, and on that ground a court of equity would refuse to enforce it.

Hume v. Beale, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 336 (21: 602); Russell v. Transylvania University, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 432 (4: 129); McKnight v. Taylor, 42 U. S. 1 How. 161 (11: 86); Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611 (24: 855); Carlisle v. Hart, 27 Tex. 350; Connolly v. Hammond, 51 Tex. 648; Parker v. Spencer, 61 Tex. 155.

Worrall's deed of the land in controversy, belonging to the community estate of himself and his wife, was sufficient to convey, even though the property stood of record in the name of his wife.

Poe v. Brownrigg, 55 Tex. 138; Pisley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 131, 132.

If a deed is void only as against one of two grantors, but not as to the other, as in case of a deed of the wife's land by the husband and wife, with a defective privy examination of the wife, the deed will be effectual as an estoppel on the grantor as to whom it is valid, though not as to the other.

Irion v. Mills, 41 Tex. 315; Big. Estoppel, (4th ed.) 340, and note 4; Freeman, Co-Ten. and Part. (2d ed.) § 207.

132 U. S.

If Worrall had no interest in the land, his subsequent interest in the same, as against the heirs of the grantor, passed by estoppel or rebutter to the grantee.

Big. Estoppel, (4th ed.) 387, 388; Hannon v. Christopher, 34 N. J. Eq. 459; Cocks v. Rogan, 5 Ark. 698; McWilliams v. Nisly, 2 Serg. & R. 517; 3 Washb. Real Prop. (4th ed.) 104; Ruffin v. Johnson, 5 Heisk. 604; Rawle, Cov. (4th ed.) 445, 446; Nixon v. Carco, 28 Miss. 426; Doyle v. Peerless Petroleum Co. 44 Barb. 240; Richardson v. Levi, 67 Tex. 359; Sedg. & Waite, Trial of Title, § 850, and note 1; Gould v. West, 32 Tex. 352, 353; Harrison v. Boring, 44 Tex. 262.

The law presumes that whatever is acquired during marriage is community property.

Wright v. Hays, 10 Tex. 130; De Blane v. Lynch, 28 Tex. 25; Cooke v. Bremond, 27 Tex. 457; Lott v. Keach, 5 Tex. 394; Johnson v. Burford, 39 Tex. 242.

Recitals in a deed bind all persons who are parties thereto; but this rule does not extend to that which is merely descriptive, or an averment which is not essential.

Osborne v. Endicott, 6 Cal. 149, 65 Am. Dec. 499; Den v. Chaffin, 3 Dev. L. 108, 22 Am. Dec. 712; Joeckel v. Easton, 11 Mo. 118, 47 Am. Dec. 143, 144; Spicer v. Spicer, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 112; McGeary's Appeal, 72 Pa. 365.

It is an indispensable requisite of an estoppel that it must be reciprocal; "both parties must be bound, or neither is estopped."

Schuhman v. Garratt, 16 Cal. 100; Lansing v. Montgomery, 2 Johns. 383.

The property was purchased during the coverture, with community funds, and belongs to the community, and not the separate estate of Mrs. Worrall.

Zorn v. Turner, 45 Tex. 521; McDaniel v. Weiss, 53 Tex. 259; Chapman v. Allen, 15 Tex. 282; Parker v. Chance, 11 Tex. 513; Huston v. Curt, 8 Tex. 240; Wallace v. Campbell, 54 Tex. 89.

The mere direction of the husband to make the conveyance in the name of the wife, does not rebut the legal presumption.

Smith v. Strahan, 16 Tex. 316; Higgins v. Johnson, 20 Tex. 390; Mitchell v. Marr, 28 Tex. 331; Story v. Marshall, 24 Tex. 305; Cooke v. Bremond, 27 Tex. 457; Baker v. Baker, 55 Tex. 577; Parker v. Coop, 60 Tex. 118; 1 Perry, Trusts, (3d ed.) § 133.

Daggett did not recognize the superior title to be in Worrall by purchasing from him.

Freeman, Co-Ten. and Part. (2d ed.) § 106; Towery v. Henderson, 60 Tex. 297.

Equity may presume a partition.

Freeman, Co-Ten. and Part. (2d ed.) § 408. A partition of lands may be made orally.

Huffman v. Cartwright, 44 Tex. 301; Johnson v. Johnson, 65 Tex. 87.

The right of the owner of the certificate to land attaches at the date of his file and application, and cannot be defeated by the act of the officer.

De Montel v. Speed, 53 Tex. 339; Hamilton v. Avery, 20 Tex. 635; Sherwood v. Fleming, 25 Tex. Supp. 408; Milam County v. Bateman, 54 Tex. 163; Gullett v. O'Connor, 54 Tex. 408.

A patent issued on a junior location is voidable at the suit of the party having the prior right.

League v. Rogan, 59 Tex. 427; Decourt v. Sprout, 66 Tex. 368.

Intervenor appellants are each and all of them barred of their right of recovery, by reason of the different Statutes of Limitation, and because their demand is stale.

Hunton v. Nichols, 55 Tex. 217; Holloway v. Holloway, 80 Tex. 175; Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 417; Watson v. Hopkins, 27 Tex. 642; Whitehead v. Foley, 28 Tex. 284.

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was originally an action of trespass to try title, brought in March, 1884, in the District Court of Tarrant County, Texas, by William L. Foster and his children, William D. Foster and others, against Elizabeth J. Daggett and her husband, E. B. Daggett, and The Texas and Pacific Railway Company, The Missouri Pacific Railway Company, The Fort Worth and Denver Railway Company and The Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fé Railway Company, to recover possession of 320 acres of land in the City of Fort Worth. Much of the land in question is laid out in streets and covered with buildings, and nearly 100 acres of it is occupied by the said Railroad Companies, or some of them, for their tracks, station-houses, freight depots, shops, etc. The plaintiffs claimed title as heirs at law of one Thomas P. Rutledge, through Eliza A. Foster, wife of William L. Foster, and mother of the other plaintiffs, who had been the wife and widow of said Rutledge, and mother of his only son, deceased. The defendants filed answers, claiming the lands under an alleged purchase from Rutledge of his head-right certificate under which the lands were located, and also under an independent title derived by purchase from the heirs of one John Childress; and also by long and undisturbed possession. No patent for the lands had ever been granted on the Rutledge title, which was older than the Childress title; but a patent was granted on the latter in June, 1868; so that the various claims under the Rutledge title were of an equitable character, which, in the Texas jurisprudence, is equally available with the legal title.

In October, 1884, Thomas H. Miller and others, children of one Alsey S. Miller, intervened in the suit as plaintiffs, claiming the same land as devisees of Thomas P. Rutledge.

On the 20th of April, 1885, William Dunlap and others filed their petition in the suit, claiming one-half interest in the lands as heirs at law of Adaline S. Worrall, wife of one I. R. Worrall; and on the 28d of March, 1886, Martha R. Worrall and others intervened as plaintiffs, claiming the other half interest in the lands as heirs at law of said Adaline, through the said I. R. Worrall. The Dunlaps and the Worralls claim under the same right, and allege that Adaline S. Worrall became entitled to the lands by purchase from the heirs of John Childress, and that, on her dying without issue in 1870, her brothers and sisters, represented by William Dunlap and others, inherited one half of her interest, and her husband, I. R. Worrall, represented by his mother, Martha R. Worrall, and others, inherited the other half.

In December, 1885, the original plaintiffs,

William L. Foster and his children, took a nonsuit, and were dismissed out of the case, leaving three sets of claimants to the land, to wit, (1) the original defendants, the Daggetts and the Railroad Companies, who were in possession, claiming under all the titles; (2) Thomas H. Miller and others, claiming as devisees of Thomas P. Rutledge; (3) the Dunlaps and the Worralls, claiming under John Childress, through Adaline S. Worrall.

In March Term, 1886, the last set of claimants, William Dunlap and others, and Martha R. Worrall and others, who were citizens of other States than Texas, removed the proceedings into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas; and in that court a repleader took place on the equity side of the court. Thomas H. Miller and others, claiming as devisees of Rutledge, filed a bill to maintain their alleged equitable title to the land, and made the other parties defendants, who all filed answers; and the intervenors, Dunlap and others and Worrall and others, also filed separate cross-bills, to which the other parties filed answers. The court below dismissed both the original and cross-bills and this appeal is brought from that decree.

The land in question, when the titles set up by the complainants originated in 1852 and 1868, was of small value; but having become the site of a portion of the City of Fort Worth, and of an important railroad center, it has acquired a very great value, and is the subject of earnest litigation.

The Rutledge title originated under a head-right for 320 acres of land in Texas, granted in October, 1846, to Thomas P. Rutledge as an emigrant, by the Board of Land Commissioners of Gonzales County, where he then resided. It is alleged by the defendants, and proof was adduced to show, that Rutledge sold this certificate to one Matthew Brinson in or about 1848, and that Brinson sold it to one M. T. Johnson in 1851. It was located by Johnson (in Rutledge's name) on the premises in dispute in 1851 or 1852, and a survey in pursuance of such location was made January 8, 1852, by A. J. Lee, deputy surveyor for the Robertson Land District. It had previously been located on lands in Fannin County, but the evidence shows (as we think) that that location was abandoned, and that the location on the lands in dispute took the place of it.

The following is a copy of the survey made by Lee, to wit:

"The State of Texas, Robertson Land District.

"I have surveyed for Thomas P. Rutledge 320 acres of land situated in Tarrant County, about $\frac{1}{2}$ of a mile S. E. from Fort Worth and $\frac{1}{4}$ miles S. 44 W. from Birdville, by virtue of his head-right certificate No. 184, class 3rd, issued by the board of land comm'rs for Gonzales County on the 12th day of October, 1846—

"Beginning at the S. E. cor. of W. W. Warnell's 1,280 sur., now in the name of R. Briggs, at a stake, whence a hackberry 2 in. di. brs. S. 67 E. 77 vs. and an elm 2 in. di. brs. N. 68 W. in the head of a hollow; thence west 1,344 vs. to said Warnell's S. W. cor., a stake and mound in prairie; thence south 1,344 vs. to a stake and mound in prairie; thence east 1,344 vs. to a stake and mound in prairie; thence north 1,344 vs. to the place of beginning.

"Surveyed the 8th day of January, 1852.

"A. J. Lee, D. S. R. L. D.,

"Mercer Fain & T. I. Johnson, Chainers."

This survey was duly recorded in the records of the land district and filed in the General Land Office of the State; but no patent was issued upon it.

The tract thus surveyed was an exact square of 1,344 varas or 1,244½ yards on each side. One E. M. Daggett located another tract of 320 acres somewhere in the same neighborhood, and in the year 1853 or 1854 he made an exchange with Johnson for the lot in question, and in June, 1855, Johnson executed to Daggett a deed, of which the following is a copy, to wit:

"The State of Texas, County of Tarrant:

"Know all men by these presents that I, M. T. Johnson, of the State and county aforesaid, for and in the consideration of the three-hundred-and-twenty-acre land certificate issued by the Board of Land Commissioners of Shelby County, in the name of E. M. Daggett, class 3rd, and as deeded to me by said Daggett this day, I have bargained, sold and aliened unto the aforesaid E. M. Daggett all and singular the head-right certificate of T. P. Rutledge, and I warrant and defend the right and title of said head-right to his heirs or legal representatives free from myself and heirs, &c., & place E. M. Daggett forever in full ownership, the said head-right being located near Fort Worth, bounded on the east by a survey in the name of M. T. Johnson, a colony certificate, and on the west by a survey made of Jennings, and on the north by a survey in the name of Rebecca Briggs, all to be divested from me, my heirs or any person claiming the same, and placing E. M. Daggett, his heirs or legal representatives, in full ownership of the same forever.

"Given under my hand and seal this 28rd day of June, A. D. 1855.

"M. T. Johnson. [L. s.]

"Attest: Julian Feild.

"John P. Smith."

This deed was duly proved and recorded on the 80th day of March, 1857. Daggett, according to the weight of the testimony, went into possession of the land in 1854, prior to the date of the deed; built upon and improved it, and occupied it as his homestead (with the exception of such portions as he sold or leased to other parties), until his death April 19th, 1888. The defendants Elizabeth J. Daggett and her husband claim portions of the land under the will of said E. M. Daggett, and the Railroad Companies claim other portions as his grantees; and both allege that the possession of said E. M. Daggett and of themselves under him has been continuous for nearly thirty years prior to the commencement of the suit; namely, from the time when said Daggett first took possession of the land in 1854; and that such possession has been under a deed duly registered from the time the said deed was given by Johnson to Daggett.

T. H. Miller & Co., the complainants, deny that Rutledge ever sold his head-right certificate to Brinson, or anyone else, and claim that its location on the land in question inured to the benefit of Rutledge alone, and to themselves as his devisees, under a will made, by him on the 7th of June, 1848. That will is in evidence. By it Rutledge devised, first, all his property to his wife, Eliza A. Rutledge, for 21 years after his death; and after giving some directions about certain specific personal property, devised as follows:

"Fifth. I direct that after the expiration of twenty-one years from and after my death, all of my estate, both real and personal, shall be owned and enjoyed by my offspring or child or children by my said wife. . . .

"Seventh. In the event of the death of my said wife without offspring by me at her death which may survive her, I direct that all of my estate, real and personal, shall be owned equally by the children of Alsey S. Miller which may survive me, which he may have by his present wife.

"Eighth. In the event of the death of the offspring which I may have by my said wife, I direct that my said wife shall have all of my estate, both real and personal, for and during her life. . . .

"Ninth. I do appoint the said Alsey S. Miller, of said county and State, my executor of this my last will and testament."

Rutledge died on the 10th of January, 1850, leaving surviving him his wife, Eliza A. Rutledge, and an infant son, William M. Rutledge, who was born after the making of the will, but who died in 1854, about six years of age. Eliza A. Rutledge, after her husband's death, married William L. Foster in July, 1850, by whom she had several children, and died in February, 1881.

The will was regularly proved in April, 1850, by Alsey S. Miller, the executor, whose wife was a sister of Eliza A. Rutledge, and whose children were the devisees in remainder named in the will. It will be seen that the said remainder was a contingent one, to vest only in case of the death of the testator's wife without offspring by him. It was also limited after the fee which was primarily given to the testator's child.

More than two years after the probate of the will, proceedings were instituted by William L. Foster and his wife Eliza A. Foster, in the District Court of Gonzales County, having the proper jurisdiction, to have the will declared null and void. Alsey S. Miller, the executor, was made defendant, and the court appointed S. B. Conley guardian ad litem for William M. Rutledge, the infant child of the testator. The petition for nullity of the will alleged that the property of the deceased was community property; that the will was made before the birth of the child; that the disposition made was contrary to law, and trammelled with illegal and embarrassing conditions. It further stated that the executor had faithfully performed his trust, had paid all debts of the estate, and was ready to close it. The executor filed an answer, admitting the allegations of the petition, and not opposing its prayer. The guardian ad litem filed an answer, leaving the matter under the control of the court to act in its wise discretion as to justice should seem meet. The court thereupon made a decree as follows:

"Saturday, October 28d, 1852.

"Came all the parties by their att'ys, and S. B. Conley, Esq., guardian ad litem for the minor, W. M. Rutledge, and the matters and things being all before the court by the pleading and record evidence therein, the same was submitted to the court, and, being heard, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that the will of the deceased, Thomas P. Rutledge, made on the 7th June, 1848, and admitted to probate on the 29th April, 1850, be, and the same is hereby, declared to be null, void and of no effect, and that the same be in all things set aside and held for naught. It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the said Eliza Ann Foster, as relict of said Rutledge, deceased, and the said W. M. Rutledge, minor, be entitled to take, receive and hold all the property of said deceased jointly between them as heirs-at-law, be the same real, personal or mixed, and subject to the action of the County Court of Gonzales County as to distribution after the debts are paid and estate closed by the report of the executor, whose acts under the will are not impaired by this decree, and that said court is required to make the yearly allowance to the said Eliza Ann Foster, in accordance with law and the order of said county court. It is further ordered and adjudged that the executor, out of the funds of the estate, pay the costs herein expended, and that this decree be duly certified to the county court for observance."

If this decree is valid, it disposes of the claim of the complainants Thomas H. Miller and others, which is based on the devise of the will. The precise question came before the Supreme Court of Texas in the recent case of Thomas H. Miller et al. v. W. L. Roster et al. (not yet reported), and was decided against the contention of the appellants Miller et al. The Commission of Appeals held that the decree of nullity was valid, and that all the necessary parties were before the court when it was rendered. This decision was approved by the Supreme Court.

It is contended by appellants that the decision in the case of McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 840 [28:1015], is adverse to this view. But a careful examination of that case will show that this is not correct. The decree setting aside the will in that case was held not to be binding upon certain grandchildren of the testator, not born when it was passed, because their interests (which were executory) were supported by a legal trust estate in the executors, which was not represented in the proceedings. No trustee of that estate was made a party. The executors had resigned their office, and the court had accepted their resignation; and no new trustee had been appointed in their stead, as might have been done. There was no party in the case to represent the will, or the interests created by it, or the legal estate which supported those interests. This was the special ground on which the decision in McArthur v. Scott was placed, as is fully expressed in the opinion.

In the present case the executor was a defendant in the proceedings instituted for avoiding the will, and appeared and filed an answer; and the infant son of Rutledge, who was devisee in fee of the whole estate after the termination of his mother's interest, was represented in the proceedings by a guardian ad litem. Moreover, if the circumstance is of any consequence, the executor was interested on behalf of his own children that the will should stand,—as they were the principal devisees in remainder. We think that the Supreme Court of Texas was right in holding that all the necessary parties were before the court. We are also of opinion that the decree avoiding the will cannot be attacked collaterally; and that it is binding on the appellants Thomas H. Miller and others. The entire estate was represented before the court,—a particular estate in the widow, and the fee-simple remainder in the infant son. The interests of the appellants Thomas H. Miller and others, as devisees under the will, was a mere contingent interest, a mere executory devise. In such a case it is sufficient to bind the estate in judicial proceedings to have before the court those in whom the present estate of inheritance is vested. Lord Redesdale's authority on this point is decisive. In Giffard v. Hort, 1 Sch. & Lef. 386, 408, he says: "Where all the parties are brought before the court that can be brought before it, and the court acts on the property according to the rights that appear, without fraud, its decision must of necessity be final and conclusive. It has been repeatedly determined that if there be tenant for life, remainder to his first son in tail, remainder over, and he is brought before the court before he has issue, the contingent remaindermen are barred." In another part of the same opinion Lord Redesdale said: "Courts of equity have determined on grounds of high expediency that it is sufficient to bring before the court the first tenant in tail in being, and if there be no tenant in tail in being, the first person entitled to the inheritance, and if no such person, then the tenant for life." Ibid. These propositions are substantially repeated in his Treatise of Pleading, 173, 174, where he adds: "Contingent limitations and executory devises to persons not in being may in like manner be bound by a decree against a person claiming a vested estate of inheritance; but a person in being, claiming under a limitation by way of executory devise, not subject to any preceding vested estate of inheritance by which it may be defeated, must be made a party to a bill affecting his rights." In the present case, it is true, some of the children of Alsey S. Miller were in being at the time of the proceedings in question (1852); but there was a "preceding vested estate of inheritance," by which their executory devise might be defeated, namely, the estate vested in the infant child of Thomas P. Rutledge, who was a party to the proceedings. We are of opinion that the bill of Thomas H. Miller and others was properly dismissed by the court below.

The complainants in the cross-bills, William Dunlap and others and Martha R. Worrall and others, claim the lands under the other source of title, that of John Childress; and, to avoid the effect of the defendants' claim under the Rutledge certificate, they deny that it was assigned by Rutledge to Brinson, or by Brinson to M. T. Johnson; deny that it was ever lawfully located on the land in question; and aver that, if it was ever properly located thereon, it became void by noncompliance with the Land Laws of Texas.

The Childress title arose in the following manner: John Childress, a brother-in-law of the late Mr. Justice Catron, and brought up in his family, was an early emigrant to Texas under the patronage of his uncle, Sterling C. Robertson, empresario of a colony on the Brazos River. His first visit to Texas was in 1884, and in 1886 he took his wife and two children with him, namely, John W. Childress and George R. Childress. Though numbered among the colonists of Mr. Robertson, for some reason he failed to obtain any valid grant of land, though undoubtedly entitled to one. He died in Texas in the fall of 1887. By an Act of the Legislature of Texas, passed February 18, 1890, the Commissioner of the Court of Claims was authorized to issue to the heirs of John Childress a land certificate for one league and one labor of land (amounting to about 4,805 acres). His widow had, in the mean time, married one Miles Johnson, by whom she had a daughter named Mary. As the Act of the Legislature was expressed to be for the benefit of the heirs of John Childress, it would seem that no interest in the grant inured to the said Mary. On the 9th of March, 1890, a land certificate was issued by the Commissioner of the Court of Claims to the heirs of John Childress as authorized by the Act. It was procured by, and delivered to, a lawyer of Austin by the name of John A. Green, who was employed by Judge Catron on behalf of the heirs to attend to the business. The heirs, John W. Childress and his brother George, seem to have been of a roving disposition. John appeared at Austin in December, 1890, and, supposing that his brother George, who had not been heard from recently, was dead, he gave Green a power of attorney to locate the said certificate in the following manner, namely, one third for the benefit of his brother George, if he should be alive, and if not, then for John's own benefit; one third for the benefit of Green, as a compensation for his services; and one third for the benefit of one John O. St. Clair, to whom John W. Childress had sold his own share. No location of the certificate was made until after the war.

In May, 1887, Green sold his one third of the certificate to Doctor I. R. Worrall, of Austin. The deed given cannot be found, but it is alleged on the part of William Dunlap and others, and Martha R. Worrall and others, that it was given to Worrall's wife, Adaline S. Worrall, under whom they claim. The deed, as above said, is lost, and the records of Tarrant County were destroyed by fire in the spring of 1878, but Mr. Furman, a lawyer of Fort Worth, had, before the fire, made an abstract of titles from the county records, and in that abstract he finds, against other things, (1) a transfer from John W. Childress to John A. Green, conveying one third of the grantor's interest in the Childress certificate, filed October 8th, 1868 (date not given); (2) a transfer of the same interest from John A. Green to Adaline S. Worrall, dated May 15th, 1867, filed October 12th, 1868. In addition to this evidence, in the deed from Dr. Worrall and his wife to E. M. Daggett, dated September 30th, 1869, and hereafter to be mentioned, it is recited that the land in question (conveyed by that deed) was the separate property of said Adaline S. Worrall. We think, therefore, that it may be regarded as proven that the deed for the one third of the Childress certificate, given by John A. Green in May, 1867, was given to Adaline S. Worrall, though Green himself says that he has no recollection to that effect and that all his transactions were with Dr. Worrall himself.

On the 28th of January, 1868, Dr. Worrall presented to the county surveyor of Tarrant County the following application for a survey, to wit:

"Austin, Jan'y 28th, 1868.

"County Surveyor, Tarrant County, Texas: "Sir: By virtue of certificate No. 186, issued by W. S. Hotchkiss to Jno. Childress' heirs, now in your office, you will please survey for me 1,806,336 sq. vs. (320 acres) of land about one mile S. E. of Fort Worth, being the same land heretofore surveyed in the name of T. P. Rutledge, the field notes of which are hereby adopted as a full description of the survey:

"Beginning at the S. E. cor. of A. Briggs' survey and the S. W. corner of B. F. Crowleys and running so as to embrace and include all the vacant land connected with said point. That is the said Rutledge survey.

"I. R. Worrall."

A survey was made accordingly on the top of the Rutledge survey by adopting the notes of the same, and the county surveyor certified it as follows, to wit: "I, A. G. Walker, county surveyor for Tarrant County, do hereby certify that the survey designated by the foregoing plot and field notes was this day made by me by adopting field notes of the survey which was made, as above stated, the 16th January, 1852, and which I believe to be correct, and that the same is upon s'd survey which is in the name of T. P. Rutledge, certificate No. 134, class 3rd, issued by the Board of Land Commissioners of Gonzales County the 12th day of October, 1846." Dated "this 28th day of May, 1868." On the 17th of June, 1868, a patent was issued on this survey to "the heirs of John Childress, deceased, their heirs and assigns."

It thus appears that the Childress survey, under which the complainants in the cross-bills claim title to the land in dispute, was purposefully made by Dr. Worrall on the top of the Rutledge survey, under which Daggett had been in possession of the land for thirteen years. Of course such a title cannot be maintained unless the survey made under the Rutledge certificate was void. It is contended that it was void, first, because the certificate had been located on other lands in Fannin County, before its location on the lot at Fort Worth. This is true. Rutledge had procured a conditional head-right certificate for 320 acres as early as March 20th, 1839, from the Board of Land Commissioners of Washington County; and had in March, 1846, procured a survey under it for 320 acres in Fannin County, which was duly examined and approved, and filed in the General Land Office; but was afterwards indorsed as forfeited for nonreturn of unconditional certificate by 1st August, 1857. Rutledge seems to have abandoned this survey, and in October, 1846, obtained a new certificate in Gonzales County, as before stated, under which the survey in Fort Worth, Tarrant County, was made. It was permitted to a settler to abandon one location and adopt another. Indeed, the new certificate and location operated as an abandonment of the first, and the land became public land again, subject to location by other parties. In McGimpsey v. Ramsdale, 3 Tex. 344, the court sustained a survey made after a former survey under the same head-right had been abandoned, the judge who delivered the opinion saying: "If the question was a new one, I should feel strongly inclined to deny the right of Ramsdale to have raised his former location; but the practice commenced with our land system, and to upset it now would disturb land titles to an incalculable extent." We do not think that the location of Rutledge's head-right in Fannin County was sufficient to prevent his obtaining a new certificate and a location in Tarrant County, unless he had sold or otherwise disposed of the lands in Fannin County. There is no proof in the case that he had done so; although one of the witnesses, Nance, who resides in Fort Worth, testifies that in September, 1859, being in Austin, and having understood that Daggett could not get his land patented, inquired of Mr. White, the then commissioner of the General Land Office, why he could not, and the reason given was, that the conditional certificate had been issued long before and had been long before located in Fannin County by another man, to whom it belonged. But as there is no proof of this fact in the record, except the said hearsay testimony, we must conclude that this ground of objection to the Rutledge location is not sustained.

We do not deem it necessary to take particular notice of the Cass County location under the Rutledge certificate, which seems to have been abandoned; or of the survey under the William Sparks certificate, which was fully satisfied by other locations, and was never set up as establishing any right to the property in dispute. These documents may for the time have deterred the commissioner of the General Land Office from granting a patent to Daggett; but we do not see that they present any insurmountable obstacle to the validity of the survey made by Johnson.

Another ground urged for maintaining that the said location was void when the Childress location was made is, that the unconditional certificate was withdrawn from the General Land Office and not returned within the time required by law. The old wrapper in which it had been folded, and which also contained the survey, was indorsed with the words, "forfeited for nonreturn of unconditional certificate by 1st Aug., 1857." And yet there was another still older memorandum in pencil, faint and partly obliterated, which read thus: "Unconditional certificate withdrawn by M. T. Johnson . . . Dec. 14, '57, for relocation." A. B. McGill testifies that he was a clerk in the General Land Office from 1859 to 1866, except a short period towards the close of the war; and was chief clerk from 1865 or 1866 to 1870; that the indorsement, "forfeited for nonreturn of unconditional certificate by 1st Aug., 1857," is in his handwriting, and was written when he was chief clerk; that the other indorsement, "Unconditional certificate withdrawn by M. T. Johnson . . . Dec. 14, '57, for relocation," is in the handwriting of Robert M. Elgin, who was chief clerk of the said office in 1857, and until the close of the war; that only the commissioner and chief clerk were authorized to make such memoranda or indorsements on the files; that he (McGill) had no recollection of having seen the pencil memorandum at the time of making his indorsement in ink; that from the appearance of the indorsements he would say that the pencil indorsement was made prior to the time when he (McGill) made the indorsement in ink referred to.

Joseph Spence, formerly commissioner of the land office, testifies as follows:

"I was commissioner of the land office in 1868. The first knowledge that I had of the Thomas P. Rutledge survey in Tarrant County was after the Childress survey had been made and returned. Dr. I. R. Worrall controlled the Childress survey and was anxious to get a patent upon it. Upon examination of the Childress survey, it was ascertained to cover the Thomas P. Rutledge survey. Mr. A. B. McGill, who was chief clerk of the land office, referred to me both the Childress and the Rutledge papers, with the information that the Rutledge certificate was not found among the papers of the file. We then together examined the papers, but failed to find the certificate. I remarked to him that we had better not patent until further investigation. Shortly afterwards Dr. Worrall insisted upon the patent issuing on the Childress certificate, and we, not finding the Rutledge certificate, determined to issue the patent on said Childress certificate, and did so."

This evidence shows that the Rutledge certificate was not in the land office, or could not be found therein, in 1868, when the Childress patent was issued, and when undoubtedly McGill, the chief clerk, made the indorsement testified to by him. But it fails to prove that it was not in the office on the 1st of August, 1857. The indorsements on the back of the certificate itself show that it was filed in the office October 4th, 1852 (probably at the same time with the survey); and across its face, in red ink, is written "Registered and approved Dec. 11, 1857." (Signed) "Jas. O. Illingsworth, Comm'r of Claims." This memorandum, in connection with the old pencil memorandum on the wrapper, "Withdrawn by M. T. Johnson . . . Dec. 14, '57," shows that, at that time, December, 1857, Johnson, who was undoubtedly acting for Daggett, was attending to the final authentication of the Rutledge certificate and survey, by getting it approved by the commissioner of claims; and that, for some reason, not now disclosed, he carried it away with him. [The presentation of the certificate to the commissioner of claims, and its registry by him, were made in pursuance of an Act passed August 1st, 1856, which created the said officer, and required all land certificates (with certain exceptions) to be presented to him for registry within two years, or to be forever barred from location, surveys and patent.] The whole evidence, taken together, instead of showing, as supposed by McGill in 1868, when he made the indorsement on the wrapper, that it had not been returned to the office by the 1st of August, 1857, rather shows that it was never removed from the office until December, 1857. How long it was then detained does not appear. We infer from the testimony that it was in the office in 1867. The official land map of Tarrant County was made in that year, and the land in question was marked and designated as the T. P. Rutledge survey, and so continued until 1878. This would hardly have been done if the certificate had not been in the office. When it was taken out of the office, after that, does not appear—probably it was taken out by Daggett for some purpose and neglected to be returned, as it was shown that he was very careless about his papers. J. P. Smith, a lawyer of Fort Worth, and administrator of Daggett, testifies that in 1879 or 1880 he was counsel for him in a suit of Turner's heirs against him for a community interest under their grandmother, Daggett's wife (who had died in 1871), and he wanted the certificate in question; and not finding it in the land office, he had Daggett to search for it, and Daggett found it in his own safe and gave it to Smith, who, after keeping it two or three days, carried it to Austin by Daggett's authority, and handed it to the commissioner of the land office, and requested him to have it returned to its proper file in the office.

The laws which gave importance to the locality or place of deposit of the certificate were an Act of the Legislature of Texas passed August 30th, 1856, and another Act passed April 25th, 1871. (Paschal's Dig. vol. I. art. 4210, p. 701, and vol. II. arts. 7096-7099, p. 1453). The first of these Acts declared "that all owners or holders who have conditional certificates now located, or surveys upon lands, shall return to the General Land Office the unconditional certificates, together with the field notes of the same, on or before the first day of August, 1857; and unconditional certificates which are not returned by that time, the said locations and surveys shall be null and void, and all such locations and surveys made by virtue of such conditional certificates shall become public domain, and subject to be located upon as other vacant lands." In our view of the evidence, this Law did not affect the Rutledge title. The prima facie proof is that the certificate was in the land office from 1852 to December, 1857, and that the chief clerk, McGill, made a mistake in indorsing the wrapper as he did, "Forfeited for nonreturn of unconditional certificate by 1st August, 1857." As already suggested, this indorsement was probably made in 1868, when Dr. Worrall applied for a patent on the Childress survey, and no doubt was honestly made. McGill admits that he did not notice the pencil memorandum on the old wrapper.

By the Act of 25th April, 1871, it was provided that in all cases of location and survey of lands, by virtue of any genuine land certificate, including head-rights, etc., the certificate should be returned to the General Land Office with the field notes within the time prescribed for returning field notes [which was twelve months from the date of survey]; and the withdrawal of it from the office should render the location and survey null and void; with a proviso allowing a withdrawal where the certificate had only been located in part; and by the second section of the Act it was provided that, in all such cases if the certicate was not on file in the General Land Office at the time of passing the Act, and had not been withdrawn for locating an unlocated balance, it should be returned to, and filed in, the said office within eight months from the passage of the Act, or the location and survey should be void. It was strenuously contended that the case was within this Statute, and therefore that the Rutledge survey was void. But it is not absolutely certain from the evidence that the Rutledge certificate was not in the land office when the Act of 1871 was passed, or that it was not returned thereto within eight months from that time, which period expired on the 24th of December, 1871. It is true, it was not found by the clerk in 1868 when the patent was issued on the Childress survey; and it was not found on a subsequent search in 1875. Resort must be had to presumptions to conclude that it was not there in 1871. Will such a presumption be raised in favor of another title superposed upon the land at a time when the Rutledge certificate was perfectly valid, and possession was enjoyed under it? And even if it were sufficiently proven that the certificate was not in the office during the years in question, the question would still arise whether the claimants under the Childress survey and patent can take advantage of this circumstance to maintain their title to the property. When that title was created, in 1868, as already intimated, the Rutledge survey was in full force and effect, and Daggett was in possession under it, and had been so for thirteen years. Did, therefore, the injunction of the Statute of 1871, requiring the survey to be returned to the land office within eight months, under penalty of being void if not so returned, inure to the benefit of the holders of the Childress patent, or did it inure to the benefit of the State? The Childress survey when made was void, and therefore the patent issued upon it was void, because made and granted upon lands already appropriated under an elder title, which title, at that time, was perfectly valid, and only became invalid by noncompliance with a Statute subsequently passed for reasons of public policy. Did the Childress survey and patent, which were void at their inception, become invested with life and validity by means of the subsequent Law and the failure to comply with it? If the question was only one between the holders of the Rutledge title and the State, then no parties other than the State could take advantage of the omission to comply with the Law.

The practice of locating certificates upon prior rightful locations is not favored by the laws of Texas. It was declared by the Act of August 30th, 1856 (Paschal's Dig. vol. I. art. 4575), that whenever an entry is made upon any land which appears to be appropriated, deeded or patented by the books of the proper surveyor's office, or records of the county court or General Land Office, the party shall abide by it; and if judgment be rendered against him he shall not have the right to lift or re-enter the certificate, but the same shall be forfeited. The purpose of this Act was further secured by the Constitution of 1869, by the 10th article of which, section 3, it was declared that "all certificates for land located after the 30th day of October, 1856" (referring undoubtedly to, but mistaking the date of, the last-mentioned Act), "upon lands which were titled before such location of certificate, are hereby declared null and void," with a proviso in favor of inadvertent conflict with older surveys. Of course if the certificate was made void, the location and survey were a fortiori void, and the obtaining of a patent could not mend the matter, for it was decided by the Supreme Court of Texas, in Morris v. Brinlee, 14 Tex. 285, that a subsequent locator having actual notice of a prior location will be postponed to the superior rights of the prior locator, although the subsequent location may have passed into a patent.

The provision of the Constitution of 1869, just cited, was retrospective, was in force when the Act of 1871 was passed, and was carried forward, as to all future locations and surveys, into the Constitution of 1876, which declared, "that all genuine land certificates heretofore or hereafter issued shall be located, surveyed or patented only upon vacant and unappropriated public domain, and not upon any land titled or equitably owned under color of title from the sovereignty of the State, evidence of the appropriation of which is on the county records or in the General Land Office," or when the appropriation is evidenced by the occupation of the owner, or of some person holding for him." (Art. XIV. §2.)

These constitutional provisions (whose validity upon the subject in hand cannot be seriously questioned), taken in connection with the Act of 1856, had the effect to make void the location of the Childress certificate upon the land in dispute; for, at that time (1868) the said land was "appropriated" and "titled" by the survey under the Rutledge certificate, which was duly recorded in the county records and entered and filed in the General Land Office, plotted on the map of Tarrant County, and evidenced by the long-continued occupation of Daggett. If, then, the Childress location was absolutely void at its inception, how could it be revived by the subsequent failure of Daggett to comply with the Act of 1871? It seems to us quite clear that it could not be, and that said failure inured to the benefit of the State alone. But the State has never availed itself of the omission; and it is probable that nothing but a direct proceeding to vacate the survey would be effectual for the purpose. Daggett and those claiming under him having always been in notorious possession of the land, no person could lay any new location upon it without full knowledge of their pretensions to the ownership; and it was held by the Supreme Court of Texas in the recent case of Snider v. Methvin, 60 Tex. 487, that no one having knowledge of the continued claim of those who made title to land under a certificate could acquire any right to said land, although said certificate had been taken from the land office prior to the passage of the Act of 1871, and was not returned within the period required by that Act. It is true that the certificate in that case had been taken from the office by a person who had no interest in it, or right to control it; but the parties interested had notice of its absence in time to have supplied a duplicate, but did not do so until after the prescribed time had expired.

In the present case the certificate was returned to the office in 1879 or 1880, from which it had probably been inadvertently detained by Daggett. As between the parties to this controversy, our opinion is that the Rutledge title must prevail, and that it is a sufficient protection to the defendants against that set up by the complainants in the cross-bills.

This view of the case renders of less importance a question which might have been very material as between the original complainants, Thomas H. Miller and others, and the defendants, had not the former been barred by the decree annulling Rutledge's will. We refer to the question as to the assignment by Rutledge of his certificate to Brinson and by Brinson to M. T. Johnson. We are satisfied from the evidence in the case that Rutledge sold said certificate to Brinson and that Brinson sold it to Johnson, at whose instance, and in whose behalf, it was located on the land in question. M. J. Brinson, son of Matthew Brinson, to whom it is alleged Rutledge sold the certificate, testifies that about 1848 or 1849 Rutledge and one Gill were in the business of horse-raising and horse-trading, and were occasionally at his father's place in Shelby County, and one deal they made with him was the sale to him of the land certificate in question, for which the witness' father gave them a pony belonging to witness (who was then about twenty years old), and his father gave him another horse instead of it; then afterwards, about 1851, M. T. Johnson bought the certificate of witness' father; and that Johnson afterwards traded it to Captain B. M. Daggett. It is true, the witness did not handle the certificate, but derived his knowledge of it from conversation with his father and contemporaneous knowledge of the transactions. The witness further states that whilst his father (Matthew Brinson) owned the certificate he employed Gill to locate it, or have it located for him; but found that he was making a fraudulent use of the certificate, using it in what he termed "lariating land," in Fannin County; and he was obliged to institute proceedings to get possession of it, and finally got it back from some member of Gill's family after his death.

But no assignment of this certificate from Rutledge can now be found. If one ever existed, it is lost or has been destroyed. However, if a sale of the certificate was actually made by Rutledge to Brinson, and by the latter to Johnson, it matters little whether it was actually assigned in writing or not, as it is well settled in Texas that the land certificates of that State are chattels, and may be sold by parol agreement and delivery, whereby the purchaser acquires a right to locate the certificate and procure a patent in the name of the grantee, but for his own use, he becoming thereby the equitable owner of the land located. Cox v. Bray, 28 Tex. 247; Peeny v. Hurt, 33 Tex. 146; Stone v. Brown, 54 Tex. 384; Parker v. Spencer, 61 Tex. 155, 164. In Cox v. Bray, Chief Justice Moore said: "But even if the contract were within the Statute" [of Frauds] "the payment of the purchase money, the location of the land, the procuring of the patent, and the possession and improvement made upon it by the defendant and those under whom he claims, would, as has been frequently decided by this court, have presented sufficient equity to have entitled the defendant to a decree of title, if he had brought a suit for this purpose within a reasonable and proper time. And it certainly could not be less effectual to protect him against the wrongful efforts of the vendor to deprive him of his possession and equitable title to the land, however long he may have delayed his suit for this purpose."

Even when a written assignment was made, it was often made with a blank space left for the name of the assignee, to be filled up with the name of any subsequent purchaser who saw fit to insert his own name therein,—much the same as blank assignments of corporation stock, which pass from hand to hand, perhaps a dozen times, before they are filled up with the name of an assignee. It is distinctly stated in Hill v. Moore, 62 Tex. 610, 614, that "land certificates were the subjects of transfer, and often passed through the hands of many persons by an assignment in blank." In that case one Jowell owned a land certificate as community property, and, after his wife's death, sold it to one who was a purchaser in good faith, and without notice of the community. The heirs of the wife brought suit for a portion of the land located under the certificate; and contended that the purchaser was bound to take notice of the wife's interest. But it did not appear on the record whether the certificate was issued on Jowell's own head-right, or some other person's. The court held that, for all that appeared, it might have been obtained in the way indicated above. "So far as the record shows," says the court, "it may have been true that Jowell purchased the certificate through a blank assignment, and that he transferred with this assignment on it, simply by delivering it to the persons through whom the appellee claims; if so, his name would not even appear, either on the certificate or on any writing by which the transfer was made, and in such case a purchaser would not be put on inquiry as to the rights of other persons, unless it be of those persons who claim by inheritance from the original grantee, or someone in whom a right vested by operation of law at the time the certificate issued."

There seems to have been an assignment of this kind of Rutledge's unconditional certificate. Two witnesses are sworn in the case who distinctly testify that they saw it, with Johnson's name inserted as assignee. One of these is C. G. Payne, of Dallas County, Texas, an attorney-at-law. He states that in January, 1868, he visited the land office at Austin, to investigate some land claims and land locations in Tarrant County. Whilst there he examined the Rutledge claim. He says he found that two certificates had been issued to Rutledge; namely, a conditional one upon which a survey had been made in Cass County, and an unconditional certificate transferred by Rutledge to M. T. Johnson, and by Johnson located in Tarrant County at Fort Worth upon the land now in controversy, the field notes and survey returned to the General Land Office, and there filed, mapped and platted, and the patent refused on account of the conditional certificate located in Cass County. He says that the transfer of the latter certificate from Rutledge to Johnson was written in a coarse, rough, round handwriting. The usual form of transfers of certificates was used. The substance of said transfer was an assignment of all right, title, claim and interest of said T. P. Rutledge of, in and to the said certificate to the said M. T. Johnson, and authority therein authorizing the commissioner of the General Land Office to issue the patent to the said M. T. Johnson or to his assigns. On his cross-examination the witness says that the transfer was acknowledged before some officer authorized to use a seal, and had his certificate of acknowledgment and seal thereon. He states that he also saw the deed from Johnson to E. M. Daggett on record in Tarrant County.

The other witness who testifies to having seen the assignment of the unconditional certificate from Rutledge to Johnson is W. H. H. Lawrence. He testifies that he was engaged in the land business at and about Fort Worth; that he had transactions with E. M. Daggett from 1873 to 1878, and examined his title papers at his request, especially in reference to the 320-acres tract known as the Rutledge survey; that this examination was made, he thinks, in 1876, and he distinctly remembers making a favorable report to Daggett after he had finished the examination. He further says: "My recollection is that among the papers I examined was the Thomas P. Rutledge certificate. I did find a transfer of such certificate to M. T. Johnson. I am sure of this, because had it not been present I should have known that the title from Rutledge was defective." Being asked from whom, to whom and the form thereof, he said: "I can only say that it was from Rutledge to M. T. Johnson, and in the usual form of transfers of such certificates." The witness further states: "If there had been no transfer I should have discovered it and made a different report." To another interrogatory he added: "I had occasion in very many cases to look up the titles of different lands in Texas, and became familiar in the course of five years in the land business at Fort Worth with the general laws of the State in regard to lands, as also familiar with the examination of titles."

Apparently (but perhaps not necessarily) opposed to the hypothesis that the certificate in question was purchased by Johnson from Brinson is the evidence of Henry Beaumont, who testifies that in the winter of 1851-52 he placed a lot of land certificates, including the T. P. Rutledge certificate for 320 acres, in the hands of M. T. Johnson for location, under a written contract; and that the certificate in question had come into his hands with others from a party (whose name he does not mention) who had been engaged in locating and surveying lands, and was then retiring from the business. In corroboration of this testimony a receipt in the handwriting of M. T. Johnson was produced in evidence, a copy of which is as follows, to wit:

"Rec'd, Austin, March 9th, 1852, of Henry Beaumont the following land certificates, to be located or accounted for, viz.:

Four leagues Calhoun County school	Acres.
lands for location.....	17,712
Thomas Rutledge H. R., 320, class 3.
Gonzales County, 12 Oct., 1846.....	82

Wm. P. Milby H. R., 640, class 3, No. 24, Liberty County, 4th March, 1845 640
 John Becton, 320 H. R., 3rd class, No. 234 Victory County..... 320
 Sam'l Hudler, bounty warrant, dated Jan'y 1st, 1838, signed Barnard Bee Sec. War..... 1,280
 James H. Barnwell, bounty warrant, 7th January, 1837, signed G. W. Poe, pay gen'l..... 320
 Toby scrip, No. 864, to Almanzo Houston, dated Oct. 10, 1836..... 640
 (Signed duplicate.)
 (Sign'd) M. T. Johnson.
 Indorsed: 'Henry Beaumont land matters.' "

A duplicate of this receipt was found amongst Johnson's papers after his death by J. P. Smith, his administrator.

It is somewhat difficult to reconcile this evidence with that of the other witnesses. There is evidently wanting some undiscovered explanation of the discrepancy. Beaumont says that he only had the certificate for location, and that Johnson was to divide with him the emoluments thereof,—which were always one third of the land located. From the testimony of J. P. Smith, Johnson's administrator, it appears that Beaumont and Johnson had had dealings together in the location of land certificates for some years prior to the date of the receipt, to wit, in 1850 and 1851. The certificates mentioned in the receipt were probably received by Johnson at some time, or at different times, previous to the giving of the receipt. One of the certificates was that of Wm. P. Milby, for 640 acres, class 3, No. 24, issued 4th of March, 1845. This certificate was located June 25th, 1850,—a year and nine months before the date of the receipt. The certificate in question, that of Rutledge, was located January 8th, 1852, two months before the date of the receipt. The suggestion of the complainants that the survey was antedated has no evidence to support it. That, in some way, Johnson had become entitled to these certificates (especially to the Rutledge certificate) is corroborated by strong circumstances. Smith, Johnson's administrator, says that Beaumont never asserted any claim to the land mentioned in the receipt. He had correspondence and communications with Beaumont after Johnson's death. He says there was an agreement between them that Johnson should locate the certificates placed in his hands by Beaumont, and was to have for doing so one half of such interest as Beaumont had in them; yet no claim for any accounting was ever made after Johnson's death. It is quite possible that Beaumont obtained the Rutledge certificate from Gill, who used it as a "liar's" for improperly locating land; and that Johnson bought it of Brinson on ascertaining that it belonged to him. This would explain why Beaumont never asserted any claim to the land located under it, although it subsequently became so valuable.

Be all this as it may, it is clear that Johnson, either as owner of the certificate or as an agent employed for locating it, and as such having, according to usage, an interest in the lands to be surveyed, was fully authorized to make the location under it which he did make, and to take possession of the lands either for his own use

(if he was the owner) or for the use and benefit of himself and the actual owner; and that his title and possession thus acquired were good against all the world, except those who could produce a better title than that which the certificate and the location under it secured. The legal title, it is true, was in Rutledge's heirs; but the equitable title was in Johnson (if he did in fact purchase the certificate); and, in any event, one third of such equitable title belonged to him, as the authorized locator of the certificate, and the residue was in his hands and possession for the use of the owners whom he represented. The location and survey were good as against the State, and all other persons claiming by inferior title. E. M. Daggett as purchaser from Johnson, and obtaining possession from him, and the defendants as successors of Daggett, became entitled to the benefit of the Rutledge survey as a protection against all persons claiming under a title inferior thereto.

But this is not the whole case. There are other points which go to fortify the position of the defendants, which it is proper to notice.

After the Childress certificate was located by Dr. Worrall in 1868, E. M. Daggett, who had then been in possession under the Rutledge title for the space of fourteen years, purchased in, as he supposed, the entire Childress claim. In 1868 or 1869 George R. Childress, the second son of John Childress, appeared at Fort Worth, having returned from California, where he had been residing for many years. He did not know that his brother John was living, but supposed him dead, and that he, George, was his father's sole heir. He claimed the land in question, and Daggett compromised with him for about three hundred dollars, and George gave a deed selling and relinquishing all his right and title to Daggett in fee, with a general warranty against himself, his heirs and all others. He afterwards went to Austin, saw Green, learned of his brother's being alive, and confirmed the arrangement made by the latter with Green, who acted therein for the benefit of Dr. Worrall.

In September, 1869, Daggett also compromised the claim of Dr. Worrall and procured a deed from him and his wife, Adaline S. Worrall. This deed is in the usual form of deeds of bargain and sale. It is dated 30th of September, 1869, recites a consideration of three hundred dollars, conveys to Daggett the land in dispute by metes and bounds, as in the Childress patent, and recites that the land was the separate property of the said Adaline S. Worrall, referring to the deeds from John W. Childress to Green and from Green to the said Adaline. The deed concluded with this habendum and warranty, to wit: "To have and to hold to him, the said E. M. Daggett, his heirs and assigns forever, free from the just claim or claims of any and all persons whomsoever, claiming or to claim the same." The deed was acknowledged before a notary public, and a certificate of said acknowledgment was made in due form, with one exception; it contains no statement that Adaline S. Worrall, the wife, was privily examined by the officer apart from her husband. This is necessary in order to validate a conveyance of the wife's separate property in Texas, and its absence cannot be supplied by showing that she was actually privily examined. Berry v. Donley, 26 Tex. 737; Fitzgerald v. Turner, 43 Tex. 79; Looney v. Adamson, 48 Tex. 619; Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 628. To the same effect see Elliott v. Peirsol, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 328, 340 [7: 164]; Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297, 303 [31: 156, 158]. This seems to be a fatal defect; and it is on this defect that the complainants in the cross-bills rely. Their position is, that the land was Mrs. Worrall's separate property, that she never executed any conveyance of it according to law, and that it was hers when she died in November, 1870, and descended, one half to her husband, Dr. I. R. Worrall, and one half to her brothers and sisters, represented by William Dunlap and others. The complainants in the other cross-bill, Martha R. Worrall and others, claim the other half of the property as heirs of Dr. Worrall, being his mother and his brothers and sisters. They contend that Dr. Worrall had no interest to convey when he executed the deed with his wife in 1869, and hence the one-half part which he inherited from his wife in November, 1870, was unaffected by that conveyance. It is true, if the deed contained a warranty, he would be estopped from claiming the land; but it is contended that the clause above recited does not amount to a warranty. It has been decided, however, by the Supreme Court of Texas that words substantially such as those contained in the deed do import a general warranty. In Rowe v. Heath, 23 Tex. 618, the following words were so construed, to wit: "For him the said R. H., his heirs and assigns, to have and to hold forever, as his own right, title and property, free from the claim or claims of me, my heirs or creditors, and all other persons whomsoever, to claim the same or any part thereof lawfully." In our judgment the deed of Worrall and his wife did contain a general warranty, and the one-half part of Adaline S. Worrall's interest which descended to Dr. Worrall by estoppel to Daggett when Dr. Worrall inherited the same from his wife.

The other questions arise on the Statute of Limitations. The defendants pleaded the limitations of three years and of five years, and also peaceable possession for thirty years. The Act of February 5th, 1841, first created the limitations referred to. The 15th section created that of three years, declaring that "every suit, to be instituted to recover real estate, as against him, her or them, in possession under title, or color of title, shall be instituted within three years next after the cause of action shall have accrued, and not afterwards;" not computing the duration of disability from minority, coverture or insanity; and by "title" meaning regular claim of transfer from or under the sovereignty of the soil; also reserving the right of the government.

The 16th section created the limitation of five years, declaring that "he, she or they who shall have had five years like peaceable possession of real estate, cultivating, using or enjoying the same, and paying tax thereon, if any, and claiming under a deed, or deeds, duly registered, shall be held to have full title, precluding all claims, but shall not bar the government;" and saving disabilities for non-age, coverture or insanity.

Now supposing that the prerogative of the government prevented the Statute from running until after the patent issued to the heirs of John Childress in June, 1868, it certainly commenced to run at that time against those who claimed under the patent; and the facts present a strong case of adverse possession on the part of E. M. Daggett and his grantees. They were in full, continuous and peaceable possession for a period, altogether, of thirty years, namely, from 1854 to 1885, when William Dunlap and others appeared as intervenors in this suit; and from 1854 to 1886, when the Worralls intervened. This possession was complete in the use, cultivation and enjoyment of the land in dispute, and the payment of taxes thereon. It was claimed and exercised under a regular deed of conveyance from M. T. Johnson, dated 28d June, 1855, which granted and conveyed, not only the certificate of Rutledge, but the land located under it, describing and identifying the same; and which was duly registered in the records of Tarrant County on the 30th of March, 1857. It is difficult to see why the plea of limitation of five years at least is not a good bar against the heirs of Adaline S. Worrall. She died November 4th, 1870, and one half her estate descended to her husband, I. R. Worrall, who survived to the 22d September, 1871. The Statute, having commenced to run against him, was not suspended by his death, and had been running more than fourteen years at the commencement of the suit. The other half of Adaline S. Worrall's estate descended to her brother, John Cook, and her two sisters, Alizannah, wife of William Dunlap, and Matilda, wife of Dr. Jonas Fell. John Cook was living at Adaline's death, and survived to August, 1873. The sisters were married women when Adaline S. Worrall died, but as her disability as a married woman had already prevented the Statute from running during her lifetime, their disability, according to the law of Texas, cannot be added to hers. It was decided by the Supreme Court of Texas in the cases of White v. Latimer, 12 Tex. 61, and McMasters v. Mills, 30 Tex. 591, that one disability cannot be tacked to another so as to prolong the disabilities beyond the continuance of that which existed when the cause of action accrued. See also Wood on Limitations, section 251, and notes. According to this rule the Statute commenced to run at the death of Adaline S. Worrall, on the 4th of November, 1870. If this is so, as we think it is, the complainants in the cross-bills are barred by the Statute of Limitations.

The new Statute of Limitations contained in the Revised Statutes, which went into effect on the 1st day of September, 1879, does not materially differ, so far as its application to the present case is concerned, from the old Statute of 1841; and it is explicit in declaring that "the period of limitation shall not be extended by the connection of one disability with another." (Art. 3225, Rev. Stat.)

In our judgment, the Statute of Limitations is a complete bar to the claims set up by the complainants both in the original and in the cross-bills, whether we are right or not in regard to the validity of the Rutledge title.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

SAMUEL HILL ET AL., Appts.,

v.

DANIEL B. WOOSTER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 693-701.)

Suit to procure patent to be issued—patentable invention—box creamery—invention or discovery necessary to a patent.

1. Under section 4915, U. S. Rev. Stat., the circuit court may adjudge that the applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention or for any part thereof; and if the adjudication is in favor of the right of the applicant, it shall authorize the commissioner to issue the patent.
2. But no adjudication can be made in favor of the applicant, unless the alleged invention for which a patent is sought is a patentable invention; neither the circuit court nor this court can overlook the question of patentability.
3. Nothing in the four claims of Wooster in this action constitutes a patentable invention. It is not a patentable invention to add a lower compartment to a box creamery on legs.
4. A person, to be entitled to a patent, must have invented or discovered some new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or some new and useful improvement thereof; and it is not enough that a thing shall be new, in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been before known, and that it shall be useful, but it must, under the Constitution and the Statute, amount to an invention or discovery.

[No. 10.]

Argued Nov. 19, 20, 1889. Decided Jan. 13, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Vermont that Daniel B. Wooster was the original and first inventor of the improvement, called a "Cabinet Creamery," set forth in his claims, and was entitled to receive a patent therefor as set forth in his application filed Jan. 17, 1879, and that Hill & Prentice were not the original and first inventors of such improvement. Reversed.

This was a suit in equity brought by Daniel B. Wooster against Samuel Hill, Benjamin B. Prentice and The Vermont Farm Machine Company, under section 4915 of the Revised Statutes, which provides that when a patent on application is refused, the applicant may bring a suit in equity to procure a decree that the plaintiff is entitled to receive a patent for his invention, and authorizing the commissioner to issue such patent. The bill prays for a decree adjudging Wooster to be the first inventor of the invention of a "Cabinet Creamery," as embraced in his claims, and entitled to receive a patent for his invention. The answer denies that Wooster was the first inventor and avers that Hill & Prentice were the first inventors and entitled to a patent.

NOTE.—For what patents are granted and when they are declared void, see note to Evans v. Eaton, Bk. 4, p. 433.

As to patentability of invention, see notes to Thompson v. Bolsseller, Bk. 29, p. 76, and to Corning v. Burden, Bk. 14, p. 683.

As to distinction between inventions of mechanism or products and processes, and when the latter may be patented, see note to Corning v. Burden, supra.

The examiners in the Patent Office and the commissioner of patents awarded priority of invention to Hill & Prentice. The circuit court decided in this suit that Wooster was the first inventor of the improvement called a "Cabinet Creamery," and entitled to receive a patent therefor, as set forth in his application. From this decree the defendants appealed to this court.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 22 Fed. Rep. 880.

Mr. William Edgar Simonds, for appellants:

Illustrative drawings of conceived idea do not constitute an invention, and unless they are followed up by seasonable observance of the requirements of the Patent Laws, they have no effect upon a subsequently granted patent to another.

Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co. 1 Pat. Off. Gaz. 466; Smith v. O'Connor, 4 Pat. Off. Gaz. 638; Electric R. R. Signal Co. v. Hall R. R. Signal Co. 6 Fed. Rep. 608; Detroit Lubricator Mfg. Co. v. Renchard, 9 Fed. Rep. 298.

In attempting to defeat patentees on the ground of prior invention, such prior invention must have reached a practical result before the patentees made their invention.

Union Metallic Cartridge Co. v. U. S. Cartridge Co. 7 Fed. Rep. 344; U. S. Stamping Co. v. Jewett, 7 Fed. Rep. 869; Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, 21 Pat. Off. Gaz. 2081, 105 U. S. 580 (26: 1177); Atlantic Works v. Brady, 23 Pat. Off. Gaz. 1930, 107 U. S. 192 (27: 438).

Amid conflicting evidence the first maker of the embodied invention is, in default of preponderating proof to the contrary, the inventor.

Edwards v. Requa, Com. Dec. 1869, p. 28; Jennings v. Winters, Com. Dec. 1869, p. 38; Holman v. Foley, Com. Dec. 1870, p. 97; Clark v. Osborn, Com. Dec. 1874, p. 220; Ware v. Bullock, Com. Dec. 1875, p. 11.

He who claims to have imparted the invention to his opponent takes upon himself the burden of proof.

Mowbray v. Shaffner, Com. Dec. 1870, p. 35.

As against a patentee, an applicant must show conclusively that he reduced to practice and completed form prior to invention by the patentee.

McKnight v. Van Wagenen, Com. Dec. 1869, p. 126; Sargent v. Burge, Com. Dec. 1877, p. 62; Halliday v. Paine, Com. Dec. 1877, p. 112; Wyman v. Knowles, 13 Pat. Off. Gaz. 320; James v. Campbell, 21 Pat. Off. Gaz. 337, 104 U. S. 356 (26:786).

Mr. Stephen C. Shurtleff, for appellee:

At the time Hill and Prentice made the preliminary statement of 1880 they were the owners of the invention in controversy, and their declarations are entitled to full weight; and any person who takes the invention afterwards, takes it subject to the liability of its being defeated by the declaration of the former owner.

Miller v. Bingham, 29 Vt. 82; Downs v. Belden, 46 Vt. 674; Alger v. Andrews, 47 Vt. 288; Batchelder v. Kinney, 44 Vt. 150.

The omission of a witness to testify to material facts on a former trial, which he now relates, is admissible.

Briggs v. Taylor, 35 Vt. 57.

182 U. S.

Something more than the uncorroborated statement of parties should be shown, in order for the court to find a disputed fact.

Bering v. Haworth, 14 Pat. Off. Gaz. 117.

It is immaterial whether the patentee is the inventor of any one or more of the elements of the combination; these may all be old; but if the patentee was the first to combine for the purpose specified in his patent, his patent will be good.

Carr v. Rice, 1 Fish. Pat. Cas. 198; Hovey v. Stevens, 1 Woodb. & M. 290; Buck v. Hermande, 1 Blatchf. 898; Gray v. James, Pet. C. C. 894; Furbush v. Cook, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 668; Buck v. Gill, 4 McLean, 174; Evans v. Eaton, 16 U. S. 8 Wheat. 454 (4: 483); Swift v. Whisen, 3 Fish. Pat. Cas. 348.

The presumption arising from silence is far stronger than preponderance in the number of witnesses.

Smith v. Fay, 6 Fish. Pat. Cas. 446.

The witness' attention must be called to the subject matter with reasonable certainty as to time and place, but the sayings of a party are always admissible, whether his attention has been called to the substance of his declarations or not.

May v. Brownell, 3 Vt. 463; Alger v. Andrews, 47 Vt. 288; Downs v. Belden, 46 Vt. 674; Hayward Rubber Co. v. Dunklee, 30 Vt. 29; Miller v. Bingham, 29 Vt. 82; Davis v. Windsor Sav. Bank, 48 Vt. 532.

The rule is that a plaintiff is entitled to rest on making out a prima facie case, and, afterwards, to adduce additional as well as rebutting testimony; that the defendant is, in general, required to go through with his evidence before resting.

This rule supposes, however, that the case as first made out by the plaintiff fairly apprises the defendant of the ground on which the right of recovery is finally to be supported.

Clayes v. Ferris, 10 Vt. 112; Kent v. Lincoln, 32 Vt. 598; Thayer v. Davis, 38 Vt. 163.

The appellee's exhibit, Lamson letter, is admissible to show that the appellants have been trying to manufacture evidence. This is always admissible in evidence, and raises a presumption against the party making such attempt.

Winchell v. Edwards, 57 Ill. 41; The Tillie, 7 Ben. 383; Moriarty v. London, C. & D. R. Co. L. R. 5 Q. B. 314.

Mn. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Vermont, by Daniel B. Wooster against Samuel Hill, Benjamin B. Prentice and the Vermont Farm Machine Company, under section 4915 of the Revised Statutes, which reads as follows: "Whenever a patent on application is refused, either by the commissioner of patents or by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia upon appeal from the commissioner, the applicant may have remedy by bill in equity; and the court having cognizance thereof, on notice to adverse parties and other due proceedings had, may adjudge that such applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention, as specified in his claim, or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear. And such adjudication, if it be in favor of the right of the applicant, shall authorize the commissioner to issue such patent on the applicant filing in the Patent Office a copy of the adjudication, and otherwise complying with the requirements of law. In all cases, where there is no opposing party, a copy of the bill shall be served on the commissioner; and all the expenses of the proceeding shall be paid by the applicant, whether the final decision is in his favor or not."

The substance of the allegations of the bill is as follows: Wooster, on the 17th of January, 1879, filed in the Patent Office an application for a patent for an "improvement in milk-coolers." The commissioner of patents declared an interference between that application and letters-patent No. 207,788, granted September 8, 1878, to said Hill & Prentice, for an "improvement in milk-coolers," an interest in which patent had been assigned to the defendant The Vermont Farm Machine Company. Testimony was taken, and priority of invention was adjudged by the Patent Office in favor of Wooster, in respect to the claim in issue in the interference; and Wooster, by a separate application for that purpose, was granted a patent containing that claim, on the 14th of June, 1881, No. 242,805, for an "improvement in milk-coolers." On the 30th of March, 1880, Hill & Prentice filed an application for a patent for an "improvement in milk-setting apparatus." They also, on the 10th of November, 1880, filed an application for a reissue of their patent No. 207,788. Both of the last-mentioned two applications were declared to be in interference with the application of Wooster, of January 17, 1879. Testimony was taken by both parties, and the commissioner of patents decided to grant a patent for certain of the claims to Hill & Prentice, or to The Vermont Farm Machine Company as their assignee, and refused to grant a patent for them to Wooster. Four of those claims arose on the application filed by Hill & Prentice on the 30th of March, 1880, and were as follows:

"1. The combination, with a cabinet provided at its top with a cover or lid and having a door in its side, of an ice receptacle located in the upper portion of the cabinet, and an elongated milk receptacle, the upper portion of which is located within the ice receptacle and its discharge conduit arranged to extend below the ice receptacle.

"2. In a milk-cooling apparatus, the combination, with a cabinet or box having its top and side provided with covers or doors, of a vertical elongated milk receptacle provided with a discharge regulating valve or stop-cock at its lower end, and an ice receptacle having an open top and surrounding the upper portion of the milk receptacle.

"3. A milk-cooling apparatus consisting essentially of a vertically elongated milk receptacle, provided with a discharge opening at its lower end, an ice receptacle having an open top and surrounding the upper portion of the milk receptacle, and a cabinet having a cover which extends over the milk and ice receptacles, and with a side door for preventing admission of the outer air to the lower portion of the milk receptacle, when desired.

"4. A milk-cooling apparatus, consisting of a cabinet provided with an upper and lower compartment, an ice receptacle having an open top and located in the upper compartment of the cabinet, a vertically elongated milk receptacle, the upper portion of which is located in the ice receptacle and its lower end constructed to project downward into the lower compartment of the cabinet, and a valve or stop-cock connected with the lower end of the milk receptacle."

The decision against Wooster and in favor of Hill & Prentice covered three other claims which arose on Hill & Prentice's application for a reissue, filed November 10, 1880; but it is not necessary further to allude to them, as there is no contest in this court in regard to them.

The bill contains the following statement as to the invention of Wooster: "The object of your orator's invention being to provide a milk-cooler of such construction that a milk receptacle of a depth greater than its width may have its upper portions only subjected to cold, and thus cause the contained milk to rise and descend in reverse vertical currents. The upper strata of milk, being subjected to cold, will part in whole or in part with its cream, and then descend, its place being supplied by an ascending current of warmer milk from the lower portion of the vessel. And, further, to provide the milk-cooler with a combined ventilator and filter, whereby the milk may be thoroughly ventilated. And, further, to provide a milk-cooler with a transparent eduction tube, to be attached to the lower portion of the cooling vessel, whereby the milk can be easily or readily inspected while being drawn from the cooler and the milk and cream accurately separated and deposited in separate vessels."

The bill prays for a decree adjudging Wooster to be the first inventor "of the invention embraced in the claims hereinbefore set forth, and entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for said invention."

The answer of the defendants denies that Wooster was the first inventor of either of the claims marked 1, 2, 3 and 4, and avers that Hill & Prentice were the first inventors thereof, and are entitled to a patent for those claims.

The cause was put at issue by a replication, voluminous proofs were taken, and the case was heard by Judge Wheeler. His opinion is reported as Wooster v. Hill, 22 Fed. Rep. 830.

In the Patent Office, the examiner of interferences awarded priority of invention to Hill & Prentice, in regard to the above claims 1, 2, 3 and 4. On appeal to the examiners-in-chief by Wooster, they affirmed such decision of the examiner of interferences. On an appeal by Wooster to the commissioner of patents, the latter affirmed the decision of the examiners-in-chief, and afterwards denied a motion for a reconsideration of his decision.

The opinion of the circuit court discusses the questions involved solely as questions of fact as to priority of invention, as between Wooster on the one side and Hill & Prentice on the other, and states that considerable evidence was produced before the court which was not before the Patent Office. The court was of opinion that Hill & Prentice were the first inventors of an open-box creamery standing on legs, with the lower part of the cans extending through the bottom of the box downward, and the upper part surrounded by water in the box, for cooling the top of the milk in the cans, as shown in the patent No. 207,788, granted to them on September 8, 1878. The "cabinet" mentioned in the four claims before recited applied to a cabinet creamery closed all the way down, but having a door in front, for access to the lower part of the can, in contradistinction to an open-box creamery standing on legs. The court was of opinion, on the evidence, that Wooster was the first inventor "of the cabinet creamery as an improvement upon the box creamery, as that is shown in the patent of Hill & Prentice." It thereupon entered a decree adjudging that Hill & Prentice were not the original, first and joint inventors of the improvements set forth in the four claims before recited, and that Wooster was the original and first inventor of the improvement called a cabinet creamery, set forth in those four claims, and was entitled to receive a patent therefor, as set forth in his application filed January 17, 1879. From this decree the defendants have appealed to this court.

The provision of section 4915 is that the circuit court may adjudge that the applicant "is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention, as specified in his claim, or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear;" and that, if the adjudication is in favor of the right of the applicant, it shall authorize the commissioner to issue the patent. It necessarily follows that no adjudication can be made in favor of the applicant, unless the alleged invention for which a patent is sought is a patentable invention. The litigation between the parties on this bill cannot be concluded by solely determining an issue as to which of them in fact first made a cabinet creamery. A determination of that issue alone, in favor of the applicant, carrying with it, as it does, authority to the commissioner to issue a patent to him for the claims in interference, would necessarily give the sanction of the court to the patentability of the invention involved.

The parties to the present suit appear to have been willing to ignore the question as to patentability in the present case, and to have litigated merely the question of priority of invention, on the assumption that the invention was patentable. But neither the circuit court nor this court can overlook the question of patentability. The bill claims a patent for what it alleges was invented by Wooster as a patentable invention; and the answer of the defendants is founded upon the view that Hill & Prentice were the first inventors of the improvements covered by the four claims in question, as patentable inventions.

We are of opinion that nothing in those four claims constitutes a patentable invention. A cabinet constitutes an element in each of the combinations covered by the four claims. This cabinet is nothing more than a boxing or covering in of the open space forming the lower part of the prior open-box creamery standing on legs. In the application of Wooster, filed January 17, 1879, in an amendment filed by him March 29, 1879, he says: "I am aware that long rectangular milk receptacles have been provided with a water-chamber extending around the upper portion thereof; also, that water-coolers have been inclosed within a box or casing, and their upper ends inclosed within an ice receptacle having a perforated bottom; also, that a milk receptacle has been provided with an ice receptacle extending through the centre of the same; and hence I would have it understood that I do not claim the construction above referred to."

In the application of Hill & Prentice, filed March 30, 1880, they say in the specification: "The lower chamber or compartment serves to protect that part of the milk vessel which is in contact with this chamber from free contact with the outer air, preventing the temperature from unduly varying; and it also serves as a suitable place wherein to store butter, milk or dairy appliances, this being practically a refrigerating chamber."

In the decision of the examiners-in-chief on appeal, made July 12, 1882, they say: "The idea of applying a cooling medium to the top of milk cans while the bottom should be exposed to the ordinary temperature of the dairy-room was old, and Wooster expressly disclaims any broad pretension to such method, and says that he is aware that milk receptacles have been provided with a water-chamber around the upper portion, and that water-coolers have been boxed and their upper parts enclosed in ice receptacles and the lower end perforated, and milk receptacles been provided with an ice receptacle extending through the centre of the same. So, to start with, we find that whatever either has done is merely to improve upon means for more effectually carrying out this mode of treating milk, to obtain the best results in raising and securing cream. As a structure, the cabinet would seem almost anticipated by the water-cooler of which the parties made a double use; but this is not before us, except so far as showing us to what a limited extent the examiner conceded patentability of matter included in the claims allowed and put in interference." The examiners-in-chief seem, therefore, not to have considered that the question of patentability was before them, but that they were limited to considering the question as to which of the two parties first made the structure in the form in which it was presented.

The examiners-in-chief proceed: "When the parties came to the office they undoubtedly supposed, each for himself, that they had made a great discovery in keeping the top of the milk cool and the bottom warm. So we find that both of them seem to have obtained new light in regard to the state of the art, and, by repeated amendments, came down to quite restricted claims. We now come down to the material matter: Which of the parties devised and first reduced to practice the box, with lid, inclosing the cooler tank, having the elongated can extending through the bottom, etc.? The idea of drawing off the milk from the bottom was old, and the glass to afford inspection was old. And which of them conceived of and first reduced to practice the cabinet form, or the above box and tank and can construction, with the lower part of the can also inclosed? It is certainly a very small matter of invention, this inclosing the bottom part, after the inclosing of the cooler tank, and after what has been done in refrigerators and water-coolers."

In the brief of the defendants, who are the appellants here, it is stated that the four claims in question "are confined to a cabinet creamery," and "are simply for adding the lower compartment to a box creamery on legs." We are of opinion that they are entitled to have the decree below reversed, on the ground that it was not a patentable invention to add a lower compartment to a box creamery on legs. The only allusion to this question in the brief for Wooster, the plaintiff and appellee, is the remark that no question is made in the answer but that one party or the other is entitled to a patent, and that, therefore, evidence which does not tend to show which party is entitled to the patent is irrelevant and should be suppressed. This court, however, has repeatedly held that, under the Constitution and the Acts of Congress, a person, to be entitled to a patent, must have invented or discovered some new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or some new and useful improvement thereof, and that "it is not enough that a thing shall be new, in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been before known, and that it shall be useful, but it must, under the Constitution and the Statute, amount to an invention or discovery." The cases on this subject are collected in Thompson v. Boisselier, 114 U. S. 1, 11, 12 [29: 76, 79, 80]. To them may be added Stephenson v. Brooklyn Crosstown R. Co. 114 U. S. 149 [29: 58]; Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Greenleaf, 117 U. S. 554 [29: 952]; Gardner v. Herz, 118 U. S. 180 [80: 158]; Pomace Holder Co. v. Ferguson, 119 U. S. 835 [30: 406]; Hendy v. Golden State & Miners' Iron Works, 127 U. S. 870, 875 [32: 207, 209]; Holland v. Shipley, 127 U. S. 896 [32: 185]; Pattee Plow Co. v. Kingman, 129 U. S. 294 [32: 700]; Brown v. District of Columbia, 180 U. S. 87 [32: 868]; Day v. Fair Haven & W. R. Co. 182 U. S. 98 [33: 265]; Watson v. Cincinnati R. Co. 182 U. S. 161 [33: 295]; Marchand v. Emken, 182 U. S. 195 [33: 832]; Royer v. Roth, 182 U. S. 201 [33: 822].

The decree of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court with a direction to dismiss the bill, with costs.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

IN OCTOBER TERM, 1889.

Vol. 133.

REFERENCE TABLE
OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1889,
AND REPORTED HEREIN,
VOL. 133,
AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 133 U. S.	Title.	Page 10.	Off. Rep. 133 U. S.	Title.	Page 10.
1	United States v. Stowell	555	96-101	Illinois C. R. Co. v. Heworth	553
2-4	" " "	556	101-104	" " "	554
4-11	" " "	557	104-106	" " "	555
11-14	" " "	558	107	Cole v. Cunningham	558
14-17	" " "	559	107-109	" " "	559
17-20	" " "	560	109-110	" " "	560
20	" " "	561	111-113	" " "	561
21	Case v. Kelly	513	113-115	" " "	562
21-23	" " "	514	115-118	" " "	563
23-25	" " "	515	118-121	" " "	564
25-29	" " "	516	121-124	" " "	565
30	Richardson v. Groom	516	124-127	" " "	566
30	" " "	517	127-129	" " "	567
31-34	" " "	518	130-133	" " "	568
34-37	" " "	519	133-135	" " "	569
37-40	" " "	520	136-138	" " "	570
40-43	" " "	521	139	Kayser v. Hile	581
43-46	" " "	522	140-141	" " "	584
46-49	" " "	523	141-144	" " "	585
49	" " "	524	144-147	" " "	586
49-50	Nelson v. Green	524	147-150	" " "	587
50	Mason v. Powable Mining Co. v. Powable Mining Co. v. Mason	524	150-152	" " "	588
50-53	" " "	527	154	Knox County v. Harshman	589
53-56	" " "	528	154-156	" " "	590
56-60	" " "	529	156	Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Galen- burg	573
60-61	" " "	530	158-160	" " "	575
61-64	" " "	531	160-162	" " "	576
64-66	San Francisco v. Inell	570	162-165	" " "	577
66-67	" " "	571	165-168	" " "	578
67	Schrader v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank	564	168-171	" " "	579
68-70	" " "	565	171-174	" " "	580
70-73	" " "	566	174-177	" " "	581
73-76	" " "	567	177-179	" " "	582
76-78	" " "	568	180	Wallace v. United States	571
78	Stuart v. Bondware	568	180-183	" " "	572
78-81	" " "	569	183-186	" " "	573
81-83	" " "	570	186	Manning v. French	582
83-85	Ohio C. R. Co. v. Central Trust Co.	561	186-188	" " "	583
85-87	" " "	562	188-191	" " "	584
87-91	" " "	563	191-192	" " "	585
91-93	" " "	564	192-193	" " "	586
93	Illinois C. R. Co. v. Heworth	530	193	United States v. Hancock	601
93-95	" " "	531	193-195	" " "	602
95-96	" " "	532	195-196	" " "	603
133 U. S.					609

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. See L. S.	THIS.	Page No.	Off. Rep. See L. S.	THIS.	Page No.
106-107	United States v. Hancock	604	354-357	Hart v. Every	650
108	Commonwealth v. Lewis	604	357-359	"	651
109	"	605	360-361	Phoenix Caster Co. v. Spiegel	663
109-202	"	606	361-364	"	664
203-205	"	607	364-366	"	665
206-208	"	608	366-368	"	666
209-211	United States v. Waters	594	369	"	667
211-216	"	595	370	Coyne v. Union P. R. Co.	651
216-218	"	596	370-371	"	654
219	Coulam v. Donell	596	371-374	"	655
219-219	"	597	374	"	656
224-225	"	598	375	Quebec Steamship Co. v. Meyer	650
225-228	"	599	375	"	650
229-231	"	600	376	"	650
231-233	"	601	376-377	"	650
233	Christian v. Atlantic & N. O. R. Co.	589	377-379	"	650
233-237	"	590	380	Hopkins v. McLure	660
237-240	"	591	380-381	"	661
240-242	"	592	382-386	"	662
242-246	"	593	386-387	"	663
246-247	Gellinger v. Philipp	614	387	California Ins. Co. v. Union Com-	730
247-250	"	615	387	press Co.	730
250-254	"	616	388-391	"	732
254-257	"	617	391-394	"	733
257	"	618	394-397	"	734
258-259	Genbroy v. Riggs	642	397-409	"	735
259	"	643	409-412	"	736
264-266	"	644	412-415	"	737
266-268	"	645	415-418	"	738
269-272	"	646	418-421	"	739
272-273	"	647	421-425	"	740
273	United States v. Mosby	625	426	Mills v. Day	717
274-276	Mosby v. United States	626	426	"	718
276-279	"	627	427-427	"	719
279-283	"	628	427-428	"	720
283-284	"	629	428-433	"	721
284-287	"	630	433	Armstrong v. American Exchange	747
287-289	"	631	433-437	Nat. Bank	747
289	Dodd v. Illinois, M. & T. R. Co.	608	437-440	"	750
290-292	"	609	440-442	"	751
292-294	"	610	442-443	"	752
294-295	"	611	443-448	"	753
296	Adams v. Lottman	623	448-452	"	754
296-299	"	624	452-455	"	755
299	Stross v. United States	621	455-456	"	756
299-300	"	622	456-461	"	757
300-302	"	623	461-464	"	758
302-307	"	624	464-467	"	759
307	"	625	467-470	"	760
308	Corbin v. Gould	611	470	"	761
308-312	"	612	471	Crane v. Kaufman	765
312-314	"	613	471-473	"	766
314-316	Smith v. Lyon	625	473-475	Delaware County Court v. De-	874
316-319	"	626	475	lroit Safe & L. Co.	875
319-320	"	627	475-477	"	876
320	Barford v. Bonte	618	477-480	"	877
321-324	"	619	480-481	"	878
324-326	"	620	481	"	879
326-329	"	621	481-482	"	880
329-333	"	622	482-483	"	881
333	"	623	483-485	"	882
333-334	Davis v. Johnson	627	485-485	"	883
334-337	"	628	485	"	884
337-342	"	629	486	Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price	887
342-344	"	630	486	County	888
344-347	"	631	486-488	"	889
347-348	"	632	488-502	"	890
349	Burr v. Every	647	502-504	"	891
349-352	"	648	504-505	"	892
352-354	"	649	505-508	"	893

REFERENCE TABLE

Off. Rep. Ill. U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. Ill. U. S.	Title.	Here In.
508-511	Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County	694	600-603	Aspinwall v. Butler	781
511-514	" " " "	695	603-606	" " " "	782
514-515	Burthe v. Denis	768	606-609	" " " "	783
515-518	" " " "	769	609-610	" " " "	784
518-520	" " " "	770	610	Keller v. Ashford	667
520-523	" " " "	771	611-612	" " " "	668
523	" " " "	772	613-613	" " " "	669
523	Bernards Twp. v. Morrison	726	613	" " " "	670
524-525	" " " "	728	617-620	" " " "	671
525-528	" " " "	729	620-623	" " " "	672
528-529	" " " "	730	622-625	" " " "	673
529	Lincoln County v. Lansing	766	625-626	" " " "	674
529-532	" " " "	767	626	Shepherd v. Pepper	706
532-533	" " " "	768	628-630	" " " "	708
534	Lincoln County v. Satro	768	630-632	" " " "	709
534	Lincoln County v. Vincent	768	633-636	" " " "	710
534	Fogg v. Blair	721	636-639	" " " "	711
534-537	" " " "	722	639-642	" " " "	712
537-538	" " " "	723	642-645	" " " "	713
538-541	" " " "	724	645-648	" " " "	714
541-542	Starr v. Beck	761	648-651	" " " "	715
542-545	" " " "	762	651-653	" " " "	716
545-548	" " " "	763	653-655	" " " "	717
548-549	" " " "	764	655	Culver v. Uthe	776
549-552	" " " "	765	655-657	" " " "	777
552	" " " "	766	657-660	" " " "	778
552	Seart v. School District No. 2, Lake County	660	660	" " " "	779
552-554	" " " "	740	660-662	Palmer v. McMahon	772
554-557	" " " "	742	662-664	" " " "	773
557-559	" " " "	743	665	" " " "	774
560-561	" " " "	744	665-668	" " " "	775
561-564	" " " "	745	668-670	" " " "	776
564-565	" " " "	746	670	Peters v. Bain Griffin v. Peters	666
568-569	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. John ston	680	672-673	" " " "	697
569-571	" " " "	681	673-677	" " " "	698
571-574	" " " "	684	677-680	" " " "	699
574-577	" " " "	685	680-682	" " " "	700
577-578	" " " "	686	685-685	" " " "	701
579-580	Gregory v. Stetson	687	685-688	" " " "	702
580-583	" " " "	792	688-691	" " " "	703
583-587	" " " "	793	691-694	" " " "	704
587-589	Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi	794	694-697	" " " "	705
589-591	" " " "	784	697	" " " "	706
591-594	" " " "	785	697	Boswell v. Graff	787
594-595	" " " "	786	698-699	" " " "	788
595-597	" " " "	787	699-702	" " " "	789
597-600	Aspinwall v. Butler	787	702-705	" " " "	790
600 U. S.	" " " "	779	705-708	" " " "	791
		780	708-709	" " " "	792

THE DECISIONS OF THE Supreme Court of the United States,

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1889.

[Authenticated copy of opinion record strictly followed, except as to such reference words and figures as are inclosed in brackets.]

TIMOTHY CASE, Receiver of the GREEN BAY AND MINNESOTA RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

DAVID M. KELLY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 21-29.)

Power of a railroad company to acquire land—statutory authority—Public Act—equity—payment for improvements—decree.

1. The Green Bay and Minnesota Railroad Company, a Wisconsin corporation, has no authority, under the laws of that State, to receive an indefinite quantity of lands, whether by purchase or gift, with no limitation upon their use or upon their sale; but it is limited to the lands necessary to such uses as are appropriate to the operations of its railroad.
2. The corporation, in order to be entitled to buy and sell, to receive and hold, the title to real estate, must have some statutory authority of the State in which such lands lie, to enable it to do so.
3. The charter of such Company is a Public Act of which courts must take judicial notice, it being declared by the Legislature to be a Public Act.
4. Although the courts would hesitate to deprive such corporation of lands conveyed to it for other than corporate purposes, they will not aid it to violate the law and obtain title to lands which it is not authorized to hold.
5. Where a court of equity decrees that a plaintiff is entitled to land held in trust for it, it may direct that he should pay the value of improvements placed upon it by the trustee while in his possession.
6. Where the plaintiff has no right to take the property, it is not injured by a decree of the court which fails to grant such right, although such property was fraudulently acquired by the defendant.

[No. 2.]

Argued Jan. 26, 1888. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin for the conveyance of certain pieces of land as necessary and proper to said Railroad Company for its use for track, right of way, depots and other similar proper and necessary uses, and directing the payment for certain improvements made by defendants upon property. Affirmed.

133 U. S.

The action is to procure a declaration of trust and a decree ordering conveyances by the defendants of certain lands alleged to have been granted to them in trust for such Railroad Company. The court decreed a conveyance of such part of the land as was necessary for corporate uses by the Railroad Company, and refused to decree the conveyance of the other parts of the land.

The other facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walter C. Larned, for appellant:

Courts cannot take judicial notice of private acts.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Blackshire, 10 Kan. 477; Horn v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 38 Wis. 468; Perry v. New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. 55 Ala. 418; Mandere v. Bonsignore, 28 La. Ann. 415; Broad Street Hotel Co. v. Weaver, 57 Ala. 26; Chapman v. Colby, 47 Mich. 46; Workingmen's Bank v. Converse, 38 La. Ann. 963; Hailes v. State, 9 Tex. App. 170.

The finding of the court in this case, that the Company could only take such lands as were needed for railroad purposes, is wrong for the reason that the State alone by a proceeding of quo warranto has any right to inquire into such a question.

Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621 (25: 188); Leasure v. Hillegas, 7 Serg. & R. 813; Gouldie v. Northampton Water Co. 7 Pa. 233; Runyan v. Coster, 89 U. S. 14 Pet. 128 (10: 382); Bank of Virginia v. Poitauz, 8 Rand. (Va.) 186; McIndoe v. St. Louis, 10 Mo. 577; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 640 (24: 648).

If a person lays out money on another's property, with knowledge or notice of the true state of the title, he has no claim to be reimbursed.

8 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 1241, note; Rennie v. Young, 2 DeG. & J. 136; Dart v. Hercules, 57 Ill. 446; Cannon v. Copeland, 43 Ala. 252.

A purchaser with notice is not entitled to compensation for improvements.

2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1237; Davidson v. Bar- clay, 63 Pa. 406; Cook v. Kraft, 8 Lans. 512; Ramsden v. Dyson, L. R. 1 H. L. 129.

518

Mr. Geo. H. Noyes, for appellees:

The charter of the Railroad Company was not a private, but a public, Act, of which the court below could take judicial notice.

People v. Ottawa Hydraulic Co. 8 West. Rep. 499, 115 Ill. 281; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 61 U. S. 20 How. 227, 232 (15: 896, 898); Junction R. Co. v. Bank of Ashland, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 226 (20: 385).

The charter in question would be considered a public Act, of which the court would take judicial notice.

State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279; Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136; Rochester v. Alfred Bank, 13 Wis. 432; Castello v. Landwehr, 28 Wis. 522.

The Company, under its charter, could not purchase, receive or hold, nor could it take by eminent domain lands for speculative purposes or for any other than railroad purposes.

Rensselaer & S. R. Co. v. Davis, 48 N. Y. 137.

The property would be decreed to such cestui que trust without regard to any question of actual fraud. In such a case the party holding the title, as trustee, is allowed his improvements.

Lewin on Trusts, 444; Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mill Co. 56 Wis. 643, 43 Wis. 433; Benson v. Culler, 58 Wis. 107; Blodgett v. Hitt, 29 Wis. 169; Green v. Dixon, 9 Wis. 582; Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355, 48 Am. Dec. 498; Spindler v. Atkinson, 8 Md. 409; Perry on Trusts, §§ 206, 207.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

The Green Bay and Minnesota Railroad Company being in the hands of a receiver, namely, Timothy Case, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, in a suit by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, to foreclose a mortgage on said railroad, said Receiver was directed by the court to take possession of all the property, real and personal, of said Company, namely, its road-bed, lands, right of way, and all its other property and rights whatsoever, with authority to bring suits in the name of the Railroad Company as he should be advised by counsel to be necessary. Under this order Mr. Case, as Receiver, brought the present suit, stating that he sues in behalf of said Railroad Company, and as Receiver, the defendants David M. Kelly, Henry Ketchum and George Hiles and the Arcadia Mineral Spring Company, a corporation created by the laws of the State of Wisconsin.

The allegations of the bill are, that the defendants Kelly, Ketchum and Hiles, who were officers of the Railroad Company during its period of construction, had procured numerous donations of land from citizens who were interested in the construction of the road, along its line, intended to be for the use and benefit of the Railroad Company, and to assist it in such construction. The fundamental allegation of the bill is, that these defendants, representing to the persons who made the donations that they were officers of the road, and soliciting these grants for the benefit of the road, took the conveyances to themselves individually; that they did this in a fraudulent manner, by making the grantors in the conveyances believe that they, as the officers of the Company, could receive the conveyances for the benefit of the road, and that either the grantors did not really know to whom the conveyances were made, or were induced to believe that when made the grantees held the lands as a trust for the benefit of the road. These defendants not recognizing this trust, and the conveyances on their faces being merely conveyances to the individuals, either separately or collectively, to wit, to Ketchum, Kelly and Hiles, who now refuse to convey to the Company or to admit its right to the lands, this suit is brought to have a declaration of the trust made by the court and a decree ordering conveyances by the defendants of the land to the corporation.

It is further alleged that the mortgage in process of foreclosure in the court under which Case is acting as Receiver covered all the lands of the corporation, and would cover these lands if the title of the corporation in them was established.

The defendants Kelly, Ketchum and Hiles filed answers, in which they denied all fraud or deception, denied that they held the lands in trust for the Railroad Company, and denied the right of plaintiff to any relief. A decree for want of an answer was taken pro confesso against the Arcadia Mineral Spring Company: replications were filed to the answers, the case was put at issue as regards the three principal defendants, and an immense mass of testimony, documentary and otherwise, was taken.

The circuit court on the hearing was of opinion that the conveyances made by various persons to Kelly and Ketchum and Hiles of the lands described in the bill were made by the grantors and received by the defendants as contributions to the Railroad Company to aid in the construction of its road; and that if the Railroad Company had authority by law to receive such grants and to hold such real estate, it would be entitled to the relief sought in the bill in this case. But being also of opinion that by the laws of Wisconsin, and under its charter, it could only receive and hold lands for the defined purposes of the road, it held that only such lands as were necessary and proper for the immediate use of the road could be recovered in this suit. 18 American and English Railroad Cases, 70. It therefore entered the following interlocutory decree:

"This day came the parties, by their counsel, and, on consideration of the pleadings and proofs in this cause and the arguments of counsel thereon, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that the complainant is entitled to recover from the defendants the title and possession of all such lands mentioned in the bill of complaint as are required by the Railroad Company for right of way, depot buildings and other necessary railroad purposes, as described and limited in the charter of the Company, and that the bill of complaint as to all other portions of the lands described therein be dismissed.

"For the purpose of ascertaining what lands are required for right of way, depot grounds, and other railroad purposes, as above stated, and also the extent and value of any improvements made by defendants, this cause is referred to Hon. James H. Howe, as special master of this court, who will take such additional proof as either party may offer upon reasonable notice, the evidence to close by the first day of October next, and the report of the master to be filed herein by the 20th day of October next. The master will accompany his report with such reasons as he may deem proper in support of the conclusions reached by him. For that purpose he may visit the premises and report the result of his personal examination."

The master made his report, accompanied by the testimony, to which exceptions were taken both by Case, the Receiver, and by the defendants Hiles and Kelly, which exceptions were overruled by the court, and a final decree entered. From this the present appeal is taken.

That decree, after specifying certain pieces of land which the court considered as necessary and proper to the road for its use in the way of track, right of way, depots and other similar, proper and necessary uses, ordered the conveyance of these pieces of land by Kelly and by Ketchum and by Hiles and by the Arcadia Mineral Spring Company to the Railroad Company. It also directed a master to ascertain and report the value of certain improvements made by Hiles upon a portion of this property, and report the same to the court, for which Hiles was to be paid in case complainant should elect to take such improvements.

The principal question suggested by this appeal is, whether the complainant, as representing the Railroad Company, can maintain a suit for these lands; that is to say, whether the company was endowed by the Legislature of Wisconsin with a capacity to receive an indefinite quantity of lands, with no limitation upon their use, or upon their sale, or whether they were limited to the lands necessary to such uses as were appropriate to the operations of a railroad.

It is not pretended that there is any general statute of the State of Wisconsin which authorizes either this Company or any other corporation to purchase and hold lands indefinitely, as an individual could do, without regard to the uses to be made of such real estate. The charter of the Company, approved April 12, 1866, chapter 540, authorizes it to acquire real estate, namely, the fee simple in lands, tenements and easements, for their legitimate use for railroad purposes. It is thus authorized to take lands 100 feet in width for right of way, and also such as is needed for depot buildings, stopping stages, station-houses, freight-houses, warehouses, engine-houses, machine-shops, factories, and for purposes connected with the use and management of the railroad. This enumeration of the purposes for which the corporation could acquire title to real estate must necessarily be held exclusive of all other purposes, and as the court said at the time of making its interlocutory decree, "it was not authorized by its charter to take lands for speculative or farming purposes."

It must be held, therefore, that there was no authority under the laws of Wisconsin for this corporation to receive an indefinite quantity of lands, whether by purchase or gift, to be converted into money or held for any other purpose than those mentioned in its Act of incorporation.

To this view of the subject counsel urges several objections. The first of these which we will notice is that the charter of the corporation is a private Act of which the court cannot take judicial notice, and that as it was not pleaded nor offered in evidence, nor otherwise brought to the attention of the court, it could not be the foundation of its judgment. To this there are two sufficient answers. The first of which is, that if the Statute creating this corporation gave it no power to receive and hold lands in the manner we have mentioned, then it had no such power by virtue of any law of the State of Wisconsin; for a corporation, in order to be entitled to buy and sell, to receive and hold, the title to real estate, must have some statutory authority of the State in which such lands lie, to enable it to do so, and the absence of such provision in the law of its incorporation does not create any general statute which authorizes any such right.

Another answer is, that in the charter of the Railroad Company itself, Laws of Wisconsin of 1866, chapter 540, section 14, it is expressly enacted that "this Act is hereby declared to be a public Act, and shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication." To this it is replied by counsel for appellant that the Statute of Wisconsin cannot make that a public law which in its essential nature is a private law. However this may be, we do not doubt the authority of the Legislature of a State to enact that after the passage and publication of one of its statutes the courts of the State shall be bound to take judicial notice of it without its being pleaded or proven before them. This rule, thus prescribed for the government of the courts of the States, must be binding in proceedings in federal courts in the same State. Indeed, the distinction between public and private Acts has become very artificial and shadowy since legislative bodies have adopted the principle of publishing in printed form all statutes which they pass. Some of the States keep up the distinction by making a difference in the manner in which public and private acts shall be published, and in such cases this difference is to be observed and may become of some consequence; but the power of the Legislature to declare in any case that after the passage and publication of any of its laws they shall be judicially noticed as public Acts cannot, we think, be doubted.

It is next objected to the principle adopted by the court that the limitation upon the power of the corporation to receive land is one which concerns the State alone, and the title to such lands in a corporation can only be defeated by a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto on behalf of the State. The case of Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621 [25:188], is strenuously relied on to support this view. We need not stop here to inquire whether this Company can hold title to lands, which it is impliedly forbidden to do by its charter, because the case before us is not one in which the title to the lands in question has ever been vested in the Railroad Company or attempted to be so vested. The Railroad Company is plaintiff in this action, and is seeking to obtain the title to such lands. It has no authority by the Statute to receive such title and to own such lands, and the question here is, not whether the courts would deprive it of such lands if they had been conveyed to it, but whether they will aid it to violate the law and obtain a title which it has no power to hold. We think the questions are very different ones, and that while a court might hesitate to declare the title to lands received already, and in the possession and ownership of the Company, void on the principle that they had no authority to take such lands, it is very clear that it will not make itself the active agent in behalf of the Company in violating the law, and enabling the Company to do that which the law forbids.

Another alleged error in the decree of the court relates to that part of it which authorizes Hiles to recover the value of his improvements, if the corporation chooses to take the improvements. We do not think this objection sufficient to reverse the decree. In the first place the right of the plaintiff to have this land is not based so much upon the ground of the defendants having purchased it for the benefit of the road, as upon the offer of counsel of Hiles to convey it in case he were paid for the improvements. But if we suppose that Hiles held this land in trust for the benefit of the plaintiff, and is willing to acknowledge that trust, there is no reason why, in a court of equity, when the complainant asserts his right to the land and claims to recover both the title and possession from this trustee, he should not pay the value of the improvements which that trustee has placed upon it. It is further to be observed that the option is given to complainant to take these improvements with the land or to reject the improvements and take the land without them, in which latter case he is merely required to give the owners of the improvements access to the land for the purpose of removing them. If he desires the improvements he can keep them by paying for them. Hiles paid for the land when he got the title, and we see nothing unjust or inequitable in his receiving compensation for improvements made in good faith upon the land which he is now willing to convey to the Company, if the Company chooses to take them at their appraised value.

We are urged to consider that if this decree is affirmed, dismissing the bill of the Railroad Company, the defendants will be left in the possession of property fraudulently acquired, of considerable value, for which they gave no consideration. The answer to this is, that such a question cannot be raised by the plaintiff in this case, because, having no right to take the property, it is not injured by a decree of the court which fails to grant such right. The other questions must be between the defendants in this case and those from whom they took deeds of conveyance, or such other parties, public or private, as may show that they have an interest in the controversy.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller did not hear this case and took no part in its decision.

WILLIAM T. WASHBURN, Executor, ET AL., Apprs.,
v.

ASHBEL GREEN ET AL.

(See 'S. C. as Richardson's Err. v. Green, Reporter's ed. 80-50.)

Director of corporation—fiduciary relation—trust fund—stock, assessability of—bonds transferred to director by unfair means—moneys advanced—interest—clerk's fees.

1. A director and officer of a joint-stock corporation occupies a fiduciary relation and his dealings with the subject matter of his trust or agency, and with the beneficiary or party whose interest is confided to his care, are viewed with jealousy and distrust by the courts, and may be set aside on slight grounds.
2. Where a corporation becomes insolvent, its capital stock is a trust fund for the payment of its debts, and if not paid in full, a court of equity can require it to be paid up.
3. Where shares of such capital stock are voted to a director as a bonus, he is subject to the liabilities thereon which would attach to a shareholder who has taken stock but has not paid for the same, although there is a contract between him and the Company that such stock shall not be assessable.
4. Where bonds of the Company are transferred to a director by unfair means and in a clandestine manner, he cannot be regarded as a legal and equitable pledgee thereof, and, if sold by sheriff on his judgment against the Company, his purchase of them at the sheriff's sale vests in him no title.
5. Where a director advanced money to redeem bonds of the Company from a pledge, charged the money to the Company and received its notes therefor, and then attempted to levy upon and sell the bonds and himself become the purchaser thereof at a nominal sum, and thus gain an unconscionable advantage over other bondholders, no allowance should be made to him by way of equitable salvage for the money thus advanced by him.
6. Interest on the bonds should only be allowed from the date when they were delivered to the owners and holders of them.
7. Motion by an intervening petitioner in the suit, whose appeal was dismissed, to have refunded to him $450, deposited by order of the court with the clerk, for two printed copies of the record, granted to the extent of $200.

[No. 19.]

Argued Oct. 17, 18, 1889. Decided Jan. 30, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan, in a foreclosure suit in regard to the priority of the claims of creditors to the fund who are allowed to intervene and prove their respective claims for priority, al-

NOTE.—As to right to pledge stock, and rights of pledgee of same, see note to Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. Bk. 28, p. 478.

As to preferred stock, its issue, and rights of holders of same, see note to Warren v. King, Bk. 27, p. 769.

As to when taxation of stock or shares in corporation impairs obligation of contract, see note to Providence Bank v. Billings, Bk. 7, p. 389.

As to fiduciary position of directors, their contracts and dealings with corporation, see note to Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. Bk. 17, p. 389.

lowing a portion of the claim of Richardson, an intervening creditor, as respects certain bonds held by him, and rejecting it as to other bonds claimed by him. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lyman D. Norris, for appellants.

Messrs. Daniel P. Hays, T. J. O'Brien, J. Hubley Ashton, D. A. McKnight, Henry M. Dechert and Henry T. Dechert, for appellees:

Delivery is necessary to a pledge.

Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467 (24: 779); Thurber v. Oliver, 26 Fed. Rep. 224.

A trustee cannot deal with trust property for his own benefit.

Marsh v. Whitmore, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 178, 183 (22: 482, 484); Wardell v. Union Pac. R. Co. 108 U. S. 651, 658 (26: 509, 511).

The office of director of a railroad company is fiduciary in its character, and such director is incapacitated from dealing in his own behalf in respect to the corporation property, or in respect to any matter involving his powers and duties as such director.

Hoyle v. Plattsburgh & M. R. Co. 54 N. Y. 314; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587 (23: 328); Barnes v. Brown, 80 N. Y. 527, 535; Aberdeen R. Co. v. Blakie, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 461.

The appellants, Richardson and Day, are not entitled to claim the 800 bonds voted to Richardson at the meeting of August 8d, 1875, for the reason that the meeting was not a legal meeting of the Company, binding upon either the stockholders, the bondholders or other creditors of the Company.

Rez v. Liverpool, 2 Burr. 728; Rez v. Chetwynd, 7 Barn. & C. 695; Wiggin v. Freewill Baptist Church, 8 Met. 801; Stow v. Wyse, 7 Conn. 214; People v. Albany Med. Col. 26 Hun. 351; Metropolitan Elevated R. Co. v. Manhattan R. Co. 14 Abb. N. C. 288; Re East Norfolk Tramways Co. L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 968.

The appellants, Richardson and Day, are not entitled to the 400 bonds claimed, for the reason that Richardson was a director of the Company, which was then insolvent.

Bradley v. Converse, 4 Cliff. 875; Bradley v. Farwell, 1 Holmes, 433; Coons v. Tome, 9 Fed. Rep. 532; Wardell v. Union Pac. R. Co. 108 U. S. 651, 658 (26: 509, 511); Thomas v. Brownville, Ft. K. & P. R. Co. 109 U. S. 522 (27: 1018).

Assuming that Richardson had a lien upon these 600 bonds, he lost and surrendered such lien when he delivered them to the sheriff of the County of New York, and allowed them to be sold under his attachment and execution.

Jacobs v. Latour, 5 Bing. 130; Wingard v. Banning, 39 Cal. 543; Legg v. Willard, 17 Pick. 140; Meeker v. Wilson, 1 Gall. 419; Evans v. Warren, 122 Mass. 303; Bean v. Bolton, 3 Phil. 87.

Contracts made between the corporation and the officers and directors of the Company, as individuals, are void as against public policy.

Wardell v. Union Pac. R. Co. 108 U. S. 651 (26: 509), and cases cited.

The directors of a corporation are subject to the obligations which the law imposes upon trustees and agents, and they cannot, with respect to the same matters, act for themselves 188 U. S.

and for it, nor occupy a position in conflict with its interests.

Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 60 (23: 222); Griswold v. Seligman, 72 Mo. 110; Upton v. Englehart, 3 Dill. 497; Wardell v. Union Pac. R. Co. 108 U. S. 651 (26: 509); Knowlton v. Congress & E. Spring Co. 57 N. Y. 518; Van Cott v. Van Brunt, 82 N. Y. 535; Gardner v. Butler, 80 N. J. Eq. 702; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65 (23: 384); Duncomb v. N. Y. etc. R. Co. 88 N. Y. 1.

The appeals herein should be dismissed for irregularity, inasmuch as the names of the parties appellees are not set forth in the appeals.

Smith v. Clark, 58 U. S. 12 How. 21 (13: 875); The Protector, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 87 (20: 48).

The report of the master, as to the matters of fact, is prima facie correct, and the court will not wander at large into the evidence to ascertain whether, by possibility, the master was wrong in his conclusions or not.

Medaker v. Bonebrake, 108 U. S. 72 (27: 655); Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 149 (31: 668); Donnell v. Columbian Ins. Co. 2 Sumn. 366; Mason v. Crosby, 8 Woodb. & M. 258; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co. 104 Mass. 521; Richards v. Todd, 127 Mass. 167.

A judgment against a mortgagor corporation, prior to the receivership, but subsequent to the mortgage, is held subject to the mortgage.

Central Trust Co. v. East Tenn. V. & G. R. Co. 30 Fed. Rep. 897; Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 2 Woods, 542; Hills v. Case, 9 Biss. 549; Kelly v. Green Bay & M. R. Co. 10 Biss. 151; Porter v. Pittsburgh Steel Co. 122 U. S. 281 (30: 1210).

The equitable principles upon which the decisions in the leading cases of Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 285 (25: 339), and Burnham v. Bowen, 111 U. S. 776 (28: 596), and in other cases of that class, are founded, are not applicable to claims such as the present, accrued for the original construction of a railroad while there was a subsisting mortgage upon it.

This was expressly adjudged in Porter v. Pittsburgh B. Steel Co. 120 U. S. 671 (30: 888), affirmed on application for rehearing, 122 U. S. 280 (30: 1210).

Subsequent creditors cannot be heard to impeach an executed contract, where the dealings with the Company, of which they claim the benefit, occurred after the contract was executed.

Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 102 U. S. 148 (26: 106); Porter v. Pittsburgh B. Steel Co. 120 U. S. 678 (30: 838).

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, originally brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan by Ashbel Green and William Bond, trustees, against the Chicago, Saginaw and Canada Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Michigan, to foreclose a mortgage given by that Company on all its property and effects of whatsoever description to the plaintiffs, to secure the payment of 5,500 of its bonds of $1,000 each, payable to said trustees or bearer.

The suit was commenced on the 16th of November, 1876. A receiver was at once appointed. The Company made no defense, but numerous parties, holders of the bonds thus secured, and others with claims of various kinds against the Company, with leave of the court, intervened in the case, and were allowed to prove their respective claims. The controversy resolved itself into a contest for priority among the respective claimants in the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property thereafter to be made.

On the 30th of June, 1882, a decree was rendered that the bill was well filed, and that the complainants were entitled to a foreclosure. The matter was referred to a master to take testimony and report upon the validity, and also the priority, of the various claims filed. On the 6th of November, 1882, the master filed his report, in which he divided the claims presented into four classes, numbered A, B, C and D, respectively. In class C he placed the claims secured by the first mortgage bonds, and the amount of said security. In this class was the claim of Benjamin Richardson for money furnished to aid in the construction of the road, amounting with interest, to $273,282.87, secured, as the master found, by 200 bonds, amounting to $374,904. Exceptions to this report were filed by nearly all of the parties interested, but, in the main, it was confirmed by the court, and, on the 3d of May, 1883, a decree was entered on the question of priority among the respective claimants in the distribution of the fund arising from the sale of the mortgaged property, which had occurred. This decree, among other things, provided that, after certain expenses and certificates given by the receiver had been paid, the remainder of the fund should be ratably divided among the bond claimants, and where the bonds were held as collateral security no greater amount should be allowed than sufficient to satisfy the debt thus secured.

Benjamin Richardson's claim is in this class. It was for 600 bonds claimed as collateral security for the amount of money advanced by him for the construction of the road, and for 1,105 other bonds which he alleged he had redeemed from certain bankers in London, and, in another form, was for 3,574 bonds which he had purchased at an execution sale in New York City that was had to satisfy a judgment he had obtained against the Railroad Company in the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of New York for the amount of his debt with interest. The decree allowed Richardson's claim as respects 200 of the 600 bonds, but rejected it as to the other bonds claimed by him.

Subsequently that decree was amended by the decree of October 8, 1883, so as to correct certain mistakes in the calculation of interest upon the bonds. The effect of this latter decree was to reduce Richardson's share of the proceeds by $2,173.91 from what the original decree of May 3, 1883, had made it; and also to reduce in like manner the share of one of the other intervening parties, the Wrought Iron Bridge Company of Canton, Ohio, by the sum of $183.60.

Four separate appeals were taken from the decree of May 3, 1883, and an appeal was also taken by Richardson and his assignee, Henry

Day, from the amended decree of October 8, 1883. At the last term of the court all the appeals were dismissed except that of Richardson and Day from the decree of October 8, 1883. Richardson v. Green, 130 U. S. 104 [82: 872]. Before the decision at the last term of the court was rendered Richardson died, and his legal representatives are now prosecuting the appeal. As a decision upon the questions presented by this appeal affects the distribution decreed by the court below of $137,154.94 among the other claimants, it becomes necessary to examine the facts and to give consideration to the equities which relate to the claims of all those parties.

The Chicago, Saginaw and Canada Railroad Company was organized about the 4th of December, 1872, under an Act of the Michigan Legislature approved April 18, 1871, with a capital stock of $4,200,000, divided into 4,200 shares, for the purpose of building a railroad from St. Clair, in the eastern part of the State, to Grand Haven, on Lake Michigan, a distance of about 210 miles.

The original incorporators each subscribed for 210 shares of this capital stock, 5 per cent of which was paid in. This was all the stock ever subscribed, and all the money paid in on any stock. Nine of those corporators were elected directors, all but three of whom resigned in 1873, transferring their stock, it is supposed, to those three. The stock subscribed and the money paid on it may, for all practical purposes, be considered as having afterwards disappeared from the organization.

For the purpose of raising funds to build the road and equip it the corporation executed a mortgage and issued 5,500 seven-per-cent bonds of $1,000 each, due in 30 years, with interest payable semi-annually, and placed them in the hands of its executive committee to be put upon the market. Before selling any of its bonds, however, the corporation borrowed considerable money from various parties, giving the bonds as security, at the rate of two dollars in bonds for every dollar borrowed, and also giving, as a bonus, to the parties from whom the money was borrowed, a large amount of capital stock.

These loans were negotiated with the following persons: (1) With a syndicate of four persons in Philadelphia, designated in the record as the "Philadelphia parties," who advanced money to the Company on the terms above stated until the amount aggregated, according to the report of the master, $143,629.62. The number of bonds pledged to the syndicate, as collateral security for this loan, was 462. The Philadelphia parties claimed before the court below to be entitled to prove all the bonds held by them to the full amount of principal and accrued interest; and to a share in the proceeds of the fund derived from the sale of the mortgaged property to the extent of their loans and the interest thereon. The decree of the court allowed their claim, to the extent of 287.26 bonds only, that number being twice the amount of the principal advanced. The second party from whom the Company obtained a loan was the appellant Richardson, upon terms hereinafter stated. The third party was George G. Sickles of New York, who loaned the Company $100,000 upon a pledge of 250 of the bonds, as collateral, and also a bonus of $100,000 full-paid stock. Afterwards his son, Daniel E. Sickles, bought 163 of the bonds for the consideration that he would assume and pay the debts due his father, which he afterwards did. The bonds held by the elder Sickles were then returned to the Company. Daniel E. Sickles claimed that, as an innocent purchaser, he was entitled to priority over the other collateral bondholders, who were the directors, officers and promoters of the Company. His demand for priority was disallowed by the court; and the only part of his claim that was allowed was, that as innocent purchaser of the 163 bonds he might prove them to the full amount of his principal and interest.

After the negotiation for the three loans above named, Thomas M. Nelson contracted with the Company to ballast and iron the first twenty miles of the road from the Town of St. Louis west, etc. This contract he substantially performed. Two months afterwards he entered into another contract with the Company to clear, grub and grade the road, and build bridges and culverts on the second division thereof to Lakeview. Part of this second contract was assigned to the claimant Soule. This contract also, with the exception of a part of the grading, was performed by these parties. They had no security for the payment for their services. They relied on the solvency of the Company and the assurances of Richardson, who was then a director and the treasurer of it, that arrangements were perfected for the payment of the work as fast as it progressed. The Company failed to pay the amount due on these contracts. Suits were brought, judgments obtained, and executions issued which were returned nulla bona. They presented their claims to the master, who reported in their favor, and allowed them priority over the bondholders to the amount of $16,342.68. Exceptions to this finding, having been filed, were sustained by the court below, which allowed their debt, but put it in the fourth class, to be paid pro rata from any surplus remaining after the bondholders were paid.

The claim of the Wrought Iron Bridge Company was based upon a contract with the Railroad Company, under which it built an iron bridge across the Saginaw River, which was sold by the receiver for the sum of $20,000. This claimant was allowed a share in the proceeds of the sale on the basis of the 66 bonds of which it had become the actual owner.

The claim of Stevens was based upon a bona fide loan made to the Company by him. By the decree of the court below he was allowed a share in the funds to the extent of 32 bonds.

Any modification of the decree of the court below favorable to the contention of the appellants herein will correspondingly reduce the allowances made to the above-mentioned claimants.

The loan of $100,000 by Richardson to the Railroad Company, on which he obtained the first 200 bonds, as collateral, was made by him on the 31st of March, 1875, under a contract with the Company, in which he agreed to lend the corporation that amount upon certain terms, which, among others, were, (1) that the Company should deliver to him 200 mortgage bonds of $1,000 each; (2) that, within fourteen days, he should be elected a director of the Company; (3) that John A. Elwell, of New York City, should be employed by the Company at a salary of $2,500, and his personal expenses, for the purpose of superintending the construction of the road and of looking after the interests of Richardson; (4) that as a further collateral security the Company should lease the first 20 miles of the road as soon as it should be completed, and assign such lease to Richardson, and should also assign to him all the subsidy notes pertaining to that division of the road, he to retain all the money derived from the lease and subsidy notes, and render unto the Company, at final settlement, 7 per cent interest upon the money so received; and (5) that the Company should execute and deliver to Richardson 1,250 full-paid shares of capital stock of $100 each. Although, on its face, this was to be fully paid-up stock, it was understood that no money was to be actually paid for it, the consideration, as recited in the agreement, being Richardson's services, good offices and influence in favor of the Company in the financial world.

In the contest for priority among the claimants before the master the judgment creditors of the corporation claimed that they entered into the contracts with the Company whereon they obtained their judgments relying upon its resources, which they were led to think were ample by reason of the amount of the outstanding paid-up stock in the hands of such responsible stockholders and owners as Richardson and the Philadelphia parties; and it was contended that those stockholders should not be allowed to share in the proceeds arising from the sale of the mortgaged property on the basis of the bonds held by them, as collateral, unless they should first pay to the Company the full amount of the shares of stock of which they had held themselves out to the world as the owners. The master concurred in this view, but, because there was no proof of the actual value of the stock, he declined to make any deduction from the amount due to Richardson, but limited his claim to the 200 bonds. The appellants received the amount which the decree allowed, but appealed to this court from that decree, contending that they were entitled to a larger share of the fund on the basis of the additional 400 bonds.

To determine the merits of the contention of the appellants, a somewhat minute statement of the circumstances which led the board of directors to vote to Richardson those 400 additional bonds becomes necessary. The 1,250 shares of paid-up stock for which he paid nothing made him the largest stockholder in the Company. He and the Philadelphia parties held all the outstanding stock with the exception of a few shares, and the entire and absolute control of the corporation was thus in their hands. Richardson soon controlled a majority of the board, and dominated its proceedings. He was at once made a director, according to the contract. He became chairman of its executive committee and its managing director. The lease of the first 20 miles of the road was made to him, and that part was turned over to his possession. He had John A. Elwell, his coadjutor and representative, elected a director, who became, successively, secretary, auditor and a member of the executive committee of the board. He afterwards caused Ambrose, Hamm and Cooper to be put upon the board of directors, to each of whom he assigned small portions of his stock to enable them to vote in furtherance of his schemes and interests; and the 1,250 shares of paid-up stock were in due time issued to him.

At a meeting of the board of directors, held on the 5th of July, 1875, although he had advanced nothing beyond his original loan already secured, he demanded 100 additional bonds, representing $100,000, as collateral, and the board, yielding to his exactions, unanimously adopted a resolution directing the secretary and treasurer to deposit with him that number of bonds for such purpose. Within one month afterwards, to wit, August 5, 1875, Richardson was unanimously elected treasurer of the Company, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of E. P. Ferry, which he had tendered to take effect when his accounts should be adjusted by the executive committee, and when the personal obligations he had made should be settled, or he be relieved therefrom. The board of directors also voted to Richardson 800 additional first-mortgage bonds as collateral. How he accomplished these results, to wit, the resignation of Ferry, his own election as Ferry's successor, and also the vote to himself of the 800 bonds, is very fully explained by the testimony of the directors and of Richardson himself. Ferry thus states why he resigned: "Mr. Richardson said to me that he thought that, advancing as much money as he did, he not only should have all the moneys of the Company in his hands, as treasurer, to see that they were properly disbursed, but also the securities of the Company under his control." In explanation of his tendering his resignation, to take effect upon being settled with and relieved from personal responsibility, he says: "I had indorsed the Company's notes to the amount of about $20,000, and furnished them with money, both. I had advanced the Company, as treasurer, from my own funds, in the neighborhood of $10,000. I think it was $9,000 and something." He further stated that Mr. Richardson assured him that the adjustment and release asked for should be effected. He also stated that Richardson had never performed those promises. The vote of 800 bonds to Richardson is thus explained by himself: "I demanded of the board 800 more bonds, and got them by resolution of the board." The resolution directed a conveyance to Richardson of 800 of the first-mortgage bonds of the Company upon the consideration of advances made and to be made by him. The fact is, that the sum actually advanced by him in addition to his original loan, for which these 400 bonds were successively voted to him, amounted to a little over $31,000. The terms upon which he made the demand for these additional bonds are stated by Ferry and Elwell. At this same meeting, held August 3, 1875, Richardson introduced the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the president and secretary be, and they are hereby, authorized to execute a contract for the purpose of grading, tying and bridging the Company's located road from its western terminus to Lakeview."

Elwell testifies that Richardson stated to the board that if they would, by resolution, authorize him to receive 800 additional bonds of the Company of $1,000 each, he would make further advances to a sufficient amount for the Company to go on with the extension and equipment of the road to Lakeview. It was in consideration of these promised advances that the resolution was adopted directing the 800 bonds to be conveyed to him. This promise was never fulfilled by Richardson. Elwell testifies that he advanced no money for the extension or equipment of the road to Lakeview, nor did he purchase any iron or other material to be used on that part of the road. Both Richardson and Ferry, according to their own testimony, considered that the action of the board of directors placed Richardson, as treasurer, in the shoes of Ferry, at least with regard to the custody of the unissued bonds of the Company. These bonds, 2,985 in number, were deposited with a Safe Deposit Company in New York City, subject to the control of Ferry. Ferry immediately drew an order on that company authorizing it to deliver to Richardson all the bonds belonging to the Railroad Company deposited with it, and, through Elwell, gave to Richardson the key to the vault in which they were kept, in order that he (Richardson) might take possession of them. Armed with this order to the Trust Company to deliver the bonds to him, as treasurer, Richardson, on the 30th of August, 1875, in company with Messrs. O. W. Child and M. J. Baney, proceeded to the place of business of the Trust Company, and, his order having been accepted by that company, took possession of all the unissued bonds there belonging to the Railroad Company, Messrs. Child and Baney counting them and making a memorandum of them. This memorandum of the number counted included the 400 now claimed by the appellants, as collateral security. On the following day, Richardson, claiming to act under the authority of the aforesaid resolutions of the board of directors voting the 400 bonds to him as collateral security, and the order of the president of the Company to Ferry, separated 400 of the bonds from the remainder (Child and Baney assisting him), and placed them in a tin box, which he afterwards kept in his personal possession.

On the 11th of October, 1875, Richardson was appointed managing director, irrevocable, and chairman of the executive committee; and, on the 12th of the same month, he gave to Ferry the following receipt:

"Received of Edward P. Ferry, treasurer of the Chicago, Saginaw & Canada Railroad Co., twenty-two hundred and eighty-nine (2,289) of the first-mortgage bonds of the Company, numbered as detailed by the memorandum above, dated New York, Aug. 20, '75, and signed by O. W. Child & M. J. Baney, placed in my custody as chairman of the executive committee of said R. R. Co., in accordance with the resolution of the board of directors passed Oct. 11, '75, for custody, disposal or sale.

"Benjamin Richardson.
"Indorsed: Benjamin Richardson. Receipt
—2,289 bonds. Oct. 12, 1875."

The list thus receipted for by Richardson, as chairman of the executive committee, included the 400 bonds numbered from 3,201 to 3,600, inclusive, which he previously, as before stated, had separated from the original number, and claimed had been pledged to him as collateral security. It is safe to say, too, we think, that no one interested in the affairs of the Company, except Elwell and Richardson, knew, at that time, that Richardson was holding those 400 bonds in any other capacity than as treasurer of the Company. Elwell testified that at the meeting of October 11, 1875, none of the other parties knew that Richardson had those bonds.

W. J. Kelley testified that, at a meeting of the board of directors on that day, the understanding of the board derived from Richardson's statement was, that he had in his possession only the original 200 bonds as collateral. Secured in the possession of the Company's bonds, Richardson refused to comply with the conditions on which Ferry had resigned. On the 16th of August, 1875, Elwell inclosed in a letter to Richardson two renewal notes to be substituted for those on which Ferry had been indorser, saying: "Mr. Ferry demands that, before he resigns his office of treasurer and turns everything over to you, that you shall indorse the renewal notes personally, as he did the original ones, and it is for that purpose that I send them, and they ought to be returned to Mr. Ferry immediately, so as to reach him the last of this week, to be used in the bank next Monday. . . . Mr. Ferry gave me one of his envelopes stamped, in which you had better inclose the notes to him. . . . Mr. Ferry has agreed to turn over to you or to deliver to me for you on your order all books, accounts, vouchers, etc., in his possession as treasurer upon the two notes being returned to him indorsed." Richardson remonstrated with Elwell against this, and on the 21st of the same month he replied to Elwell's next letter, declining to sign the notes, and declaring himself indifferent to Elwell's retention of the books and papers pertaining to the office of treasurer, inasmuch as he (Richardson) had already become, not only the treasurer, but also the receiver, advancer and chief controller of the Company. On that day the board of directors voted 120 bonds to Richardson as a bonus. Counsel for the appellants insist in their brief that this was done in his absence, and that he repudiated this resolution and refused to take those bonds. This statement is in conflict with that of Kelley, president of the Company, who testifies that Mr. Richardson was present, and, so far from objecting to the vote of the bonus to him of 120 bonds, he insisted upon it; but as they make no claim on these bonds as a bonus, it is not necessary to add anything further, except the remark that the action of the board illustrates the readiness of the directors to subserve all Richardson's wishes.

At the meeting of July 8, 1876, the board, in anticipation of the foreclosure of the mortgage then determined on, passed resolutions auditing the entire account of Richardson against the Company, and declared the sum of $185,584.18 to be due to him from it. Another resolution, unanimously adopted, ratified and approved the bonds issued to him for that aggregate sum. A third resolution was adopted directing the secretary to execute and deliver to him the notes of the Company at 7 per cent, payable at such times as could be agreed on with Richardson, and that there should be embodied in the note an authority to the holder, in default of payment, to sell such bonds without notice and with the right to become himself the purchaser if sold at public sale. On the same day, immediately after the meeting, Elwell, the secretary, gave to Richardson those notes, in which were recited the numbers of the 600 bonds under discussion. On the same day, Richardson and Ferry addressed to the mortgage trustees a written request to institute proceedings to foreclose the mortgage. These notes, on the 17th of July, at the request of Richardson, were torn up by Elwell, and demand notes, bearing the same date, substituted therefor. Forthwith Richardson commenced suit against the corporation in the Court of Common Pleas of the City of New York on those notes; and on the 12th of August obtained the judgment hereinbefore mentioned. Execution was issued on that judgment, and, as the proofs clearly show, the sheriff levied upon and sold all the bonds of the Company which had been placed in Richardson's custody, namely, the 600 bonds which he claimed had been pledged to him as aforesaid, and 2,974 other bonds, including 1,105 which he claimed to have redeemed from a bank in London. At the sale Richardson purchased all those bonds at the price of $50 each, $178,700. A short time after this sale and purchase, to wit, November 16, 1876, this suit for foreclosure was commenced, and as an intervenor therein he claimed that by virtue of his purchase at the sheriff's sale he became the absolute owner of the entire 3,574 bonds. Afterwards he appears to have confined his claim to the 600 bonds alleged to have been held by him originally as collateral security and the 1,105 bonds just referred to. It would seem from the briefs filed in this court by counsel on behalf of appellants that the claim here is confined to the 400 bonds above described.

In view of all the facts and circumstances presented by this record we are unable to see any such superior equity arising out of the transactions of Richardson with this Company as entitles him to a priority over the other creditors in the distribution of the fund in question; or anything in his mode of getting possession of the 400 bonds which gives him a better claim to them than that of the other creditors. While we may not be prepared to concur with the master in some of the reasons upon which he based his report, yet we do not think either that report or the decree of the court below confirming it contains any error of which the appellants can complain.

Richardson's relation to the subject matter of this controversy was threefold: (1) that of a creditor of an insolvent corporation claiming for his debt priority of payment over those of all other creditors, out of the fund arising from a foreclosure sale of the mortgaged property; (2) that of a director and officer of that corporation at the time his debt against it was created; and (3) that of the largest shareholder of its capital stock. Undoubtedly his relation as a director and officer, or as a stockholder of the Company, does not preclude him from entering into contracts with it, making loans to it and taking its bonds as collateral security; but courts of equity regard such personal transactions of a party in either of these positions not, perhaps, with distrust, but with a large measure of watchful care; and unless satisfied by the proof that the transaction was entered into in good faith, with a view to the benefit of the Company as well as of its creditors, and not solely with a view to his own benefit, they refuse to lend their aid to its enforcement. In Twin Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 588 [23: 329], Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "That a director of a joint-stock corporation occupies one of those fiduciary relations where his dealings with the subject matter of his trust or agency, and with the beneficiary or party whose interest is confided to his care, is viewed with jealousy by the courts, and may be set aside on slight grounds, is a doctrine founded on the soundest morality, and which has received the clearest recognition in this court and in others."

In relation to the rights and liabilities of a stockholder, this court said in Sawyer v. Hoag, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 610, 620 [21: 731, 735], Mr. Justice Miller again delivering the opinion of the court: "We think it now well established that the capital stock of a corporation, especially its unpaid subscriptions, is a trust fund for the benefit of the general creditors of the corporation." Proceeding to show that this trust cannot be defeated by a simulated payment of the stock subscription, nor by any device short of an actual payment in good faith, he concluded with these words: "It is therefore but just that, when the interest of the public or of strangers dealing with this corporation is to be affected by any transaction between the stockholders who own the corporation and the corporation itself, such transaction should be subject to a rigid scrutiny, and if found to be infected with anything unfair towards such third person, calculated to injure him, or designed intentionally and inequitably to screen the stockholder from loss at the expense of the general creditor, it should be disregarded or annulled so far as it may inequitably affect him."

In the case last cited the stockholder nominally paid the stock subscription, but the money was immediately taken back as a loan, and it was claimed by him as a valid payment. The transaction was characterized by the court as a "fraud upon the public who were expected to deal with them."

In Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co., 102 U. S. 143, 161 [26: 106, 111] this court said, Mr. Justice Bradley delivering the opinion: "When a corporation becomes insolvent, it is so far civilly dead that its property may be administered as a trust fund for the benefit of its stockholders and creditors. A court of equity, at the instance of the proper parties, will then make those funds trust funds, which in other circumstances are as much the absolute property of the corporation as any man's property is his."

In the more recent case of Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R. Co. v. Ham, 114 U. S. 587, 594 [29: 285, 286], it was said by this court, speaking through Mr. Justice Gray: "The property of a corporation is doubtless a trust fund for the payment of its debts, in the sense that when the corporation is lawfully dissolved and all its business wound up, or when it is insolvent, all its creditors are entitled in equity to have their debts paid out of the corporate property before any distribution thereof among the stockholders. It is also true, in the case of a corporation, as in that of a natural person, that any conveyance of property of the debtor, without authority of law, and in fraud of existing creditors, is void as against them."

Can the transaction between Richardson and the insolvent corporation of which he was largely the owner and controller, especially with respect to the claim he is urging in this case, stand the test of the fairness and good faith which, as a director and stockholder, he owed to the corporation, its creditors and bona fide bondholders? His very first transaction with the corporation, by which he introduced himself into it as a stockholder, was an illegal and fraudulent act. We refer to the agreement on the part of the Company to issue to Richardson 1,250 shares of bonus stock. At the time this agreement was made and the stock issued in pursuance thereof, the statutes of Michigan provided: "That it shall not be lawful for any railroad company, existing by virtue of the laws of this State, nor for any officer of any such company, to sell, dispose of or pledge any shares in the capital stock of such company, nor to issue certificates of shares in the capital stock of such company, until the shares so sold, disposed of or pledged, and the shares for which such certificates are to be issued, shall have been fully paid." (2 Comp. Laws, par. 7757.)

We have seen that all the acts of Richardson as director, stockholder, chairman of the executive committee and treasurer, all of which offices he held at one time, had their origin in this bonus stock. After having exercised all the privileges and powers of a stockholder in the corporation, it cannot be seriously contended that he is to be held exempt from the liabilities which would attach to a bona fide shareholder who has taken shares purporting to be paid up, but which in truth are not paid up. The case of Scoville v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 143, 153, 154 [26: 968, 973], bears a close analogy to this. Mr. Justice Woods, delivering the opinion of the court in that case, said: "The stock held by the defendant was evidenced by certificates of full-paid shares. It is conceded to have been the contract between him and the company that he should never be called upon to pay any further assessments upon it . . . But the doctrine of this court is, that such a contract, though binding on the company, is a fraud in law on its creditors, which they can set aside; that when their rights intervene and their claims are to be satisfied, the stockholders can be required to pay their stock in full." The same rule is laid down in Ex parte Daniell, 1 De G. & J. 372. In that case the directors of the company allotted to themselves a number of shares by a resolution that the shares so allotted were to be treated as paid-up stock in full. Daniell, one of the directors, was not present at the time the resolution was adopted, but he afterwards accepted the shares allotted to him. An order having been made for winding up the company, assessments were made upon those shares for the purpose, it is supposed, of paying the debts of the company. It was held that Daniell was liable to those assessments to the same extent as if the resolution had not provided that the shares were to be treated as paid-up stock.

The principle underlying all of the decisions which we have cited upon this point is, that the capital stock of a corporation, when it becomes insolvent, is in law assets of the corporation, to be appropriated to the payment of its debts; and that creditors have the right to assume that the stock issued by the corporation and held by its stockholders as paid-up stock had been paid up, or, if unpaid, that a court of equity, at the instance of the proper parties, could require it to be paid up. In the case now before us, the bonds claimed by the appellants were voted to Richardson by his associate directors, every one of whom owed his election to the holders of this bonus stock alone. The total amount of the advances made by him, for which these bonds are collateral, is very little larger than one half of the amount of the stock which he had as paid-up stock. If the stock given to him and the Philadelphia parties had been really paid-up stock, there would have been no insolvency on the part of this corporation.

Irrespective of the question whether he can be made liable for the face amount of this stock, or for its proved value, the facts we have detailed certainly do not entitle his claim to outrank that of any bona fide creditor, whether secured or unsecured, in the matter of distribution.

The master found that the 400 bonds had never been delivered by the Company to Richardson in his individual capacity, in pledge as collateral security for the moneys advanced. It is strenuously argued in behalf of appellants that the evidence taken under the order of the court, after the findings of the master had been made and his report filed, for the purpose of explaining the receipt given by Richardson to his predecessor, Ferry, is sufficient to overturn the master's report on that point. That evidence was before the court when it rendered the decree complained of, and, so far as the decree shows, it was not regarded as essentially modifying the facts as found by the master. We think the conclusion of the court was correct. We do not deny that cases may arise in which, if everything were admitted to be fairly done, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the Company, such a personal possession as that which Richardson obtained, although not such an actual delivery as the board had intended and directed, might be considered as equivalent to a legal delivery. But under the special circumstances of this case, in view of the unfair means employed by Richardson to have the entire body of the Company's bonds transferred from the custody of Ferry into his own custody, and the clandestine manner in which he took out the 400 from that body, not only without notice of the fact to the Company, but with an implied, if not an expressed, denial of the transactions, we do not think that he can be regarded as standing in the position of a legal and equitable pledgee; or that he ever acquired, as such pledgee, a lien on the 400 bonds. But even if there could be any doubt on this point, Richardson himself by his own act has removed it. He waived and abandoned all claim to any lien, as a pledgee, by his voluntary surrender and delivery of the bonds to the sheriff of the County of New York, as the property of the Company, to be sold under execution. If the 400 bonds were not delivered to Richardson, as we think the court below correctly held, it follows that the unissued bonds were not subject to attachment or to execution as valid and binding obligations against the Company, and that Richardson's purchase at the sheriff's sale vested in him no title or ownership in them.

Counsel for the appellants in their brief put not a little stress upon the fact that Richardson's claim is based upon the advance of actual money for the enterprise to the full amount of $185,584.18. The answer to this is, that the decree of the court below recognized his claim to the entire amount and gave him his ratable share of the proceeds of the sale, upon the footing of the 200 bonds delivered to him, up to the amount of $273,282.87. We are of the opinion that that decree gave him the fullest measure of allowance to which he could possibly be justly entitled.

It is hardly necessary to say much with respect to the claim of Richardson to the 1,105 bonds alleged by him to have been redeemed as aforesaid. Upon this question the master says:

"The case is briefly this: The board of directors sent one of their number as financial agent to Europe with authority to negotiate a sale of bonds. While there, to defray expenses, he borrowed a sum of money from a Mr. Stevens and pledged to him 50 of the bonds as collateral security; these, together with the 1,105 bonds, this agent and Stevens deposited with the Consolidated Bank of London, with agreement that the bonds should not be delivered to anyone without the joint order or consent of the agent and Stevens. The agent was withdrawn from Europe; the indebtedness due Stevens was allowed to go to protest, and the directors were fearful Stevens would not only sell the bonds pledged, but would also sell the 1,105, and the purchaser obtain title to the whole, and thus render nearly valueless the securities held by the directors. To prevent this calamity Richardson advanced the money, charged it to the Company, and received its notes therefor. He then attempted to do what he was fearful might have been done in London, namely, levy upon and sell the 1,105 bonds and himself become the purchaser at a nominal sum, and thus gain an unconscionable advantage over other bondholders. It is a general rule that fraud or any gross misconduct on the part of the salvors in connection with the property saved will work a forfeiture of the salvage; and the evidence in this case with reference to the means employed to obtain a levy on the bonds in question and the sale thereof fully justifies us in the conclusion, which I have reached, that no allowance ought to be made to Richardson by way of 'equitable salvage' for the moneys advanced by him to obtain the return of the bonds to the Company."

We fully agree with what is said by the master, and do not deem it essential to add anything further on that point.

As regards the decree of October 8, 1888, we think it sufficient to say that the corrections made by it, as regards the calculations of interest on the bonds in the original decree were correct and proper, and were warranted by the law. The original decree had allowed interest on some of the bonds owned and held as collateral security from the date of their issue. The amendatory decree simply allowed such interest to be calculated from the date when the bonds were actually delivered to the owners and holders of them. Such correction was eminently legal and just.

The decree of the court below is affirmed.

In connection with this case a motion has been made by Thomas M. Nelson, one of the intervening petitioners in the suit, whose appeals were dismissed at the last term of the court*, to have refunded to him the sum of $450, deposited with the clerk under the order of this court of January 14, 1889, requiring such deposit to be made in order that his counsel might have two printed copies of the record.

This motion is based upon the following grounds:

(1) That the petitioner was not one of the principal litigants in the appeals, but was simply an intervening judgment creditor, having no interest in the matter of the controversy between the bondholders and the trustees;

(2) That his demand is quite small when compared with the amount involved in the controversy between the principal litigants; and

(3) That he was not a necessary party to the determination of the questions involved in the controversy between the main parties to the litigation, but simply intervened as the only manner in which he could protect his rights under his judgment against the Company for work and labor performed for it in the construction of the road.

The motion is granted to the extent of $200.

*See Bk. 32, p. 372.

THOMAS H. MASON ET AL., Appts.,
v.

THE PEWABIC MINING COMPANY
ET AL.

THE PEWABIC MINING COMPANY
ET AL., Appts.,
v.

THOMAS H. MASON ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 50-64.)

Corporation, expiration of—reorganization—rights of stockholders—purchasing assets of old company—superior right—power of majority of stockholders—stockholders as partners—sale of property of an expiring corporation—proceeds to be divided—liability for business done after dissolution.

1. Where a charter of a corporation expires, a majority of the stockholders, proposing to form a new company, have no right, as against a minority, to make an arbitrary estimate of the property of the corporation to be transferred to the new company and require the minority to go into the new company, or receive for their interest in the property of the old company a sum fixed by those who are buying them out.
2. Such majority, in constituting a new company, have no right to become the purchaser of the assets of the old company at their own valuation.
3. There is no superior right in two or three men in the old company, who may hold a preponderance of the stock, to acquire an absolute control of the whole of it in a way which may be to their interest, or which they may think to be for the interest of the whole.
4. Those holding a majority of the stock cannot place a value upon it at which a dissenting minority must sell or do something else which they think against their interest, any more than those holding a minority of the stock can do it.
5. The rights of the stockholders in regard to the assets of an expiring corporation do not differ from those of partners on the dissolution of the partnership.
6. Such right, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, is to have the property converted into money, and its value ascertained, by a sale, even though a sale is not necessary to the payment of debts.
7. One or more of those thus interested cannot be compelled to accept for their interest a calculated value, being their proportion of a valuation set by the others, or to take away their share of the property; but anyone may have the whole assets sold and the proceeds divided.
8. Where directors of a corporation conduct its business after its dissolution without any attempt to wind it up, and assess its stock and collect the assessments, they must, in a proceeding to wind up the affairs of the corporation, to pay its debts, and to realize its assets and distribute them among its shareholders, account for the proceeds of the business done since its dissolution.

[Nos. 188, 240.]

Argued Dec. 17, 18, 1889. Decided Jan. 13, 1890.

APPEALS from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan that the affairs of the Pewabic Mining Company be wound up, that its assets and property be sold at public vendue for cash to the highest bidder and the proceeds distributed among its stockholders unless the NOTE.—Dissolution of partnership—Effect of as between the partners—Carrying on business by some of the partners after termination of partnership—Accountability for proceeds.

A dissolution of a copartnership does not destroy the joint tenancy of partners in partnership property and create a tenancy in common. The partnership, with all its incidents, continues for purpose of settling partnership concerns, and until that is effected. Murray v. Mumford, 6 Cow. 441, Anth. N. P. 204.

On dissolution by one partner's becoming insolvent, the remaining partner has not a right, as of course, to close up the business, as a surviving partner has. The copartner has a right to demand the appointment of a receiver. But the solvent partner ought to be appointed receiver, if he will give security necessary, and his capacity and integrity are unquestioned. Hubbard v. Guild, 1 Duer, 662.

Use of partnership property, by either party, after dissolution of a partnership, must be accounted for if required, although it was only a partnership in the proceeds, and not in the stock. Pine v. Ormsbee, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. 375.

Circumstances under which a surviving partner is not liable to account for the profits of the busiamount bid for the entire property shall be no more than the amount proposed to be paid for it by the new company above its debts; and denying an accounting by the directors of the Company for the proceeds of its business done since the expiration of its charter. Decree affirmed so far as it directs a sale of the property and the distribution of the proceeds among the stockholders, and reversed so far as it refuses an accounting for the transactions of the Company after the expiration of its charter.

The facts appear in the opinion.
Opinion below, 25 Fed. Rep. 882.

Messrs. Don M. Dickinson and Alfred Russell, for Mason et al.:

The action of the old Company conveying its property was void.

Atty-Gen. v. Perkins, 78 Mich. —; Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245.

A stockholder cannot be forced into a new enterprise, or be compelled to receive anything else than his honest pro rata as a distributee of the fair value of the assets in cash.

Ulley v. Donaldson, 94 U. S. 47 (24:56); Clearwater v. Meredith, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 25, 39-41 (17: 604, 608, 609).

On the winding up of the business of a corporation the proceeds must be distributed in cash. The business cannot be disposed of in any other manner except by unanimous consent.

McCurdy v. Myers, 44 Pa. 535; Black v. Delaware & R. Canal Co. 24 N. J. Eq. 455; Re Empire Assur. Corp. L. R. 4 Eq. 841; Olinch v. Financial Corp. L. R. 4 Ch. 117; Frothingham v. Barney, 6 Hun, 386; Gregory v. Patchett, 33 Beav. 595; Tuttle v. Michigan Air Line

R. Co. 35 Mich. 249; Mowrey v. Indianapolis & C. R. Co. 4 Biss. 78.

No amendment to articles of association effecting a fundamental change in the enterprise or business is within the power of the parties or of the Legislature to authorize as against a non-assenting stockholder, although the majority may assent.

Joy v. Jackson & M. Plank Road Co. 11 Mich. 171; Detroit v. Detroit & H. Plank Road Co. 48 Mich. 140; Black, Const. Prohibition, 146, note, 54, note.

Corporations like this are in truth little more than private partnerships.

Foss v. Harbottle, 2 Hare, 491.

The directors become trustees at the expiration of the charter.

Bliss v. Matteson, 45 N. Y. 22; Butts v. Wood, 87 N. Y. 317; Thornton v. Marginal F. R. Co. 128 Mass. 34; Foster v. Essex Bank, 16 Mass. 245; Simmons v. Hanover, 23 Pick. 194; Orease v. Babcock, 23 Pick. 384; Mumma v. Potomac Co. 33 U. S. 8 Pet. 281 (8:945); Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 18 (26:961); Selma First Nat. Bank v. Colby, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 609, 615 (22:687, 689).

Civily dead, the property of an insolvent corporation is administered as a trust fund.

Mollen v. Moline Malleable Iron Works, 181 U. S. 352 (38:178); Lum v. Robertson, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 277 (18:743).

And it was their duty to convert assets into money, pay debts, and distribute the net proceeds.

Mann v. Butler, 2 Barb. Ch. 362; Blatchford v. Ross, 54 Barb. 42; Hartford & N. H. R. Co. v. Croswell, 5 Hill, 383, 386; Simpson v.

ness, conducted after his partner's decease. Wilson v. Simpson, 15 N. Y. Week. Dig. 171.

Where, after the dissolution of a partnership, and notice thereof by publication and mailing to persons with whom the late firm had dealings, the business is carried on by one of the former partners, with the consent of the others, in the firm name, the retiring partners will be liable on notes indorsed by such partner in the firm name, and discounted in the usual course of business, at his request, by one with whom the late firm had dealings, and who had no notice or knowledge of the dissolution. National Shoe & Leather Bank v. Hers, 99 N. Y. 629, 15 N. Y. Week. Dig. 22.

One partner cannot terminate the partnership at will by notice or by suit, but can terminate it only for some one of the recognized causes sufficient in law to authorize courts to wind up partnerships. Hubbel v. Buhler, 43 Hun. 82; Henn v. Walsh, 2 Edw. Ch. 129; Goodman v. Whitcomb, 1 Jac. & W. 589; McElvey v. Lewis, 78 N. Y. 373; Skinner v. Tinker, 34 Barb. 333; Peacock v. Peacock, 16 Ves. Jr. 49; Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. Jr. 298; Law v. Ford, 2 Paige, 310; Marten v. Van Schalk, 4 Paige, 479.

After dissolution one of the partners may sue the other for his share of moneys collected by the latter since dissolution, and need not bring any action for an accounting. Crosby v. Nichols, 3 Bosw. 450; Howard v. France, 43 N. Y. 593; Crater v. Bininger, 45 N. Y. 545; Chapin v. Dobson, 78 N. Y. 74; Brigg v. Hilton, 99 N. Y. 517; Ferguson v. Baker, 5 N. Y. S. R. 842.

The renewal of a lease obtained after dissolution of a partnership does not change the rule that one partner cannot take a new lease in renewal of an existing one of the firm, in his own name, or for his own benefit, without being liable to account for it 133 U. S.

to the partnership. Johnson v. Loughery, 6 Cent. Rep. 273, 115 Pa. 129; Spiess v. Rosswogg, 16 Jones & S. 135, aff'd, 96 N. Y. 651.

Upon the dissolution of a firm by the death or bankruptcy of one of its members, it is the duty of the surviving or solvent members to take possession of the firm assets and perform its contracts, extinguish its liabilities and close up its business, in the manner most advantageous to the interests of all the parties concerned; it is the right of the representatives of a deceased or bankrupt partner to share in the profits of all business unfinished at the dissolution, but completed afterward, and a valuation of such business as of the time of the dissolution will not be required unless peculiar circumstances, exempting the particular case in equity from the operation of the general rules, exist. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 22 Beav. 84; Simpson v. Chapman, 4 DeG. M. & G. 154; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige, 396; Murray v. Mumford, 6 Cow. 441; McClean v. Kennard, L. R. 9 Ch. App. 386; Collender v. Phelan, 79 N. Y. 372; King v. Leighton, 100 N. Y. 386.

A partnership formed by persons interested in a railway company, for the single purpose of purchasing stock in another railway company with the design of securing its control for the benefit of their corporation,—Held, to be terminated by the sale of a portion of the stock purchased, and a distribution of the balance among the copartners, so that such copartners were not entitled to participate in the profits of a subsequent transaction personally entered into by the active managing member of the firm. Kennedy v. Porter, 109 N. Y. 526.

Where the surviving partner continues to use the capital of his deceased partner in the business he may be charged with the proportionate share of the profits during the time it is so used instead of Westminster Palace Hotel Co. 8 H. L. Cas. 712; Lyde v. Eastern Bengal R. Co. 36 Beav. 19; Erie R. Co. v. Vanderbilt, 5 Hun, 124; McCray v. Junction R. Co. 9 Ind. 858; State, Brown, v. Bailey, 16 Ind. 46; Kerr, Injunctions, 558; Campbell's Case, L. R. 9 Ch. 1; 2 Perry, Trusts, 2d ed. §§ 768, 769; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Harr. & G. 11, 25; Russell v. Russell, 86 N. Y. 581; Ives v. Davenport, 8 Hill, 873; Taylor v. Earle, 8 Hun, 1; Davis' Appeal, 14 Pa. 371.

It makes no difference that the trustees act in perfect good faith, and actually for the interest of all the stockholders.

Gardner v. Ogden, 22 N. Y. 327; Swoyer's Appeal, 5 Pa. 377; Hurst v. Fisher, 1 Harr. & G. 88; Frothingham v. Barney, 6 Hun, 886.

If the majority sell to themselves they must account for the fair value; they cannot bind the minority by fixing their own price upon the assets.

Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 577; Brewer v. Boston Theatre, 104 Mass. 878-895; Hodgkinson v. National Live Stock Ins. Co. 26 Beav. 478; Atwood v. Merryweather, L. R. 5 Eq. 464, note; Gregory v. Patchett, 83 Beav. 595; Wardell v. Union P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 651 (26:509); People v. Township of Overysel, 11 Mich. 222; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Dewey, 14 Mich. 477, 486; German American Seminary v. Kiefer, 43 Mich. 105; Great Luxembourg R. Co. v. Magnay, 25 Beav. 586, 23 Beav. 646; York & N. M. R. Co. v. Hudson, 16 Beav. 505; Atty.-Gen. v. Wilson, 1 Craig & Ph. 1; Benson v. Heathorn, 1 Younge & C. Ch. 326; Aberdeen R. Co. v. Blaikie, 1 Macq. 461; Imperial M. C. Asso. v. Coleman, L. R. 6 H. L. 189; Re Madrid

Bank, L. R. 2 Eq. 216; Kochler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. 67 U. S. 2 Black, 715 (17:339); James v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co. 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 752 (18:885); Drury v. Milwaukee & S. R. Co. 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 299 (19:40); Cumberland Coal & I. Co. v. Sherman, 80 Barb. 553; Abbot v. American H. Rubber Co. 83 Barb. 586; Simons v. Vulcan Oil & M. Co. 61 Pa. 202; Kimmell v. Geeting, 2 Grant, Cas. 125; Ashhurst's Appeal, 60 Pa. 290; 1 Redfield, Railw. 5th ed. 605-613; Robinson v. Smith, 8 Paige, 222; Colquitt v. Howard, 11 Ga. 566; Hodges v. New England Screw Co. 1 R. I. 812; Port v. Russell, 86 Ind. 60; Newby v. Oregon C. R. Co. 1 Sawy. 63; Michoud v. Girod, 45 U. S. 4 How. 508 (11:1076); Concord R. Co. v. Clough, 49 N. H. 257; Heath v. Erie R. Co. 8 Blatchf. 847; Wright v. Oroville Gold, S. & C. Min. Co. 40 Cal. 20; European & N. A. R. Co. v. Poor, 59 Me. 277; Paine v. Lake Erie & L. R. Co. 31 Ind. 283; Goodin v. Cincinnati & W. W. Canal Co. 18 Ohio St. 169; Story, Eq. §§ 1255, 1257, 1265; Gilman O. & S. R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill. 426-435, and cases cited; Butler v. Watkins, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 456 (20:629); Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, chap. VII.

The acts of the board in the expenditure of the money in carrying on business after the expiration of the charter, April 4, 1883, were beyond their powers, and they are responsible for all losses and expenditures in that behalf.

Gray v. National S. S. Co. 115 U. S. 116 (29:809); Hill, Trustees, Am. notes, 580; Thompson, Liability of Officers of Corporations, 875; Field, Corporations, § 178; Parish v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. 508; Angell & A. Corporations, with interest. Booth v. Parks, 1 Molloy, 466; Brown v. De Tastet, Jacob, 284, as explained in 4 Russ. 126; Simmons v. Leonard, 3 Hare, 591; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 22 Beav. 84, 2 Keen, 722, 4 Myl. & Cr. 41, 2 Beav. 208, 17 Beav. 158, 18 Beav. 465; Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. Jr. 298; Waring v. Cram, 1 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 516, 522; McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 137; Long v. Majestre, 1 Johns. Ch. 305; Washburn v. Goodman, 17 Pick. 519; Ogden v. Astor, 4 Sandf. 811; Barfield v. Loughborough, L. R. 8 Ch. App. 1; Marjrum v. Saunderford, 1 Romilly, Notes of Cases, 110, and note, p. 114; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige, 393, 396, 397; Chambers v. Howell, 11 Beav. 6; Parsons, Partn. *443.

And so of the rents and profits of real estate owned by the partnership. Smith v. Walker, 38 Cal. 385.

But a proper allowance should be made for the management and care of the business; and such allowances are in some cases very liberally made. Brown v. De Tastet, Jacob, 284, 297, as explained, 4 Russ. 126; Cook v. Collingridge, Jacob, 622-24; Waring v. Cram, 1 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 522; Featherstonhaugh v. Turner, 25 Beav. 382.

Although if there be fraud or other improper practices by the survivor, such allowances may be refused. 1 Romilly, Notes of Cases, 115; Burden v. Burden, 1 Ves. & B. 170; Stooken v. Dawson, 17 L. J. N. S. Ch. 232, affirming 6 Beav. 371.

And if the survivor is charged with profits he is entitled to deduct for bad debts. Washburn v. Goodman, 17 Pick. 519.

And so for the amount properly paid a clerk or proper assistant, by a share of the profits. Hall's Appeal, 40 Pa. 409.

But there is no absolute rule that the survivor shall be charged with profits. The principle of division may be affected by considerations of the source of the profits, the nature of the business and all circumstances of each particular case. Willett v. Blanford, 1 Hare, 253, 295-99; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 23 Beav. 84; 1 Romilly, Notes of Cases, 116-118; Simpson v. Chapman, 4 De G. M. & G. 154.

Where the goodwill belongs to the survivor, he will not be charged with profits resulting from that. Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 23 Beav. 84; Holden v. McMakin, 1 Pars. Sel. Eq. Cas. 270; Parsons, Partn. 2d ed. *444.

Where two out of three partners dissolve the partnership and form a new copartnership, the third, if insolvent and indebted to the firm, cannot claim a share of the profits of the new firm. Hyde v. Easter, 4 Md. Ch. 80.

Instead of profits, the survivor may be charged with interest at the legal rate. Washburn v. Goodman, 17 Pick. 519; 1 Romilly, Notes of Cases, 117; McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 137.

The right to profits may be lost by laches of the representatives of the deceased. Clements v. Hall, 2 De G. & J. 173; 1 Romilly, Notes of Cases, 117; Smith v. Drake, 23 N. J. Eq. 302.

As to application of partnership assets to debts and rights of individual and partnership creditors therein, see note to United States v. Hack, Bk. 8, p. 941.

As to when partner is liable on contracts in firm name, after dissolution, and what notice of dissolution is necessary to avoid liability, see note to Lovejoy v. Spafford, Bk. 23, p. 351.

As to effect of admissions of partner after dissolution on his copartners, see note to Thompson v. Bowman, Bk. 18, p. 738.

As to rights and powers of surviving partners, see note to Moore v. Huntington, Bk. 21, p. 642.

§ 290; Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, 397 et seq.; Perry, Trusts, § 184.

Mr. Thomas H. Talbot, for Pewabic Mining Company et al.:

A compulsory sale of the corporate property of the expiring defendant corporation cannot be ordered by the court as an absolute right.

Sparhawk v. Union P. R. Co. 54 Pa. 401.

The court is not bound to decree a dissolution, even when a majority of the directors and stockholders request it to be done.

Re Niagara Ins. Co. 1 Paige, 258.

To entitle a stockholder to maintain a suit of this nature, he must act for the benefit of the company.

Irvin v. Susquehanna Turnp. Co. 2 Penr. & W. 471; Filder v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 1 Hem. & M. 489; Waterbury v. Merchants Union Express Co. 50 Barb. 168; Belmont v. Erie R. Co. 52 Barb. 662.

The suit must be a bona fide one, faithfully, truthfully, sincerely directed to the benefit and the interests of stockholders as stockholders.

Forest v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. 4 DeG. F. & J. 126, 180; Ffooks v. South Western R. Co. 1 Smale & G. 142, 167; Robson v. Dodds, L. R. 8 Eq. 301.

The majority who would go forward are required to secure to the dissentients the payment of the value of their portion of the corporate property. Upon the furnishing of such security the majority are allowed to go forward with their organization or enterprise.

Lauman v. Lebanon V. R. Co. 30 Pa. 42; State, Brown, v. Bailey, 16 Ind. 46 (51); Re South Barrule Slate Quarry Co. L. R. 8 Eq. 688.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

These are an appeal and a cross-appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Michigan. On March 31st, 1884, there was filed in the Circuit Court for that District the bill of complaint of Thomas G. Mason, William Hart Smith and Sullivan Ballou, who describe themselves as citizens of the State of New York, against The Pewabic Mining Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Michigan, Johnson Vivian, a citizen of the State of Michigan, and Henry Billings, Thomas H. Perkins, Alden B. Buttrick and Daniel L. Demmon, citizens of the State of Massachusetts, and The Pewabic Copper Company, a corporation created under the laws of the State of Michigan. The bill professes to be filed in behalf of the complainants above named, and of all the stockholders in the Pewabic Mining Company who may desire to join herein and take the benefit of the proceedings of the court. The bill is too long to copy in full in this opinion. The substance of it is, that the complainants were members of the Pewabic Mining Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Michigan on the 4th day of April, 1853, with a capital stock of twenty thousand shares of $25 each, afterwards increased to forty thousand, which was invested in a copper mine near Houghton, Michigan. The complainants allege themselves to be, at the time of the filing of the bill, the owners of 2,650 shares of the stock of the Company. They allege that the charter of the Company expired on April 4th, 1884 U. S.

1888, but that nevertheless the directors who were elected in March of that year, disregarding this fact, continued the ordinary business of the corporation, and among other things made an assessment of $88,000 on the capital stock, which was paid. They further allege that at the annual meeting of the stockholders on the 26th of March, 1884, for the election of directors and for other purposes, the following resolutions were adopted, against the vote and the protests of the complainants:

"Resolved, That the board of directors be authorized to sell and dispose of the property of the Company for a sum not less than $50,000; that the president and secretary be authorized to execute all conveyances necessary to carry out the contract for the sale of the property of this Company made by the board of directors, and that the board of directors be, and hereby are, authorized to close up the business of the Company.

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting of stockholders that the property shall be sold to a new corporation, organized under the laws of Michigan, on the basis of forty thousand shares, and that the stock of such new corporation shall be issued to and received by the stockholders of this Company in payment for the same, stockholders to have the right to receive equal number of shares in new company, if they so elect, on surrendering certificates of this Company, within thirty days after April 12, 1884, and in case a stockholder does not take stock of the new corporation he is to receive his pro rata share in money."

The vote in favor of the adoption of these resolutions was 27,919 shares against 6,754 shares in the negative. On the same day a certificate of incorporation under the laws of Michigan was executed, forming the Pewabic Copper Company, and filed two days afterwards. Its capital stock was also forty thousand shares at $25 each, which was taken up by the defendant corporators, who, with two others, were named as the first directors, being the same persons who controlled the old Company. The third article of this association declared that no cash is actually paid on the capital stock. The cash value of real and personal property conveyed to the company contemporaneously with its organization is the sum of $50,000.

The Constitution of the State of Michigan declares, article 14, section 10, that no corporation, except for municipal purposes or for the construction of railroads, plank-roads and canals, shall be created for a longer time than thirty years. A Statute of Michigan (1 Howell's Statutes, section 4867) enacts that all corporations whose charters shall expire by their limitation, or shall be annulled for forfeiture or otherwise, shall nevertheless continue to be bodies corporate for the term of three years after the time they would have been so dissolved, for the purpose of prosecuting and defending suits by or against them, and of enabling them gradually to settle and close their concerns, dispose of and convey their property, and divide their capital stock, but not for the purpose of continuing the business for which such corporations have been or may be established.

The bill prayed for an injunction and restraining order forbidding the defendants from carrying out the purpose of transferring the property of the Pewabic Mining Company to the new corporation. It also prayed for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the effects of the Pewabic Mining Company, that they might be sold, the debts of the Company paid, and the remainder of the proceeds distributed among the stockholders.

The defendants answered the bill, admitting substantially its principal allegations, stating as an excuse for continuing the operations of the Company beyond the period of its thirty years' existence that they were not aware of the time when that thirty years expired. They assert that, in all they had done since, they had acted honestly and fairly, and had the assent of the majority of the stockholders; that the arrangement under which they proposed to transfer the property of the Pewabic Mining Company to the new corporation was one which met with the approval of the majority of the stockholders, and a still greater preponderance of the stock in the corporation. They allege that they offered to pay the dissenting stockholders for their stock at the rate of $50,000 for the value of the whole stock, which was the sum at which it was to be sold to the new company, or to permit them to exchange it for stock in the new company, share for share, and they insist that this was just and fair, and what they had a right to do, and that they should still be permitted to carry out this plan. They say that the complainants, in refusing to accede to the new arrangement, are acting in the interest of rival copper mining companies, whose mines adjoin that of the Pewabic Company, and that their object is to force a sale at public auction, when those companies, whose shareholders are wealthy, will have an unfair advantage in purchasing the property below its real value. They repeat their offer to pay the defendants for the pro rata value of their stock, estimating the whole at $50,000, or to exchange it for stock in the new company. Replication was filed.

The court refused the appointment of a receiver, but did issue a restraining order against the defendants to prevent the consummation of the sale to the Pewabic Copper Company. A special master was appointed, with all the powers usually possessed by a master in chancery, to whom the case was referred, with directions to ascertain what assets and property, real and personal, were owned by the defendant, the Pewabic Mining Company, on the 26th day of March, A. D. 1884, and also what assets and property, real and personal, said Company owned at the time of filing the bill of complaint in this case, on the 31st day of March, 1884; and also to ascertain the fair cash value of such assets and property at the several dates aforesaid, distinguishing the value of the several parcels and kinds of said property, and for that purpose to take testimony and make report thereon.

The report of the master shows the value of the property belonging to the Pewabic Company to be much greater than $50,000, and the defendants concede it to be worth $75,000, which they profess a willingness to pay. The master took many depositions as to the value of this property on the part of plaintiffs and defendants, and he says: "Between the extremes of the testimony I find it very difficult to say what these several parcels of property are worth, but for the purposes of this reference I find the value of the several classes as follows:

"Stamp mill plant, including pumps and buildings	$40,000 00
Mining equipment, not including dwellings	35,000 00
89 dwellings	30,000 00
Wood and timber	27,286 59
Mining supplies	30,000 00
Cash on hand	9,197 23
Copper on hand	43,757 06
Water front, stamp mill site	2,000 00
Real estate and mining rights	250,000 00
Mine buildings and shops	30,000 00
Bills receivable	1,058 67

"Total

$498,412 24"

Upon final hearing, the circuit court decreed that the equity of the case is with the complainants, and "that the affairs of the Pewabic Mining Company be and are hereby decreed to be wound up." It then directs that "all the assets and property of the Pewabic Mining Company be sold at public vendue for cash to the highest bidder: Provided, That if at such sale the bid for the aggregate of the property and assets should not be in excess of $50,000, above the amount of the debts of the Company existing at the time of the sale, then the arrangement for the sale of such property, made at the stockholders' meeting in Boston on the 26th day of March, 1884, as set up in defendants' answer, shall be carried out under the direction of the special master, hereinafter designated, and as provided by the resolution adopted by the stockholders at said meeting," etc. It was further ordered that "the cause be referred to Peter White, as special master, for the following purposes, and with the following powers, to wit: That said master proceed to ascertain the assets and property and the amount of debts of said Pewabic Mining Company, and to this end he may consider the evidence already taken in the cause, and may further, upon notice to the solicitors of the different parties, set days for hearing evidence, and either party may produce witnesses as in the ordinary course of a master's proceedings, and that he report to this court the proceedings and findings thereon, and that after ascertaining the assets and debts of said Company, and making report thereof to this court, said master shall proceed to the sale of said property at public vendue to the highest bidder in one body, after giving the notice required by law, and that he make report thereof. And it is further decreed that if the highest bid for such property at such sale shall amount to more than $50,000 over and above the indebtedness of said Pewabic Mining Company, then that the arrangement for the sale of said property, made at said meeting of the stockholders at Boston, must be set aside and held to be null and void, and the Pewabic Mining Company be enjoined perpetually from selling to the Pewabic Copper Company, and that Company is enjoined from receiving its transfer of the property." It is then decreed "that the defendants Vivian, Billings, Perkins, Buttrick and Demmon, directors of said Pewabic Company, are not liable to pay to complainants and other stockholders any money received by them since the expiration of the charter of said Pewabic Mining Company, April 4, 1888, and that an accounting by said defendant directors is hereby denied as to such expenditure made by them after the expiration of the charter."

The complainants in the bill prayed an appeal from that part of the decree which refused the prayer for an accounting on the part of the directors of the Pewabic Company of their transactions since the date of the expiration of the charter. This appeal is numbered on our docket 168. The defendants all appeal from the principal decree, which directs a sale of the property and the distribution of its proceeds among the stockholders of the Pewabic Mining Company in the event that a sum is bid for all of said property in a lump which exceeds the amount of the indebtedness of the Pewabic Mining Company and the sum of $50,000, which appeal is numbered 240.

With regard to the main question, the power of the directors and of the majority of the corporation to sell all of the assets and property of the Pewabic Mining Company to the new corporation under the existing circumstances of this case, we concur with the circuit court. It is earnestly argued that the majority of the stockholders—such a relatively large majority in interest—have a right to control in this matter, especially as the corporation exists for no other purpose but that of winding up its affairs, and that, therefore, the majority should control in determining what is for the interest of the whole, and as to the best manner of effecting this object. It is further said that in the present case the dissenting stockholders are not compelled to enter into a new corporation with a new set of corporators, but have their option, if they do not choose to do this, to receive the value of their stock in money.

It seems to us that there are two insurmountable objections to this view of the subject. The first of these is that the estimate of the value of the property which is to be transferred to the new corporation and the new set of stockholders is an arbitrary estimate made by this majority, and without any power on the part of the dissenting stockholders to take part, or to exercise any influence, in making this estimate. They are therefore reduced to the proposition that they must go into this new Company, however much they may be convinced that it is not likely to be successful, or whatever other objections they may have to becoming members of that corporation, or they must receive for the property which they have in the old Company a sum which is fixed by those who are buying them out. The injustice of this needs no comment. If this be established as a principle to govern the winding up of dissolving corporations, it places any unhappy minority, as regards the interest which they have in such corporation, under the absolute control of a majority, who may themselves, as in this case, constitute the new company, and become the purchasers of all the assets of the old Company at their own valuation.

The other objection is that there is no superior right in two or three men in the old Company, who may hold a preponderance of the stock, to acquire an absolute control of the whole of it, in the way which may be to their interest, or which they may think to be for the interest of the whole. So far as any legal right is concerned, the minority of the stockholders has as much authority to say to the majority as the majority has to say to them: "We have formed a new Company to conduct the business of this old corporation, and we have fixed the value of the shares of the old corporation. We propose to take the whole of it and pay you for your shares at that valuation, unless you come into the new corporation, taking shares in it in payment of your shares in the old one." When the proposition is thus presented, in the light of an offer made by a very small minority to a very large majority who object to it, the injustice of the proposition is readily seen; yet we know of no reason or authority why those holding a majority of the stock can place a value upon it at which a dissenting minority must sell or do something else which they think is against their interest, more than a minority can do.

We do not see that the rights of the parties in regard to the assets of this corporation differ from those of a partnership on its dissolution, and on that subject Lindley on Partnership says, page 555, original edition:

"In the absence of a special agreement to the contrary, the right of each partner on a dissolution is to have the partnership property converted into money by a sale, even though a sale may not be necessary to the payment of debts. This mode of ascertaining the value of the partnership effects is adopted by courts, unless some other course can be followed consistently with agreement between the partners; and even where the partners have provided that their shares shall be ascertained in some other way, still if owing to any circumstance their agreement in this respect cannot be carried out, or if their agreement does not extend to the event which has in fact arisen, realization of the property by a sale is the only alternative which a court can adopt."

The authorities cited by Lindley for this proposition amply support it.

In the case of Crawshaw v. Collins, 15 Ves. Jr. 218, a commission of bankruptcy had been issued against Noble, one of the members of a partnership engaged in the business of manufacturing pumps and engines. The assignee of Noble filed a bill, asking for a division of the assets, which consisted largely of patents, and upon a very full argument upon the subject, Lord Eldon says: "Another mode of determination of a partnership is not by efflux of time, but by the death of one partner." The question then is, he says, "whether the surviving partners, instead of settling the account and agreeing with the executor as to the terms upon which his beneficial interest in the stock is still to be continued, subject still to the probable loss, can take the whole property, do what they please, and compel the executor to take the calculated value. That cannot be without contract for it with the testator. The executor has a right to have the value ascertained in the way which it can be best ascertained, by sale."

In 17 Ves. Jr. 298, a case more analogous to the present one came before the court. In that case (Featherstonhaugh v. Fenwick) the parties were engaged as partners in the business of manufacturing glass, and after deciding one of the questions in the case, to wit, that the partnership was dissolved or should be dissolved by decree of the court, the master of the rolls, Sir William Grant, proceeded to say: "The next consideration is whether the terms upon which defendants proposed to adjust the partnership concern were those to which the plaintiff was bound to accede. The proposition was that a value should be set upon the partnership stock, and that they should take his proportion of it at that valuation, or that he should take away his share of the property from the premises. My opinion is clearly that these are not terms to which he is bound to accede. They had no more right to turn him out than he had to turn them out, upon those terms. Their rights were precisely equal—to have the whole concern wound up by a sale, and a division of the produce. As therefore they never proposed to him any terms which he was bound to accept, the consequence of continuing the trade with his stock and his risk is, they come under liability for whatever profit may be produced by that stock." He then refers to the case of Crawshay v. Collins, just cited, with approval.

In the case of Hale v. Hale, 4 Beav. 369, Joseph Hale, who carried on the trade of a brewer in partnership with George Hale, and two other persons, died leaving a will. The master of the rolls, in discussing the relative rights of the surviving partners and the executor of the deceased, says in regard to the executor:

"He is not obliged to submit to the statement of the account which is made by the continuing parties,—clearly not, in the absence of all contract to that effect, which is admitted to be the case here. He has a right to say, 'I must have the actual value of my partnership assets determined, and though it may be very inconvenient for you to have the value obtained in the manner prescribed by the law, yet if we cannot otherwise agree, I must have it ascertained by the only mode by which it can be ascertained accurately, namely, by a sale for what it will fetch in the market.'"

The next case, Wild v. Milne, 26 Beav. 504, was a case bearing a closer analogy to this, because the parties were engaged in the mining business, to wit, working a colliery. In consequence of some disagreements, the plaintiff gave notice to dissolve and instituted this suit to have the partnership wound up. He did not allege that there were any debts, but prayed that the partnership property might be sold and applied to the payment of the debts, and that the surplus might be divided. This was resisted by defendant Milne alone. On the hearing, the master of the rolls, Sir John Romilly, said: "I am clearly of opinion that this is an ordinary case of partnership, and when it is dissolved or terminated, any one of the partners is entitled to have the whole assets disposed of. In this case it is admitted that anyone can put an end to the partnership. The result, is that that which forms the partnership assets must be disposed of for the purpose of settling the account between the partners. I consider this established by Crawshay v. Maule, 1 Swanst. 518-526." And after pointing out the difficulty in the mode of dividing the property, which consisted partly of real estate, of the use of the shaft, of the machinery and engines, etc., he said: "The court is compelled by the exigency and circumstance of these cases to direct a sale."

The cases of Rowlands v. Evans and Williams v. Rowlands, 80 Beav. 302, arose out of another partnership in mining business very much like the case before us. Some of the partners interested desired that the mining business might be carried on by a miner and receiver, but the plaintiff objected to this. One of the partners had become a lunatic, and his business was in the hands of a committee, and the question was whether the partnership be dissolved and the property sold, or a receiver appointed to conduct the operations of the concern. The master of the rolls said: "I do not think the point is touched by the decisions. The difficulty is this: 'The court cannot compel persons to be in this situation—either to carry on business with the committee of a lunatic, subject to all the inconveniences of having a manager appointed by the court, and subject to appeal to the House of Lords. No one would bid for a share in a mine to be carried on by a committee of a lunatic, nor give the value of a share of a lunatic under such circumstances. I think the value of the whole must be ascertained by a sale by auction, and that some indifferent person well acquainted with these matters should be directed to sell the property, and that all parties should have liberty to bid.'"

In the case of Burdon v. Barkus, 4 De G. F. & J. 42, which came before the lords justices of appeal from the vice chancellor's court, Lord Justice Turner, delivering the opinion, said: "The next inquiry to be considered is the inquiry as to a valuation of the stock and plant, which is objected to on both sides—by the defendant, as importing that the stock is to be valued; by the plaintiff, as importing that it might be valued as of a going concern. I think both of these objections were well grounded. There was no agreement between these parties for stock and plant being taken by either party on the termination of the partnership, and in the absence of such an agreement a partner cannot, as I conceive, be compelled to take, nor can he compel his copartner to take, the stock at a valuation. Each is entitled to have it ascertained by a sale, and as the defendants claim to have the stock dealt with as the stock of a going concern, I do not see how it can be maintained, for the plaintiff is certainly not bound to continue the concern."

These English authorities would seem to be conclusive of the right of the plaintiffs in the present case to have a sale of the property. The same doctrine is very decisively announced in the case of Dickinson v. Dickinson, 29 Conn. 600. This was a bill in regard to a partnership, the main object of which was to procure the division of certain property which the plaintiff claimed to belong to the partnership. The court said: "The plaintiff has no equitable claim to a decree in his favor. So far as the bill asks for a division of the property, we suppose this object could only be effected by a sale of the property and the conversion of it into cash, and then dividing the cash, because as between partners there is no other mode, where they do not concur, of ascertaining the value of partnership property or of disposing of it."

The court then refers to the case of Sigourney v. Munn, 7 Conn. 11, and cites the language of Judge Hosmer in that case, as follows: "In every case in which a court of equity interferes to wind up the concerns of a partnership, it directs the value of the stock to be ascertained in the way it can best be done, that is, by the conversion of it into money. Every partner may insist that the joint stock shall be sold."

In the Supreme Court of Michigan, in Godfrey v. White, 48 Mich. 171, which is mainly important as showing the concurrence of the highest court of the State under whose laws the Pewabic Mining Company was organized, that court decided that certain lands which constituted a part of the partnership property should not be partitioned between the partners, but should be sold and the proceeds divided. See also Briges v. Sperry, 95 U. S. 401 [24: 390].

We do not say there may not be circumstances presented to a court of chancery which is winding up a dissolved corporation and distributing its assets, that will justify a decree ascertaining their value, or the value of certain parts of them, and making a distribution to partners or shareholders on that basis; but this is not the general rule by which the property in such cases is disposed of in the absence of an agreement.

We are of opinion that on the appeal of the defendants from this part of the decree, it must be affirmed.

However honest the directors may be who conducted the business of this corporation for nearly a year after its dissolution without any attempt to wind it up, but who, on the contrary, assessed $88,000 on the shares of the stock and collected it, and did much other of the ordinary business of mining operations, it seems to us eminently proper that in this proceeding, by which the court undertook to wind up the affairs of the corporation to pay its debts, and to realize its assets, and distribute them among the shareholders, these directors should account for what they did in that time. We do not decide, nor do we think it was necessary for the court below to have decided, whether those directors had anything in their hands which should be accounted for in the final liquidation of the partnership affairs, or whether they had not. It is the object of such an inquiry as that sought by complainants in their bill to ascertain this fact. It was not a part of the matter referred to the commissioner in the former reference. We think it is a proper subject of investigation to be made by a master to whom the matter shall be referred, with express directions to ascertain and report upon that subject. (See authorities already cited.) That part of the decree, therefore, of the court denying this relief is reversed, and the case remanded to the court below with directions to appoint a master, and to direct such an inquiry and report.

Bradley, J.:

I think the opinion of the court asserts too strongly the right of the minority stockholders to insist upon a sale. In many cases in this country a valuation of the interest of a minority, under the direction of the court, has been deemed a proper method of ascertaining their share in the assets, where a sale would be prejudicial to the interests of the whole.

Mr. Justice Gray was not present at the argument, and took no part in the decision of this case.

BENJAMIN U. KEYSER, Receiver of the GERMAN-AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK OF WASHINGTON, D. C., Plff. in Err.,
v.

JANE C. HITZ.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 138-152.)

Savings banks, when may become national banks—deputy comptroller, when may act as comptroller—certificate—judicial notice—objection—erroneous instructions—transfer of bank stock to a married woman—her liability thereon—intent of transfer—evidence—estoppel—husband's use of avails—ownership—transfer on bank books—legal capacity—shareholder in national bank—liability of married woman—coverture.

1. After the passage of the Act of 1876, savings banks organized in the District of Columbia under an Act of Congress, and having a capital stock paid up in whole or in part, were entitled to become national banking associations in the mode, and subject to the conditions, prescribed by section 5154, U. S. Rev. Stat.
2. A deputy comptroller of the currency may exercise the powers and discharge the duties attached to the office of comptroller during a vacancy in that office, or during the absence or inability of the comptroller. Rev. Stat. §§ 178, 237.
3. This court takes judicial notice of the fact that at the date of his certificate a deputy comptroller of the currency was such officer; and if he signs as acting comptroller, it will be assumed that at the date of his certificate he was authorized to exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the comptroller, and was at the time acting comptroller.
4. An objection that after the trial court had adjourned, the certificate was, by the trial justice, permitted to be inserted in the record, will not be considered where it was not presented to the court whose judgment is here for review. The record must be taken as it was presented to the general term.
5. Instructions to the jury not based upon any evidence, and having no evidence to support them, are erroneous.
6. The intent with which a husband caused transfers of stock of a bank to be made to his wife is wholly immaterial, even if the object was to conceal his property from creditors; if she became the owner of the stock, she would be liable to be assessed as a shareholder.
7. If she became aware of the transfers, after they were made, and thereafter received the dividends, she became a shareholder and liable for the debts of the bank, as fully as if the transfers had been made originally with her knowledge and consent.
8. If the checks for the dividends were indorsed by her, she is estopped to say that she did not know their contents, and was not the owner of the shares of stock upon which the dividends were declared, where each check is payable to her.

NOTE.—As to taxation of shares in national banks, see note to Providence Bank v. Billings, Bk. 7, p. 599.

order, and is on its face for dividends on stock standing in her name on the books of the Bank.

9. If the wife indorsed the checks in blank or to the order of her husband, and delivered them to him, the mode in which he disposed of the proceeds is of no consequence in a suit to recover against her assessments on the stock.
10. Although the mere transfer of stocks to the wife's name without her knowledge or consent, on the books of a Savings Bank afterwards converted into a National Bank, would not make her liable as a shareholder of the National Bank, yet if, after such transfer, she joined in the application to convert the Savings Bank into a National Bank, or ratified such transfer, or accepted the benefits of the ownership of the stock, she is liable to be treated as a shareholder.
11. The record made of the transfers upon the books of the Bank was sufficient, as between her and the Bank, to work a change of ownership, and new certificates were not necessary to her becoming the owner of the stock so transferred.
12. A married woman has the legal capacity to receive a transfer of stock in moneyed corporations, though the consideration may have proceeded wholly from the husband.
13. As she was not incapacitated from becoming the owner of stock in a bank, and was a shareholder in the Savings Bank, she became, upon the conversion of that Bank into a National Bank, a shareholder in the latter.
14. A married woman is not exempted, by reason of her coverture, from the liability imposed by Congress upon shareholders in national banks.
15. Coverture of the defendant will not prevent the plaintiff from recovering a judgment against her for the amount of the assessment in question, if she was, within the meaning of the statute, a shareholder in the Bank at the time of its suspension.

[No. 42.]

Argued Oct. 25, 28, 1889. Decided Jan. 6, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Special Term and Circuit of that Court, in favor of defendant. Reversed.

The action was to recover of the defendant, Jane C. Hitz, a married woman, an assessment on stock of a National Bank which had suspended business and of which the plaintiff was receiver. The assessment was made by the comptroller of the currency for the par value of stock.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. Leigh Robinson, for plaintiff in error:

The charge of the court should always be based upon the facts as proved, and not upon an assumed state of facts which has no existence under the evidence in the case.

Paschal v. Davis, 3 Ga. 256; Hollister v. Johnson, 4 Wend. 643; Reed v. Greathouse, 7 T. B. Mon. 558; Brown v. Wilson, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 230; Hite v. Blandford, 45 Ill. 12; Myers v. Hart, 10 Watts, 107; Paterson v. Arnold, 45 Pa. 416; McDonald v. Trafton, 15 Me. 228; People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 656.

It is error to submit a question of fact to the jury of which there is no evidence.

Sartwell v. Wilcox, 20 Pa. 122; Grove v. Hodges, 55 Pa. 519; Stein v. Bowman, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 223 (10: 186); Graff v. Pittsburgh & S. R. Co. 31 Pa. 489.

A party cannot, by holding his peace, have the benefit of a contract if it should afterwards turn out to be profitable, and retain a right to repudiate it if otherwise.

Law v. Cross, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 539 (17: 187); Mundorff v. Wickersham, 68 Pa. 87.

A married woman is at liberty to avail herself of the agency of her husband as if they had not been united in marriage.

Owen v. Caroley, 36 N. Y. 600.

When married women clothe others with apparent authority to act for and bind them, they are estopped from disputing it.

Bodine v. Killen, 53 N. Y. 98; Tremain v. Allen, 15 Hun, 4.

Where an agent does any act for the use of his principal, and the principal enjoys the benefits and fruits of the act, he cannot afterwards say that the act was illegal.

Ruggles v. Washington County, 3 Mo. 496; Hastings v. Bangor House, 18 Me. 436; Low v. Connecticut & P. R. Co. 46 N. H. 284; Reid v. Hibbard, 6 Wis. 175; Beidman v. Goodell, 56 Iowa, 592; Waterson v. Rogers, 21 Kan. 529; Hovil v. Pack, 7 East, 164; Cornwall v. Wilson, 1 Ves. Sr. 509; Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Walworth, 1 N. Y. 438; Clark v. Rails, 58 Iowa, 201.

A person cannot keep the product of the act of his agent and repudiate the latter's authority.

Coykendall v. Constable, 99 N. Y. 809; National L. Ins. Co. v. Minch, 58 N. Y. 144; Hathaway v. Johnson, 55 N. Y. 98; Cobb v. Hatfield, 46 N. Y. 588; Masson v. Boet, 1 Denio, 69; Voorhees v. Earl, 2 Hill, 288; Hogan v. Weyer, 5 Hill, 889; Southern Express Co. v. Palmer, 48 Ga. 85; Maddux v. Bevan, 39 Md. 485; Hoeey v. Blanchard, 18 N. H. 145.

A wife who permits her husband to control her property is bound to notify third parties if he exceed his authority.

Bergen v. Keiser, 17 Ill. App. 505; Louisville Coffin Co. v. Stokes, 78 Ala. 872.

When on the trial of a cause a fact is distinctly alleged and shown by the plaintiffs and not denied at all by the defendant, it is error for the court to indicate to the jury that the fact is in dispute, and to submit to them the question whether it occurred or not.

Youngman v. Miller, 98 Pa. 196; Finger v. Leach, 70 Mo. 43.

A charge to the jury that they have a right to draw an inference which is opposed to all the testimony, is erroneous.

Carey v. Hughes, 17 Ala. 888.

It is error to lay down a correct qualification of a rule of law, when there is no evidence touching the subject matter of the qualification.

Webb v. Robinson, 14 Ga. 216.

Fraud and collusion are never presumed, but must be proved.

Aston v. Aston, 1 Ves. Sr. 268; Stewart v. English, 6 Ind. 179; Nichols v. Patten, 18 Me. 239; Blaisdell v. Cowell, 14 Me. 370; Coulson v. Coulson, 5 Wis. 79; Cummins v. Hurlbutt, 92 Pa. 165; Brady v. Barnes, 42 Conn. 512.

It is error to charge a jury upon a supposed or conjectural state of facts of which no evidence has been offered.

U. S. v. Breitling, 61 U. S. 20 How. 254 (15: 902); Michigan Bank v. Eldred, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 544 (19: 763); Hamilton v. Singer Mfg. Co. 54 Ill. 370; Oxley v. Storer, 54 Ill. 161; Hewitt v. Begole, 22 Mich. 31.

A rule, no less of morals than of law, imposes silence on a party who seeks to contradict previous statements, upon the faith of which others have dealt.

White v. Brocas, 14 Ohio St. 348; Beardsley v. Foot, 14 Ohio St. 416; Manufacturers & T. Bank v. Hazard, 80 N. Y. 226; Kirk v. Hartman, 68 Pa. 106; Coleman v. Pearce, 26 Minn. 128; McOlellan v. Kennedy, 8 Md. 230; Fitts v. Brown, 20 N. H. 898; Bigelow v. Foss, 59 Me. 164; Cornish v. Abington, 4 Hurl. & N. 555; Blair v. Wait, 69 N. Y. 118; Hambleton v. Central O. R. Co. 44 Md. 552; Day v. Caton, 119 Mass. 518; Preston v. American Linen Co. 119 Mass. 400.

Married women may be estopped by their deliberate conduct, as well as anyone else.

Norton v. Nichols, 85 Mich. 148; Godfrey v. Thornton, 48 Wis. 690; Sharpe v. Foy, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 85; Re Lusk's Trusts, Id. 591; Bergen v. Keiser, 17 Ill. App. 508; Sanger v. Upton, 91 U. S. 59 (23: 221); Hawkins v. Glenn, 181 U. S. 339 (33: 191).

A general objection to evidence will not authorize this court to review any questions which might arise if specific objection had been made and overruled.

Wheeler v. Billings, 88 N. Y. 263; Nowell v. Doty, 88 N. Y. 88; Wait v. Maxwell, 5 Pick. 219.

The admission of evidence to which no objection was made known at the time is not ground for objection afterwards.

Ross v. Reed, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 483 (4: 141); Suydam v. Williamson, 61 U. S. 20 How. 427 (15: 978); Phenix Ins. Co. v. Lanier, 95 U. S. 171 (24: 388); Peoria & O. R. Co. v. Neill, 16 Ill. 269; Courtright v. Deeds, 87 Iowa, 509.

It is presumptive evidence that one is a stockholder, when his name appears on the books of the company.

Hoagland v. Bell, 86 Barb. 57; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418 (24: 437); Pittsburgh, W. & K. R. Co. v. Applegate, 21 W. Va. 172; McHoss v. Wheeler, 45 Pa. 32; Whitman v. Grapite Church, 24 Me. 236; Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 256; Coffin v. Collins, 17 Me. 442; Owings v. Speed, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 420 (18: 124).

The registry of the stockholder's name upon the stock-book of the company, opposite the number of his shares, gives him his title.

New Albany & S. R. Co. v. McCormick, 10 Ind. 499; Moore v. Jones, 8 Woods, 55.

It is not essential that certificates of stock shall issue at all.

Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; Burr v. Wilcox, 22 N. Y. 551.

Without a certificate, the shareholder has a complete power to transfer his stock (Davenport Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa, 575; Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watons town Bank, 105 U. S. 217 (26: 1089); to receive dividends (Ellis v. Merrimack Bridge, 2 Pick. 243); and he is undeniably liable as a stockholder.

Agricultural Bank v. Wilson, 24 Me. 278; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117.

Parties are estopped to deny the reality of the state of things which they have made appear to exist, and upon which others have been led to rely.

Cadle v. Baker, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 650 (22: 448); Wheelock v. Kost, 77 Ill. 396; Hufaker v. Mon- ticello Bank, 12 Bush, 287; McBroom v. Lebanon, 81 Ind. 269; Voorhees v. Circleville Bank, 19 Ohio, 468.

One who gives a note to a corporation is estopped to deny that there is such a corporation.

Nashua F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 55 N. H. 48.

A married woman may take by purchase, unless her husband expressly dissents.

Co. Litt. 8 a; Baxter v. Smith, 6 Binn. 429.

A husband might, at common law, make to his wife a gift of a chattel.

Clough v. Russell, 55 N. H. 282.

In equity, a husband and wife may contract with, and convey to, each other.

Slanning v. Style, 3 P. Wms. 888; Lucas v. Lucas, 1 Atk. 270; Hannan v. Ozley, 28 Wis. 521; Cooke v. Husbands, 11 Md. 492; Chew v. Beall, 18 Md. 849; Lloyd v. Pughe, L. R. 14 Eq. 241; Gover v. Owings, 16 Md. 91; Gill v. Woods, 81 Ill. 64; Wood v. Wood, 88 N. Y. 575; Sayers v. Wall, 26 Gratt. 354; Horder v. Horder, 28 Kan. 391; Wood v. Broadley, 76 Mo. 23; Majors v. Everton, 89 Ill. 56; Thompson v. Allen, 103 Pa. 44; Drury v. Biacoe, 42 Md. 162; George v. Outting, 48 N. H. 181; Standeford v. Devol, 21 Ind. 404; Bent v. Bent, 44 Vt. 555; Barron v. Barron, 24 Vt. 875; Jaycox v. Caldwell, 87 How. Pr. 240; State v. Reigart, 1 Gill, 1; Hayt v. Parks, 89 Conn. 357; Bryant v. Bryant, 8 Bush, 155; Tullis v. Fridley, 9 Minn. 79; Wilson v. Wilson, 118 Ind. 415; People v. Ft. Edward Bank, 86 Hun, 607; Sweeney v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bk. 116 Mass. 384.

A husband vests an interest in shares of bank stock in his wife by causing them to be transferred into her name on the books of the bank.

Deming v. Williams, 26 Conn. 226; Lucas v. Lucas, 1 Atk. 270; Walter v. Hodge, 2 Swanst. 108; Hill v. Pine River Bank, 45 N. H. 808; McMillan v. Peacock, 57 Ala. 180.

The husband cannot revoke his gift.

Raymond v. Pritchard, 24 Ind. 518; Bent v. Bent, 44 Vt. 555.

The wife is competent to act as if she were a feme sole.

Powell v. Powell, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 490; Peacock v. Monk, 2 V. & S. Sr. 190; Hulme v. Tenant, 1 Bro. Ch. 19; Pitt v. Jackson, 2 Bro. Ch. 51; Harris v. Harris, 7 Ired. Eq. 114; Picquet v. Swan, 4 Mason, 444.

A gift of personal property by a husband to his wife is valid.

Kelly v. Campbell, 3 Abb. App. Dec. 492; Lockwood v. Cullin, 4 Robt. 129; Knapp v. Smith, 27 N. Y. 277; Savage v. O'Neil, 44 N. Y. 302; Caldwell v. Renfrew, 88 Vt. 218; Wilber v. Fradenburgh, 52 Barb. 478; Spring v. Hight, 22 Me. 408; Warren v. Brown, 25 Miss. 66; Gill v. Woods, 81 Ill. 64.

By the instruments executed to the defendant the legal title to the stock was transferred to her.

Loitch v. Wells, 48 N. Y. 605-607; Matthewman's Case, L. R. 8 Eq. 781; Butler v. Cumpston, L. R. 7 Eq. 21; Luard's Case, 1 DeG. F. & J. 544; Adams v. Bracket, 5 Met. 280; Stanwood v. Stanwood, 17 Mass. 57; Re Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 15; Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 347.

Her coverture does not exempt her from the liability imposed by the National Currency Acts upon all stockholders in national banks.

Anderson v. Lino, 14 Fed. Rep. 405; Hobart v. Johnson, 19 Blatchf. 359; Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 130, 768.

A wife may be sued alone, and her estate alone is liable.

Madden v. Gilmer, 40 Ala. 637; Bostic v. Love, 16 Cal. 69; Melcher v. Kuhland, 22 Cal. 522.

The nonjoinder of the husband would be matter for a plea in abatement only, and by a failure to interpose such plea the objection is waived.

Dallon v. Midland Counties R. Co. 13 C. B. 474; Bendix v. Wakeman, 12 Mees. & W. 97, 1 Dow. & L. 450; Milner v. Milner, 3 T. R. 627; Morgan v. Cubitt, 3 Exch. 612; Evans v. Chester, 2 Mees. & W. 847; Moses v. Richardson, 8 Barn. & C. 421; Guyard v. Sutton, 3 C. B. 153; Young v. Ward, 21 Ill. 225.

Mr. Enoch Totten, for defendant in error:

The defendant was a married woman and cannot be held for this assessment.

Sykes v. Chadwick, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 141 (21: 824); Bundy v. Cocks, 128 U. S. 185 (32: 397); Drury v. Foster, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 24 (17: 780); Agricultural Bank v. Rice, 45 U. S. 4 How. 225 (11: 949); Witters v. Sowles, 32 Fed. Rep. 764; Fetter v. Newhall, 21 Blatchf. 445; Lorillard v. Standard Oil Co. 18 Blatchf. 199.

Merely formal or fraudulent transfers of the stock of national banks will be disregarded.

Orleans Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628 (25: 448); Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251 (27: 386); Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. 259; Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 111 U. S. 479 (28: 478); South Bend Nat. Bank v. Lanier, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 369 (20: 172); Johnston v. Laflin, 103 U. S. 800 (26: 582); Whitney v. Butler, 118 U. S. 655 (30: 266).

If the defendant indorsed the dividend checks and signed the application for conversion, she did so in total ignorance of the nature of the papers, and is not estopped.

Cummaek v. Lewis, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 648 (21: 244).

The attempted conversion of the Savings into a National Bank was unwarranted by law, and void.

Field on Corp. 17, §§ 11, 120, 22; Huntington v. Dist. of Col. Sav. Bank, 96 U. S. 388 (24: 777); Coite v. Society for Savings, 32 Conn. 173; Osborn v. Byrne, 43 Conn. 155; Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466 (27: 267).

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This action is based upon an assessment made by the comptroller of the currency on the stockholders of the German-American National Bank of the City of Washington, which suspended business on the 30th day of October, 1878, and of which the plaintiff in error was appointed receiver. The assessment was upon the stockholders, equally and ratably, to the amount of one hundred per centum of the par value of their shares. It was averred in the declaration filed by the receiver that the defendant, Jane C. Hitz, held or owned at the time of the Bank's suspension two hundred shares of its stock, of the par value per share of one hundred dollars; and that by reason thereof the plaintiff was entitled to recover from her the sum of twenty thousand dollars, with interest on each half of that sum from the dates they should have been respectively paid under the notice given by the receiver.

The defendant pleaded: first, that she was never indebted as alleged; second, that she never at any time held or owned shares of stock in this Bank, and if it appeared upon its books or otherwise that any of the stock stood in her name, the entries to that effect were fraudulent, and were made for the purpose of cheating her; third, that since August 15, 1856, she has been the wife of John Hitz. She filed an additional plea, averring that there was not, nor had ever been, any such national banking association as the German-American National Bank, of which the plaintiff was receiver; meaning, by this plea, that no such association was ever organized in conformity with the statutes of the United States.

There was evidence before the jury tending to establish the following facts:

In the year 1872 certain persons, among whom was John Hitz, the husband of the defendant, availed themselves of the provisions of the Act of Congress of May 5, 1870, relating to the creation of corporations in the District of Columbia by general laws, as amended by the Act of June 17, 1870, and formed a corporation by the name of the German-American Savings Bank of the City of Washington. 16 Stat. 98, 102, chap. 80; Id. 153, chap. 181.

There appears, under date of January 21, 1876, upon the books of that Bank, labeled "Stock Transfers and Ledger, German-American Savings Bank," entries showing the assignment and transfer to James C. Hitz of shares of stock, as follows: 178 shares by John Hitz, 10 shares by William F. Mattingly (the latter acting by Samuel L. Mattingly, attorney); 10 shares by R. B. Donaldson; and 7 shares by C. E. Prentiss,—in all, 200 shares. At the time these transfers purport to have been made, John Hitz was president of the Bank, Donaldson vice-president, and Prentiss cashier; and they, with Mattingly and others, were its trustees. The stubs in the book of transfers state that new certificates for all the above stock were issued to Mrs. Hitz; but it was not distinctly shown that they were delivered to her, or were ever in her possession. It was, however, proven that the fourth dividend upon these shares, amounting to $800, was paid by the check of Prentiss, the cashier of the Savings Bank, dated May 1, 1876, which was in these words: "Pay to Jane C. Hitz, or order, $800, fourth dividend, payable this day on stock standing in her name on the books of this Bank, and charge to dividend account, No. 3900." That check was indorsed: "Pay to the order of John Hitz. Jane C. Hitz." Then follows this indorsement: "John Hitz, Consul-General;" showing, as stated by Prentiss, that the proceeds of the check were deposited by John Hitz to his account in the bank as consul-general. Similar checks were made for the fifth and sixth dividends on the same stock. They were payable, respectively, November 1, 1876, and November 1, 1877, and were indorsed in the same way as was the first check. As in the case of the first check, their proceeds were placed to the credit of John Hitz as consul-general.

Among the original papers on file in the office of the comptroller of the currency were the following:

1. A document dated May 7, 1877, purporting to be signed by the stockholders of the German-American Savings Bank of Washington, then having a capital of $127,100, and to authorize the trustees thereof—John Hitz and others named—to convert that Bank into a national banking association, by the name of the German-American National Bank of Washington, and make the articles of association and the organization certificate required by the statutes of the United States. Under the headings in that document of "Names of Stockholders" and "No. of Shares Owned by Each," appear among other names those of John Hitz, 130 shares; R. B. Donaldson, 90 shares; W. F. Mattingly, 190 shares; C. E. Prentiss, 61 shares; John Hitz, trustee, 25 shares; John Hitz and C. E. Prentiss, trustees, 81 shares; and Jane C. Hitz, 200 shares.

2. The organization certificate, signed by the trustees, and verified by their oath, stating that they have been authorized by the stockholders of the German-American Savings Bank to change it into a national banking association, the stock of which shall be divided as it was then divided in the Savings Bank. That certificate contains a statement of the names, residence and number of shares held by each stockholder of the Savings Bank, and in the list appears the name of Jane C. Hitz, as holding 200 shares. It bears date May 7, 1877, and was filed with the comptroller of the currency May 18, 1877.

3. The articles of association of the German-American National Bank of Washington, which is accompanied by the certificate of J. S. Langworthy, as acting comptroller of the currency, under date of May 14, 1877, stating that that Bank had complied with all the provisions of the Revised Statutes, relating to national banking associations, and was authorized to commence business as provided in section 5169 of the Revised Statutes. The National Bank had the same officers and trustees as the Savings Bank.

No direct proof was made by the plaintiff that the signature purporting to be that of the defendant, on the above checks for dividends, was her genuine signature.

In reference to the stock of the German-American Savings Bank which, according to the entries in its books, was transferred by Mr. Mattingly, the latter, as a witness for the defendant, testified that he owned stock in that Bank, but that he had never transferred any of it; that he never owned and did not himself transfer ten shares of stock to Mrs. Hitz; and that he did not purchase those shares, and did not know how they happened to stand in his name, although he supposed his brother, who executed the transfer in the witness' name, understood how it all occurred.

Mr. Donaldson testified for the defendant that, while he signed a transfer of ten shares of stock to Mrs. Hitz, he had no recollection whatever of the transaction; that he never owned the stock so transferred; and was never paid for it by anyone.

Mrs. Hitz testified in her own behalf. The substance of her testimony was that she never bought, owned or voted any stock in the German-American Savings Bank or in the German-American National Bank; never knew until after the failure of the National Bank that her name appeared among the stockholders on the books of either Bank; never received any dividend declared or paid by either; and never received or held any certificates of stock in either Bank. Being asked as to whether the signature of Jane C. Hitz to the paper purporting to be signed by the stockholders of the German-American Savings Bank, and authorizing its conversion into a national banking association, was her signature, she answered, in substance, that she knew nothing of that paper; did not remember to have signed it, although the signature resembled hers; was not aware of the conversion of the Savings Bank into a National Bank until after the failure of the latter; and as she never owned any of this stock, she would not have signed any paper for such change, if she had been asked to do so. Being shown the checks for dividends on the stock standing in her name, she stated that she had no recollection of seeing them until after the failure of the German-American National Bank. Again: "Q. What do you say as to the signature—did you write it? A. I cannot say. Q. Did you ever get any money on account of those checks? A. I never did. Q. Those checks appear to have been paid. Do you remember whether you ever had them in your possession or not? A. No, sir; I never had them in my possession. Q. What do you say? A. I am certain I never had them in my possession. Q. Can you account to the jury for the similarity of that signature to your own? A. I cannot. Q. Do you say you never wrote your name on the back of those checks? A. No, sir; I cannot say that. I have no recollection of having done so. I never did so knowing the nature of the checks; never did so at all, so far as I can recollect."

Upon cross-examination: "Q. You are unable to deny that that is your signature? A. I cannot positively deny that it is. Q. Can you deny at all that that is your signature? A. I can deny having any recollection of having signed them. Q. Can you deny that it is your signature? A. I cannot deny it. Q. Now, I will ask you whether, when you were in Europe, the salary of your husband as consul-general was not paid to you? A. It was during part of the time that I was there. Q. To what did that salary amount? A. I think $3,000."

Upon re-examination the defendant was permitted, against the objection of the plaintiff, to state that she thought it would be impossible for her to have owned $20,000 of stock in the German Savings Bank and not have remembered it. Being asked whether, if she had seen the checks, she could have forgotten them, she said: "Had I seen them, knowing what they were, I should not have forgotten them—could not have forgotten them."

The foregoing is substantially the case made before the jury.

Before entering upon the examination of the questions raised by the plaintiff's assignments of error, it is necessary to consider certain propositions advanced by the defendant, which, if sound, might be sufficient to dispose of the case.

It is contended that the conversion of the German-American Savings Bank into a national banking association was unauthorized by any statute of the United States, and, consequently, that the appointment by the comptroller of the currency of the plaintiff as receiver, and the assessment made by that officer upon the stockholders of the Bank—which assessment is the foundation of the present suit—were absolute nullities.

The privilege of becoming a national banking association is given by section 5154 of the Revised Statutes to "any bank incorporated by special law, or any banking institution organized under a general law of any State." These words, it is argued, do not embrace savings banks organized in the District of Columbia, and only refer to banks or banking institutions created under the authority of some State, either by a special or general law. But all difficulty upon the subject is removed by the Act of Congress, entitled "An Act Authorizing the Appointment of Receivers of National Banks, and for Other Purposes," approved June 30, 1876, the sixth section of which is as follows:

"That all savings banks or savings and trust companies organized under authority of any Act of Congress, shall be, and are hereby, required to make, to the comptroller of the currency, and publish, all the reports which national banking associations are required to make and publish under the provisions of sections fifty-two hundred and eleven, fifty-two hundred and twelve and fifty-two hundred and thirteen of the Revised Statutes, and shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to make or publish such reports as are therein provided, which penalties may be collected by suit before any court of the United States in the district in which said savings banks or savings and trust companies may be located. And all savings or other banks now organized, or which shall hereafter be organized, in the District of Columbia, under any Act of Congress, which shall have capital stock paid up in whole or in part, shall be subject to all the provisions of the Revised Statutes, and of all Acts of Congress applicable to national banking associations, so far as the same may be applicable to such savings or other banks: Provided, That such savings banks now established shall not be required to have a paid-in capital exceeding one hundred thousand dollars." 19 Stat. 64; R. S. Supp. 216, 218.

Under that Act the German-American Savings Bank was required to make to the comptroller of the currency the reports which by sections 5211, 5212 and 5213 of the Revised Statutes were required from national banking associations. It also became subject to all the provisions of the Revised Statutes and of the Acts of Congress relating to national banking associations, so far as those provisions were applicable to a savings bank organized in this District. It is too clear for dispute that after the passage of the Act of 1876 savings banks organized in this District under an Act of Congress, and having a capital stock paid up in whole or in part, were entitled to become national banking associations in the mode, and subject to the conditions, prescribed by section 5154. Surely that section cannot be deemed inapplicable to savings banks of that class.

Another contention of the defendant is, that the German-American National Bank could not acquire the powers and privileges of a national banking association before receiving from the comptroller of the currency a certificate that the provisions of the Statute relating to such associations had been complied with, and that it was authorized to commence the business of banking; that the certificate given under date of May 14, 1877, by J. S. Langworthy, as "acting" comptroller of the currency, did not meet the requirements of the Statute, because, it is argued, there was no such officer known to the law. R. S. § 5154. This point was not specifically made in the court below. But there is nothing of substance in it, even if it could properly be raised in this collateral proceeding. There is an officer designated a deputy comptroller of the currency, who may exercise the powers and discharge the duties attached to the office of comptroller, during a vacancy in that office, or during the absence or inability of the comptroller. R. S. §§ 178, 327. The certificate alluded to was from the office of the comptroller, and was under the seal of that office. Besides, this court takes judicial notice of the fact that Mr. Langworthy was, at the date of his certificate, deputy comptroller of the currency. And it will be assumed that at the date of his certificate he was authorized to exercise the powers and discharge the duties of the comptroller, and was, therefore, at the time, acting comptroller.

It is further insisted that Langworthy's certificate is no part of the transcript. And the defendant has made a motion in this court to strike it from the record. It is clear from the affidavits submitted that the certificate was used at the trial in special term, and that it was accidentally omitted from the bill of exceptions taken by the plaintiff. This omission being discovered before the case was heard in general term, application was made to the trial justice, after the special term had adjourned without day, to amend the bill of exceptions so as to make this certificate a part of it. The application was granted—whether upon notice to the defendant or her counsel is not clearly shown—and the case was heard in the general term without any suggestion, so far as the record shows, that the certificate had been improperly made a part of the record after the bill of exceptions had been completed and signed. An objection of that character will not be considered where it was not presented to the court whose judgment is here for review. The record must be taken as it was presented to the general term.

We now proceed to consider the principal questions arising upon the requests for instructions and upon the charge of the court to the jury.

At the instance of the defendant the jury were instructed substantially as follows:

That if the stock in controversy was transferred upon the books of the German-American Savings Bank to and in the name of the defendant without her knowledge and consent, she was entitled to a verdict, unless she subsequently ratified and confirmed such transfer;

That if the defendant was procured to sign the application to the comptroller of the currency for the organization of the German-American National Bank by fraudulent means and representations, such application must not be taken as confirming the transfer of the stock to her on the books of the Savings Bank;

That if the defendant was induced to indorse the three checks for dividends by means of fraud or misrepresentation, or by concealing from her the facts concerning them, such checks cannot be regarded as a confirmation of the transfer of the stock to her name, nor as evidence against her;

That if the stock was transferred to the defendant for fraudulent purposes, by or at the instigation of her husband, and without her knowledge or consent, such transfer was void, and she was entitled to a verdict; and,

That if, at or before the time of the transfer of the stock to the defendant on the books of the company, she had not purchased the stock or authorized it to be purchased, either directly or indirectly, and knew nothing about it, she was not liable, as a shareholder, to the assessment in question.

These instructions were, in effect, repeated in the elaborate charge to the jury.

The testimony of the defendant tended to show that the stock was originally transferred to her on the books of the German-American Savings Bank, without her knowledge or consent; and the issue upon that point was fairly submitted to the jury by the first instruction given at her instance. But some of the instructions given upon her motion, as well as the charge to the jury, erroneously assumed that there was evidence tending to show that she was procured, by fraudulent means and representations, to sign the application for the conversion of the Savings Bank into a National Bank; that, by like means, or by concealment of the facts, she was induced to sign the checks for dividends; and that the transfer of the stock to her name was for fraudulent purposes by or at the instigation of her husband. There was, however, no evidence as to the circumstances under which her name was signed to the application addressed to the comptroller, or under which the checks were indorsed in her name; absolutely none upon which to base the theory of fraud or false representations. It is true, as already suggested, there was evidence tending to show that the transfers of stock were made originally without defendant's knowledge; and the jury might reasonably have concluded, under all the evidence, that the transfers were made, and caused to be made, by her husband. But these facts neither proved, nor tended to prove, fraud upon the part of the husband. There was no proof that he was insolvent, and, therefore, it could not be presumed that the transfers were made with any intent to defraud his creditors. Besides, the intent with which the husband caused the transfers to be made to his wife was wholly immaterial. Even if the object was to conceal his property from creditors, the vital question remained whether the defendant became the owner of the stock within the meaning of the Statute regulating the individual liability of the shareholders of national banking associations. In other words, the husband may have intended to commit a fraud upon his creditors, and the transfers of stock may have been made to the wife without first obtaining her consent; and yet she may have been, at the time of the Bank's failure, liable to be assessed as a shareholder. There was no connection between her liability to be so assessed, and the alleged fraudulent intent with which the husband caused the transfers of stock to be made.

Whether she signed the application for the conversion of the Savings Bank into a National Bank in the capacity of shareholder to the extent of two hundred shares, was wholly apart from any question of her knowledge, at the time of the transfers, of the motive which induced her husband in making or causing them to be made. If she became aware of the transfers, after they were made, and thereafter received the dividends, she became a shareholder for all purposes of individual liability in respect to the contracts, debts and engagements of the Bank, as fully as if the transfers had been made originally with her knowledge and consent. Whether she received the dividends or not depended upon the inquiry as to whether the checks for them were indorsed by her. If she indorsed them, or either of them, she is estopped to say that she did not know their contents, and was not the owner of the shares of stock upon which the dividends were declared; for each check discloses upon its face that it was payable to her order, and was for dividends on stock standing in her name on the books of the Bank. This result is not at all affected by the fact that the proceeds of the checks went to the credit of John Hitz's account as consul-general. If the defendant indorsed the checks in blank or to the order of her husband, and delivered them to him, the mode in which he disposed of the proceeds is of no consequence in the present suit.

We must not be understood as saying that the mere transfer of the stocks on the books of the Bank, to the name of the defendant, imposed upon her the individual liability attached by law to the position of shareholder in a national banking association. If the transfers were, in fact, without her knowledge and consent, and she was not informed of what was so done—nothing more appearing—she would not be held to have assumed or incurred liability for the debts, contracts and engagements of the Bank. But if, after the transfers, she joined in the application to convert the Savings Bank into a National Bank, or in any other mode approved, ratified or acquiesced in such transfers, or accepted any of the benefits arising from the ownership of the stock thus put in her name on the books of the Bank, she was liable to be treated as a shareholder, with such responsibility as the law imposes upon the shareholders of national banks.

The arguments of counsel were partly directed to the question whether new certificates of stock were issued by the Savings Bank, and delivered to the defendant, after the transfers were made on the books of that Bank. It is sufficient, on this point, to say that the record made of the transfers upon the books of the Bank was sufficient, as between her and the Bank, to work a change of ownership, and new certificates were not necessary to her becoming the owner of the stock so transferred. Nor can she escape liability by reason of the fact, if such be the fact, that no certificates were issued to her by the German-American National Bank. The Statute expressly declares that the shares of the old Bank may continue to be for the same amount each as they were before the conversion.

One other question raised by the defendant requires consideration. She contends that her coverture, at the time of the transfers, as well as when the Bank failed, protected her against assessment upon the stock put in her name upon the books of the Bank. The plaintiff's requests for instructions upon this point having all been granted by the court below, it is suggested that no question can arise upon the assignments of error in reference to the individual liability of married women for the debts, contracts and assessments of national banking associations of which they are shareholders. But if the defendant's position is correct, the judgment might be affirmed upon the ground that she was not, under any circumstances, liable to an assessment by the comptroller. For this reason, and because this question will necessarily arise upon another trial, it is proper to give it some attention.

We do not understand the defendant to say that she was incapacitated by the laws in force in the District of Columbia from becoming the owner of bank stock. It was well said by Mr. Justice Cox, when the present case was first before the general term (Keyser v. Hitz, 2 Mackey, 478, 493), that a married woman "has the legal capacity to receive gifts, may be the obligee of a bond, or receive a transfer of stock in moneyed corporations, and this though the consideration may have proceeded wholly from the husband; and in such case she may hold against the legatees and heirs, but not against the creditors, of the husband. Fiak v. Cushman, 6 Cush. 20." We speak of gifts, because the reasonable inference from all the evidence is that the defendant's husband made and caused to be made the transfers in question as a gift, though not, so far as the record shows, to her sole and separate use.

Assuming, then, that she was not incapacitated from becoming the owner of stock in a bank, and that she was a shareholder in the Savings Bank, she became, upon the conversion of that Bank into a National Bank, a shareholder in the latter. Rev. Stat. § 5154. In that event she became, by force of the Statute, individually responsible to the amount of her stock, at the par value thereof, for the contracts, debts and engagements of the National Bank, equally and ratably with other shareholders. Section 5151, which imposes such individual responsibility upon the shareholders of national banks, makes no exception in favor of married women. The only persons holding shares of national bank stock whom the Statute exempts from this personal responsibility are executors, administrators, guardians or trustees. § 5152. It is not for the courts, by mere construction, to recognize an exemption which Congress has not given. The hardship that may result where the ownership of national bank stock by a married woman is subject to the common-law rights of the husband, in respect to its alienation, cannot control the interpretation of the Statute. Such considerations are more properly for the legislative department. Upon this point, the case of the Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 9, 15, which involved the liability of a married woman as a shareholder in a state bank is instructive.

588

The Constitution and Statutes of New York made the shareholders in corporations and joint-stock associations, for banking purposes, issuing bank notes, "individually responsible," etc. The Court of Appeals of that State, speaking by Chief Judge Comstock, said: "It is also said that femes covert are not liable to suit or judgment at the common law; and, in general, this is true. It is also true that the apportionment of liability among stockholders in banks, when duly confirmed, becomes a judgment against each stockholder, to be enforced by execution as in other cases. But it was competent for the Legislature to depart from the rules and analogies of the common law, and to make married women and their estates liable in this proceeding, as other stockholders in banks are made liable. This, we think, has been done, and it seems to us proper to add that we see no reason why it ought not to be done, in order to effectuate the policy on which the constitutional provision and the Statute are founded. It might go far to defeat that policy, if married women could take and hold stock without liability to the creditors." See also Sayles v. Bates, 15 R. I. 845.

This question arose in Anderson v. Line, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, where it was held by Judge McKennan that a married woman was not exempted by reason of her coverture from the liability imposed by Congress upon shareholders in national banks. 14 Fed. Rep. 405. To the same effect is the decision of Judge Wheeler in Witters v. Soules, 82 Fed. Rep. 767.

We are of opinion that the coverture of the defendant did not prevent the plaintiff from recovering a judgment against her for the amount of the assessment in question, if she was, within the meaning of the Statute, a shareholder in the Bank at the time of its suspension. But the question as to what property may be reached in the enforcement of such judgment is not before us, and we express no opinion upon it.

For the above errors committed by the court below in its instructions to the jury, the judgment is reversed, with directions to grant a new trial, and for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Miller dissented.

BENJAMIN E. COLE ET AL., Executors, Plffs. in Err.,

v.
RICHARD CUNNINGHAM ET AL., Assignees.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 107-188.)

Massachusetts decree—attachments in New York, when can be enjoined in Massachusetts—U. S.

NOTE.—As to effect of judgments beyond territorial limits of jurisdiction, see note to Darby v. Mayer, Bk. 6, p. 367.

As to judgments of state court, when conclusive, and when not, in another State, see note to Mills v. Duryee, Bk. 3, p. 411.

As to conclusiveness of record on the question of jurisdiction, in suit on judgment of another State; and fraud as a plea to judgment of another State, see note to Christmas v. Russell, Bk. 18, p. 475.

128 U. S.

Constitution—judgments of other States, effect of—rights of citizens of other States—state courts can enjoin citizens from prosecuting suits in other States.

1. A decree of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts restraining citizens of that Commonwealth from the prosecution of attachment suits in New York, brought by them for the purpose of evading the laws of their domicile, is not void as being in violation of art. IV., secs. 1 and 2, of the Constitution of the United States.
2. Where a Massachusetts creditor of an insolvent citizen of that State attached in New York a debt due from a citizen of New York to the insolvent debtor, so as to obtain a preference over other creditors, contrary to the Insolvent Laws of Massachusetts forbidding preferences, a Massachusetts court can restrain the attaching creditor from the prosecution of such attachment suit, in an action in equity brought by the assignees in insolvency in Massachusetts.
3. The provision of the U. S. Constitution, art. IV., sec. 1, that full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the judgments of another State, does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court rendering the judgment, over the parties and subject matter, nor as to whether the judgment is impeachable for fraud.
4. Such constitutional provision does not make the judgments of the States domestic judgments to all intents and purposes, but only gives a general validity, faith and credit to them as evidence.
5. No execution can be issued upon such judgments without a new suit in the tribunals of other States; and they enjoy, not the right of priority or privilege or lien which they have in the State where they are pronounced, but that only which the lex fori gives to them by its own laws, in their character of foreign judgments.
6. The intention of section 2 of art. IV., U. S. Constitution, was to confer on the citizens of the several States a general citizenship, and to communicate all the privileges and immunities which the citizens of the same State would be entitled to under the like circumstances, and this includes the right to institute actions.
7. In a proper case, the equity courts of one State can control persons within their jurisdiction from the prosecution of suits in another.

[No. 74.]

Submitted Nov. 6, 1889. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a decree restraining defendants, citizens of that Commonwealth, from the prosecution of attachment suits in the State of New York. Affirmed.

Opinion below, 142 Mass. 47, 2 New Eng. Rep. 838.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Daniel C. Bird, a citizen and inhabitant of Massachusetts, unable to meet his bills at maturity, suspended payment March 2, 1885, being at the time indebted to Butler, Hayden & Co., a copartnership composed of Charles S. Butler and N. F. T. Hayden, citizens and residents of Massachusetts, doing business in that State. On the night of the 4th or 5th of March, 1885, Butler, Hayden & Co. were informed by Bird that he had stopped payment, and that the firm of Aaron Claffin & Co., of New York, were indebted to him in a considerable sum for goods consigned by him to that firm to be sold on his account, and upon which Claffin & Co. had made advances, but not to their full value. March 6th, Butler, Hayden & Co. executed an assignment of their claims against Bird to one Fayerweather, a resident of the State of New York, which assignment was made without consideration, and without previous communication with Fayerweather. March 11th and March 25th two actions were commenced in New York in the name of Fayerweather on the claims of Butler, Hayden & Co. against Bird as defendant, and the firm of Claffin & Co. were summoned as garnishees. March 18th, 1885, a meeting of Bird's creditors was held, and a committee appointed to investigate his affairs and make a report. On the 20th of March a second meeting of Bird's creditors was held, at which a report was submitted by the committee. April 23d, 1885, a proposal for composition under the statutes of Massachusetts in that behalf was filed by Bird, returnable May 4th. May 20th, the composition proposal having been withdrawn, regular proceedings in insolvency were continued therein, and June 1, 1885, Richard Cunningham and Henry Tolman, Jr., were duly appointed assignees in insolvency of the estate of said Bird by the Court of Insolvency for the County of Plymouth, Massachusetts. Hayden of Butler, Hayden & Co. was present at one of these creditors' meetings. The suits in New York were brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, and the attachments and proceedings were regular and in conformity with the laws of New York; they are still pending, and no judgment has yet been obtained therein.

On the 19th of June the assignees in insolvency brought a bill in equity in the Supreme Judicial Court for the County of Suffolk, in the State of Massachusetts, against Butler and Hayden, copartners as Butler, Hayden & Co., praying that Butler, Hayden & Co., their agents, servants, attorneys and solicitors, might be enjoined and restrained from proceeding to further continue the suits against Bird, begun by them in the name of Fayerweather, and from attempting to collect by suit or otherwise, in the name of Fayerweather or any other person, for their own benefit, from Claffin & Co., any money or other thing on account of the claim against Bird; that they be ordered to refrain from further prosecuting the suits in New York, in which Claffin & Co. were summoned as garnishees; or that they be ordered to transfer to the assignees all their right, title and interest by, or under or on account of their claim pretended to have been assigned to Fayerweather, so that the assignees may have, as the effect of said order, full right to receive all money due from Claffin & Co. without any hindrance or interference upon the part of Butler, Hayden & Co. therewith; and a prayer for general relief.

Butler, Hayden & Co. answered the bill, denying any knowledge of Bird's insolvency, and claiming that the assignment to Fayerweather was made in good faith, and that the rights of Fayerweather, as a citizen of New York, under said assignment cannot be in any way affected by the insolvency of Bird; and afterwards amended the answer, and claimed that even if the assignment to Fayerweather was invalid, the attachment proceedings in New York were regular, and gave a valid lien on the property attached; and that, by the Constitution of the United States, the rights and interests gained by the attachments in New York cannot be taken away by the courts of Massachusetts without violating the provision that full faith and credit must be given in each State to the judicial proceedings of every other State.

The case was heard by a single judge upon certain agreed facts and additional evidence, and reserved by him for the consideration of the full court. It was stipulated "that either party may refer to the statutes of the United States, the statutes of the State of New York, and the several decisions of the State of New York, with the same effect as if the same were regularly introduced in evidence." The supreme judicial court found, in addition to the matters hereinbefore stated, that it was fairly proven from the evidence "that the defendants, with full knowledge that Bird was insolvent, anticipating that there might be proceedings in insolvency in this State, and intending to secure to themselves, to the exclusion of other creditors, the avails of the debt owing to Bird by Claflin & Co., made the transfer of their claims to Fayerweather, and that the suits in New York now carried on in his name are subject to their control and conducted for their benefit. The attachments made in New York by process of garnishment are to be treated, so far as the defendants are concerned, as made by them." The court concluded its opinion, which is certified as a part of this record, and is reported in 142 Mass. 47 [2 New Eng. Rep. 888], thus:

"In the case at bar it is true that the defendants had made their attachment through Fayerweather in New York before there had been an assignment in insolvency in this State actually executed, but this was done with full knowledge on their part that the debtor, Bird, was embarrassed and had suspended payment, and necessarily with intent to avoid the effect of the assignment, so far as the property attached was concerned. As residents of this State, they cannot be allowed to this extent to defeat the operation of the assignment, and thus to obtain a preference over other creditors resident here. They are within the limits of the jurisdiction of this court, and amenable to its process, and should be enjoined from prosecuting a suit the effect of which, if successful, will be to work a wrong and injury to other residents of the State."

The court thereupon entered a decree for the injunction prayed for, and Butler, Hayden & Co. sued out a writ of error from this court.

Messrs. Henry D. Hyde, M. F. Dickenson, Jr., and Hollis R. Bailey, for plaintiffs in error:

The meaning of the words "full faith and credit" is well established.

Mills v. Duryee, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 488 (8: 411); Christmas v. Russell, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 800 (18: 478); Green v. Van Buskirk, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 145 (19: 111); Crapo v. Kelly, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 610, 642 (21: 480, 442).

Rights gained by attachment are entitled to protection equally with those gained by judgment.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 145 (19: 111); Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 259; Jenks v. Ludden, 84 Minn. 482.

The force and effect which the attachment proceedings have in New York is shown by the following statutes and cases:

Rev. Stat. of N. Y. 7th ed. vol. IV.; Code Civ. Proc. chap. 7, title III. §§ 635, 636, 638-641, 644, 648-651, 654-656, 674-681, 706-708; Sartwell v. Field, 68 N. Y. 841; Dunlop v. Patterson Fire Ins. Co. 74 N. Y. 145; Anthony v. Wood, 29 Hun, 239; McGinn v. Ross, 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. 20; Hibernia Nat. Bank v. La Combe, 84 N. Y. 885.

Citizens of other States have equal rights with the citizens of New York to sue and attach in the courts of New York, and the courts of New York will not make any distinction between them.

Hibernia Nat. Bank v. La Combe, 84 N. Y. 885.

The law is the same in Minnesota, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Illinois.

Jenks v. Ludden, 84 Minn. 486; Kidder v. Tufts, 48 N. H. 121, 126; Paine v. Lester, 44 Conn. 204; Rhawn v. Pearce, 110 Ill. 850.

The equity of the bill brought by the assignees of Bird depends upon the fact that they have no standing in the courts of New York to dispute the validity of these attachments.

Fuller v. Caldwell, 6 Allen, 508.

The title of the attaching creditors is superior in New York to that of the assignees appointed in Massachusetts.

Kelly v. Crapo, 45 N. Y. 86; Re Waite, 99 N. Y. 483.

Kelly v. Crapo was reversed in this court, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 610 (21: 480), but only on the ground that the property attached, being upon the high sea, was constructively in Massachusetts.

The question whether property situated in New York is subject to attachment by creditors, notwithstanding any assignment made in another State, is to be determined exclusively by the law of New York, the situs of the property.

Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 907 (18: 599); Hervey v. R. I. Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664 (23: 1008); Jenks v. Ludden, 84 Minn. 486.

Attachments are proceedings in rem.

Taylor v. Carryl, 61 U. S. 20 How. 583 (15: 1028); Cooper v. Reynolds, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 309 (19: 981); Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714 (24: 565); Green v. Van Buskirk, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 189 (19: 109).

This is equally true of attachments made by trustee or garnishee process.

Whipple v. Robbins, 97 Mass. 108; American Bank v. Rollins, 99 Mass. 814; Garity v. Gigie, 130 Mass. 184; Wallace v. McConnell, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 151 (10: 102).

Courts of equity are bound by the Constitution to give full faith and credit to the judicial proceedings of other States.

Christmas v. Russell, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 800-802 (18: 478); Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 248; Nicoll v. Spowers, 105 N. Y. 4, 5, 7 Cent. Rep. 95; Keller v. Paine, 107 N. Y. 90, 9 Cent. Rep. 429; Bicknell v. Field, 8 Paige, 440; Jenks v.

Ludden, 84 Minn. 488; Harrie v. Pullman, 84 Ill. 20; Green v. Van Buskirk, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 148 (19: 112).

Citizenship and its effect.

Moore v. Church, 70 Iowa, 211.

Review of Massachusetts cases:—

The case of Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 545, 7 Allen, 57, cannot be reconciled with Lawrence v. Batcheller, 181 Mass. 506. Lawrence v. Batcheller was the latest statement of the Massachusetts Law at the time the attachments were made.

The assignees have no standing in the courts of New York as against the prior attaching creditors.

Re Waite, 99 N. Y. 488.

The law is the same in other States.

Kidder v. Tufts, 48 N.H. 125; Paine v. Lester, 44 Conn. 198; Rhawn v. Pearce, 110 Ill. 850.

Mr. Eugene M. Johnson, for defendants in error:

The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts has the right to restrain the citizens of that State, who are within its jurisdiction, from doing any act which shall result in wrong and injury to other citizens of the State, by a decree in personam.

Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 545; Keyser v. Rice, 47 Md. 208; Quidnick Co. v. Chafes, 18 R. I. 367; Snook v. Snetser, 25 Ohio St. 516; Vermont & C. R. Co. v. Vermont Cent. R. Co. 43 Vt. 792, 797; Clafin v. Hamlin, 62 How. Pr. 286; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 900; Bispham, Eq. 4th ed. § 424; 1 High, Injunctions, 2d ed. § 106; Whart. Conflict of Laws, § 711, note a; Bigelow, Estoppel, 4th ed. 246; Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Worster, 23 N. H. 462; Bushby v. Munday, 5 Madd. 307; Beckford v. Kemble, 1 Sim. & Stu. 7; Attwood v. Banks, 2 Beav. 192; Hill v. Turner, 1 Atk. 515; Glascott v. Lang, 8 Myl. & C. 451; Hops v. Carnegie, L. R. 1 Ch. 320; Ex parte Tait, L. R. 18 Eq. 811; Re Chapman, L. R. 15 Eq. 75; Massie v. Watts, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 148 (8: 181); Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298 (25: 478); Corbett v. Nutt, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 464 (19: 976).

An attachment lien is not a final decree of the court.

Sartwell v. Field, 68 N. Y. 841.

The plaintiffs in error have not the same rights as a creditor resident in New York.

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714 (24: 565).

The court of Massachusetts may compel citizens of Massachusetts to transfer rights and property elsewhere situated.

Penn v. Lord Baltimore, 1 Ves. Sr. 444; Watkins v. Holman, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 25 (10: 878); Corbett v. Nutt, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 464 (19: 976).

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The question to be determined is, whether a decree of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, restraining citizens of that Commonwealth from the prosecution of attachment suits in New York, brought by them for the purpose of evading the laws of their domicile, should be reversed upon the ground that such judicial action in Massachusetts was in violation of article IV., sections 1 and 2, of the Constitution of the United States, which read as follows:

183 U. S.

"Sec. 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general laws prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

"Sec. 2. The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States."

The Act of May 26, 1790 (1 Stat. 122), now embodied in § 905 of the Revised Statutes, after providing the mode of authenticating the acts, records and judicial proceedings of the States, declares:

"And the said records and judicial proceedings, authenticated as aforesaid, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States, as they have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence the said records are or shall be taken."

This does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court, in which a judgment is rendered, to pronounce the judgment, nor into the right of the State to exercise authority over the parties or the subject matter, nor whether the judgment is founded in, and impeachable for, a manifest fraud. The Constitution did not mean to confer any new power on the States, but simply to regulate the effect of their acknowledged jurisdiction over persons and things within their territory. It did not make the judgments of the States domestic judgments to all intents and purposes, but only gave a general validity, faith and credit to them as evidence. No execution can be issued upon such judgments without a new suit in the tribunals of other States, and they enjoy, not the right of priority or privilege or lien which they have in the State where they are pronounced, but that only which the lex fori gives to them by its own laws, in their character of foreign judgments. McElmoyle v. Cohen, 38 U. S. 18 Pet. 812, 328, 329 [10: 177, 185]; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 52 U. S. 11 How. 165 [13: 648]; Thompson v. Whitman, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 457 [21: 587]; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714 [24: 565]; Wisconsin v. Pelican Ins. Co. 127 U. S. 265, 292 [32: 239, 244]; Christmas v. Russell, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 290 [18: 475]; Story, Constitution, § 1808 et seq., and Story, Conflict of Laws, § 609. And other judicial proceedings can rest on no higher ground.

These well settled principles find pertinent illustration in the decisions of the highest tribunal of the State of New York, to one of which we refer, as the contention is that the decree under review was in some way an unconstitutional invasion of the jurisdiction of that State.

In Dobson v. Pearce, 12 N. Y. 156, the plaintiff in a judgment, recovered in New York, brought an action upon it in the Superior Court of Connecticut, whereupon the defendant in the judgment filed a bill against the plaintiff on the equity side of the same court, alleging that the judgment was procured by fraud, and praying relief. The plaintiff in the judgment appeared in and litigated the equity suit, and the court adjudged that the allegations of fraud in obtaining the judgment were true, and enjoined him from prosecuting an action upon it.

He assigned the judgment, and it was held in a suit in New York, brought thereon by the assignee, that a duly authenticated copy of the record of the decree in the Connecticut court was conclusive evidence that the judgment was obtained by fraud.

The Court of Appeals held that while a judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction could not be impeached collaterally for error or irregularity, yet it could be attacked upon the ground of want of jurisdiction, or of fraud or imposition; that the right of the plaintiff in the judgment was a personal right, and followed his person; that when the courts of Connecticut obtained jurisdiction of his person by the due service of process within the State, these courts had full power to pronounce upon the rights of the parties in respect to the judgment, and to decree concerning it; that the jurisdiction of a court of equity anywhere, to restrain suit upon a judgment at law, upon sufficient grounds, was one of the firmly established parts of the authority of courts of equity; and that it could not be held that a court of equity in one State had no jurisdiction to restrain such a suit upon a judgment of a court of law of another State. If the objection to so doing was founded upon an assumed violation of the comity existing between the several States of the United States, that did not reach to the jurisdiction of the court, a rule of comity being a self-imposed restraint upon an authority actually possessed; and as to the objection that the Constitution of the United States and the laws made in pursuance of it inhibited the action of the Connecticut courts, this could not prevail, since full faith and credit are given to the judgment of a state court when in the courts of another State it receives the same faith and credit to which it was entitled in the State where it was pronounced. Pearce v. Olney, 20 Conn. 544; Engel v. Scheuerman, 40 Ga. 206; Cage v. Cassidy, 64 U. S. 28 How. 109 [16:480].

The intention of section 2 of article IV. was to confer on the citizens of the several States a general citizenship, and to communicate all the privileges and immunities which the citizens of the same State would be entitled to under the like circumstances, and this includes the right to institute actions. The fact of the citizenship of Butler and Hayden did not affect their privilege to sue in New York and have the full use and benefit of the courts of that State in the assertion of their legal rights; but as that fact might affect the right of action as between them and the citizens of their own State, the courts of New York might have held that its existence put an end to the seizure of their debtor's property by Butler & Hayden in New York. If, however, those courts declined to take that view, it would not follow that the courts of Massachusetts violated any privilege or immunity of Massachusetts' own citizens in exercising their undoubted jurisdiction over them.

Discharges under State Insolvent Laws exemplify the principle. Where the effect of the Insolvent Law is to relieve the debtor from liability on his contracts, such discharge, if the creditor and debtor have a common domicile, or the creditor, though nonresident, has voluntarily become a party to the proceedings, avails the defendant in all courts and places.

It was decided in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 122 [4:529], that State Legislatures have authority to pass a Bankrupt or Insolvent Law, provided there be no Act of Congress in force, establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy, conflicting with such laws; and provided the law itself be so framed that it does not impair the obligation of contracts. Eight years later, in Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 213 [6:806], the court held that the power of Congress to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States did not exclude the right of the States to legislate on the same subject, except when the power had actually been exercised by Congress, and the state laws conflicted with those of Congress; that a Bankrupt or Insolvent Law of any State which discharged both the person of the debtor and his future acquisitions of property was not a law impairing the obligation of contracts, so far as respected debts contracted subsequent to the passage of the law; that a certificate of discharge under such law could not be pleaded in bar of an action brought by a citizen of another State in the courts of the United States, or of any other State than that where the discharge was obtained. The Insolvent Law could have no extraterritorial operation, and the tribunal administering it would have no jurisdiction over citizens of other States. But this objection would not lie where such citizens had become parties to the proceedings. Hence, in Clay v. Smith, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 411 [7:723], it was held, where a citizen of Kentucky sued a citizen of Louisiana, and the defendant pleaded his discharge by the Bankrupt Law of Louisiana, that the plaintiff, who had received a dividend on his debt declared by the assignees of the defendant in Louisiana, had voluntarily made himself a party to those proceedings, abandoned his extraterritorial immunity from the Bankrupt Law of Louisiana, and was bound by that law to the same extent to which the citizens of Louisiana were bound. And it may be considered as settled that State Insolvent Laws are not only binding upon such persons as were citizens of the State at the time the debt was contracted, but also upon foreign creditors if they make themselves parties to proceedings under these Insolvent Laws by accepting dividends, becoming petitioning creditors or in some other way appearing and assenting to the jurisdiction. Baldwin v. Hale, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 223 [17:531]; Gilman v. Lockwood, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 409 [18:432].

In New York an attachment is obtained on application to a judge of the supreme court, or a county judge, affidavit being made as to the validity of the claim and the grounds of the attachment, and a bond furnished with sufficient sureties. The judge in his discretion makes an order that a warrant of attachment be granted. The warrant is directed to the sheriff, and is subscribed by the judge, and requires the sheriff to attach and safely keep so much of the property as will satisfy the plaintiff's demand, with costs and expenses. This is served by the sheriff taking the property into his actual custody, or, in the case of a demand trustee, by leaving a copy with the trustee or garnishee. The sheriff, under the direction of the court, must collect any debt or chose in action attached by him, and, if necessary, may bring an action in his own name, or in that of the defendant, against the garnishee. Code of Civil Procedure, title III., § 1 Bliss, New York Annotated Code, 545 et seq.

An attachment is in the nature of, but not, strictly speaking, a proceeding in rem, since that only is a proceeding in rem in which the process is to be served on the thing itself. If in an attachment suit "the defendant appears, the cause becomes mainly a suit in personam, with the added incident, that the property attached remains liable, under the control of the court, to answer any demand which may be established against defendant by the final judgment of the court. But, if there is no appearance of the defendant, and no service of process on him, the case becomes, in its essential nature, a proceeding in rem, the only effect of which is to subject the property attached to the payment of the demand which the court may find to be due to the plaintiff." Cooper v. Reynolds, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 308, 318 [19: 981, 983]. The lien is inchoate, and the property attached held to await the result of the suit. If a judgment for the plaintiff is obtained, the lien becomes perfected and the property is applied to satisfy the judgment. If plaintiff fails in his action, the lien falls with it. And he may so fail by reason of the discharge of the defendant in insolvency, when he is a citizen of the same State, or has made himself a party to the proceedings in insolvency, or by the action of other courts of the State where the suit is pending, or elsewhere, if jurisdiction in personam be obtained. So that, after all, the inquiry is, whether, in a proper case, the equity courts of one State can control persons within their jurisdiction from the prosecution of suits in another. If they can, in accordance with the principles of equity jurisprudence and practice, no reason is perceived for contending that the Constitution of the United States prescribes any different rule. And the determination of what is a proper case for equity interposition would seem to be reposed in the court whose authority is invoked, though some remarks in that regard may not improperly be made.

The jurisdiction of the English Court of Chancery to restrain persons within its territorial limits and under its jurisdiction from doing anything abroad, whether the thing forbidden be a conveyance or other act in pais, or the institution or the prosecution of an action in a foreign court, is well settled.

In Penn v. Lord Baltimore, 1 Ves. Sr. 444, Lord Hardwicke recognized the principle that equity, as it acts primarily in personam and not merely in rem, may, where a person against whom relief is sought is within the jurisdiction, make a decree, upon the ground of a contract, or any equity subsisting between the parties, respecting property situated out of the jurisdiction. 2 Lead. Cas. in Eq. 4th Am. ed. 1806, and cases.

In McIntosh v. Ogilvie, 4 Term Rep. 193, note; S. C., 3 Swanst. 865, note, Lord Hardwicke lays down the same doctrine as to restraining prosecution of suit. This case bears 183 U. S.

so close an analogy to that at bar that we give it in full, as follows:

"The plaintiff was the assignee of a bankrupt, the defendant a creditor who, before the bankruptcy, went into Scotland and made arrestments on debts due to the bankrupt from persons there. Upon an affidavit of the defendant's having got this money into his hands, a ne exeat was granted; and a motion was now made on the behalf of the defendant to discharge it, upon a supposition that he had a right to the goods as creditor by his arrestments.

"The Lord Chancellor asked whether he had sentence before the bankruptcy; and, being answered in the negative, he said, 'Then it is like a foreign attachment, by which this court will not suffer a creditor to gain priority, if no sentence were pronounced before the bankruptcy. I cannot grant a prohibition to the court of sessions; but I will certainly make an order on the party here to restrain him from getting a priority, and evading the laws of bankruptcy here. If the gentleman were not going abroad, I would do nothing; but as he is, I will not discharge the writ without his giving security to abide the event of the cause.'"

Penn v. Lord Baltimore is cited with approval by Chief Justice Marshall in Massie v. Watts, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 148 [8: 181], where a suit was instituted in the Circuit Court of Kentucky to compel the conveyance by the defendant of the legal title of land in Ohio, on the ground that he had notice, when it was purchased, of the prior equity of the complainant. The defense was that the land was beyond the jurisdiction of the court and within the State of Ohio. This defense was overruled by the court below, and its decision affirmed by this court. "This court is of opinion," said the chief justice, "that in a case of fraud, of trust or of contract, the jurisdiction of a court of chancery is sustainable wherever the person be found, although lands not within the jurisdiction of that court may be affected by the decree."

And in Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 728 [24: 565, 569], it is said in the opinion of the court by Mr. Justice Field: "The State, through its tribunals, may compel persons domiciled within its limits to execute, in pursuance of their contracts respecting property elsewhere situated, instruments in such form and with such solemnities as to transfer the title, so far as such formalities can be complied with; and the exercise of this jurisdiction in no manner interferes with the supreme control over the property by the State within which it is situated. Penn v. Lord Baltimore, 1 Ves. Sr. 444; Massie v. Watts, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 148 [8: 181]; Watkins v. Holman, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 25 [10: 878]; Corbett v. Nutt, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 464 [19: 976]."

In Lord Portarlington v. Southby, 3 Myl. & K. 104, 106, Lord Chancellor Brougham reviews the history of the jurisdiction to restrain parties from commencing or prosecuting actions in foreign countries, and concludes: "Nothing can be more unfounded than the doubts of the jurisdiction. That is grounded like all other jurisdiction of the court, not upon any pretention to the exercise of judicial and administrative rights abroad, but on the circumstance of the person of the party, on whom this order is made, being within the power of the court." Earl of Oxford's Case, 2 Lead. Cas. in Eq. 1316, 1 Ch. Rep. 1.

Mr. Justice Story states the principle thus:

"But although the courts of one country have no authority to stay proceedings in the courts of another, they have an undoubted authority to control all persons and things within their own territorial limits. When, therefore, both parties to a suit in a foreign country are resident within the territorial limits of another country, the courts of equity in the latter may act in personam upon those parties, and direct them by injunction to proceed no further in such suit. In such a case, these courts act upon acknowledged principles of public law in regard to jurisdiction. They do not pretend to direct or control the foreign court, but, without regard to the situation of the subject matter of the dispute, they consider the equities between the parties, and decree in personam according to those equities; and enforce obedience to their decrees by process in personam. . . . It is now held that whenever the parties are resident within a country, the courts of that country have full authority to act upon them personally with respect to the subject of suits in a foreign country, as the ends of justice may require; and with that view to order them to take, or to omit to take, any steps and proceedings in any other court of justice, whether in the same country, or in any foreign country." Story, Eq. Jur. sections 899, 900.

In Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 308 [25:478,476], Mr. Justice Swayne uses this language:

"Where the necessary parties are before a court of equity, it is immaterial that the res of the controversy, whether it be real or personal property, is beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the tribunal. It has the power to compel the defendant to do all things necessary, according to the lex loci rei sitæ, which he could do voluntarily, to give full effect to the decree against him. Without regard to the situation of the subject matter, such courts consider the equities between the parties, and decree in personam according to those equities, and enforce obedience to their decree by process in personam."

Such is undoubtedly the result of the clear weight of authority, and the rule has been often applied by the courts of the domicile against the attempts of some of its citizens to defeat the operation of its laws to the wrong and injury of others.

Thus it was held by the Supreme Court of Ohio, Snook v. Snetzer, 25 Ohio St. 516, that where the statutes of that State exempted the earnings for personal service of a debtor, who was the head of a family and a citizen of the State, the Ohio courts had authority to restrain a citizen of the county in which the equity action was commenced, from proceeding in another State to attach the earnings of such head of a family, with a view to evade the Exemption Laws of Ohio, and to prevent him from availing himself of the benefit of such law.

To the same effect is Keyser v. Rice, 47 Md.

208. The Court of Appeals of Maryland declared the power of the State to compel its own citizens to respect its laws, even beyond its own territorial limits, to be supported by the great preponderance of precedent and authority; and sustained an injunction to restrain the further prosecution in another State of an attachment by which the defendant sought to recover wages due the complainant in Maryland and there exempt from attachment.

So in Burlington & M. R. R. Co. v. Thompson, 81 Kan. 180, though it was held that a foreign corporation doing business in Kansas might be garnished for a debt due to a non-resident employé, contracted outside of the State and exempt from garnishment in the State where the defendant and garnishee resided, yet it was conceded by Judge Brewer, in delivering the opinion, "that in the courts of a State any citizen of that State may be enjoined from resorting to the courts of any other State for the purpose of evading the Exemption Laws of his own State;" and this was so decided in Zimmerman v. Franke, 34 Kan. 650.

In Wilson v. Joseph, 107 Ind. 490, 5 West. Rep. 681, the Supreme Court of Indiana ruled an injunction would lie to restrain a resident of Indiana from prosecuting an attachment proceeding against another resident in the courts of another State, in violation of a statute which made it an offense to send a claim against a debtor out of the State for collection, in order to evade the Exemption Law. And see Chafee v. Quidnick Co. 13 R. I. 442, 449; Great Falls Manufacturing Co. v. Worster, 23 N. H. 462; Pickett v. Ferguson, 45 Ark. 177.

The rule is not otherwise in New York. It is true that in Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige, Ch. 402, the chancellor said: "I am not aware that any court of equity in the Union has deliberately decided that it will exercise the power by process of injunction to restrain proceedings which have been previously commenced in the courts of another State." And the reason urged against the exercise of the power was that if the courts of one State should see fit to enjoin proceedings in another, the latter might retaliate in like manner in enjoining proceedings in the first, and thus give rise to an endless conflict of jurisdiction. But this reasoning has not commended itself to the judicial mind, for the injunction is not directed to the courts of the other State, but simply to the parties litigant; and although the power should be exercised with care, and with a just regard to the comity which ought to prevail among co-ordinate sovereignties, yet its existence cannot at this day be denied.

In Vail v. Knapp, 49 Barb. 299, 305, an injunction was continued against citizens of New York, plaintiffs in attachment suits in Vermont, upon the ground that they were proceeding in Vermont in evasion of the laws of New York; and the court points out that, though as a general rule the courts of New York decline to interfere by injunction to restrain its citizens from proceeding in an action which has been commenced in a sister State, citing Mead v. Merritt, 2 Paige, Ch. 402; Burgess v. Smith, 2 Barb. Ch. 276, and other cases, yet "there are exceptions to this rule, and, when a case is presented fairly constituting such exception, extreme delicacy should not deter the court from controlling the conduct of a party within its jurisdiction to prevent oppression or fraud. No rule of comity or policy forbids it."

The same result was announced in Dinmore v. Neresheimer, 82 Hun, 204, where the Supreme Court of New York held that an express company could maintain an action in New York to restrain the defendant, a resident of the State of New York, from prosecuting actions against the company in the District of Columbia, brought to avoid a decision of the Court of Appeals of New York, differing from the rule upon the same subject in the District of Columbia.

In Erie R. Co. v. Ramsey, 45 N. Y. 397, the Court of Appeals, speaking through Folger, J., treats the general question as not admitting of doubt.

At the time of these proceedings, as for many years before, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had an elaborate system of Insolvent Laws, designed to secure the equal distribution of the property of its debtors among their creditors. Under these Insolvent Laws all preferences were avoided, and all attachments in favor of particular creditors dissolved. The transfer of the debtor's property to his assignees in insolvency extended to all his property and assets, wherever situated. This was expressly provided as to such as might be outside of the State. By one of the sections of the chapter of the Public Statutes of Massachusetts treating of this subject, the debtor was required to do all acts necessary to give the assignees power to "demand, recover and receive all the estate and effects so assigned, especially any part thereof which is without this State." (Mass. Pub. Stat. 1862, chap. 157, § 74.) Whenever the debtor had made, to the satisfaction of the judge in insolvency, a full transfer and delivery of all his estate, and conformed to the directions and requirements of the law, he was entitled to be absolutely and wholly discharged from his debts, with certain exceptions; but it was provided that a discharge should not be granted to a debtor whose assets did not pay fifty per cent of the claims proved against his estate, unless upon the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors who had proved their claims. (§§ 80, 86.)

Nothing can be plainer than that the act of Butler, Hayden & Co., in causing the property of the insolvent debtors to be attached in a foreign jurisdiction, tended directly to defeat the operation of the Insolvent Law in its most essential features, and it is not easy to understand why such acts could not be restrained, within the practice to which we have referred.

But for the attachment suits the assignees in insolvency could have collected the claim of Bird against Claflin & Co., but could not have intervened in those suits and asked of the courts of New York the enforcement of their title. The rule in that State is that, by the comity of nations, the statutory title of foreign assignees in bankruptcy is recognized and enforced when it can be done without injustice to the citizens of the State, and without prejudice to creditors pursuing their remedies under the New York statutes, provided also that such title is not in conflict with the laws or public policy of the State, and that the foreign court had jurisdiction of the bankrupt. Re Waite, 99 N. Y. 433.

Under such a rule it is evident that the remedy of the assignees was in equity and in the courts of their domicile.

This is the conclusion reached in Kidder v. Tufts, 48 N. H. 121, 126, referred to by counsel for appellant. That was a case where citizens of Massachusetts commenced in New Hampshire an attachment against certain other citizens of the former State; proceedings in insolvency against the defendants were afterwards instituted in Massachusetts; and, subsequently to this, certain New Hampshire creditors attached the same property and then moved for a continuance to await the proceedings in insolvency, for the purpose of pleading the insolvent's discharge in bar of the first attachment. But the court denied the motion, holding that the Massachusetts creditors had availed themselves of their strict legal rights as established and allowed by the Statute Law of New Hampshire, and, for the purpose of an attachment, might properly be considered subjects of that state government; but the court added: "If the subsequent attaching creditors have a remedy, and can in any way prevent the plaintiffs from obtaining a preference, their appeal should be made, as creditors of the defendants, to the Massachusetts courts, which may exercise their jurisdiction over their own citizens if they have violated any of their laws by their experiment here." Hibernia Nat. Bank v. LaCombe, 84 N. Y. 367, 386.

So in the case of Paine v. Lester, 44 Conn. 196, where a citizen of Rhode Island attached in Connecticut a debt due from a citizen of Connecticut to a corporation of Pennsylvania, which had made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the lien of the attachment was held valid against the claim of the trustee in the assignment, because the right of the trustee in insolvency in Connecticut rested only on the comity which the court there could exercise or refuse to exercise at its discretion, while the plaintiff had a legal right, under the laws of Connecticut, to prosecute his suit.

In Rhawn v. Pearce, 110 Ill. 850, the Supreme Court of Illinois declined to recognize at law the Insolvent Laws of Pennsylvania, by giving effect to a statutory assignment in that State, even as against an attaching creditor of the same State with the debtor. But the same tribunal found no difficulty in holding, in Sercomb v. Catlin, 128 Ill. 556, that the courts of Illinois, on the application of a receiver appointed by them, could enjoin a person within the jurisdiction of the court from interfering in respect to property belonging to an insolvent copartnership for which the receiver had been appointed, although that property was outside of the jurisdiction; and Chafee v. Quisnick Co., 18 R. I. 442; Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 545, and Vermont & C. R. Co. v. Vermont Central R. Co., 46 Vt. 792, were cited.

Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 545, is the leading case upon the subject, argued by eminent counsel on both sides, and decided upon great consideration. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, speaking through Bigelow, Ch. J., points out that the jurisdiction of a court, as a court of chancery, to restrain persons within its jurisdiction from prosecuting suits, upon a proper case made, either in the courts of Massachusetts or in other States or foreign countries, rests on the clear authority vested in courts of equity over persons within the limits of their jurisdiction and amenable to process, to stay acts contrary to equity and good conscience; and that, as the decree of the court in such cases is directed solely at the party, it is wholly immaterial that such party is prosecuting his action in the courts of another State or country.

The action was a bill in equity to enjoin a citizen of Massachusetts from availing himself of an attachment of personal property in Pennsylvania, as against a debtor put into insolvency under the laws of Massachusetts, and thus preventing the same from coming to the hands of the assignee. The court held that it was obvious that the controversy was simply as to the relative rights of citizens of Massachusetts to personal property belonging to insolvent debtors, domiciled in that State, and raised no question involving a conflict of rights between citizens of Massachusetts and another State, nor as to the validity of a foreign law, or of liens acquired under it. On the contrary, the case rested on the ground that the defendants, if allowed to proceed with their action, would perfect a lien then only inchoate under their attachment, and might thereby establish a valid title to the property of the insolvent debtors under the laws of Pennsylvania.

"Looking, then, at our own laws," said the court, "to ascertain which of the two parties to this suit has a paramount right or superior equity to the debts due to the insolvents from persons residing out of the State, there would seem to be but little, if any, room open for doubt or controversy." The fundamental principle of the Insolvent Laws of the Commonwealth, that all the property of the debtor should be taken and equally distributed among his creditors, was remarked on, and the provisions of the statute intended to secure that end recapitulated. The inevitable conclusion was announced that as the act of the defendants in causing the property of the insolvent debtors to be attached in a foreign jurisdiction tended directly to defeat the operation of the law by preventing a portion of the property of the debtors from coming to their assignees to be equally distributed among their creditors, and giving a preference to certain of their debtors, so that they would obtain payment of their debt in full, it was therefore an attempt by those creditors, citizens of Massachusetts, to defeat the operation of their own laws, to the injury of other creditors of the insolvents. And the court proceeded: "This is manifestly contrary to equity. The defendants, being citizens of this State, are bound by its laws. They cannot be permitted to do any acts to evade or counteract their operation, the effect of which is to deprive other citizens of rights which those laws are intended to secure. Certain it is that they could not in any manner or by any process take from the assignees of an insolvent debtor property belonging to him within this State, and appropriate it to the payment of their debt in full. To prevent such appropriation, if the law furnished no adequate and complete remedy, this court would interfere by suitable process in equity. We are unable to see any reason for withholding such interference, merely because our citizens seek to accomplish the same purpose by resorting to a foreign jurisdiction, and with the aid of the laws of another State or country. An act which is unlawful and contrary to equity gains no sanction or validity by the mere form or manner in which it is done. It is none the less a violation of our laws, because it is effected through the instrumentality of a process which is lawful in a foreign tribunal. By interposing to prevent it, we do not interfere with the jurisdiction of courts in other States, or control the operation of foreign laws. We only assert and enforce our own authority over persons within our jurisdiction, to prevent them from making use of means by which they seek to countervail and escape the operation of our laws, in derogation of the rights and to the wrong and injury of our own citizens."

To the argument that the bill could not be maintained, because the statutes of Massachusetts regulating the assignment and distribution of insolvent estates could have no extraterritorial effect or operation, the court answered that while it was true that the statutes of Massachusetts ex proprio vigore had no effect or operation in other States, it was also true that, by the comity of States and nations, the laws of one country are allowed to a certain extent to control the rights of persons and property in other countries, though not allowed to have any effect to the injury of the citizens of such other country. From this principle it followed, as a necessary consequence, that personal property of a Massachusetts insolvent debtor, situated in Pennsylvania, would vest in the Massachusetts insolvent's assignees, with power to take possession of and collect them either in their own names or in the name of the insolvent, if they were not held or attached by virtue of a process or lien in favor of a creditor, which would be valid under the laws of Pennsylvania. Hence, if the attachment in Pennsylvania were valid and binding, the Massachusetts creditors would obtain a right, superior to that conferred under the Massachusetts laws on the assignees in insolvency, by the act of such creditors, in defeat of the operation of the laws of their own State; so that a proceeding in equity might properly be resorted to to compel the defendants to desist from the prosecution of a suit which would have such an effect.

Nor did the court regard the fact as controlling to the contrary, that the attachment was made prior to the institution of the proceedings in insolvency, because the attachment tended to contravene the clear intent of the statutes, which aim to vest in the assignee all the property of the debtor which could have been assigned by him or taken on execution against him at the time of the commencement of the insolvent proceedings, "although the same is then attached on mesne process as the property of the debtor;" and because, aside from that, it appeared that the defendants, when they instituted process in Pennsylvania, and made their attachment, knew that the debtors were insolvent, and had reason to believe that proceedings in insolvency were about to be instituted against them, and caused the attachment to be made with an intent to obtain a preference over other creditors, and to avoid the operation of the Insolvent Laws of the Commonwealth. Under such circumstances, priority gave no equity to the defendants. The purpose to interfere with and prevent the proper distribution of the insolvent's estate took away all claim to equitable consideration which might exist when priority was obtained in good faith. The decree accordingly went enjoining the defendants from prosecuting their attachments.

The objection was urged that the effect of the restraint might be to enable all nonresident creditors to appropriate property by attachment to the payment of their debts, and thereby to gain a preference over attaching creditors residing in Massachusetts as well as to prevent the property from passing to the assignees. This was of course a matter to be considered by the court in arriving at a conclusion as to granting the relief prayed. It may be remarked, however, that while as between citizens of the State of the forum, and the assignee appointed under the laws of another State, the claim of the former will be held superior to that of the latter by the courts of the former, yet this has not been so ruled in many of the States, as between an assignee appointed in another State and citizens of other States than that of his appointment, and of the forum. Undoubtedly the fiction of law that the domicil draws to it the personal estate of the owner wherever it may happen to be, yields whenever it is necessary for the purposes of justice that the actual situs of the thing should be examined, and always yields when the laws and policy of the State where the property is located invalidate a transfer, even though valid by the law of the assignor's domicil, in which State it was made, subject to the qualifications, that property once vested in the assignee and in his possession will not be disturbed, and that, in some jurisdictions, when the attaching creditor is domiciled in the same State with the assignor, he may be precluded from disputing the assignment in a foreign court.

Whether the law of the common domicil of two or more litigants determines their title to property in another territory, so that an attaching creditor, whose domicil is the same as that of the assignor, cannot set up against an assignment the law of a foreign country where the property is actually situated, has been much discussed. It is certain that the law of the common domicil cannot overcome such registry and other positive laws of the other country as are distinctly politic and coercive. (Wharton on Conf. Laws, §§ 369, 371.) If a State provides that no title shall pass to property within its borders, except on certain conditions, such provision cannot be overridden by the law of any other State, which parties domiciled there may be held to have adopted. It was in this view that Mr. Justice Miller, referring to a voluntary conveyance, in Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307, 311, 312 [18: 599, 600], said:

"There is no little conflict of authority on the general question as to how far the transfer of personal property by assignment or sale, made in the country of the domicil of the owner, will be held to be valid in the courts of the country where the property is situated, 133 U. S.

where these are in different sovereignties. The learned author of the Commentaries on the Conflict of Laws has discussed the subject with his usual exhaustive research. And it may be conceded that, as a question of comity, the weight of his authority is in favor of the proposition that such transfers will generally be respected by the courts of the country where the property is located, although the mode of transfer may be different from that prescribed by the local law. . . .

"But, after all, this is a mere principle of comity between the courts, which must give way when the statutes of the country where property is situated, or the established policy of its laws, prescribe to its courts a different rule."

Great contrariety of state decision exists upon this general topic, and it may be fairly stated that, as between citizens of the State of the forum and the assignee appointed under the laws of another State, the claim of the former will be held superior to that of the latter by the courts of the former; while, as between the assignee and citizens of his own State and the State of the debtor, the laws of such State will ordinarily be applied in the State of the litigation, unless forbidden by, or inconsistent with, the laws or policy of the latter. Again, although, in some of the States, the fact that the assignee claims under a decree of a court or by virtue of the law of the State of the domicil of the debtor and the attaching creditor, and not under a conveyance by the insolvent, is regarded as immaterial, yet, in most, the distinction between involuntary transfers of property, such as work by operation of law, as Foreign Bankrupt and Insolvent Laws, and a voluntary conveyance, is recognized. The reason for the distinction is that a voluntary transfer, if valid where made, ought generally to be valid everywhere, being the exercise of the personal right of the owner to dispose of his own, while an assignment by operation of law has no legal operation out of the State in which the law was passed. This is a reason which applies to citizens of the actual situs of the property when that is elsewhere than at the domicil of the insolvent, and the controversy has chiefly been as to whether property so situated can pass even by a voluntary conveyance.

In Warner v. Jaffray, 96 N. Y. 248, the debtor, residing in New York, made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors to the plaintiff. He owned personal property situated in Pennsylvania, which was attached by New York creditors, having no actual notice of the assignment, before the assignment had been recorded in Pennsylvania. A statute of that State provided that assignments of property situated there, made by a person not a resident therein, might be recorded in any county where the property was, and would take effect from its date, "provided that no bona fide purchaser, mortgagee or creditor, having a lien thereon before the recording in the same county, and not having previous actual notice thereof, shall be affected or prejudiced." It was held that an injunction should not be granted against the New York creditors from prosecuting their attachment suits in Pennsylvania. The assignment, said the court, was a mere voluntary conveyance, and "did not operate upon the creditors of the assignor, nor place them under any obligations. It left them entirely free to act. They could utterly refuse to have anything to do with it, and retain their claims and enforce them in their own time, as best they could, against their debtor. The assignee became a trustee for such creditors of the assignor only as chose to accept him as such, and without their assent the assignment did not bring the creditors into any relation with the assignee, or with each other. The law did not take this insolvent's property for distribution among his creditors, but its distribution was his own act. Any one of his creditors could, notwithstanding the assignment, enforce his claim against any property of the assignor not conveyed by the assignment, without violating any rights or equities of the other creditors." The law of Pennsylvania was then referred to, and it was shown, as the fact was, that such an assignment was recognized in Pennsylvania, but that to give it effect before it had been recorded where the property was, would have been in contravention of the law of the State. Upon this ground the court distinguished Ockerman v. Cross, 54 N. Y. 29, where "it was held that a voluntary assignment by a debtor residing in Canada, valid by the laws of his domicile, and not invalidated by any law of this State, was valid here and operated to transfer the assignor's property situated here. That the decision would have been different if the assignment had been in contravention of our laws or policy, is fully recognized in the opinion of the court." And so also the court distinguished the case of Bagby v. Atlantic, Mississippi & Ohio Railroad Co. 86 Pa. 291. There a receiver had been appointed in the State of Virginia of the property of the railroad company, and at the time of such appointment there was due to it, from a debtor in Pennsylvania, a certain sum of money which the receiver claimed. But after his appointment a creditor residing in Virginia went to the State of Pennsylvania and there commenced suit against the railroad company and attached the debt due it, and it was held that the receiver was entitled to the debt. And the Court of Appeals said: "The transfer of the title to the receiver was not in contravention of any law of Pennsylvania, and hence it was held that as against a citizen of Virginia, bound by its laws, the appointment of a receiver, binding upon him there, would, by comity, be held to be binding upon him in Pennsylvania."

In the case in hand, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts thought it proper to grant the injunction, since it was a case of the taking by the law of the insolvent's property for distribution among his creditors, who, so far as resident in the State of Massachusetts, were brought into relations with the assignee and with each other, which precluded them from enforcing their claim against the property of the assignor conveyed by the assignment, and rendered the effort to do so a violation of the rights and equities of the other creditors, and an absolute infraction of the law of their own domicile. Nor was there any law or policy of the State of New York contravened by the insolvent proceedings in question, or in itself inimical to the title of the assignees.

In Lawrence v. Batcheller, 181 Mass. 504, the defendant, Batcheller, a citizen of Massachusetts, had brought suits by attachment in other States against one Paige, also a citizen of Massachusetts, indebted to defendant, and in embarrassed circumstances, and garnisheed and ultimately collected various amounts due to Paige. Paige subsequently went into insolvency, and his assignees sued Batcheller at law to recover the money. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that the assignees could not recover because, as the attachments were made prior to the time when the assignment in insolvency took effect, and, having been made in other States, were not dissolved by the proceedings in insolvency, and were valid by the laws of the States where they were instituted, they prevailed over the insolvency assignment, the statutes of Massachusetts not making a title so acquired void or voidable at the election of the assignees in insolvency. And the court, holding that courts of law will not always afford a remedy in damages for all wrongs which courts of equity might prevent, said: "Courts of equity recognize and enforce rights which courts of law do not recognize at all; and it is often on this ground that defendants in equity are enjoined from prosecuting actions at law." The distinction between the action as brought and Dehon v. Foster was treated as obvious.

What has been said is in harmony with the rule announced in Green v. Van Buskirk, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307 [18: 599]; S. C. 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 189 [19: 109]. In that case, Bates, who lived in New York, executed and delivered to Van Buskirk, who lived in the same State, a chattel mortgage on certain iron safes which were then in the City of Chicago. Two days after this, Green, who was also a citizen of New York, being ignorant of the existence of the mortgage, sued out a writ of attachment in the courts of Illinois, levied on the safes, and subsequently had them sold in satisfaction of the judgment obtained in the attachment suit. There was no appearance or contest in this attachment suit, and Van Buskirk was not a party to it, although he could have made himself such party and contested the right of Green to levy on the safes, being expressly authorized by the laws of Illinois so to do. It was conceded that by the law of Illinois mortgages of personal property, until acknowledged and recorded, were void as against third persons. Subsequently Van Buskirk sued Green in New York for the value of the safes mortgaged to him by Bates, of which Green had thus received the proceeds. The courts of New York gave judgment in favor of Van Buskirk, holding that the law of New York was to govern and not the law of Illinois, although the property was situated in the latter State, and that the title passed to Van Buskirk by the execution of the mortgage. The cause was then brought to this court and first considered upon a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction. Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion overruling that motion. The cause then came on to be heard upon the merits, and the judgment of the Court of Appeals of New York was reversed. This court held that as, by the laws of Illinois, an attachment on personal property would take precedence of an unrecorded mortgage, executed in another State where recording was not necessary, the judgment in attachment would be binding though the owner of the chattels, the attaching creditor and the mortgage creditor might all be residents of such other State; and Mr. Justice Davis, speaking for the court, said:

"It should be borne in mind, in the discussion of this case, that the record in the attachment suit was not used as the foundation of an action, but for purposes of defense. Of course, Green could not sue Bates on it, because the court had no jurisdiction of his person; nor could it operate on any other property belonging to Bates than that which was attached. But as, by the law of Illinois, Bates was the owner of the iron safes when the writ of attachment was levied, and as Green could and did lawfully attach them to satisfy his debt in a court which had jurisdiction to render the judgment, and as the safes were lawfully sold to satisfy that judgment, it follows that when thus sold the right of property in them was changed, and the title to them became vested in the purchasers at the sale. And as the effect of the levy, judgment and sale is to protect Green if sued in the courts of Illinois, and these proceedings are produced for his own justification, it ought to require no argument to show that when sued in the court of another State for the same transaction, and he justifies in the same manner, that he is also protected. Any other rule would destroy all safety in derivative titles, and deny to a State the power to regulate the transfer of personal property within its limits, and to subject such property to legal proceedings."

It will be perceived that it was manifestly inadmissible to hold that after Van Buskirk had permitted Green to go to judgment in a proceeding in rem, which appropriated the property as belonging to Bates, he could then get judgment against Green for the conversion of what had so been adjudged to him, an adjudication which Van Buskirk had voluntarily declined to litigate in the proper forum, and had not sought in his own State to prevent. It was a contest between two individuals claiming the same property, and that property capable of an actual situs, and actually situated in Illinois. The attachment was not only levied in accordance with the laws of Illinois, but the laws of that State affirmatively invalidated the instrument under which Van Buskirk claimed. Clearly, then, the law of the domicile of Van Buskirk, Green and Bates could not overcome such registry and other positive laws of Illinois as were distinctively coercive. Hervey v. R. I. Locomotive Works, 98 U. S. 664 [28: 1008]; Wahworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 855 [32: 712].

In the case at bar, the attachment suits have not gone to judgment, and the assignees in insolvency have proceeded with due diligence as against these creditors, citizens of Massachusetts, who are seeking to evade the laws of their own State; nor is there anything in the law or policy of New York opposed to the law or policy of Massachusetts in the premises.

We find no infringement of the Constitution in the rendition of the decree, and it is accordingly affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer, not having been a member of the court when this case was considered, took no part in its decision.

Mr. Justice Miller, dissenting:

I dissent from the judgment and opinion of the court in this case. I am of opinion that the proceedings in the state court of New York, whether they be considered as the bona fide action of Fayerweather for his own benefit, or as merely representing the interests of Butler, Hayden & Co., were efficient in establishing a lien on the indebtedness of Aaron Clafin & Co., of New York, which by the laws of that State was superior to any right then held, or which could be acquired afterwards, by the assignees in insolvency of Daniel C. Bird. Indeed, it is not questioned in the very learned opinion of the court in this case that if Butler, Hayden & Co. had been permitted to go on with their proceeding in New York, they would have secured an order in the court in which the proceedings were pending, that the garnishees, Aaron Clafin & Co., should pay the amount of their indebtedness to the plaintiff in that action. But the whole argument of the court is that, because Butler, Hayden & Co. were citizens of Massachusetts, they were under some superior obligation to the law of Massachusetts, and to be governed by the rights that law conferred, which prevented them from availing themselves of the law of New York that gave them this superior right.

I do not deny the general principle that a party found within the jurisdiction of a court and subject to its process may be restrained and enjoined from doing certain things in some other jurisdiction, because the thing which he might attempt to do is opposed to the principles of equity or to the law of the place where he is found. And such might be the law in this case but for the provision of the Constitution of the United States and the Act of Congress, both of which are recited in the opinion of the court, which require that the "records and judicial proceedings of a State authenticated as aforesaid shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court in the United States as they would have by law or usage in the courts of the State from whence such records are or shall be taken." The record introduced from the court of New York in this case had the effect in that State to give Butler, Hayden & Co. a lien on the indebtedness of Aaron Clafin & Co. to their creditor Bird, which in that court would have ripened into a judgment and been enforced. That was the faith and credit which the laws of New York gave to that proceeding. It initiated a right. It established a lien, and there was no power in the courts of Massachusetts to interrupt the course of these proceedings to the final result. That is to say, there was no power to do this directly. Had it the right to do it by seizing the persons of Butler, Hayden & Co. in Massachusetts, and compelling them there to forego the advantage which they had secured in the state courts of New York? When, therefore, Butler, Hayden & Co. were sued in equity in the courts of Massachusetts and there was produced the record of these proceedings in the court of New York, the question was presented to the courts of Massachusetts what effect they would give to those proceedings. Now they did not give the effect which the laws of New York gave to them. Neither the law nor the usage in the courts of New York admitted of such proceeding as that taken in the courts of Massachusetts.

If there was any error in proceedings in the court of New York, that error was subject to correction in due course of law in courts of justice of the State of New York, and Butler, Hayden & Co. had a right to insist on the validity of their proceedings being tested by the courts and governed by the laws of the State of New York, and not by those of Massachusetts.

It is no answer to this to say that Butler, Hayden & Co. were citizens of Massachusetts and were found within its jurisdiction. The higher law of the Constitution of the United States places this restraint upon the courts of Massachusetts in dealing even with her own citizens, and if her citizens have obtained rights in the courts of New York which have become a part of the records and judicial proceedings of those courts, no difference how the law under which those rights are established may be opposed to the law of the State of Massachusetts, they are to be respected by the courts of Massachusetts, because they are effectual over the parties and subject matter in New York, and because the Constitution of the United States and the Act of Congress of May 26, 1790, assert the principle that the courts of Massachusetts must give full credit, by which is meant the same effect to the proceedings in New York which that State gives to them. The constitutional provision which makes this declaration is part of article IV., and it is in immediate connection with its second section, which declares that "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States." The meaning of this is to prevent conflicts between courts of the different States over the same matters, by establishing the rule that whatever is done or decided in one State shall be respected in every other State when properly proved before it. It is one feature of the general idea which is found all through the Constitution.

These are the principles established after a most vigorous contest by the case of Green v. Van Buskirk, twice before this court, and reported in 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 307 [18:599], and 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 139 [19:109]. In that case both the contesting parties lived in the State of New York and were citizens of that State. Each asserted a paramount title to certain safes which were in the City of Chicago. Green, although a citizen of New York with Van Buskirk, levied in the State of Illinois an attachment on these safes, on which Van Buskirk had a chattel mortgage executed in the State of New York but not recorded in Illinois. Green proceeded with his attachment and bought the safes under it, which he converted to his own use in Illinois. Afterwards he was sued by Van Buskirk in the State of New York for this conversion, and he set up and relied on the proceedings in the attachment suit in Illinois as a defense. The Supreme Court of New York held that as between its own citizens, its law upon the subject of chattel mortgages, which was the claim Van Buskirk had on the safes, should prevail, while Green insisted that the law of Illinois, where the proceedings in the attachment took place, and where the safes were, should govern. In the case as it first presented itself in this court a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction was made, which the court overruled on the ground that the case was to be governed by the law of Illinois under the Constitution of the United States and the Act of Congress already referred to.

The case afterwards came on in 7 Wallace, upon the further question whether the laws of Illinois were such as to give Green a right to that proceeding, and the court held that they were; that the attachment, judgment and sale in Illinois were valid, and that the state courts of New York were bound to give them effect in the proceeding of Van Buskirk v. Green.

The only difference between that case and the one now under consideration is, that at the time the court in Massachusetts intervened and undertook to prevent Butler, Hayden & Co. from pursuing their case in the courts of New York, there had been no judgment in favor of that company. But I am at a loss to see why the right established by Butler, Hayden & Co. in the courts of New York is not as much to be respected and the same effect given to it according to its nature, as if the judicial proceeding had ripened into a judgment. It is very clear that, but for the injunction against Butler, Hayden & Co., they would have got such a judgment and would have obtained their money; and if they had been sued in Massachusetts for violating the laws of Massachusetts on that subject, it is equally clear, according to Green v. Van Buskirk, that the proceedings in the New York court would have been a good defense. I think, therefore, that the judgment of the court and the principles of the opinion are erroneous, and are opposed to the former decisions of this court.

Justices Field and Harlan concur in this dissent.

THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY ET AL., Piffs. in Err.,

v.

MILLARD BOSWORTH ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 92-106.)

Confiscation Act—rights of owner of land after pardon—life interest forfeited—residuary estate restored by pardon—effect of his deed, after pardon.

1. Where land of one who bore arms in the Confederate army, against the United States, in the late war, was, under the Confiscation Act, condemned and sold, he was, by the special pardon and by the amnesty proclamation of the President, restored to the control and power of disposition over the fee simple in reversion of the land expectant upon the termination of the confiscated estate therein.
2. Nothing but his life interest in the land was forfeited under the Confiscation Act; his power to dispose of the land was suspended by his disability as an offender against the United States.
3. On being restored to all his rights, he was restored to the residuary ownership of the land subject to the usufruct of the purchaser under the confiscation proceedings.

4. A subsequent conveyance by him and his wife of all their right and title in and to said land, transferred the land, as against his heirs.

[No. 79.]

Argued Nov. 11, 12, 1889. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover the possession of land. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Girault Farrar, Thomas J. Semmes and James Fentress, for plaintiffs in error:

Upon the death of the owner of real property which had been confiscated and sold, his heirs take qua heirs under the lex rei sita, and not by donation from the generosity of the government,—that is, by purchase.

Avegno v. Schmidt, 118 U. S. 298 (28: 976); Shields v. Shiff, 124 U. S. 851 (31: 445).

It was decided by this court in The Protector, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 700 (20: 468); Hiatt v. Brown, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 177 (21: 128); U. S. v. Thomas, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 887 (21: 89); Adger v. Alston, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 557 (21: 284),—that the war legally ended on April 2, 1866.

The President has the constitutional power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

Young v. U. S. 97 U. S. 89, 66, 68 (24: 992, 999, 1000).

The law makes the proof of pardon a complete substitute for proof that he gave no aid or comfort to the rebellion.

Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 380 (18: 370); Armstrong's Foundry, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 766 (18: 882); Pudelford's Case, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 581 (19: 788); Klein's Case, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 150 (20: 527); Pargoud's Case, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 156 (20: 646); Mrs. Armstrong's Case, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 154 (20: 614); Carlisle v. U. S. 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 147 (21: 426); Opinions of Attys-Genl. vol. 8, p. 201; Osborn v. U. S. 91 U. S. 474 (23: 888); Knute v. U. S. 95 U. S. 149 (24: 442); Hart v. U. S. 118 U. S. 62 (30: 96).

After condemnation the fee remains in the offender.

Hancock v. Beverly, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 531; Borland's Case, 4 Mason, 174; Windsor v. McVeigh, 98 U. S. 283 (23: 917); Burbank v. Conrad, 96 U. S. 298 (24: 781); Kirk v. Lynd, 106 U. S. 315 (27: 193); Waples v. Hays, 108 U. S. 6 (27: 632); Ex parte Lange, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 177, 178 (21: 879); Day v. Micou, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 156 (21: 860); Bigelow v. Forrest, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 339 (19: 696).

If his creditors had rights upon the property they could enforce those rights in the courts by compulsory process after the confiscation.

Claims of Marcuard, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 114 (22: 327); Waples v. Hays, 108 U. S. 6 (27: 632).

Messrs. Edgar H. Farrar and Ernest B. Kruttschnitt, for defendants in error:

The heirs of one whose property was confiscated take the property at his death by inheritance, though their ancestor was not seised thereof at the time of his death.

138 U. S.

Wallach v. Van Rinswick, 92 U. S. 202 (23: 473); Chaffraiz v. Shiff, 92 U. S. 214 (23: 478); Semmes v. U. S. 91 U. S. 21 (23: 193); Pike v. Wassell, 94 U. S. 711 (24: 307); French v. Wade, 103 U. S. 182 (26: 44); Avegno v. Schmidt, 118 U. S. 298 (28: 976); Shields v. Shiff, 124 U. S. 851 (31: 445).

He was entirely disseised by the confiscation of the whole estate, and they were authorized to take this whole estate, at his death, as his heirs, by descent, although there was no seisin in him at the time of his death.

Knute v. U. S. 95 U. S. 153 (24: 443); Osborn v. U. S. 91 U. S. 474 (23: 888).

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action brought by Millard Bosworth and Charles H. Bosworth, only surviving children of A. W. Bosworth, deceased, to recover possession of one undivided sixth part of a certain tract of land in New Orleans, which formerly belonged to their said father. The petition states that the latter having taken part in the war of the rebellion, and done acts which made him liable to the penalties of the Confiscation Act of July 17th, 1862, the said one-sixth part of said land was seized, condemned and sold under said Act, and purchased by one Burbank in May, 1865; that the said A. W. Bosworth died on the 11th day of October, 1865; and that the plaintiffs, upon his death, became the owners in fee simple of the said one-sixth part of said property, of which the defendants, The Illinois Central Railroad Company, were in possession.

The Company filed an answer, setting up various defenses; amongst other things tracing title to themselves from the said A. W. Bosworth, by virtue of an act of sale executed by him and his wife, before a notary public, on the 28d day of September, 1871, disposing of all their interest in the premises, with full covenant of warranty. They further allege that said Bosworth had, before said act of sale, not only been included in the general amnesty proclamation of the President, issued on the 25th of December, 1868, but had received a special pardon on the 2d of October, 1865, and had taken the oath of allegiance, and complied with all the terms and conditions necessary to be restored to, and reinvested with, all the rights, franchises and privileges of citizenship.

The parties, having waived a trial by jury, submitted to the court an agreed statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict, upon which the court gave judgment in favor of the plaintiffs. To that judgment the present writ of error is brought.

Those portions of the statement of facts which are deemed material to the decision of the case are as follows, to wit:

1st. The plaintiffs, Millard Bosworth and Charles H. Bosworth, are the only surviving legitimate children of Abel Ware Bosworth, who died intestate in the City of New Orleans on the eleventh day of October, 1865, and have accepted his succession with benefit of inventory.

2d. By act before Edward Barnett, notary, on the 25th day of April, 1860, Abel Ware Bosworth purchased from H. W. Palfrey and others a one-third undivided interest in fee-simple title and full ownership in and to the property described in the petition of the plaintiffs in this cause.

551

8d. On the breaking out of the war between the States Abel W. Bosworth entered the Confederate army and bore arms against the government of the United States from about March, 1861, until April, 1865.

4th. Under and by virtue of the Confiscation Act of the United States, approved July 17th, 1862, and the joint resolution contemporary therewith, the said property was seized by the proper officer of the United States, and on the 20th day of January, 1865, a libel of information was filed against the said property as the property of A. W. Bosworth, in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Into these proceedings intervened Mrs. Rachel Matilda Bosworth, wife of said Abel Ware Bosworth, to protect her community interests in said property, and, after due proceedings had, the said court entered a decree of condemnation as to A. W. Bosworth and a decree in favor of Mrs. Rachel Matilda Bosworth, recognizing her as the owner of one half of said one-third undivided interest in and to said property.

A venditione exponas in due form of law issued to the marshal for the sale of said property under said decree, and at said sale "all the right, title and interest of A. W. Bosworth in and to the one undivided third part of said property" (reserving to Mrs. Rachel M. Bosworth her rights therein, as per order of the court) was adjudicated on the—day of the month of May, 1865, to E. W. Burbank for the price and sum of $1,700, and the marshal executed a deed in due form of law to said Burbank for the same.

6th. That on the second day of October, 1865, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, granted to said A. W. Bosworth a special pardon, a duly certified copy of which, together with the written acceptance by said Bosworth thereof, is hereto annexed, made part of this statement of facts, and marked "Document 'A.'"

7th. That on the 28d day of September, 1871, by act before Andrew Hero, Jr., notary public, the said A. W. Bosworth and Mrs. Rachel Matilda Bosworth, his wife, sold, assigned and transferred to Samuel H. Edgar, with full warranty under the laws of Louisiana, all their right, title and interest in and to the said property, including the one-sixth undivided interest claimed in this suit by the plaintiffs and described in the petition, for the price and sum of eleven thousand six hundred and sixty-six ²¹/₁₀₀ dollars.

8th. That on the 18th day of December, 1872, the said E. W. Burbank, by act before the same notary, transferred all his right, title and interests in the nature of a quit-claim to S. H. Edgar aforesaid for the price and sum of five thousand one hundred dollars.

9th. That the said S. H. Edgar, by act executed before Charles Nettleton, a duly authorized commissioner for Louisiana in New York City, on the 10th day of October, 1872, and duly recorded in the office of the register of conveyances for the Parish of Orleans on the 30th day of October, 1872, sold and transferred the same property, with full warranty under the laws of Louisiana, unto the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad Company.

10th. That by various transfers made since said date, as set forth in the answers filed in this suit, the said property has come into the possession of the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Railroad Company, who has leased the same to the Illinois Central Railroad Company, which said Company holds said property under said lease.

14th. It is further agreed as a part of this statement of facts that the President of the United States on the 25th day of December, 1868, issued a general amnesty proclamation, and the terms of said proclamation as found in the Statutes at Large of the United States are made part of this statement of facts.

The following is a copy of the special pardon (Document A), referred to in the statement of facts, and of the written acceptance thereof, to wit:

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Whereas A. W. Bosworth, of New Orleans, Louisiana, by taking part in the late rebellion against the government of the United States, has made himself liable to heavy pains and penalties;

And whereas the circumstances of his case render him a proper object of executive clemency:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, divers other good and sufficient reasons to me thereunto moving, do hereby grant to the said A. W. Bosworth a full pardon and amnesty for all offenses by him committed, arising from participation, direct or implied, in the said rebellion, conditioned as follows:

1st. This pardon to be of no effect until the said A. W. Bosworth shall take the oath prescribed in the proclamation of the President, dated May 29th, 1865.

2d. To be void and of no effect if the said A. W. Bosworth shall hereafter at any time acquire any property whatever in slaves or make use of slave labor.

3d. That the said A. W. Bosworth first pay all costs which may have accrued in any proceedings instituted or pending against his person or property before the date of the acceptance of this warrant.

4th. That the said A. W. Bosworth shall not, by virtue of this warrant, claim any property or the proceeds of any property that has been sold by the order, judgment or decree of a court under the Confiscation Laws of the United States.

5th. That the said A. W. Bosworth shall notify the Secretary of State, in writing, that he has received and accepted the foregoing pardon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this second day of October, A. D. 1865, and of the Independence of the United States the ninetyeth.

Andrew Johnson.
By the President: William H. Seward,
[Seal.] Secretary of State.

Washington, D. C., October 5th, 1865.
Honorable William H. Seward, Secretary of State.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the President's warrant of pardon, bearing date October 2d, 1865, and hereby signify my acceptance of the same with all the conditions therein specified.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
A. W. Bosworth.

The proclamation of general amnesty and pardon issued on the 25th day of December, 1868, referred to in the last article of the statement of facts, is found in volume 15, pp. 711, 712, of the Statutes at Large. After referring to several previous proclamations, it proceeds as follows, to wit: "And whereas, the authority of the federal government having been re-established in all the States and Territories within the jurisdiction of the United States, it is believed that such prudential reservations and exceptions as at the dates of said several proclamations were deemed necessary and proper may now be wisely and justly relinquished, and that a universal amnesty and pardon for participation in said rebellion extended to all who have borne any part therein will tend to secure permanent peace, order and prosperity throughout the land, and to renew and fully restore confidence and fraternal feeling among the whole people, and their respect for and attachment to the national government, designed by its patriotic founders for the general good:—Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, by virtue of the power and authority in me vested by the Constitution, and in the name of the sovereign people of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare unconditionally, and without reservation, to all and to every person who directly or indirectly participated in the late insurrection or rebellion, a full pardon and amnesty for the offense of treason against the United States, or of adhering to their enemies during the late civil war, with restoration of all rights, privileges and immunities under the Constitution and the laws which have been made in pursuance thereof."

The principal question raised in the present case is, whether, by the effect of the pardon and amnesty granted to A. W. Bosworth by the special pardon of October, 1865, and the general proclamation of amnesty and pardon of December 25th, 1868, he was restored to the control and power of disposition over the fee-simple or naked property in reversion expectant upon the termination of the confiscated estate in the property in dispute. The question of the effect of pardon and amnesty on the destination of the remaining estate of the offender, still outstanding after a confiscation of the property during his natural life, has never been settled by this court. That the guilty party had no control over it in the absence of such pardon or amnesty, has been frequently decided. Wallach v. Van Rievick, 92 U. S.

202 [28: 478]; Chaffraiz v. Shiff, 92 U. S. 214 [28: 478]; Pike v. Wassell, 94 U. S. 711 [24: 307]; French v. Wade, 102 U. S. 182 [26: 44]; and see Aeegno v. Schmidt, 113 U. S. 298 [28: 976]; Shields v. Shiff, 124 U. S. 851 [31: 445]. But it has been regarded as a doubtful question, what became of the fee, or ultimate estate, after the confiscation for life. "We are not called upon," said Justice Strong, in Wallach v. Van Rievick, "to determine where the fee dwells during the continuance of the interest of a purchaser at a confiscation sale, whether in the United States, or in the purchaser, subject to be defeated by the death of the offender." (92 U. S. 212 [28: 477].) It has also been suggested that the fee remained in the person whose estate was confiscated, but without any power in him to dispose of or control it.

Perhaps it is not of much consequence which of these theories, if either of them, is the true one; the important point being, that the remnant of the estate, whatever its nature, and wherever it went, was never beneficially disposed of, but remained (so to speak) in a state of suspended animation. Both the common and the civil laws furnish analogies of suspended ownership of estates which may help us to a proper conception of that now under consideration. Blackstone says: "Sometimes the fee may be in abeyance, that is (as the word signifies) in expectation, remembrance and contemplation of law, there being no person in esse in whom it can vest and abide; though the law considers it as always potentially existing, and ready to vest when a proper owner appears. Thus in a grant to John for life, and afterwards to the heirs of Richard, the inheritance is plainly neither granted to John nor Richard, nor can it vest in the heirs of Richard till his death, nam nemo est hæres viventis; it remains, therefore, in waiting or abeyance during the life of Richard." 2 Black. Com. 107. In the civil law, the legal conception is a little different. Pothier says: "The dominion of property (or ownership), the same as all other rights, as well in re as ad rem, necessarily supposes a person in whom the right subsists and to whom it belongs. It need not be a natural person; it may belong to corporations or communities, which have only a civil and intellectual existence or personality. When an owner dies, and no one will accept the succession, this dormant succession (succession jacente) is considered as being a civil person and as the continuation of that of the deceased; and in this fictitious person subsists the dominion or ownership of whatever belonged to the deceased, the same as all other active and passive rights of the deceased; hæreditas faciens personam defuncti locum obtinet." Droit de Domaine de Propriété, chap. I. 15.

But, as already intimated, it is not necessary to be over curious about the intermediate state in which the disembodied shade of naked ownership may have wandered during the period of its ambiguous existence. It is enough to know that it was neither annihilated, nor confiscated, nor appropriated to any third party. The owner, as a punishment for his offenses, was disabled from exercising any acts of ownership over it, and no power to exercise such acts was given to any other person. At his death, if not before, the period of suspension comes to an end, and the estate revives and devolves to his heirs at law. In Aegno v. Schmidt et al. 118 U. S. 293 [28: 976], and in Shields v. Shiff, 124 U. S. 351 [31: 445], this court held that the heirs of the offender, at his death, take by descent from him, and not by gift or grant from the government. They are not named in the Confiscation Act, it is true, nor in the joint resolution limiting its operation. The latter merely says, "nor shall any punishment or proceedings under said Act be so construed as to work a forfeiture of the real estate of the offender, beyond his natural life." The court has construed the effect of this language to be, to leave the property free to descend to the heirs of the guilty party. Bigelow v. Forrest, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 889 [19: 696]; Wallach v. Van Renswick, 92 U. S. 302, 210 [23: 478]. Mr. Justice Strong, in the latter case, speaking of the constitutional provision that no attainer of treason should work corruption of blood or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted (which provision was the ground and cause for passing the joint resolution referred to), said: "No one ever doubted that it was a provision introduced for the benefit of the children and heirs alone; a declaration that the children should not bear the iniquity of the fathers."

But, although the effect of the law was to hold the estate, or naked ownership, in a state of suspension for the benefit of the heirs, yet they acquired no vested interest in it; for, until the death of the ancestor, there is no heir. During his life it does not appear who the heirs will be. Heirs apparent have, in a special case, been received to intervene for the protection of the property from spoliation. Pike v. Wassell, 94 U. S. 711 [24: 307]. This was allowed from the necessity of the case, arising from the fact that the ancestor's disability prevented him from exercising any power over the property for its protection or otherwise, and no other persons but the heirs apparent had even a contingent interest to be protected.

It would seem to follow as a logical consequence from the decisions in Aegno v. Schmidt and Shields v. Shiff, that after the confiscation of the property the naked fee (or the naked ownership, as denominated in the civil law), subject, for the lifetime of the offender, to the interest or usufruct of the purchaser at the confiscation sale, remained in the offender himself; otherwise how could his heirs take it from him by inheritance? But, by reason of his disability to dispose of or touch it, or affect it in any manner whatsoever, it remained, as before stated, a mere dead estate, or in a condition of suspended animation. We think that this is, on the whole, the most reasonable view. There is no corruption of blood; the offender can transmit by descent; his heirs take from him by descent: why, then, is it not most rational to conclude that the dormant and suspended fee has continued in him?

Now, if the disabilities which prevented such person from exercising any power over this suspended fee, or naked property, be removed by a pardon or amnesty,—so removed as to restore him to all his rights, privileges and immunities, as if he had never offended, except as to those things which have become vested in other persons,—why does it not restore him to the control of his property so far as the same has never been forfeited, or has never become vested in another person? In our judgment it does restore him to such control. In the opinion of the court in the case of Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 338, 880 [18: 866, 870], the effect of a pardon is stated as follows, to wit: "A pardon reaches both the punishment prescribed for the offense and the guilt of the offender; and, when the pardon is full, it releases the punishment and blots out of existence the guilt, so that in the eye of the law the offender is as innocent as if he had never committed the offense. If granted before conviction, it prevents any of the penalties and disabilities consequent upon conviction from attaching; if granted after conviction, it removes the penalties and disabilities, and restores him to all his civil rights; it makes him, as it were, a new man, and gives him a new credit and capacity. There is only this limitation to its operation: it does not restore offices forfeited, or property or interests vested in others in consequence of the conviction and judgment."

The qualification in the last sentence of this extract, that a pardon does not affect vested interests, was exemplified in the case of Semmes v. United States, 91 U. S. 21 [23: 193], where a pardon was held not to interfere with the right of a purchaser of the forfeited estate. The same doctrine had been laid down in The Confiscation Cases, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 92, 113 [22: 320, 324, 325]. It was distinctly repeated and explained in Knote v. United States, 95 U. S. 149 [24: 442]. In that case property of the claimant had been seized by the authorities of the United States on the ground of treason and rebellion; a decree of condemnation and forfeiture had been passed, the property sold, and the proceeds paid into the treasury. The court decided that subsequent pardon and amnesty did not have the effect of restoring to the offender the right to these proceeds. They had become absolutely vested in the United States, and could not be divested by the pardon. The effect of a pardon was so fully discussed in that case that an extract from the opinion of the court will not be out of place here. The court say: "A pardon is an act of grace by which an offender is released from the consequences of his offense, so far as such release is practicable and within control of the pardoning power, or of officers under its direction. It releases the offender from all disabilities imposed by the offense, and restores to him all his civil rights. In contemplation of law, it so far blots out the offense that afterwards it cannot be imputed to him to prevent the assertion of his legal rights. It gives to him a new credit and capacity, and rehabilitates him to that extent in his former position. But it does not make amends for the past. It affords no relief for what has been suffered by the offender in his person by imprisonment, forced labor or otherwise; it does not give compensation for what has been done or suffered, nor does it impose upon the government any obligation to give it. The offense being established by judicial proceedings, that which has been done or suffered while they were in force is presumed to have been rightfully done and justly suffered, and no satisfaction for it can be required. Neither does the pardon affect any rights which have vested in others directly by the execution of the judgment for the offense, or which have been acquired by others whilst that judgment was in force. If, for example, by the judgment, a sale of the offender's property has been had, the purchaser will hold the property notwithstanding the subsequent pardon. And if the proceeds of the sale have been paid to a party to whom the law has assigned them, they cannot be subsequently reached and recovered by the offender. . . . So also if the proceeds have been paid into the treasury, the right to them has so far become vested in the United States that they can only be secured to the former owner of the property through an Act of Congress. . . . Where, however, property condemned, or its proceeds, have not thus vested, but remain under control of the executive, or of officers subject to his orders, or are in custody of the judicial tribunals, the property will be restored or its proceeds delivered to the original owner, upon his full pardon."

The last portion of the above extract was justified by the decision in the case of Armstrong's Foundry, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 766 [18:882], where a pardon was received by Armstrong after his foundry had been seized, and whilst proceedings were pending for its confiscation. He was even allowed to plead the full pardon as new matter in this court whilst the case was pending on appeal; and the court held, and decided, that this pardon relieved him of so much of the penalty as accrued to the United States, without any expression of opinion as to the rights of the informer.

The citations now made are sufficient to show the true bearing and effect of the pardon granted to Bosworth, and of the general proclamation of amnesty as applied to him. The property in question had never vested in any person when these acts of grace were performed. It had not even been forfeited. Nothing but the life interest had been forfeited. His power to enjoy or dispose of it was simply suspended by his disability as an offender against the government of the United States. This disability was a part of his punishment. It seems to be perfectly clear, therefore, in the light of the authorities referred to, that when his guilt and the punishment therefor were expunged by his pardon this disability was removed; in being restored to all his rights, privileges and immunities, he was restored to the control of so much of his property and estate as had not become vested either in the government or in any other person—especially that part or quality of his estate which had never been forfeited, namely, the naked residuary ownership of the property, subject to the usufruct of the purchaser under the confiscation proceedings.

This result, however, does not depend upon the hypothesis that the dead fee remained in Bosworth after the confiscation proceedings took place; it is equally attained if we suppose that the fee was in nubibus, or that it devolved to the government for the benefit of whom it might concern. We are not trammelled by any technical rule of the common or the civil law on the subject. The statute and the inferences derivable therefrom make the law that controls it. Regarding the substance of things and not their form, the truth is simply this: a portion of the estate, limited in time, was forfeited; the residue, expectant upon the expiration of that time, remained untouched, undisposed of—out of the owner's power and control, it is true, but not subject to any other person's power or control. It was somewhere, or possibly nowhere. But if it had not an actual, it had a potential, existence, ready to devolve to the heirs of the owner upon his death, or to be revived by any other cause that should call it into renewed vitality or enjoyment. The removal of the guilty party's disabilities, the restoration of all his rights, powers and privileges, not absolutely lost or vested in another, was such a cause. Those disabilities were all that stood in the way of his control and disposition of the naked ownership of the property. Being removed, it necessarily follows that he was restored to that control and power of disposition.

It follows from these views, that the act of sale executed by A. W. Bosworth and his wife in September, 1871, was effectual to transfer and convey the property in dispute, and that the judgment of the circuit court in favor of the plaintiffs below (the defendants in error) was erroneous. That judgment is therefore reversed and the cause remanded, with instructions to enter judgment for the defendants below, the now plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford did not sit in this case, or take any part in its decision.

UNITED STATES, Ptf in Err.,

v.
JOSEPH STOWELL ET AL., Claimants, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-20.)

*Statutes, construction of—*forfeiture of property by illicit distilling—innocent mortgagees—personal property on premises—forfeiture of title in land—statutory transfer—intermediate sales—butts, malt, hops, boiler, engine, horses, etc., when forfeited—time of forfeiture—subsequent deed—prior mortgage.

1. Statutes to prevent frauds on the revenue are to be fairly construed, so as to carry out the intention of the Legislature.
2. By the Act of 1875, the following property is forfeited for illicit distilling:
First, all spirits, wines, stills and apparatus for distilling owned by the illicit distiller, wherever found.
Second, all the above-named articles, and all personal property in the distillery or any inclosure connected therewith, by whomsoever owned.
Third, all right and title in the land on which the distillery is situated, of the illicit distiller, and of every person who has consented to such illicit distilling.
3. The lien of an innocent prior mortgagee or other person on the land is not included in such forfeiture.
4. By section 3258, Rev. Stat., personal property, by whomsoever owned, in the possession of the illicit distiller, or found upon the premises, is forfeited.
5. Section 3306, Rev. Stat., only forfeits the title in the land of the distiller and of anyone who participates in or consents to the carrying on of the distillery.

6. The forfeiture is consummated immediately upon the commission of the act causing it, and constitutes a statutory transfer, at that time, of the right to the property to the United States; and the judicial condemnation, when obtained, relates back to that time, and avoids all intermediate sales and alienations, even to purchasers in good faith.
7. Butts sold to a third person before any offense was committed, but on the premises at the time of the commission of the offense and of the seizure, are forfeited.
8. Malt and hops on the premises at the time of the commission of the offense and of the seizure are forfeited, although sold to a third person after the offense was committed.
9. The setting up of a still on mortgaged land, with the mortgagor's knowledge and consent, in violation of the Internal Revenue Laws, operated from the time it was set up, as a statutory conveyance to the United States of the mortgagor's title and interest in the land, which was as valid and effectual as a recorded deed.
10. The right so vested in the United States could not be defeated or impaired by any subsequent act of the mortgagor; and his subsequent deed of the land to the mortgagee passed no title as against the intervening right of the United States; nor did it have the effect of merging the mortgage and the equity of redemption in one estate.
11. Where the illicit distilling was not carried on with the knowledge or permission of the prior mortgagee, the mortgage is valid as against the United States, and the judgment of condemnation must be against the equity of redemption only.
12. Boiler, engine, pump, vat and tanks, annexed to the land, being real estate and covered by the mortgage, and not used with the distillery, are, as against such prior mortgagee, exempt from condemnation; only the mortgagor's interest is liable thereto.
13. Horses, wagons and harnesses, sold after the forfeiture, but found upon the premises at the time of the seizure, were forfeited under said Statutes.

[No. 167.]

Submitted Dec. 2, 1889. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts to review a judgment dismissing an information, as to certain property, filed for the forfeiture of property for violation of the Statutes of the United States against illicit distilling. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was an information, filed November 18, 1884, under §§ 8258 and 8305 of the Revised Statutes, and § 16 of the Act of February 8, 1875, chap. 86 (the material parts of which are printed in the margin*), for the forfeiture of property particularly described in the information, and seized by the collector of internal revenue on November 14, 1884, and including: 1st. All the right, title and interest of Thomas Dixon, Eli B. Bellows and William Stone in a lot of land in the City of Lawrence, with the buildings thereon. 2d. A copper still, a boiler and engine, a pump, vats and tanks, and other machinery and fixtures. 8d. A number of butts, a quantity of malt and hops, two horses and wagons and harnesses, and other personal property.

Joseph Stowell filed a claim for the real estate, the machinery and fixtures (except the still), the butts, and the malt and hops; and Thomas Bevington filed a claim for the horses, wagons and harnesses.

A decree was entered against the property not claimed; and upon a trial in the district court between the United States and the claimants the only evidence introduced was an agreement in writing, signed by the counsel of all the parties, that certain facts were true, which was, in substance, as follows:

For some time before and until the seizure, Dixon carried on the business of a brewer on the premises, which consisted of a three-story frame building and adjoining sheds with doors between, and a yard connected therewith. The requirements of the Internal Revenue Laws concerning breweries were complied with. In the latter part of September, 1884, Stone and Bellows, with Dixon's knowledge and consent, set up in the third story of the principal building (which story was not used in the brewing business, except as the large tanks used in brewing reached up into it) a copper still, which remained in position and in proper condition for use until November 9, 1884, and with which, during that time, two hogsheads and one barrel of rum were made from molasses. The still was not registered as required by law; no bond therefor was given; no government book was kept; the still was run with intent to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits distilled, and the United States were defrauded of that tax. It did not appear that the sheds were in any way used in connection with the distillery. Dixon continued to carry on his business as a brewer while the still was being used, and on November 10 and 11 took down and removed the still.

There were on the premises a large boiler set in brick, a small engine, a small pump and large vats and tanks, which the claimants alleged to be real estate, but which the United States asserted to be fixtures. It was admitted that a part or all of them would be trade fixtures as between landlord and tenant; that part or all of them were apparatus used in the brewery, and such as might properly be in the brewery; and that part or all of them were used as apparatus for the illicit distilling, and were fit to be used in connection with the still.

*By Rev. Stat., § 3358, "every person having in his possession or custody, or under his control, any still or distilling apparatus set up, shall register the same with the collector of the district in which it is." "Still and distilling apparatus shall be registered immediately upon their being set up. Every still or distilling apparatus not so registered, together with all personal property in the possession or custody or under the control of such person, and found in the building, or in any yard or inclosure connected with the building in which the same may be set up, shall be forfeited," and he shall be punished by fine and imprisonment.

By the Act of February 8, 1875, chap. 36, § 16 (substantially re-enacting Rev. Stat., § 3361), any person "who shall carry on the business of a distiller without having given bond as required by law, or who shall engage in or carry on the business of a distiller with intent to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits distilled by him, or any part

At the times of the illicit distilling and of the seizure, all these fixtures and the still, as well as all the personal property seized, were in Dixon's possession and custody and under his control, and they were found in the brewery, sheds and yard. Neither of the claimants knew until after the seizure that a still had been set up on the premises.

On June 11, 1883, Dixon conveyed the real estate to Stowell by a mortgage deed, duly recorded, subject to a prior mortgage of $1,500, to secure a debt of $2,500. On October 13, 1884, upon a breach of condition of this mortgage, Stowell, instead of foreclosing it, took from Dixon a quitclaim deed of the premises, the consideration named in which was $8,000.

On June 5, 1884, Stowell took a bill of sale from Dixon of the butts, as security for indorsing a note for $350, which went to protest and was paid by him on November 10, 1884. At the time of that bill of sale the butts were pointed out by Dixon to Stowell as those which he was to have, but they remained in Dixon's possession.

On November 8, 1884, Stowell took a bill of sale of part of the malt and hops, as security for indorsing a note for $100 payable in ten days, and paid that note also after it had been duly protested. No delivery was ever made of the malt and hops. Neither of those bills of sale was ever recorded.

On November 11, 1884, a bill of sale of the horses, wagons and harness was executed and delivered by Dixon to Bevington, as security for a loan of $700, which was never paid. This bill of sale was recorded in the city clerk's office on November 18, 1884. The property so conveyed to Bevington was kept on a farm of Dixon's at North Andover, and was used in the business of the brewery, and seized at the brewery. At the time of the sale Dixon pointed it out to Bevington, and said that he delivered it, and Bevington appointed Dixon's son as nominal keeper, but never otherwise took possession of it, and it remained under the control of Dixon, and was used by him.

Upon these facts the district court ruled that the information could not be maintained against the property claimed by Stowell and Bevington, and adjudged that it be dismissed as to that property. The United States alleged exceptions, and, upon the affirmance by the circuit court of the judgment of the district court, sued out this writ of error.

Mr. O. W. Chapman, Solicitor-Genl., for plaintiff in error:

The land upon which the distillery is situate, the personal property used in and about the premises, and all the personal property of the distiller, wherever found, are tainted, and become forfeited to the government.

thereof," shall be fined and imprisoned. "And all distilled spirits or wines, and all stills or other apparatus, fit or intended to be used for the distillation or rectification of spirits, or for the compounding of liquors, owned by such person, wherever found; and all distilled spirits or wines and personal property, found in the distillery or rectifying establishment, or in any building, room, yard or inclosure connected therewith, and used with or constituting a part of the premises; and all the right, title and interest of such person in the lot or tract of land on which such distillery is situated; and all right, title and interest therein of every person

188 U. S.

Dobbins v. U. S. 96 U. S. 395 (24: 637).

The forfeiture took place at the time of the commission of the offense, and not at the time of seizure.

U. S. v. 1,960 Bags of Coffee, 12 U. S. 8 Cranch, 398 (8: 602); U. S. v. The Brigantine Mars, 12 U. S. 8 Cranch, 417 (8: 609); Gelston v. Hoyt, 16 U. S. 3 Wheat. 311 (4: 397); Wood v. U. S. 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 342 (10: 987); Caldwell v. U. S. 49 U. S. 8 How. 866 (12: 1116); Henderson's Distilled Spirits, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 44 (20: 815); Thacher's Distilled Spirits, 103 U. S. 679 (26: 535).

The title and ownership pass from the wrong-doer to the government, and no act of seizure is required to effect the change.

U. S. v. 7 Barrels Distilled Oil, 6 Blatchf. 174; U. S. v. 66 Barrels of Whiskey, 1 Abb. U. S. 93, 4 Int. Rev. Rec. 106; U. S. v. Whiskey, 11 Int. Rev. Rec. 109; U. S. v. 100 Barrels of Spirits, 1 Dillon, 57, 12 Int. Rev. Rec. 153; U. S. v. 21 Barrels of High Wines, 6 Int. Rev. Rec. 213; U. S. v. Distillery at Spring Valley, 11 Blatchf. 255; U. S. v. 76,125 Ogars, 18 Fed. Rep. 147.

Messrs. Edgar J. Sherman and Charles U. Bell, for defendants in error:

Penal laws are to be construed strictly.

1 Black. Com. 91; Margate Pier Co. v. Hannam, 3 Barn. & Ald. 266; Edwards v. Dick, 4 Barn. & Ald. 212; Green v. Kemp, 18 Mass. 518; Reed v. Davis, 8 Pick. 514; Caledonian R. Co. v. North British R. Co. L. R. 6 App. Cas. 123; Ex parte Walton, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 756; Jackson v. Collins, 3 Cow. 89, 96; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 358, 380.

Especially forfeitures are not favored.

Hubbard v. Johnstone, 8 Taunt. 177; Adams v. Bancroft, 8 Sumn. 386.

If the owner is absolutely innocent the property cannot be forfeited. The mere accident of its situation cannot give it a criminal character independent of its owner's fault.

U. S. v. 33 Barrels of Spirits, 1 Low. 289; Dobbins v. U. S. 96 U. S. 395 (24: 637); The Bello Corrunes, 19 U. S. 6 Wheat. 152 (5: 229); Peisch v. Ware, 8 U. S. 4 Cranch, 347, 363 (2: 643, 647).

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

The property sought to be forfeited consisted of real estate, and of machinery and fixtures and personal property found thereon.

The real estate was a single lot of land, part of which was covered by a building and sheds opening by doors into one another, and the rest of which was a yard connected with the buildings. Dixon owned the premises, and used them for a lawful brewery. Stone and Belows, with Dixon's knowledge and consent, set up and used a still in the principal building, who knowingly has suffered or permitted the business of a distiller to be there carried on, or has connived at the same," shall be forfeited to the United States. 18 Stat. 310.

By Rev. Stat. § 2306, every distiller who omits to keep books in the form prescribed by the commissioner of internal revenue shall be punished by fine and imprisonment, and "the distillery, distilling apparatus, and the lot or tract of land on which it stands, and all personal property on said premises used in the business there carried on, shall be forfeited to the United States."

and there carried on the business of distillers, without the still having been registered, and without giving bond, or keeping books, as required by the Internal Revenue Laws, and with intent to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits which they distilled.

The omission to register the still was a cause of forfeiture under § 3258 of the Revised Statutes; the carrying on of the business of a distiller, without having given bond, or with intent to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits distilled, was a cause of forfeiture under § 3281, as re-enacted in § 16 of the Act of February 8, 1875, chap. 36; and the omission to keep books was a cause of forfeiture under § 3305 of the Revised Statutes. The questions presented are of the extent of the forfeiture.

By the now settled doctrine of this court (notwithstanding the opposing dictum of Mr. Justice McLean, in United States v. 84 Boxes of Sugar, 32 U. S. 7 Pet. 453, 462, 463 [8:745, 748]), statutes to prevent frauds upon the revenue are considered as enacted for the public good and to suppress a public wrong, and therefore, although they impose penalties or forfeitures, not to be construed, like penal laws generally, strictly in favor of the defendant; but they are to be fairly and reasonably construed, so as to carry out the intention of the Legislature. Taylor v. United States, 44 U. S. 3 How. 197, 210 [11:559, 564]; Cluquot's Champagne, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 114, 145 [18:116, 121]; United States v. Hodson, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 895, 406 [19:937, 939]; Smythe v. Hake, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 374, 380 [23:47, 49].

It will be convenient, in the first place, to ascertain the construction and effect of the provisions of § 16 of the Act of 1875, by which if any person carries on the business of a distiller, without having given bond, or with intent to defraud the United States of the tax on the spirits distilled by him, he shall be punished by fine and imprisonment, and there shall be forfeited to the United States: 1st. "All distilled spirits or wines, and all stills or other apparatus fit or intended to be used for the distillation of spirits, owned by such person, wherever found." 2d. "All distilled spirits or wines and personal property, found in the distillery, or in any building, room, yard or inclosure connected therewith, and used with or constituting a part of the premises." 3d. "All the right, title and interest of such person in the lot or tract of land on which such distillery is situated." 4th. "All right, title and interest therein of every person who knowingly has suffered or permitted the business of a distiller to be there carried on, or has connived at the same." 18 Stat. 810.

By the first of these provisions, all distilled spirits or wines, and all stills or other apparatus fit or intended to be used for the distillation of spirits, owned by the illicit distiller, and found on the premises or elsewhere, are forfeited without regard to the question whether the apparatus, by reason of the manner in which and the purpose for which it is placed on or affixed to the land, is technically personal property or real estate. But this provision does not extend to property owned by any other person than the distiller.

The second provision forfeits "all distilled spirits or wines and personal property, found in the distillery, or in any building, room, yard or inclosure connected therewith, and used with or constituting part of the premises." The last words, "and used with or constituting part of the premises," like the words next preceding, "connected therewith," aptly designate real estate, and naturally and grammatically relate to and qualify "any building, room, yard or inclosure," and not "all distilled spirits or wines and personal property." The provision is clearly not limited to personal property owned by the illicit distiller. To hold it to be so limited would give no effect to that part of this provision which forfeits distilled spirits or wines; for all distilled spirits or wines owned by the distiller, wherever found, have been already forfeited by the first provision. The first provision is restricted in point of ownership, and not in point of place. The second provision is restricted in point of place, and not in point of ownership. Nor can the second provision be restricted to property fit or intended to be used for the distillation of spirits; for, while the first provision contains such a restriction as regards apparatus, the second provision omits all requirement of fitness or intention for the unlawful use. Each of the two provisions clearly defines its own restrictions, and the restrictions inserted in the one cannot be imported into the other. The second provision must therefore extend to some property not owned by the distiller, and to some property not fit or intended to be used in distilling spirits. In order to give it such effect as will show any reason for its insertion in the Statute, it must be construed to intend, at least, that all personal property which is knowingly and voluntarily permitted by its owner to remain on any part of the premises, and which is actually used, either in the unlawful business, or in any other business openly carried on upon the premises, shall be forfeited, even if he has no participation in or knowledge of the unlawful acts or intentions of the person carrying on business there; and that persons who intrust their personal property to the custody and control of another at his place of business shall take the risk of its being subject to forfeiture if he conducts, or consents to the conducting of, any business there in violation of the Revenue Laws, without regard to the question whether the owner of any particular article of such property is proved to have participated in or connived at any violation of those laws. The present case does not require us to go beyond this, or to consider whether the sweeping words "all personal property" must be restricted by implication in any other respect; for instance, as to personal effects having no connection with any business, or as to property stolen or otherwise brought upon the premises without the consent of its owner.

The significance of the omission of all restrictions in point of ownership, and in point of fitness or intention for the unlawful use, in the second provision concerning personal property, is clearly brought out by contrasting that provision with the provisions immediately following it, concerning real estate.

The third provision forfeits only "all the right, title or interest of" the distiller "in the lot or tract of land on which the distillery is situated." And the fourth provision forfeits only "all right, title and interest therein of every person who knowingly has suffered or permitted the business of a distiller to be there carried on, or has connived at the same."

Congress has thus clearly manifested its intention that the forfeiture of land and buildings shall not reach beyond the right, title and interest of the distiller, or of such other persons as have consented to the carrying on of the business of a distiller upon the premises.

In the case, on which the attorney for the United States much relied, of Dobbins v. United States, 96 U. S. 395 [24: 637], the jury, under the instructions given them at the trial, had found that the owner of the distillery, whose title was held to be included in the forfeiture for unlawful acts of his lessee, had leased the property for the purpose of a distillery, which brought the case within the provision of the Act under which the condemnation was sought, corresponding to the fourth provision now under consideration. Act of July 20, 1868, chap. 186, § 44 (15 Stat. 143).

The intention of Congress, that no interest in land and buildings shall be forfeited, which does not belong to someone who has participated in or consented to the carrying on of the business of distilling therein, is further manifested in the provision of § 3262 of the Revised Statutes, which directs that "no bond of a distiller shall be approved, unless he is the owner in fee, unincumbered by any mortgage, judgment or other lien, of the lot or tract of land on which the distillery is situated, or unless he files with the collector, in connection with his notice, the written consent of the owner of the fee, and of any mortgagee, judgment creditor or other person having a lien thereon, duly acknowledged, that the premises may be used for the purpose of distilling spirits, subject to the provisions of law, and expressly stipulating that the lien of the United States for taxes and penalties shall have priority of such mortgage, judgment or other incumbrance, and that in case of the forfeiture of the distillery premises, or of any part thereof, the title of the same shall vest in the United States, discharged from such mortgage, judgment or other incumbrance."

That section clearly indicates that the interest of an innocent mortgagee or other person having a lien on the lot or tract of land on which the distillery is situated would not otherwise be included in a forfeiture for acts of the owner only.

The provisions of the other sections of the Revised Statutes, relied on to support this information, may be more briefly treated.

Section 3258 does not forfeit any land or buildings. But it does forfeit every still or distilling apparatus not registered by the person having it in his possession or custody, or under his control; as well as "all personal property in the possession or custody or under the control of such person, and found in the building, or in any yard or inclosure connected with the building in which the same may be set up." Personal property, by whomsoever owned, is thus included in the forfeiture, provided that it is in the possession, custody or control of the distiller, as well as found upon the premises. There is no reason for giving a narrower construction to this enactment than to the second provision of § 16 of the Act of 1875, above considered.

Section 3305 provides that in case of omission to keep the books required by law, "the distillery, distilling apparatus, and the lot or tract of land on which it stands, and all personal property on said premises used in the business there carried on," shall be forfeited. This description, taken by itself and literally construed, would include not only the distillery and distilling apparatus, but "the lot or tract of land on which it stands," by whomsoever owned, as well as all personal property on the premises and used in the business there carried on. But it is hard to believe that Congress intended that a forfeiture of real estate, under this section, for not keeping books, should be more comprehensive than the like forfeiture, under the leading section already considered, for the graver offense of carrying on the business of a distiller without having given bond, or with intent to defraud the United States of the tax upon the spirits distilled. The more reasonable construction is that the brief summary of § 3305 was intended to conform substantially, in scope and effect, to the fuller definitions in § 3281 (re-enacted in § 16 of the Act of 1875), and to forfeit, without regard to the question of ownership, the distillery and distilling apparatus, and all personal property found on the premises and used in the business there carried on; but, as to the real estate, to forfeit only the right, title and interest of the distiller, and of any persons who participate in or consent to the carrying on of the distillery.

The next question to be determined is from what time the forfeiture takes effect.

By the settled doctrine of this court, whenever a statute enacts that upon the commission of a certain act specific property used in or connected with that act shall be forfeited, the forfeiture takes effect immediately upon the commission of the act; the right to the property then vests in the United States, although their title is not perfected until judicial condemnation; the forfeiture constitutes a statutory transfer of the right to the United States at the time the offense is committed, and the condemnation, when obtained, relates back to that time, and avoids all intermediate sales and alienations, even to purchasers in good faith.

The rule was early applied under statutes enacting that whenever goods, the importation of which was prohibited, should be imported, they should be forfeited; and that if any ship should leave port without clearance or giving bond as required by law, the ship and the cargo should be forfeited. United States v. 1,960 Bags of Coffee, 12 U. S. 8 Cranch, 398 [8: 602]; The Mars, 12 U. S. 8 Cranch, 417 [8: 609]. It has been recognized and acted on in cases of goods imported in fraud of the Customs Laws. Gelston v. Hoyt, 16 U. S. 8 Wheat. 246, 311 [4: 381, 397]; Wood v. United States, 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 342, 362 [10: 987, 995]; Caldwell v. United States, 49 U. S. 8 How. 366 [12: 1115]. And it has been steadfastly upheld under the Internal Revenue Laws; in one case, under an enactment punishing by fine and imprisonment any person removing distilled spirits from the distillery contrary to law, with intent to evade the payment of the tax thereon, and providing that spirits so removed should be forfeited; and in another case under an enactment that any person fraudulently executing an instrument required by the Internal Revenue Laws should be punished by fine and imprisonment and the property to which the instrument related should be forfeited. Henderson's Distilled Spirits, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 44 [20: 815]; Thacher's Distilled Spirits, 103 U. S. 679 [26: 885].

The rule is equally applicable to the Statutes now in question. In the Act of February 8, 1875, chap. 86, § 16, the four provisions, before quoted, relating to forfeiture, follow immediately after the clause prescribing the punishment by fine and imprisonment of the offender, and contain nothing to imply that the forfeiture of all the kinds of property mentioned is not to take effect at one and the same time. The forfeiture, under the first of those provisions, of spirits and wines, stills and apparatus, owned by the offender, is evidently intended to take effect immediately upon the commission of the offense, so as to prevent any subsequent alienation by him before seizure and condemnation; and the words "wherever found" merely preclude all limit of place, and have no tendency to postpone the time when the forfeiture shall take effect. In the second provision, the restriction to personal property "found in the distillery" or upon the premises of which it is part, is a limit of place only, and does not postpone the forfeiture of such property which is on the premises when the offense is committed; and from what date a forfeiture of personal property not on the premises at the time of the commission of the offense, but brought there afterwards, should take effect, this case does not require us to consider. That the forfeiture of real estate, under the third and fourth provisions, must take effect as soon as the offense is committed, is yet clearer; for those provisions contain nothing which by any possible construction could be supposed to postpone the forfeiture; and by the common law of England, even in the case of the forfeiture of all the real and personal estate of an offender, while the forfeiture of his goods and chattels was only upon conviction and had no relation backwards, the forfeiture of his lands had relation to the time of the offense committed, so as to avoid all subsequent sales and incumbrances. 4 Bl. Com. 887. The forfeitures under §§ 3258 and 3805 of the Revised Statutes are governed by the same considerations.

It remains to apply the provisions of the Statutes to the admitted facts of this case.

Stowell claims the real estate and certain machinery and fixtures, as well as a number of butts and a quantity of malt and hops.

The butts were personal property, used in the business of the brewery. Assuming them to have been sold and delivered by Dixon to Stowell before any offense was committed by which a forfeiture was incurred, yet they were suffered by Stowell to remain in Dixon's possession, custody and control, and were upon the premises at the time of the commission of the offense, and found there at the time of the seizure. They were therefore forfeited under each of the sections relied on.

As to the malt and hops, the case is even clearer in favor of the United States; for not only were they intended to be used in the brewery and were in the possession, custody and control of Dixon, and upon the premises, both at the time of the commission of the criminal acts and of the seizure, but Stowell acquired no right whatever in them until after such acts had been committed.

Of the real estate, Stowell, more than a year before the unlawful acts began to be committed by which a forfeiture was incurred, took a mortgage from Dixon, subject to a prior mortgage for $1,500, and to secure a debt of $2,500. This mortgage conveyed a distinct interest in the real estate to the mortgagee; and, by the law of Massachusetts, as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, vested the fee in the latter, but subject to the mortgage, and, as regarded third persons, left the legal title in the mortgagor. Conard v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 886, 441 [7: 189, 213]; Esner v. Hobbs, 5 Met. 1, 8; Howard v. Robinson, 5 Cush. 119, 128. As soon as a still was set up on the land, with the mortgagor's knowledge and consent, in violation of the Internal Revenue Laws, the forfeiture under those laws took effect, and (though needing judicial condemnation to perfect it) operated from that time as a statutory conveyance to the United States of all the right, title and interest then remaining in the mortgagor; and was as valid and effectual, against all the world, as a recorded deed. The right so vested in the United States could not be defeated or impaired by any subsequent dealings of the mortgagee with the mortgagor. Upton v. South Reading National Bank, 120 Mass. 153, 156. The mortgagor's subsequent conveyance of the land by quitclaim deed to the mortgagee, therefore, passed no title as against the intervening right of the United States. But this deed did not have the effect of merging or uniting the mortgage and the equity of redemption in one estate, because, by reason of that intervening right, it was for the interest of the mortgagee that the mortgage should be kept on foot. The quitclaim deed, being void or voidable, left the mortgaged estate exactly where it found it. Factors & Traders Ins. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 788, 744 [28: 583, 584]; Dexter v. Harris, 2 Mason, 531, 539; New England Jewelry Co. v. Merriam, 2 Allen, 390; Stantons v. Thompson, 49 N. H. 272. It being admitted that the business of a distiller was not carried on with the mortgagee's permission or connivance, and that he did not even know, until after the seizure, that a still had been set up on the premises, it follows, for the reasons already stated in discussing the construction and effect of the Statutes in question, that the mortgage is valid as against the United States, and that, so far as concerns the real estate, the judgment of condemnation must be against the equity of redemption only.

As to the boiler, engine, pump, vats and tanks, the forfeiture must be equally limited. As we understand the somewhat ambiguous statement of the facts regarding them, they were upon the premises before the still was set up, and were owned by Dixon, and not by the distillers; and it is not shown that any of them were used or fit to be used in connection with the distillery, which were not already in lawful use in the brewery. In that view, even if they, or some of them, would be trade fixtures as between landlord and tenant, yet while annexed to the land they were real estate and covered by the mortgage. Kutter v. Smith, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 491 [17: 880]; Freeman v. Dawson, 110 U. S. 261, 370 [28: 141, 148]. Winslow v. Merchants Ins. Co. 4 Met. 806; Bliss v. Whitney, 9 Allen, 114.

The horses, wagons and harnesses claimed by Bevington were personal property, used in the business of the brewery, and were sold and a formal delivery of them made to Bevington by Dixon after the acts had been committed by which a forfeiture was incurred; they were afterwards suffered by Bevington to remain under Dixon's control and in his use, and they were found upon the premises at the time of the seizure. They were therefore forfeited under each of the sections relied on by the United States.

Judgment reversed, and case remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

THE OHIO CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

THE CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 88-92.)

Decree pro confesso—proper relief under—extent of the decree—appeal from—mortgage foreclosure—deficiency—amount not due.

1. A decree pro confesso is not a decree as of course according to the prayer of the bill, nor merely such as the complainant chooses to take it; but it should be made by the court, according to what is proper to be decreed upon the statements of the bill, assumed to be true.
2. If the allegations are distinct and positive, they may be taken as true without proof; but if they are indefinite, or the demand of the complainant is in its nature uncertain, the requisite certainty must be afforded by proof.
3. But in either event, although the defendant may not be allowed on appeal to question the want of testimony or the insufficiency or amount of the evidence, he is not precluded from contesting the sufficiency of the bill, or from insisting that the averments contained in it do not justify the decree.
4. Where the bill is taken pro confesso, if a decree be passed not confined to the matter of the bill, it may be attacked on appeal for that reason.
5. In suits in equity for the foreclosure of mortgages, a decree may be rendered for any balance that may be found due to the complainant over and above the proceeds of the sale; but the case made by the bill must show that the amount is due, for otherwise it cannot properly be found so. The circuit court cannot find a balance due because partial extinguishment has been effected by a sale, if, as matter of fact, the indebtedness is not then payable.
6. Where the bill here did not seek relief as to the second mortgage, but only the enforcement of the first mortgage lien and the foreclosure of the equity of redemption, and the amount realized paid the outstanding interest and a part of the principal, a deficiency decree, which is a judgment for the recovery of so much money, with execution, was improvidently entered, when it appears in the bill that the principal had not become due.

[No. 1288.]

Submitted Dec. 23, 1889. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

188 U. S.

A PPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio to review a decree in a mortgage-foreclosure case for a deficiency after a sale, and declaring a certain amount due, and that the complainant recover the same. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

The Central Trust Company of New York filed its bill on the 7th day of January, A. D. 1884, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Ohio, against The Ohio Central Railroad Company, alleging the creation prior to January 1, 1880, of a corporation by that name, and its execution on January 1, 1880, of three thousand bonds for one thousand dollars each, bearing that date and payable to bearer on January 1, 1920, at 6 per cent interest, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, to secure which it executed and delivered to the Central Trust Company a deed of trust and mortgage covering the main line of said Ohio Central Railroad, which mortgage was duly recorded. The bill also alleged that the original Ohio Central Railroad Company, subsequently to the first day of January, 1880, and to the execution and delivery of the bonds and mortgage thereinbefore described, made and entered into an agreement of consolidation with a corporation known as the Atlantic and Northwestern Railroad Company, under the name of The Ohio Central Railroad Company. It further alleged default in the payment of interest on the said bonds, January 1, 1884; that the coupons were duly presented and payment was demanded, but refused; and that about the first of January, 1880, the defendant executed and delivered a second mortgage on the same property, to the same trustee, to secure three thousand income bonds for one thousand dollars each, payable to bearer, which was duly recorded; that the holders of these income bonds were very numerous and unknown to complainant; and that their interest and lien and that of complainant as their trustee accrued subsequently to and subject to the lien of the first mortgage. The bill set forth the insufficiency of the mortgaged property to pay the mortgage debts; that there was a large floating indebtedness; that creditors had commenced legal or equitable proceedings for the enforcement of their claims; that complainant had commenced a suit for the foreclosure of a certain other mortgage upon a portion of the property not embraced or covered by the two mortgages first mentioned, in which a receiver had been appointed; and that a multiplicity of suits, judgments and liens would obstruct the operation of the road and cause great loss to the holders of the bonds, and sacrifice of property, etc.

The bill prayed for an answer; that an account be had of the bonds secured by said several mortgages, "and of the amount due on said first-mortgage bonds for principal and interest or either;" that the names of the holders of said bonds might be ascertained and an account taken of all the liens and incumbrances according to their priorities; that said first mortgage be decreed to be a first lien upon all the property described therein; that the property be sold free from the claims of all parties or all who were in any manner represented; that the defendant and others claiming under it be barred and foreclosed; "that the said judgment or decree may contain such provisions for the ascertainment of the priorities of the said incumbrances and of the due application of the proceeds of such sale according to the rights of the parties as may be just and equitable;" that a receiver might be appointed, and an injunction issue pendente lite; and a prayer for general relief. A copy of the first mortgage, including bond and coupon, was attached to the bill.

561

The defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, having entered its appearance, and having failed to plead, answer or demur, the bill was taken as confessed, and on the 10th day of December, 1884, a decree for sale was duly entered in the cause. The decree accorded with the averments of the bill, and adjudged that the default continued after the commencement of the suit, and that two installments of interest on the first-mortgage bonds were due and unpaid, by reason of the default as to the first of which the mortgage or deed of trust had become absolute, and the complainant entitled to a decree for the sale of all the mortgaged property "to satisfy the principal and interest of said bonds secured by said main-line first mortgage." The decree directed payment within thirty days of the amount of the two installments of interest due, with interest and costs, and in default of such payment ordered the sale of the mortgaged property and the application of the proceeds to costs of suit, expenses of sale, trustees' compensation and expenses; claims having priority over the main-line first mortgage; coupons due, and to become due before distribution, upon said first-mortgage bonds; the principal of the first-mortgage bonds; and the surplus, if any, to be paid into court subject to its further order. The sale took place on April 15, 1885, and the mortgaged property was sold to Canda, Opdyke and Burt, as purchasing trustees, for one million dollars, which sale was confirmed June 25, 1885, and the mortgaged property was conveyed to the said purchasers. Prior to the confirmation of sale, but after the sale had been reported, a reference was had to ascertain the distributive share of the proceeds of sale due on the principal of each bond secured by the first mortgage, and what sum the purchasers should bring into court to pay the distributive share of whatever bonds might be found outstanding. A report was made that after the payment of interest there would be $197.31½ to apply on the principal of each first-mortgage bond; and in the order confirming the sale the report of the special master was confirmed, payment of compensation and expenses directed, and the balance ordered to be applied on the principal of said main-line first-mortgage bonds. The last clause of this order of June 25, 1885, was as follows:

"And all further questions in respect to the accounts of said receiver and to judgment for any deficiency herein, and all other questions arising in this cause, are reserved until the coming in of the report of said special master commissioner of his acts and doings under this order, and the filing of said receiver's account."

On the 22d of June, 1887, the following decree and judgment was entered by the court:

"This day this cause came on for further hearing, and it appearing to the court that from the proceeds of the sale of the property of said defendant Company in this cause heretofore made there had been paid upon each of the three thousand bonds secured by the first main-line mortgage in the bill of complaint set forth the interest coupons thereon up to and including June 30th, 1885, and the sum of one hundred and ninety-seven and thirty-one and two-thirds one-hundredths dollars ($197.31½) to be applied upon the payment of the principal of each of said bonds, said payment to bear date of June 30th, 1885, and no other payments of either principal or interest have been made upon any of said bonds than as aforesaid, the court therefore finds that there is due from said defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, to the complainant, as trustee for the holders of said bonds secured by said first main-line mortgage, upon each of said bonds, the sum of eight hundred and two and sixty-eight and one third one-hundredths dollars ($802.68½), which sum should bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum until paid.

"And the court further finds that no fund has come under the control of this court from which any payment can be made upon the three thousand main-line income bonds in the bill of complaint set forth, and that no payments of any kind have been made upon any of said income bonds. Wherefore the court find that there is due from the defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, to the complainant, as trustee of the holders of said income bonds, upon each of said bonds, the sum of one thousand ($1,000) dollars.

"Wherefore it is ordered, adjudged and decreed that the complainant, The Central Trust Company of New York, as trustee for the holders of said three thousand bonds secured by said first main-line mortgage, have and recover from the defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, the sum of eight hundred and two and sixty-eight and one third one-hundredths dollars ($802.68½) on each of said bonds, to wit, the sum of $2,408,050, with six per cent interest per annum from July 1, 1885, and that the said complainant, as trustee for the holders of said three thousand main-line income bonds, have and recover from said defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000) on each of said bonds, to wit, the sum of three million dollars, and that execution issue therefor."

From this decree the pending appeal was prosecuted.

Messrs. Ashbel Green, H. L. Terrell and Thomas Thacher, for appellant:

It is no objection to this appeal that the appellant allowed the cases, as presented by the bill, to go by default, and that order pro confesso was entered.

Masterson v. Howard, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 99 (21: 764); Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289 (25: 932).

The court had no power to make such judgment for deficiency.

Noonan v. Braley, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 499 (17: 278); Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274 (28: 914); Crocket v. Lee, 20 U. S. 7 Wheat. 523

(5: 518); Simms v. Guthrie, 13 U. S. 9 Cranch, 19 (3: 642).

The Ohio Central Railroad Company having failed to answer, and an order for decree pro confesso having been entered, the court could not legally find, as the foundation of any judgment or decree against it, any fact not within the allegations of the bill.

Terrett v. Taylor, 18 U. S. 9 Cranch, 48 (3: 650); Thompson v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104 (29: 105).

The said bill contained no allegations upon which any of the principal of any of the bonds, first-mortgage or income bonds, could be found due to anyone.

Howell v. Western R. Co. 94 U. S. 468 (24: 254); Holden v. Gilbert, 7 Paige, Ch. 208; Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line R. Co. 2 Woods, 453.

The relief granted by the judgment for deficiency was not within the prayer of the bill.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274 (23: 914).
Mr. Stevenson Burke for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

These first-mortgage bonds matured January 1, 1920, and there was no provision in them nor in the mortgage that they should become due or could be declared due before that date, nor were there any allegations in the bill upon which to predicate a finding or decree to that effect.

The mortgage provided that in case of entry by the trustee for nonpayment of interest, or of principal at maturity, the income and revenue should be applied to the payment of such interest and the residue to the payment of the principal; and that, if the property went to sale, the net proceeds should be applied "to the ratable payment of principal and the then accrued interest of all the said bonds, whether the principal be then due or not;" but if, in case of entry or of proceedings to sell for default in payment of interest before the bonds should become due, and before the sale should be made, the interest in arrears should be paid and satisfied, together with all costs, expenses, etc., that then the proceedings should be discontinued and possession of the mortgaged premises restored as if default or entry had not occurred. While, therefore, the intention is clear that the bonds were not to become due before the specified date of maturity, the proceeds of sale, after the satisfaction of the accrued amount, were properly applied upon the outstanding liability. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. v. Foodick, 106 U. S. 47, 68 [27: 47, 54].

Neither in the pleadings nor in the reports of the special master, nor in any part of the record, can we discover the basis for the statement: "The court therefore finds that there is due from said defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, to the complainant as trustee for the holders of said bonds secured by said first main-line mortgage, upon each of said bonds, the sum of eight hundred and two and sixty-eight and one third one-hundredths dollars (\$802.68 $\frac{1}{3}$)." Certainly, as \$197.81 $\frac{1}{3}$ had been realized on each bond, \$802.68 $\frac{1}{3}$ remained to be paid, but only according to the tenor of the bond.

There are no allegations in the bill as to when the income bonds matured, nor is a copy of the second mortgage given.

183 U. S.

The deficiency decree says that "the court further finds that no fund has come under the control of this court from which any payment can be made upon the three thousand main-line income bonds in the bill of complaint set forth, and that no payments of any kind have been made upon any of said income bonds. Wherefore the court finds that there is due from the defendant, The Ohio Central Railroad Company, to the complainant, as trustees of the holders of said income bonds, upon each of said bonds, the sum of one thousand ($1,000) dollars."

But the conclusion does not follow that because no payment had been made on the income bonds, therefore they had matured; and unless they had matured by lapse of time, or otherwise as provided, the amount could not be decreed to be due.

The bill was taken as confessed, but that fact did not in itself justify giving complainant more than it claimed. In Thomson v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104 [29: 105], the general nature and effect of an order taken on a bill pro confesso, and of a decree pro confesso regularly made thereon, and of our rules of practice on the subject, are discussed in the opinion of the court by Mr. Justice Bradley, and it is there held that under the rules and practice of this court in equity "a decree pro confesso is not a decree as of course according to the prayer of the bill, nor merely such as the complainant chooses to take it; but that it is made (or should be made) by the court, according to what is proper to be decreed upon the statements of the bill, assumed to be true." If the allegations are distinct and positive, they may be taken as true without proof; but if they are indefinite, or the demand of the complainant is in its nature uncertain, the requisite certainty must be afforded by proof. But in either event, although the defendant may not be allowed, on appeal, to question the want of testimony or the insufficiency or amount of the evidence, he is not precluded from contesting the sufficiency of the bill, or from insisting that the averments contained in it do not justify the decree.

Under the 18th Rule in Equity, where the bill is taken pro confesso, the cause is proceeded in ex parte, "and the matter of the bill may be decreed by the court;" and hence if a decree be passed not confined to the matter of the bill, it may be attacked on appeal for that reason.

By the 92d Rule it is provided that in suits in equity for the foreclosure of mortgages, "a decree may be rendered for any balance that may be found due to the complainant over and above the proceeds of the sale or sales." Assuming that a deficiency decree might be rendered in the absence of a specific prayer for that relief, nevertheless the case made by the bill must show that the amount is due, for otherwise it cannot properly be found so. This rule does not authorize the circuit courts to find a balance due because partial extinguishment has been effected by a sale, if, as matter of fact, the indebtedness is not then payable.

The bill here did not seek relief as to the second mortgage, which is only referred to as a subordinate lien, nor did it claim that anything except interest was due upon the first mortgage. It sought the establishment and enforcement of the first-mortgage lien and the foreclosure of the equity of redemption. The amount realized paid the outstanding interest and a part of the principal. Under such circumstances, and upon these pleadings, this deficiency decree, which is a judgment for the recovery of so much money, with execution, was improvidently entered.

563

Without discussing the extent of the franchises authorized to be sold under the mortgage, we are of opinion that this appeal was properly taken in the name of the defendant Company. Willamette Mfg. Co. v. Bank of British Columbia, 119 U. S. 191, 197 [80: 884, 887]; Memphis & Little Rock R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 112 U. S. 609, 619 [28: 887, 841].

The deficiency decree of June 22, 1857, is reversed at appellee's costs, and the cause remanded with directions to proceed therein as may be just and equitable.

HENRY E. SCHRADER, Assignee, Appt.,
v.
THE MANUFACTURERS' NATIONAL BANK OF CHICAGO ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 67-78.)

Individual liability of stockholders of bank—settlements made after bank went into liquidation—power of president and other officers—indorsement, how far binding on bank—when does not make shareholders liable—prolonging obligation—judgment against bank in liquidation, when does not bind stockholders—agreement to prolong liability.

1. The individual liability of the stockholders of national banks, as imposed by and expressed in the statute, is for all the contracts, debts and engagements of such banks, but is restricted to such contracts, debts and engagements as have been duly contracted in the ordinary course of its business.
2. Those creditors who made settlements after the Bank was put into liquidation and received from the president in that settlement paper of the Bank, or the individual notes of the president himself, indorsed or guaranteed in the name of the Bank, are not such creditors of the Bank as can subject the stockholders to individual liability.
3. The power of the president or other officer of the bank to bind it by transactions after it is put into liquidation, is that resulting from his duty, which consists in the collection and reduction to money of the assets of the Bank, and the payment of creditors equally and ratably so far as the assets prove sufficient.
4. Payments may be made in the bills receivable and other assets of the Bank in specie, and the title to such paper may be transferred by the president or cashier by an indorsement suitable to the purpose in the name of the Bank; but such indorsement and use of the name of the Bank is in liquidation and merely for the purpose of transferring title.

5. It can have no other effect as against the shareholders by creating a new obligation. It does not constitute a liability, contract or engagement of the Bank for which they can be held to be individually responsible.

6. It is not within the power of the officers of the Bank, without express authority, to prolong indefinitely an obligation on the part of the shareholders, which is imposed by the statute only as a means of securing the payment of debts by an insolvent bank.

7. When the suit in which judgment was recovered was not commenced until after the Bank went into liquidation, the judgment against the corporation is not binding on the stockholders in the sense that it cannot be re-examined, where the facts of the case were not known to the stockholders of the Bank when the judgment was rendered.

8. An agreement made by the president of the Bank, after the Bank went into liquidation, to continue its guarantee upon certain notes, is not binding upon the stockholders.

[No. 1870.]

Submitted Jan. 9, 1890. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, establishing claims against a Bank which had been put into liquidation and disallowing the claim of the People's Bank of Belleville. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Reported below, 36 Fed. Rep. 843.

Mr. Franklin A. McCaughy, for appellant:

The undertaking of the Manufacturers' National Bank was the obligation of a principal. Kirkpatrick v. Hawk, 80 Ill. 122.

The guarantor has no right to demand the sureties which the creditor may hold.

Dorst v. Bates, 51 Ill. 489.

An agreement which preserves the rights of the creditor to proceed against the surety, or the right of the surety to proceed against the principal, will not discharge the surety.

Mueller v. Dobschuets, 89 Ill. 182; Rucker v. Robinson, 88 Mo. 154; Morse v. Huntington, 40 Vt. 488-496; Price v. Barker, 4 El. & Bl. 760; Kearsley v. Cole, 16 Mees. & W. 128; Viele v. Hoag, 24 Vt. 46; Hubbell v. Carpenter, 5 N. Y. 171.

The mere inadequacy of price would not be sufficient to set aside a sale, even in a direct proceeding for such a purpose.

Davis v. Pickett, 72 Ill. 485.

This judgment is as binding on the stockholders of the Bank, as an adjudication, as it is against the Bank itself, unless it can be shown that it was obtained by fraud, of which there can be no pretense.

Milliken v. Whitehouse, 49 Me. 529; Slee v. Bloom, 20 Johns. 669; Moss v. Oakley, 2 Hill, 265; Belmont v. Coleman, 1 Bosw. 188; Donworth v. Coolbaugh, 5 Iowa, 800; Wilson v.

NOTE.—As to conclusiveness of judgment, see note to Bank of U. S. v. Beverly, Bk. 11, p. 75.

As to estoppel by judgment, see note to Aspden v. Nixon, Bk. 11, p. 1059.

As to individual liability of stockholders for corporate debts, see note to Hatch v. Dana, Bk. 26, p. 885.

As to dissolution of corporations and effect on debts owned by and on their property, see note to Mumma v. The Potomac Company, Bk. 8, p. 945.

As to when promissory notes, executed by an officer, bind the corporation; when the officer, see note to Hitchcock v. Buchanan, Bk. 26, p. 1078.

As to parol contracts of officers and agents, see note to Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria v. Bank of Columbia, Bk. 5, p. 100, and note to Bank of Metropolis v. Gutschlick, Bk. 10, p. 835.

Pittsburgh, 43 Pa. 424; Grund v. Tucker, 5 Kan. 70.

Mr. Henry G. Miller, for appellees:

A judgment against a corporation is not binding upon the stockholders; it is not even prima facie evidence of the indebtedness of the corporation as to them. They are never parties or privies to it. Whether they are considered as sureties for the company, or as principal debtors, the rule is the same.

Moss v. McCullough, 5 Hill, 181; McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155; Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 187; Laidley v. Kline, 8 W. Va. 218; Trippe v. Huncheson, 82 Ind. 307.

The surety has an interest that the security taken from the principal debtor should be dealt with in good faith, and held in trust, not only for the creditor's security but for the surety's indemnity. The creditor must do no willful act to discharge or cancel it.

Hayes v. Ward, 4 Johns. Ch. 180; Kirkpatrick v. Hawk, 80 Ill. 122; Rogers v. School Trustees, 46 Ill. 428; Baker v. Briggs, 8 Pick. 122; People v. Jansen, 7 Johns. 332; Neff's App. 9 Watts & S. 36; Schroeppel v. Shaw, 3 N. Y. 450; Phares v. Barbour, 49 Ill. 870.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a case growing out of that of Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27 [80: 864], and involves a claim against the assets of the Manufacturers' National Bank of Chicago. In the suit of Irons against that Bank, by an order of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, one Harvey was appointed receiver of the Bank. That court, on July 28, 1888, referred it to a master, to report the amount of the debts of the Bank, the value of its assets, and the amount of assessment necessary to be made on each share of its capital stock in order to pay its debts. Among the claims presented before the master was that of the assignee of the People's Bank of Belleville, Illinois, who claimed to be a creditor in the sum of $84,108.48; and the master reported in favor of the claim. It was based on a judgment for $67,277 obtained in the same circuit court, May 31, 1880, by the People's Bank against the Manufacturers' Bank. The judgment was founded on eight promissory notes for $5,000 each, dated August 5, 1873, made by Henry E. Picket, payable one year after date, to the order of Picket, at the Manufacturers' Bank, with interest at 10 per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, and with 10 per cent per annum interest after maturity, indorsed by Picket, the payment of each note, principal and interest, at maturity being guaranteed by the Manufacturers' Bank. The notes were secured by a trust deed on real estate, made by Picket to one Joseph A. Holmes.

On the 1st of June, 1886, the circuit court made a decree directing various shareholders to pay to the receiver, for the benefit of the creditors of the Bank, certain sums of money. An appeal was taken to this court by several of the stockholders and was heard, and is the case reported as Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27 [80: 864]. The decision was announced March 28, 1887, the decree of the circuit court was reversed, and the cause was remanded with directions to proceed in conformity with the opinion of this court. After that decision, and before the mandate was presented to the circuit court, and on the 20th of June, 1887, on the application of several of the stockholders, the case was referred back to the master, to report again upon the amount of the debts due by the Bank, and upon the amount of the assessment necessary to be made on each share of its capital stock, to pay its debts, and upon the amount payable by each shareholder on such assessment, and also to take further proofs in regard to the validity of the claim of the People's Bank, as against the stockholders of the Manufacturers' Bank, and as to whether that claim had been in whole or in part released, discharged or defeated, by reason of any new matters stated in such application.

On the 16th of June, 1888, the master reported that the claim of the People's Bank ought to be disallowed upon the new proofs taken. Those proofs accompanied his report. The assignee of the People's Bank excepted to the report, and the matter was heard before Judge Blodgett. His opinion is reported in 86 Fed. Rep. 848. He confirmed the report and overruled the exceptions, and on the 27th of March, 1889, a decree was entered upon the mandate of this court, vacating the decree of June 1, 1886, giving a list of the valid, outstanding claims against the Bank (which did not include the claim of the assignee of the People's Bank), adjudging what sums were to be paid by the various stockholders, and taxing costs to the amount of $158.60 against the People's Bank and its assignee. The assignee appealed to this court from the decree, because it disallowed his claim, and because of the award of costs against the People's Bank and its assignee.

The Manufacturers' Bank became insolvent and suspended payment on September 23, 1873, and, in pursuance of the National Banking Act, went into voluntary liquidation on September 26, 1873.

In regard to the claim of the assignee of the People's Bank, the master reported as follows: "I find and report that the claim of the assignee of the People's Bank of Belleville is based upon the guaranty of the Manufacturers' National Bank of promissory notes made by Henry E. Picket, and secured by real estate, amounting in the outset to $50,000; that this guaranty was made by Ira Holmes, who was an officer of said Manufacturers' National Bank, and before the failure of the Bank; that these notes were secured by a trust deed to Joseph A. Holmes upon the undivided half of the northwest quarter of section ten, township thirty-seven north, range fourteen east, being (80) eighty acres, one undivided half of which eighty acres was owned by said Picket (and a five-acre tract and twenty-six lots) and the other undivided half of said eighty acres by said Ira Holmes individually; that after the maturity of these notes and in the month of August, A. D. 1874, Ira Holmes made a written contract with the People's Bank, by which he was to give and did give the bank his promissory notes aggregating the sum of $87,465, to secure the Picket notes (and other indebtedness for which the bank was not liable), payable in one, two, three and four years, securing the payment thereof by a trust deed upon said property and the southwest quarter of said northwest quarter, containing forty acres additional, and that subsequently foreclosure proceedings were had upon the trust deed made by Picket, resulting in the placing of the title to the entire tract in the name of said Ira Holmes, and the amount for which the property was sold, to wit, the sum of ten thousand dollars, was credited upon the notes of said Picket, leaving due at that time upon the Picket notes the sum of forty thousand dollars, for the payment of which, and the notes of said Ira Holmes, the entire tract remained charged, said Picket having, for the purpose of enabling the parties to carry out the arrangement referred to, executed a quitclaim deed of his interest in said property to said Ira Holmes. I find, as a matter of fact, that the consideration for the conveyance of said Picket was his release from the payment of his notes, which were thereafter held under the terms of the contract between Ira Holmes and the People's Bank, for the purpose of preserving the guaranty of the bank; that said arrangement changed the original contract of guaranty made by the Manufacturers' National Bank, by the taking of the new security and the extension of time resulting therefrom upon the original indebtedness. I find, further, that the deed executed by said Picket, as the result of the agreement referred to, was made under an arrangement between said Holmes and Picket, and assented to by said People's Bank of Belleville, that said Picket was to be released and discharged from any further liability or payment upon the original indebtedness. By reason of which I find that the Manufacturers' National Bank, the original guarantor, became discharged from all further liability on account of such undertaking of guaranty, and recommend that the claim against it be disallowed."

Judge Blodgett, in his opinion in 86 Fed. Rep. 843, said: "This claim of the People's Bank of Belleville is based upon a guaranty of payment made by the Manufacturers' National Bank of eight notes of $5,000 each, given by Henry E. Picket, dated August 5, 1873, and due in one year from date, which were discounted for the Manufacturers' National Bank, soon after their date, by the People's Bank of Belleville. These notes were secured by a trust deed upon land in the vicinity of the City of Chicago. The Manufacturers' National Bank suspended payment and went into voluntary liquidation on or about the 23d of September, 1873, and, when these notes matured, about a year afterwards, dealings were had between the People's Bank of Belleville and Ira Holmes, then acting as president of the Manufacturers' National Bank, in liquidation, and assuming to act also for his bank, by which the title to the real estate held as security for the payment of these notes was transferred to Holmes, and Holmes thereupon gave his notes for the amount due on the Picket notes, and also for a large amount of other indebtedness held by the People's Bank, on which the Manufacturers' National Bank or Holmes or both were liable; and, as is found by the master, Picket, in consideration of a quitclaim deed from himself and wife to Holmes, of the land covered by the trust deed securing his notes, was released from further liability on these notes. The master found that this release of Picket from the notes which the Manufacturers' National Bank had guaranteed operated to release the guarantor, and hence the master rejected the claim. I do not intend to go into an analysis or statement of the proof upon which the master made his finding, as it will be sufficient to say that I have examined these proofs, and am of opinion that they fully sustain the master's conclusions. It is urged, however, that, as the proof shows that the People's Bank of Belleville brought suit on this guaranty now in question and obtained judgment thereon, such judgment is conclusive against the defendants in this case, who are stockholders in the Manufacturers' National Bank, against whom an assessment is asked. Aside from the authorities cited, which satisfy me that the stockholders of the Manufacturers' National Bank are not concluded by this judgment which was rendered after the Bank went into liquidation, I think the fact shown in this record, that the dealings between the People's Bank of Belleville and Holmes and Picket, by which Picket was released, were unknown to the defendant stockholders at the time this judgment was rendered, should allow these stockholders to go behind the record of that judgment, and raise the question before the court, in this suit, whether the guaranty was released by the release of Picket, the principal debtor, whose notes were guaranteed. The exceptions to the master's report are therefore overruled and the report confirmed."

The contention of the appellant is that, by the transaction in question, Picket was not released. Reliance for this view is had upon an instrument in writing, made on the 27th of August, 1874, between Ira Holmes as one party and the People's Bank of Belleville as the other. By that paper Holmes agreed with the bank that he would, on the 1st of September, 1874, execute to it his eighteen promissory notes, of that date, each bearing interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from its date, payable semi-annually, the total amount of the eighteen notes to be $87,465.10; and Holmes simultaneously to execute to one Thomas, as trustee, eighteen deeds of trust to secure the eighteen notes, each deed to secure one note, the bank agreeing to foreclose at once the Picket deed of trust, and to procure the trustee therein to sell the land covered thereby, under its provisions, at the expense of Ira Holmes, and to cause said land to be bought in at such sale and conveyed to Ira Holmes. The instrument contained a provision "that the notes mentioned in the incumbrances now existing upon said land shall stand as additional security for said People's Bank, as far as they go, for the indebtedness to be created by the said Holmes as hereinbefore mentioned." Under this agreement, the proceedings took place which are set forth in the report of the master.

On the 2d of September, 1874, a paper was executed by the Manufacturers' National Bank, by Ira Holmes as its president, and accepted in writing by the People's Bank of Belleville, by C. W. Thomas as its attorney, which recited the fact of the making of the ten promissory notes by Picket on the 5th of August, 1873, and the securing of the same by a trust deed, and then proceeded as follows: "And whereas the said Manufacturers' National Bank afterwards, and before said notes matured, delivered them to the People's Bank of Belleville, and, for a valuable consideration, guaranteed the prompt payment of said notes and interest to said People's Bank; and whereas the said Picket, before said notes fell due, became insolvent, and the land mentioned in said trust deed was subject to heavy prior incumbrances, which said People's Bank has removed, it is agreed between the said People's Bank of Belleville and the said Manufacturers' National Bank that the guarantee of the said Manufacturer's National Bank upon eight of said notes shall be and remain binding upon said National Bank, and that any agreement which has been or may be made between the People's Bank and said Picket, in regard to said Picket's liability as maker or indorser of said notes, shall never be construed to release or in anywise affect said guarantee upon eight of said notes."

On the same 2d of September, 1874, the Manufacturers' National Bank, by Ira Holmes as its president, executed an instrument whereby it agreed that no release of the Picket deed of trust "shall operate to release said Bank from its guarantee of eight of the notes in said deed named, to be selected and retained by the People's Bank of Belleville, the present legal holder of all of said notes in said deed named, and the said Manufacturers' National Bank further agrees that no release of the maker or indorser of said notes shall operate to relieve said National Bank of its liability upon said guarantee of eight of the same, the said Manufacturers' National Bank hereby continuing its guaranty of eight of said notes, notwithstanding any agreement which may be or may have been made between the holder of the same and the maker or indorser thereof, and notwithstanding any sale which may be made under said deed of trust."

In its opinion in the case of Richmond v. Irons, at page 59 [80: 874], this court considered that part of the decree appealed from which directed payment of the claims reported by the master under the denomination of class D, amounting in the aggregate to $185,119.84, and which were designated by the master as claims "arising before the failure of the Bank, upon which worthless collaterals were subsequently received." These were claims which, after the Bank went into liquidation, were settled between the parties by the acceptance out of the assets of the Bank, by the creditors, of bills receivable, in payment of their claims, and which bills receivable contained guarantees of payment then made in the name of the Bank. Upon that point this court said: "It is averred by the appellees that they are claims arising for the most part, if not in all instances, upon indorsements and guarantees made in the name of the Bank by Holmes, its president, after the suspension of the Bank, and while it was in liquidation. It appears clearly from the evidence that, in many cases, parties having claims against the Bank accepted from Holmes commercial paper held by the Bank, which it had received in the course of its business, and which constituted a part of its assets, running some of it several months and some of it several years, bearing interest, some at the rate of eight and some at the rate of ten per cent per annum, indorsed and guaranteed in the name of the Bank by Holmes as president. The books of the Bank show that in these cases the paper so received was charged against the account of the party receiving it, thus closing the account as settled. In these cases, it is testified by Holmes that the creditors gave their checks to the Bank for the amount standing to their credit. In some cases, the creditors or their agents testifying to the transactions, without contradicting Holmes in respect to what was in fact done, nevertheless state that the paper accepted by them was received, not in payment, but as security. It is obvious, however, that in most, if not in all, instances, the witnesses are referring to the security which they supposed they had received and were entitled to rely upon, by the means of the indorsement and guaranty of the paper thus received, made by Holmes as president in the name of the Bank. They certainly acted upon this belief, for in many instances they proceeded to obtain judgments against the Bank, after the maturity and dishonor of the paper so received upon these indorsements and guaranties, and in this proceeding proved their claims in that form by transcripts of such judgments. It is true that, in the final decrees, the master was directed to correct his computation of interest so as to equalize the claims of the creditors by allowing interest at a uniform rate from the time of the suspension upon the amounts as they appeared to be due from the books of the Bank, but all the claims in class D, notwithstanding the settlements made, were included in the amounts found due and ordered to be paid. In this respect we are of the opinion that the decree is erroneous. Those creditors who made settlements after the Bank was put into liquidation and received from the president in that settlement paper of the Bank, or as in some cases the individual notes of Holmes himself, indorsed or guaranteed in the name of the Bank, are not to be considered as creditors of the Bank entitled to subject the stockholders to individual liability. The individual liability of the stockholders, as imposed by and expressed in the statute, is indeed for all the contracts, debts and engagements of such association, but that must be restricted in its meaning to such contracts, debts and engagements as have been duly contracted in the ordinary course of its business. That business ceased when the Bank went into liquidation; after that there was no authority on the part of the officers of the Bank to transact any business in the name of the Bank so as to bind its shareholders, except that which is implied in the duty of liquidation, unless such authority had been expressly conferred by the shareholders. No such express authority appears in this case, and the power of the president or other officer of the Bank to bind it by transactions after it was put into liquidation is that which results by implication from the duty to wind up and close its affairs. That duty consists in the collection and reduction to money of the assets of the Bank, and the payment of creditors equally and ratably so far as the assets prove sufficient. Payments, of course, may be made in the bills receivable and other assets of the Bank in specie, and the title to such paper may be transferred by the president or cashier by an indorsement suitable to the purpose in the name of the Bank, but such indorsement and use of the name of the Bank is in liquidation and merely for the purpose of transferring title. It can have no other effect as against the shareholders by creating a new obligation. It does not constitute a liability, contract or engagement of the Bank for which they can be held to be individually responsible. Every creditor of the Bank, receiving its assets under such circumstances, knows the fact of liquidation, and is chargeable with knowledge of its consequences; he takes the assets received at his own peril; he is dealing with officers of the Bank only for the purpose of winding up its affairs. If he accepts something in lieu of an existing obligation looking to future payment it must be from other parties. It is not within the power of the officers of the Bank, without express authority, by such means to prolong indefinitely an obligation on the part of the shareholders, which is imposed by the statute only as a means of securing the payment of debts by an insolvent bank when it is no longer able to continue business, and for the purpose of effectually winding up its affairs. This is the very meaning of the word 'liquidation.'

It was proper for the circuit court, after the decision of this court, to permit the claim of the People's Bank to be re-examined, to ascertain whether it was a valid claim against the stockholders of the Manufacturers' Bank. It is true that, on the 31st of May, 1880, the People's Bank recovered in the circuit court a judgment against the Manufacturers' Bank for $67,277, in an action brought against the latter as guarantor of the eight notes; but, as the suit in which that judgment was recovered was not commenced until the 20th of October, 1876, more than three years after the Manufacturers' Bank went into liquidation, the judgment against the corporation was not binding on the stockholders in the sense that it could not be re-examined; and the transactions of August and September, 1874, also took place about a year after the Bank went into voluntary liquidation. Moss v. McCullough, 5 Hill, 181; Miller v. White, 50 N. Y. 187; McMahon v. Macy, 51 N. Y. 155; Tripps v. Huncheon, 82 Ind. 807.

When this judgment was rendered, on the 31st of May, 1880, the transactions of August and September, 1874, between the People's Bank and Holmes and Picket, were not known to the stockholders of the Manufacturers' Bank; and it is quite clear that they are entitled to go behind the record of that judgment and raise the question whether the guarantee of the Manufacturers' Bank was released as to them by the release of Picket, the principal debtor, whose notes were guaranteed by that Bank.

We are satisfied, on the evidence, that the consideration for the deed from Picket to Ira Holmes was that Picket should be released as maker of the notes held by the People's Bank, which the Manufacturers' National Bank had guaranteed. As to what is contained in the two papers dated September 2, 1874, the meaning of them is that the liability of the Manufacturers' National Bank as guarantor upon the eight notes of Picket should continue notwithstanding the release of the land from the Picket deed of trust by a sale under the power contained in that deed, in pursuance of the agreement made with Ira Holmes, and notwithstanding the release of Picket, as maker of the notes, from further liability upon them. The sale under the Picket trust deed was made simply to release the security, by placing the title in Holmes, and was not made for the purpose of paying the notes; and the agreement of Holmes, made after the Bank went into liquidation, to continue its guarantee upon the notes, a liability under which the People's Bank is now attempting to enforce against the stockholders, is not binding upon them, in view of what was said by this court in the case of Richmond v. Irons, before quoted.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, having been of counsel in Richmond v. Irons, took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.

WILLIAM A. STUART, Appt.,

v.

A. L. BOULWARE ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 73-82.)

Jurisdictional amount—when sufficient—counsel fees—compensation of receiver—discretionary.

1. On an appeal from a decree allowing compensation to a receiver and his counsel, the allowance to his counsel is to be added to the allowance to the receiver in determining the jurisdictional amount necessary to an appeal to this court.
2. Where one prosecutes a suit as a creditor, claiming more than $5,000 of a fund as applicable to a large amount of debts owned by him, that is sufficient amount to give this court jurisdiction.
3. Counsel fees are proper allowances to a receiver for counsel employed by him in the discharge of his duties.
4. Courts of equity may, in the absence of statutory rule, fix the compensation of their own receivers and that of counsel employed by them.
5. Like all questions of costs in courts of equity, such allowances are largely discretionary, and the action of the court below is, upon appeal, treated as presumptively correct.

[No. 1495.]

Submitted Jan. 6, 1890. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

APPEAL from a decretal order of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia making an allowance to the receiver of the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs Company and to counsel employed by him. Affirmed.

On motions to dismiss and affirm.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. Hallett Phillips, for motion:

The appeal cannot be entertained as to any of the defendants to whom an allowance less than $5,000 was made.

Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Waterman, 106 U. S. 270 (27:115); Hassall v. Wilcox, 115 U. S. 599 (29:504).

If a decree was several as to them, it was several as to their adversary.

Scheid v. Smith, 106 U. S. 190 (27:157); Gibson v. Shufeldt, 122 U. S. 27 (30:1083).

It is not shown in this case by the appellant that any of these allowances are excessive.

132 U. S.

Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 537 (26: 1163).

Messrs. John E. Kenna and M. F. Morris for appellant, opposed.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

William A. Stuart filed a bill against the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs Company and others in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of West Virginia, praying among other things for the appointment of a receiver, and upon the 18th day of April, 1888, A. L. Boulware of the City of Richmond, Virginia, was appointed by consent "receiver of all the estate, both real and personal, of the defendant company." He was required to give bond in the sum of $50,000, to make an inventory of the property upon taking possession, and to file it with the clerk of the court, to keep a full, clear and accurate statement of his acts and doings, and to render an account monthly. It was further ordered that "until further orders the defendant company shall be allowed to conduct its business of hotel-keeping as it may deem best for the interest of said company and its creditors, and its leases and contracts for the proper conduct of its business already made shall be allowed by the receiver to stand, but the receiver shall collect and account for the receipts of the company, allowing the said company all expenditures necessary economically to conduct its business, and shall report his receipts and allowances monthly to this court." The receiver gave bond and entered upon the discharge of his duties accordingly. It appears that the property at the time was leased as a hotel, but with the season of 1888 that lease terminated, and thereafter the receiver rented the property from year to year under the authority of the court. The rents for five successive seasons amounted to $100,000 and upwards, of which this record shows the receipt of more than $70,000 (including some amounts from sales), the disbursement by the receiver of more than $67,000, the subsequent receipt of something over $14,000; and that all of the rents had been received and accounted for except the receipts for the last season, the receipts and disbursements for that year having been reported to the court, but that report not appearing in this record. The record contains various petitions, reports and accounts, by the receiver, and orders thereon, and it is also shown that the receiver sold cattle, horses, wines and liquors belonging to the company, took various journeys with his counsel to Baltimore, New York and Parkersburg, and had litigation. In September, 1887, the Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs property, proper, and some other property of the company, was sold by special commissioners appointed by the court, for $830,700, to the complainant, Stuart.

On the 26th day of October, 1885, the receiver was "authorized to retain to his own use, out of any funds in his hands as such receiver and on account of his services, the sum of thirty-five hundred ($35,000) dollars, and he is further authorized to pay Leigh R. Page, esquire, the sum of eighteen hundred ($1,800) dollars on account of his services as counsel to said receiver."

On the 5th day of February, 1889, the receiver filed his petition, setting forth that during his said receivership, acting under authority from the court, he had rented out the property for five successive seasons for more than $100,000, all of which had been accounted for except the receipts from the last year's renting, and the receipts and disbursements for that year had been reported to the court, and that as soon as his report, which had been filed, had been acted upon by the court, which he asked might be speedily done, he was ready to submit his accounts to the auditor to examine and settle the same; that his duties as such receiver had terminated; that his services in that capacity had been arduous and exacting; that he had been allowed $8,500 on account for those services, and desired to settle with his counsel, Mr. Page, for professional services rendered to him with "diligence and fidelity during the whole of said receivership;" that $1,800 had been allowed said counsel under a special order in the fall of 1885, but he had, however, paid counsel $2,500. In consideration of the premises the receiver prayed the court to allow him and his counsel such further compensation as the court might deem reasonable and proper. The matter coming on to be heard upon this petition, and having been argued by counsel, the court ordered "that the sum of four thousand five hundred ($4,500) dollars be, and the same is hereby, allowed to the said Boulware in full compensation for his said services, and the sum of two thousand ($2,000) dollars be, and the same is hereby, allowed to the said Leigh R. Page in full compensation for his services as counsel to said receiver."

From this decretal order the complainant, Stuart, prayed an appeal to this court, which is now before us on a motion to dismiss or affirm. Counsel for appellees contends that these allowances should be taken separately, and as neither of them amounts to $5,000, that the appeal should be dismissed. On the other hand it is argued, and in this we concur, that if it were proper for the receiver to employ counsel, the allowance of reasonable counsel fees is to the receiver and not directly to the counsel, and that such fees would constitute only one of the items in the receiver's account; that the counsel had no cause of action, but the allowance was in legal effect to the receiver to enable him to make compensation for professional services. It is also insisted, as a second ground of dismissal, that Stuart prosecuted the suit as a creditor, "on behalf of himself and of other creditors of the company, who may come in and contribute to the costs of the suit, and that the record does not show that Stuart claims an interest sufficient in amount to give the court jurisdiction." But it appears from the record that Stuart claimed to be the holder and owner of a very large amount of the debts, which were first liens upon the property, and to which the surplus of the cash payment which would remain after paying the costs of suit and expenses of sale would be applicable; that the sale was for $830,700, and of that sum $88,070 was paid in cash, and that Stuart insisted that after deducting the costs of suit and expenses of sale therefrom, the larger part, if not the whole, of the balance, should be repaid to him, so that Stuart's interest as claimed might cover more than $5,000, if the disallowances should be sufficiently large. But while, therefore, we shall overrule the motion to dismiss, it is unquestionable that there was color for it, and that we can consider the motion to affirm in accordance with the rule on that subject.

The receiver is an officer of the court and subject to its directions and orders, and while, in the discharge of his official duties, he is at all times entitled to apply to the court for instruction and advice, he is also permitted to obtain counsel for himself, and counsel fees are considered as within the just allowances that may be made by the court. The order of October 26, 1885, recognizes the employment by the receiver of counsel in this litigation, although no specific original order giving that authority is found in the record. So far as the allowances to counsel are concerned, it is a mere question as to their reasonableness. Nor is there any doubt of the power of courts of equity to fix the compensation of their own receivers. That power results necessarily from the relation which the receiver sustains to the court, and, in the absence of any legislation regulating the receiver's salary or compensation, the matter is left entirely to the determination of the court from which he derives his appointment.

The compensation is usually determined according to the circumstances of the particular case, and corresponds with the degree of responsibility and business ability required in the management of the affairs intrusted to him, and the perplexity and difficulty involved in that management. Like all questions of costs in courts of equity, allowances of this kind are largely discretionary, and the action of the court below is treated as presumptively correct, "since it has far better means of knowing what is just and reasonable than an appellate court can have," as was remarked by Mr. Justice Bradley in Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527, 537 [26: 1157, 1162], where the subject is considered.

We find nothing in this record justifying us in arriving at the conclusion that these allowances were excessive. Considering the number of years covered by the receivership, the responsibility involved, the evident difficulties surrounding the receiver, and the amounts collected and disbursed, it would be going very far to hold the action of the circuit court to have been an abuse of discretion.

The motion to affirm will therefore be sustained, and it is so ordered.

THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ANDREW J. ITSELL ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 65-67.)

Review of state judgment—question of general law.

NOTE.—As to jurisdiction in the United States Supreme Court, where federal question arises or where are drawn in question statutes, treaties or Constitu-

1. This court has no jurisdiction to review a judgment of the highest court of a State, unless a federal question has been, either in express terms or by necessary effect, decided by that court against the plaintiff in error.
2. Where that court did not decide any question against the plaintiff in error, except the issue whether the former judgment rendered against it and in favor of the grantor of the defendants in error was a bar to this action, that was a question of general law only, in no wise depending upon the Constitution, treaties or statutes of the United States.

[No. 1506.]

Submitted Jan. 8, 1890. Decided Jan. 20, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment of that court affirming a judgment of the Superior Court of San Francisco in favor of defendants in an action of ejectment. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

The original action was ejectment, brought in the Superior Court of San Francisco by the City and County of San Francisco to recover a tract of land in San Francisco, of which the plaintiff alleged that it was seised in fee, and entitled to the possession, in trust for the use of the State of California and of the people of the City and County as a public plaza, park, common or square, and commonly known as Hamilton Square or Plaza.

It was duly pleaded in the answer, and found by the court (a trial by jury having been waived by the parties), as follows:

1st. In July, 1869, a compromise was agreed upon between the City and one Tompkins, who claimed this and other land, by which the officers of the City, under an ordinance of the board of supervisors, executed a conveyance of the land to Tompkins, and in consideration thereof Tompkins conveyed to the City the other land claimed by him. On February 19, 1870, the ordinance and conveyances were ratified and confirmed by Act of the Legislature of California. On July 28, 1869, Tompkins conveyed this land to one Palmer.

2d. On September 11, 1869, Palmer brought an action against the City, in a court of the State having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, alleging that he had the title in fee and the right of possession of this land, and that the City claimed an adverse interest, but had no title, interest or estate therein; the City appeared and denied his allegations, and the issue was decided in his favor, and it was adjudged that he was the lawful owner in fee simple absolute of the land, and that the City had no estate, right, title or interest therein, and be forever restrained and debarred from asserting any. That judgment remained in full force and effect. And on May 21, 1875, Palmer conveyed this land to one Hollis, from whom by mesne conveyances these defendants claimed title.

The superior court gave judgment for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court of California, which affirmed tion, see notes to Martin v. Hunter, Bk. 4, p. 97, to Matthews v. Zane, Bk. 2, p. 654, and to Williams v. Norris, Bk. 6, p. 571.

the judgment; and the plaintiff sued out this writ of error.

Opinions of the supreme court commissioners and of the Supreme Court of the State were filed in the case and copied in the record. The commissioners were of opinion that under the rule stated in Hoadley v. San Francisco, 50 Cal. 265; Sawyer v. San Francisco, 50 Cal. 370, and Hoadley v. San Francisco, 70 Cal. 330, and 124 U. S. 639 (31:553), the compromise could not be sustained, for want of power in the City to make it; but that the judgment pleaded was a bar, according to the decision in San Francisco v. Holladay, 76 Cal. 18. The supreme court was of opinion that the judgment should be affirmed, for the reasons given in the opinion of the commissioners. 22 Pac. Rep. 75.

Messrs. John L. Love, John B. M'Hoon and George Flournoy for plaintiff in error.
Messrs. Jarboe, Harrison & Goodfellow, William & George Leviston and Thos. D. Rior-dan, for defendants in error:

This court has no jurisdiction to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of California rendered herein.

Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 (28:400); Detroit R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 136 (29:118); DeSaussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 224 (32:129); Clark v. Penn., 128 U. S. 397 (32:487); Hoadley v. San Francisco, 94 U. S. 4 (24:34); Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 635 (22:429); San Francisco v. Holladay, 76 Cal. 18.

Upon a writ of error to a state court, which has affirmed several defenses to an action, either one of which, not involving a federal question, is sufficient to sustain its judgment, this court will affirm the judgment without considering a federal question involved in another defense, or expressing any opinion upon it, even though such question was wrongfully decided.

Jenkins v. Lowenthal, 110 U. S. 222 (28:129); McManus v. O'Sullivan, 91 U. S. 578 (23:390); Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 (28:400).

It is apparent that no federal question was decided by the state court, and that the decision of such a question was not necessary to the final decree rendered.

Adams Co. v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 112 U. S. 123 (28:678); Chapman v. Goodnow, 123 U. S. 548 (31:238); Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178 (32:654).

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

This court has no jurisdiction to review a judgment of the highest court of a State, unless a federal question has been, either in express terms or by necessary effect, decided by that court against the plaintiff in error. Rev. Stat. § 709; New Orleans Waterworks v. Louisiana Sugar Refining Co., 125 U. S. 18 [31:607]; DeSaussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216 [32:125]; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554 [38:442].

In the present case, the record of the pleadings, findings of fact and judgment shows that it was unnecessary for that court to decide, and its opinion filed in the case and copied in the record shows that it did not decide, any question against the plaintiff in error, except the issue whether the former judgment rendered against it and in favor of the grantor of the dependants in error was a bar to this action. That was a question of general law only, in no wise depending upon the Constitution, treaties or statutes of the United States. Chouteau v. Gibson, 111 U. S. 200 [28:400].

Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

LEWIS WALLACE, Appt.,

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 180-186.)

Minister to Turkey, salary of—statutes affecting it—construction of statutes.

1. By section 1675, Rev. Stat., as amended by the Act of March 3, 1875, an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey is entitled to $10,000 a year, unless such salary is otherwise specially provided for.
2. But the President having raised the grade of the legation to Turkey to a plenipotentiary mission by his appointment of claimant to such office in 1882, and Congress having, before the appointment, provided for the office an annual salary of $7,500, claimant can have no larger salary and cannot recover the difference between that sum and the sum of $10,000 provided by section 1675.
3. In the present case, the prior Statute, namely, section 1675 of the Revised Statutes, has no application, because a different compensation for the office was prescribed by law, before the President ever appointed, under his constitutional power, any such officer.

[No. 855.]

Submitted Jan. 10, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims dismissing a petition for a balance of moneys claimed to be due him on his salary as Minister Plenipotentiary to Turkey. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King, for appellant:

The doctrine, as applied to claims against the government, that a receipt in full operates in full satisfaction, applies only to cases of disputed claims subject to compromise, and has no application to the case of a salary fixed by law and insufficiently paid only through lack of the necessary funds owing to reduced appropriations by Congress.

United States v. Bostwick, 94 U. S. 53, 67 (24: 65, 66); United States v. Langston, 118 U. S. 389 (30: 164); Mitchell v. United States, 18 Ct. Cl. 281, 287, 288, reversed by this court on a different point; United States v. Mitchell, 109 U. S. 146 (27: 887).

Messrs. John B. Cotton, Assistant Atty-Genl., and Robert A. Howard, for appellee:

The policy of instituting foreign missions and appointing representatives is within the power of the executive alone; the power of determining the fitness of the person nominated is conjointly with the President and the Senate, and the compensation to be made is a matter for provision by Congress. The Court of Claims has so decided in several well considered cases.

Byers v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 59; Francis v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 408; Foots v. United States, 23 Ct. Cl. 443; United States v. Mitchell, 109 U. S. 146 (27: 887).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Claims, dismissing the petition in a suit brought by Lewis Wallace against the United States. The findings of fact were as follows:

"1. The claimant was, on the 13th day of July, in the year 1882, appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey, and held that office continuously from the time of said appointment till and including the 24th day of August, 1885. (Commission of claimant and letter of Secretary of State.)

"2. The Secretary of State, in the estimate of the appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the following fiscal years, made the following specific estimate for the salary of the representative in Turkey as follows, to wit:

"Turkey.

"Ministers resident in . . . Turkey at $7,500 each (for fiscal year ending June 30, 1883).

"Envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to . . . and to Turkey, $7,500 (for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884).

"Envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to . . . and to Turkey, $7,500 (for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885).

"Envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to Turkey, $7,500; additional submitted $2,500 (for fiscal year ending June 30, 1886).

"3. With his appointment or commission claimant also received the following notice from the Secretary of State:

"Department of State,

"Washington, July 21, 1882.

"Lew. Wallace, Esquire, etc., etc., etc.,

"Sir: Congress having recently raised the grade of the legation at Constantinople to a plenipotentiary mission, and the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, having appointed you to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Turkey, I beg to transmit herewith the following papers:

"The Act of Congress does not increase your compensation or contemplate other changes than as herein mentioned. You are referred to the personal instructions given you as minister resident, June 4, 1882, for the conduct of the business of the mission under your present appointment, and for the necessary expenditures incident to the maintenance of the legation at Constantinople."

"4. Claimant in his first account with the Treasury Department stated the same as follows:

"United States Government in acc't with Lew Wallace, minister plenipotentiary at Constantinople.

"To am't of my salary from July 1st, 1882, to 30th September, 1882, — months, at the rate of $7,500 per annum."

"The claimant charged and was allowed as said minister plenipotentiary, from July 13, 1882, to June 30, 1885, at the rate of $7,500 per annum, as shown above, by copy of first account.

"5. The compensation paid to the claimant, from the time of his appointment till and including the 30th of June, 1885, was at the rate stated in his accounts, to wit, at the rate of $7,500 per annum, and claimant's account stands closed upon the books of the treasury by payment in full.

"6. Claimant was minister resident and consul-general of the United States to Turkey at the date of his appointment as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary."

On the foregoing findings, the court decided, as matter of law, that the petition should be dismissed, under the decision of that court in the case of Francis v. United States, 22 Ct. Cl. 408.

On the 13th of July, 1882, when the claimant entered upon his duties as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey, section 1675 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the Act of March 8, 1875, chap. 153 (18 Stat. 483), was in force, reading as follows:

"Sec. 1675. Ambassadors and envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary shall be entitled to compensation at the rates following, per annum, namely:

"Those to France, Germany, Great Britain and Russia, each, seventeen thousand five hundred dollars.

"Those to Austria, Brazil, China, Italy, Japan, Mexico and Spain, each, twelve thousand dollars.

"Those to all other countries, unless where a different compensation is prescribed by law, each, ten thousand dollars.

"And unless when otherwise provided by law, ministers resident and commissioners shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of seventy-five per centum, chargés d'affaires at the rate of fifty per centum, and secretaries of legation at the rate fifteen per centum, of the amounts allowed to ambassadors, envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to the said countries respectively; except that the secretary of legation to Japan shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of twenty-five hundred dollars per annum.

"The second secretaries of the legations to France, Germany and Great Britain shall be entitled to compensation at the rate of two thousand dollars each per annum."

Under the provision of that section, an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey would be entitled to an annual compensation of $10,000, unless a different compensation was prescribed by law. Having received compensation at the rate of $7,500 per annum, the claimant brought suit for the difference between that sum and $10,000 per annum, for the time from July 13, 1882, to June 30, 1885.

The office of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey did not exist prior to July 1, 1882. Before that time, the diplomatic representative of the United States to Turkey was of the rank of a minister resident and consul-general, and the claimant held that office, at an annual salary of $7,500, when he was appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary.

By the Act of July 1, 1882, chap. 262 (22 Stat. 128), entitled "An Act Making Appropriations for the Consular and Diplomatic Service of the Government for the Fiscal Year Ending June Thirtieth, Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-Three, and for Other Purposes," it was provided "that the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated for the service of the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-three, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereinafter expressed, namely: . . .

"For salaries of envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary, as follows: To Chili and Peru, at ten thousand dollars each; to Turkey, seven thousand five hundred dollars; in all, twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars."

By the Act of February 26, 1883, chap. 86 (23 Stat. 424), entitled "An Act Making Appropriations for the Consular and Diplomatic Service of the Government for the Fiscal Year Ending June Thirtieth, Eighteen Hundred, and Eighty-Four, and for Other Purposes," it was provided "that the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated for the service of the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects herein expressed, namely: . . .

"For salaries of envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary, as follows: To Chili and Peru, at ten thousand dollars each; to Turkey, seven thousand five hundred dollars; in all, twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars."

By the Act of July 7, 1884, chap. 333 (23 Stat. 227), entitled "An Act Making Appropriations for the Consular and Diplomatic Service of the Government for the Fiscal Year Ending June Thirtieth, Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-Five, and for Other Purposes," it was provided "that the following sums be, and they are hereby, severally appropriated for the consular and diplomatic service of the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and eighty-five, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the objects hereinafter expressed, namely: . . .

"For salaries of envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to the United States of Colombia and Turkey, at seven thousand five hundred dollars each, fifteen thousand dollars."

No attempt was made by Congress, by those three Statutes or by any other statute, to create the office of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey; but, as Congress had, by the Act of July 1, 1882, made an appropriation of $7,500 to pay the salary of an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey, at the sum of $7,500 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, and had thus left it to the President to fill such office, if he chose to do so, under his constitutional power, the President exercised that power by appointing the claimant on the 13th of July, 1882.

By such provision of the Act of July 1, 1882, continued by the Acts of February 26, 1883, and July 7, 1884, a different compensation per annum from that of $10,000 was prescribed by law for the envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey, within the 183 U. S.

meaning of section 1675 of the Revised Statutes, before quoted. In view of the fact that the office of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey never had existed and never had been filled by any person prior to July 1, 1882, and of the fact that the first provision made by Congress for that office, in regard to its compensation, was for an annual salary of $7,500, that sum must be considered as then having been prescribed by Congress as the compensation for the officer who might be appointed to fill it. It was, therefore, the compensation prescribed by law as the annual compensation for that officer, and was a different compensation from that prescribed by section 1675 of the Revised Statutes; and, according to that section, the compensation could not be $10,000 a year.

The President raised the grade of the legation at Constantinople to a plenipotentiary mission by his appointment of the claimant as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey, on the 13th of July, 1882, and Congress provided for the office an annual salary of $7,500. The claimant could have no larger salary, and can recover nothing in this suit.

His counsel seek to apply to this case the doctrine laid down by this court in United States v. Langston, 118 U. S. 389 [30: 164]; but it has no application to the present case. In the Langston Case a prior statute had fixed the annual salary of a diplomatic officer at a designated sum, without limitation as to time. A subsequent statute appropriated a less amount for the services of the officer for a particular fiscal year, but contained no words which expressly or by implication modified or repealed the prior statute. In the present case, as has been shown, the prior Statute, namely, section 1675 of the Revised Statutes, has no application, because a different compensation for the office was prescribed by law before the President ever appointed, under his constitutional power, any such officer.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, ET AL., Appts.,

v.

THE CITY OF GALESBURG, ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 156-179.)

Water-works contract, right of City to rescind— inadequate remedy—danger to health and exposure to fire—right to take possession of water mains—conditional delivery—estoppel by resolution of City, and acts of officers and citizens—letters of officers and citizens—continuing obligation—condition precedent—guaranty.

NOTE.—As to mode of executing powers conferred on corporations, and what powers are not implied, see note to Beatty v. Knowler, Bk. 7, p. 813.

As to parol contracts of officers and agents of corporations, see note to Mechanics' Bank v. Bank of Columbia, Bk. 5, p. 100, and note to Bank of the Metropolis v. Guttschlick, Bk. 10, p. 335.

As to fiduciary position of directors, their contracts and dealings with corporations, see note to Kpehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. Bk. 17, p. 339.

1. Where water furnished by a water company for a City was unfit for use and inadequate for protection from fire, the City had a right, after the Company had had reasonable time to comply with its contract to supply pure and sufficient water, to treat the contract as terminated and to invoke the aid of a court of equity to enforce its rescission.
2. A suit for a specific performance of the contract, or a suit to recover damages for its non-performance, would be a wholly inadequate remedy in such a case.
3. The danger to the health and lives of the inhabitants of the City from impure water, and the continued exposure of the property in the City to destruction by fire from an inadequate supply of water, were public questions peculiarly under the care of the municipality; and it was entitled and bound to act with the highest regard for the public interests, and at the same time with due consideration for the rights of the other parties to the contract.
4. Where the City has contracted to sell the old water mains to the Company to be used in supplying water, the City has the right, upon the failure of the Company to comply with the contract, after ample time given, to retake possession of such mains for the use of the City to protect the City from fire.
5. The delivery of the old water mains being conditional, and made for a special purpose, and the conditions not having been performed, no title to them passed either to the Water Company or to the trustee under the mortgage, and the recaption of them by the City was lawful.
6. Although the purchasers of the bonds of the Water Company were influenced to purchase them by the resolution of the City to accept the water works, and by letters from officers and citizens of the City, yet the City was not thereby estopped from refusing to pay rental for the hydrants, which, by the terms of the mortgage given by the Company to secure the bondholders, was to be applied to pay interest on the bonds, nor from having the contract canceled.
7. The letters of the private citizens could not affect the City; and the letters from the officers of the City could not affect its rights, because they were not written by its authority or within the scope of their powers as its officers.
8. The obligation of the Company being a continuing obligation, the liability of the City to pay in future the hydrant rents depended, to the knowledge of the bondholders, upon the future compliance of the Water Company with its contract; and, in case of its failure, the City would have the right to ask for the rescission of the contract.
9. The continuance of the Water Company to furnish water according to the contract was not a condition subsequent but a condition precedent to its continuing right to use the streets of the City and to furnish water for a period of thirty years; and when, after a reasonable time, it had failed to comply with such condition, the City had a right to treat the contract as terminated, and to its rescission.
10. The City's resolution of acceptance of the works is not a guaranty to the bondholders that the Water Company would thereafter perform its contract for furnishing water in the quantity and of the quality called for by the ordinance.

[No. 887.]

Submitted Jan. 9, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

A PPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois annulling a contract made by the City of Galesburg for the supply of the City with water, and revesting and confirming in the City the property in certain water mains, and ordering the City to pay a reasonable sum for water used by it, and dismissing the supplemental and cross-bill. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 84 Fed. Rep. 675.

Messrs. Herbert B. Turner, David McClure and Arthur Ryerson, for appellants:

The ordinance in question was valid, and wholly within the scope of the City's corporate powers.

East St. Louis v. East St. Louis Gas L. & Co. 98 Ill. 415; Quincy v. Bull, 106 Ill. 387; Foster v. Joliet, 27 Fed. Rep. 899; Joliet v. Foster, *123 U. S. 639 (30:949).

The title of an Act can be referred to as indicating what was in the mind of the legislative power.

Meyer v. Western Car Co. 102 U. S. 1, 12 (26:59, 60); Hadden v. Barney, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 107 (18:518).

This contract is not a mere license, which the City could revoke at its pleasure. It is a grant of a property right.

Quincy v. Bull, 106 Ill. 387; Chicago v. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. 105 Ill. 78; Gallaher v. Herbert, 117 Ill. 160; Davis v. Gray, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 208 (21:447).

A fact admitted by a municipal corporation through its officer, duly and properly acting within the scope of his authority, is evidence against it.

Curnen v. New York, 79 N. Y. 511; Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484 (28:579); Whiting v. Wellington, 10 Fed. Rep. 810; Clark v. Washington, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 40 (6:544); Zabriskie v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co. 64 U. S. 28 How. 400, 401 (16:497, 498); O'Leary v. New York Board of Education, 98 N. Y. 1.

In the case of fraud, cancellation will not be decreed as against a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration and without notice.

2 Pom. Eq. § 918; Atlantic Delaine Co. v. James, 94 U. S. 207 (24:112); Grymes v. Sanders, 98 U. S. 55 (28:798); 2 Pom. Eq. §§ 776, 871; Foster v. Joliet, 27 Fed. Rep. 899; Joliet v. Foster, 123 U. S. 639 (30:942).

Mr. Frederick A. Willoughby, for appellee:

The contract is entire.

Chicago v. Sexton, 3 West. Rep. 455, 115 Ill. 241.

The City is not estopped by the letter of certain officers from insisting on a cancellation of the contract.

Dillon, Mun. Corp. (3d ed.) § 471; Louisiana State Bank v. New Orleans Nav. Co. 3 La. Ann. 294; Davies Co. v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 657 (29:1026); Merchants Exchange Nat. Bank v. Bergen County, 115 U. S. 884 (29:430); Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83 (28:360); St. Louis v. Gorman, 29 Mo. 598.

Nor is it estopped by reason of the passage of the resolution of acceptance.

Pickard v. Sears, 6 Ad. & El. 469; Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Exch. 662.

The party to be estopped must have intended the admission to be acted upon.

Howard v. Hudson, 2 El. & Bl. 9; Copeland v. Copeland, 28 Me. 540; Wilmington & B. Bank

v. Wollaston, 3 Harr. (Del.) 95; Rangeley v. Spring, 21 Me. 187; Hicks v. Cram, 17 Vt. 454; Kinney v. Farnsworth, 17 Conn. 360; Otis v. Still, 8 Barb. 108; Morgan v. Spangler, 14 Ohio St. 102; Kinney v. Whiton, 44 Conn. 262; Meyenborg v. Haynes, 50 N. Y. 675; Smith v. Newton, 88 Ill. 230.

Representations vague, inconclusive or matter of opinion work no estoppel.

Grinnan v. Dean, 62 Tex. 219.

Nor those regarding something in future.

Langdon v. Doud, 10 Allen, 433.

Nor those made in ignorance, unless culpably negligent.

Clinton v. Haddam, 50 Conn. 84; Jones v. Sasser, 1 Dev. & Batt. (N. C.) 464.

There must be privity between the party to be estopped and the party setting up the estoppel.

Deery v. Oray, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 795 (18: 658); Massure v. Noble, 11 Ill. 531; Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567 (29: 940).

There must be fraud, actual or constructive, to constitute an estoppel.

People v. Brown, 67 Ill. 435; Tillotson v. Mitchell, 111 Ill. 513.

A conditional sale passes no title even to innocent purchasers, especially where there has been a qualified delivery.

Boerett v. Hall, 67 Me. 497; Coggill v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 8 Gray, 545; Brown v. Haynes, 52 Me. 578; Smith v. Lynes, 5 N. Y. 44; Hughes v. Kelly, 40 Conn. 153; Hart v. Carpenter, 24 Conn. 427; Forbes v. Marsh, 15 Conn. 394; Heath v. Randall, 4 Cush. 196; Strong v. Taylor, 2 Hill, 328; Mills v. Wooters, 59 Ill. 234; Cooley, Torts, 50, 51.

There was no sale of the mains because there was not a two-thirds vote of the members elect of the council, and because yeas and nays were not entered on the city record.

Hurd's Rev. Stat. Ill. § 41, chap. 24; Barr v. Auburn, 89 Ill. 361; Spangler v. Jacoby, 14 Ill. 297; Morrison v. Lawrence, 98 Mass. 219.

The pretended contract was ultra vires and is void, so far as it is yet unexecuted.

Indianapolis v. Indianapolis Gas-Light & C. Co. 66 Ind. 396, and cases cited; Garrison v. Chicago, 7 Biss. 480; Gale v. Kalamazoo, 28 Mich. 344; East St. Louis v. East St. Louis G. L. & C. Co. 98 Ill. 415.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

The City of Galesburg, Illinois, a municipal corporation, by an ordinance of its city council, passed May 12, 1883, and approved by its mayor May 17, 1883, entitled "An ordinance providing for a supply of water to the City of Galesburg and its inhabitants, authorizing Nathan Shelton or assigns to construct and maintain water works, securing protection to said works, contracting with said Nathan Shelton or assigns for a supply of water for public use, and giving said City an option to purchase said works," granted a franchise to Shelton and his successors or assigns, for thirty years from the passage of the ordinance, to construct and maintain, within and near the City, water works for supplying it and its inhabitants and those of the adjacent territory "with water for public and private uses and to use the streets, alleys, sidewalks, public grounds, streams and bridges of the City of Galesburg, within its present and future corporate limits, for placing, taking up and repairing mains, hydrants and other structures and devices for the service of water."

Section 2 of the ordinance provided that there should be two pumping engines, having a specified capacity, a stand-pipe, and not less than eight miles of mains for the distribution of water, of a sufficient size to furnish all the water required for the wants of the City and its inhabitants, and limited the range in size of the mains. It also provided for a specified test of the mains at their place of manufacture, and for the character of the fire-hydrants to be rented by the City, and that there should be a test of the capacity of the water works on their completion, when Shelton or his assigns should "cause to be thrown from any six hydrants six simultaneous streams, each through fifty feet of two-and-one-half inch hose and a one-inch nozzle to a height of one hundred feet."

Section 4 provided that "the water supplied by said works shall be good, clear water, and the source of supply shall not be contaminated by the sewerage of said City."

Maximum rates for charges for water to consumers by Shelton or his assigns were specified.

Section 7 reserved to the City the right to purchase the water works, on certain conditions, at any time after the expiration of fifteen years from the passage and approval of the ordinance.

By section 8 it was provided that, in consideration of the benefits which would be derived by the City and its inhabitants from the construction and operation of the water works, and in further consideration of the water supply thereby secured for public uses, and as the inducement to Shelton or his assigns to accept the provisions of the ordinance and contract and to enter upon the construction of the water works, the franchises thereby granted to and vested in Shelton or his assigns should remain in force and effect for thirty years from the passage of the ordinance; and that, for the same consideration and as the same inducement, the City thereby rented of Shelton or his assigns, for the uses thereafter stated, eighty fire-hydrants of the character hereinbefore described, for the term of thirty years from the passage of the ordinance, and agreed to locate them promptly along the lines of the first eight miles of mains within the city limits, under direction of the city council, as soon as Shelton or his assigns should have located the line of the mains under the direction of the city engineer. The City further agreed to pay rent for the eighty hydrants, to Shelton or his assigns, at the rate of $100 each per year, and to pay rent at the same rate for any additional fire-hydrants, up to one hundred, directed by the city council to be erected, and certain specified rates for additional hydrants over one hundred, such rent to be paid in half-yearly installments, in January and July of each year, beginning from the date when each of the hydrants should be in successful operation, and to continue during the thirty years, unless the City should sooner become the owner of the water works, provided that it should not be liable for any hydrant rents for such time as the works should not be able to supply the required amount of water.

It was also provided by section 13, that the ordinance should become binding, as a contract, upon the City, on the filing with the mayor of Shelton's written acceptance of its terms and conditions, and that, after such acceptance, the ordinance should constitute a contract, and should be the measure of the rights and liabilities of the City and of Shelton or his assigns.

On the 16th of May, 1888, Shelton and John C. Stewart, then mayor of the City, executed the following contract: "It is agreed that Nathan Shelton shall purchase of the City of Galesburg all the ten and six-inch water mains now laid in the streets of said City that he can use in the water works he proposes to build in said City, at the price that it will cost him to buy and lay new mains, less the depreciation in value of said pipes, which depreciation is to be determined by Mr. Shelton and the finance and water committee of the council of said City, and less the cost of relaying, recaulking and repairing said mains, should they have to be taken up, relaid, recaulked or repaired, and less the cost of recutting for cross-connections, and the City agrees to sell to Mr. Shelton, in case he shall erect his proposed water works as above, and deduct the pay for the same from the first hydrant water-works rent accruing from said City to said Shelton. This agreement for the sale of water mains does not include any mains that are imperfect. It is further agreed that said mains now in use shall not be disturbed further than shall be necessary to cut and make connections with said pipes, until the pipes are laid and ready for use in the adjacent streets."

On the 17th of May, 1888, the mayor signed the ordinance, and on the 19th of May, 1888, at the meeting of the city council, the following communication from Shelton was received and ordered to be filed: "Hon. John C. Stewart, Mayor of the City of Galesburg: I hereby accept the terms and conditions of the ordinance of said City entitled 'An ordinance providing for a supply of water to the City of Galesburg and its inhabitants, authorizing Nathan Shelton or assigns to construct and maintain water works, securing protection to said works, contracting with said Nathan Shelton or assigns for a supply of water for public use, and giving said City the option to purchase said works,' passed by the city council of said City May 12th, 1888, to all intents and for the purposes as by the 13th section of said ordinance I am to do. Nathan Shelton." The contract between Shelton and the mayor for the purchase by Shelton of the water mains from the City was thereupon approved by the city council.

Shelton then organized a joint-stock corporation, under the General Law of the State of Illinois, under the name of the Galesburg Water Company, with a capital stock of $150,000, of which stock Shelton owned the amount of $147,500. Shelton became its president, and on the 20th of July, 1888, by an instrument in writing, assigned to it all the franchises, rights, privileges, contracts and agreements granted to or made with him by the City by the aforesaid ordinance, and authorized the Company to receive all rentals to become due from the City for fire-hydrants pursuant to the ordinance, as well as all other profits which might accrue from the erection of water works thereunder.

On the 20th of June, 1888, the City of Galesburg filed a bill in equity against the Galesburg Water Company in the Circuit Court of Knox County, Illinois, making the following averments: Prior to the 30th of April, 1888, the City had established a system of water works for its protection from fire, and for that purpose had purchased and laid down water mains in certain specified streets, which mains were supplied with water for fire purposes by two manufacturing companies, each of which had its pumps and machinery for furnishing water connected with the mains. Such system was at that date in full operation and able at all times to supply ample protection for the City in case of fire. The ordinance before mentioned was passed and approved, the contract of May 16, 1888, was made, and the acceptance of the ordinance by Shelton was received and filed. The Galesburg Water Company was created and organized, and Shelton assigned to it his rights under the ordinance. The Company erected engine-houses, placed boilers and engines therein, erected a stand-pipe and sunk a well. On the 1st of December, 1888, the City received notice from Shelton of his assignment to the Company of his rights under the ordinance, and also a like notice from the Company, with a further notice that the hydrants were in successful operation and ready for use; and the city council thereupon ordered a test to be made of the water works on the 6th of December, 1888. On that day Shelton caused to be turned on six streams of water simultaneously, each through fifty feet of hose with a nozzle attached thereto, to a considerable height, in the main street of the City. Afterwards, and on the same day, the city council passed the following resolution: "Whereas the water works have been completed according to contract, and the test required by the ordinance concerning water works, passed May 12, 1888, has this day been satisfactorily made by the Galesburg Water Company: Therefore, resolved, that the City accept said water works from said Company." The Company thereafter made various efforts to supply the City with water in the quantity and of the quality called for by the ordinance, but failed to do so, although full opportunity therefor was afforded by the City. The water furnished was filthy in character, polluted by drainage from slaughter-houses and other offal, stagnant and wholly unfit for use, unhealthy and dangerous to life. On the 1st of June, 1889, an ordinance was passed by the city council in the following terms: "Section 1. That the ordinance entitled 'An ordinance providing for a supply of water to the City of Galesburg and its inhabitants, authorizing Nathan Shelton, or assigns, to construct and maintain water works, securing protection to said works, contracting with said Nathan Shelton, or assigns, for a supply of water for public use, and giving said City an option to purchase said works,' passed May 12th, 1888, be, and hereby is, repealed. All rights and privileges therein granted or thereby permitted are null. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage." That ordinance was approved by the mayor on the 10th of June, 1885, and on the next day a copy of it was served on the Company, with a notice that all privilege of purchasing the water mains belonging to the City was considered by the City to be at an end, and that it claimed the right and title to the mains.

The bill waived an answer on oath, and prayed for a decree that the contract contained in the ordinance of May 12, 1883, and the agreement of May 16, 1888, be set aside; that all rights conferred by the ordinance and contract upon Shelton or his assigns, or the Company, be decreed to be annulled; and that all right to purchase the water mains from the City be canceled.

The Company answered the bill, setting up facts in justification of its acts and denying the right of the City to relief. The answer also set up that, on the 1st of August, 1883, the Company executed to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of the City of New York, a New York corporation, a mortgage to that Company, as trustee for the holders of one hundred and twenty-five bonds of the Water Company, each for $1,000, bearing that date, the principal payable in thirty years, with semi-annual interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, covering all the water works, franchise, contract, machinery, mains and appurtenances belonging to the Water Company; that the mortgage was duly recorded in the proper county; that the bonds were bought by parties on the faith of the mortgage and the acceptance of the works by the City, subsequently to such acceptance; that such mortgage was a valid and subsisting lien on the contract between the City and the Water Company; and that the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and the bondholders were necessary parties to the suit.

Under a petition filed in the court February 12, 1886, by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, an order was made allowing it to be made a party; and on the 24th of February, 1886, it filed a petition for the removal of the cause into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois. The cause was removed and thereafter proceeded in the said circuit court.

On the 22d of April, 1886, the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company filed an answer to the bill, setting up, among other things, that the amount found to be due to the City for the water mains sold by it was duly fixed and settled between the City and the Water Company, and the balance found due from the Water Company was credited to the City upon its indebtedness to the Water Company for water rents under the ordinance, and the mains were transferred to and taken possession of by the Water Company, and operated by it as a part of its water system. It also set up that the property mortgaged to it by the Water Company, to secure the bonds, included the franchises and rights granted by the City to the Water Company and covered by the ordinance passed May 12, 1883, and also the water mains which had been bought by the Water Company from the City prior to the execution of the mortgage and the bonds; that the holders of the bonds were ignorant of the nature and quality of the water supply of the water works, except as the same were represented to the bondholders by the City and the Water Company at the time of the execution of the mortgage and the sale of the bonds, and supposed, from such representations, that the water supply was ample and that the water works were satisfactory and in successful operation; that, before the negotiation and sale of any of the bonds, the purchasers of them were furnished with certified copies of the ordinance and of all the resolutions of the common council regarding the same, and with copies of the contracts and resolutions between the City and Shelton and the Water Company in regard to the purchase of the water mains, and with copies of the acceptance and assignment by Shelton of all his rights in the ordinance and mains to the Water Company; that it was represented to the bondholders by the City and its officials that the ordinance constituted a valid and binding contract between the City and the Water Company, according to its terms, and that the Company had become the owner of all the water mains; that it was further represented to the bondholders, by the City and its officials and by the Water Company, that that Company was in successful operation and furnishing water to the City and its inhabitants under the terms of the ordinance; that, on the faith of such representations and statements, the owners of the bonds up to the amount of $125,000 purchased the same in good faith and for a valuable consideration, in and about January, 1884; that the bonds were outstanding and unpaid; that the Water Company had failed to pay the interest on the bonds, and it was in default, and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company had filed a bill in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois against the Water Company, to foreclose the mortgage; that the City, in June, 1885, had forcibly taken possession of the water mains; that it had repudiated its liabilities under the ordinance and refused to pay the water rent under the same, whereby the mortgaged property was made almost valueless; that the City, by reason of such statements and representations, was estopped, as against the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, from denying the validity of the ordinance, or the sale of the water mains; that, by reason of the mortgage and the bonds secured under it, the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company had a valid lien upon the ordinance and franchise, and upon the water mains as well as all other property of the Water Company; and that it denied the right of the City to rescind the ordinance, to repudiate the sale of the water mains, and to have any of the relief claimed in the bill, as against the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

A replication was filed to this answer on the 8d of May, 1886, and on a petition filed November 29, 1886, by Hardin Parrish, Ephraim W. Bond and R. Dale Benson, to be made parties defendant, an order was that day entered making them parties and giving leave to them to file a cross-bill. On the same day they filed an answer to the bill, adopting all the statements of the answer of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and also filed a supplemental and cross-bill against the City, two of them being citizens of Pennsylvania and one of them a citizen of Massachusetts.

That bill averred, among other things, as follows: A foreclosure suit by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company was brought November 4, 1886, a decree of foreclosure and sale was made in it June 21, 1888, and thereunder all the rights, property and franchises of the Water Company were purchased by the plaintiffs for $100,000, and, after a confirmation of the sale by the court, a deed of the property was executed by the master to them, November 8, 1888, so that they became its owners. They adopted, as a part of their supplemental and cross-bill, the answer of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to the bill filed by the City. Among the property sold to them under the foreclosure sale were the water mains which, when the mortgage was executed, were connected with and a part of the system of the Water Company and operated by it, the same having been before that time sold by the City to the Water Company. In June, 1886, the City took forcible possession of the water mains and cut and destroyed the connection of the same with the other mains of the Water Company, and took up and carried away the hydrants and faucets of the Water Company connected therewith, and entirely deprived that Company of the use of the same, and had ever since retained possession thereof and deprived the Water Company, and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and the plaintiffs, of the use and possession of them. Without such mains the property purchased by the plaintiffs is almost, if not entirely, valueless, and cannot be operated, because the connection of the water mains had been cut and destroyed and the hydrants removed, and thus the plaintiffs were prevented from using and operating any of the property so purchased by them, and from furnishing water to private consumers and also to the City. The plaintiffs are ready and willing to operate the works and furnish water to the City or to private consumers, and would do so were they not prevented by the acts of the City. It is the intention of the plaintiffs, and they have the right, to extend the operation of the water system of the City and the mains thereof so as to cover the entire limits of the City, and also to extend the base of water supply so as to furnish always an abundant supply of good water for the needs of the City and of the private consumers therein, and there is an abundant supply of good water accessible for the water works and procurable by the plaintiffs, which it is their intention and they are ready to procure and supply. There is a large amount of money owing to the plaintiffs from the City for water rents earned by the Water Company or its receiver up to the time of the purchase by the plaintiffs, the claims for which passed to the plaintiffs by virtue of the sale, and also on account of the contract and water rents since the sale, and also on account of the acts of the City in cutting and destroying the water mains and taking possession of the same and preventing the plaintiffs from using them and from operating the water works.

The prayer of the supplemental and cross-bill, which waives an answer on oath, is that an accounting be had between the plaintiffs and the City to ascertain the amount due to the former; that a decree be made for its payment, and that the City restore to the plaintiffs the water mains, hydrants, faucets and other property, and be enjoined from interfering with the plaintiffs in the possession thereof and in connecting the water mains with any of the other water mains belonging to them, and from violating any of the provisions of the ordinance passed May 12, 1888, and from interfering with the plaintiffs in the use of any of the property so purchased by them, and from collecting the water rents, or extending the water mains through any of the streets of the City, or extending the source of supply for the water works.

The City, on the 21st of December, 1886, answered the supplemental and cross-bill, denying the right of the plaintiffs in it to relief. A replication was filed to the answer of Parrish and others, and the court, on the 2d of April, 1887, made an order referring the case to John I. Bennett, as master, to take proofs and report the evidence, with his findings and conclusions thereon.

Voluminous proofs were taken before a special examiner and also some before the master, and the case was argued before the latter. On the 18th of May, 1887, he filed his report. It stated that some of the water-works bonds were sold at various times from the spring of 1884 to May, 1886, those bonds being represented in the litigation principally by the cross-plaintiffs Parrish, Bond and Benson. The master arrived at the following conclusions:

(1) The City had express authority by its charter to pass the ordinance of May 12, 1888, and to fix the rates of water rents for a period not exceeding thirty years; and it became binding on the City, and on Shelton, and was duly assigned by the latter to the Water Company.

(2) In view of the provisions of the ordinance, that the object for which the franchise was granted was expressed to be "for supplying the said City and the inhabitants thereof and of the adjacent territory with water for public and private uses;" that "the works shall be increased in capacity as the growth of the City and its needs require;" that "there shall be not less than eight miles of mains for the distribution of water in said City, of a sufficient size to furnish all the water required for the wants of said City and its inhabitants;" that "the water supplied by said works shall be good, clear water, and the source of supply shall not be contaminated by the sewerage of said City;" that Shelton or his assigns "shall with due diligence increase the steam and furnish fire pressure so long as needed for the extinguishment of any fire;"—it was manifest that the purpose of the ordinance was to furnish a fire protection to the City and its inhabitants, and to furnish water for other public uses, for the flushing of sewers, for the use of the city hall and its offices, for public schools, churches and public fountains, and also for the use of the inhabitants, upon rates fixed in the ordinance, for mechanical and domestic purposes.

(3) The contract of Shelton as to the quantity and quality of the water was in the nature of a condition precedent to a performance on the part of the City, except as to the opportunity to Shelton and his assigns to construct the works.

(4) The contract on the part of the City was a grant of the right to maintain the works for thirty years; the right to use the public property of the City in constructing or repairing the works; the right to collect maximum annual rates for water used for private purposes; an agreement to pay for the use of hydrants, of a defined number, a fixed rate per hydrant, as rent for thirty years, and the right to adopt rules for the supply of water and to enforce their conditions when not contrary to law,—such rights acquired by Shelton and his assigns being dependent upon performance by Shelton and his assigns of his agreements. There was added the mutual agreement that after the expiration of fifteen years the City might purchase the water works.

(5) The contract contained in the ordinance was an entire one, and was not executed by a partial performance or by a performance as to one of the several essential undertakings on the part of Shelton and his assigns; and they assumed all the risk of obtaining a water supply sufficient in quantity and quality to comply with their contract.

(6) Although the Water Company constructed the building, machinery for pumping, stand-pipe and water mains and their attachments, within the time limited and in compliance with the terms of the ordinance, prior to December 6, 1888, it failed to furnish a water supply which complied with the requirements of the ordinance either in quantity or quality, either before or after the expiration of the limit prescribed in the contract for the construction and successful completion of the works. The details of this failure, as founded on the evidence, are given at length by the master, his conclusion being that the fact is established that the waters furnished by the Water Company were never pure, clear waters, nor furnished in the required quantity, but were always more or less contaminated by substances injurious to health and comfort, and which would naturally be derived from the sources from which the water supply was shown to have been obtained. Therefore, waiving the legal effect which the resolution of December 6, 1888, might have had as an estoppel upon the City, the Water Company, at no time, either before or after the fifteen months following May 17, 1888, furnished water to the City and its inhabitants in the quantity and of the quality required by the ordinance, and at no time complied with the ordinance and the contract.

(7) The resolutions passed by the common council on the 6th of December, 1888, were an estoppel against the City to deny the facts alleged in those resolutions and the City was bound to know that the Water Company might execute a mortgage upon its property and franchises to secure the bonds; and the council intended by the resolutions, so far as Shelton and the Water Company were concerned, to foreclose the question as to the amount of water mains which the latter had placed in the streets, the character of the structures which they had erected, the machinery which they put in place, and generally the mechanical execution of the contract, and also the question that they had complied with the test provided in the ordinance, so far as related to throwing fire-streams of the number and character required; but the test provided for in the ordinance was merely a test of sufficiency for fire service, and was designed to determine the time when the water rents for the use of the hydrants should commence, and could not be a test as to the quantity of water capable of being supplied by the works every twenty-four hours, much less a test of the goodness and purity of the water. Whether or not the Water Company was able to furnish the required quantity of water every twenty-four hours, and whether or not its quality as to purity and goodness for domestic and other uses was in compliance with the ordinance, must rest upon facts as proved to exist. Moreover, the estoppel, so far as it did exist, was not a continuing one. The obligation of the Water Company to furnish the quantity and quality of water required by the contract was a continuing obligation, and was not met once for all by a compliance with the fire test of December 6, 1888. The right of the Company to enjoy the consideration of the contract was thereafter to depend upon its continuing to perform it. There was not, and could not be, a final and absolute acceptance of the water works by the City, without regard to a future compliance on the part of the Water Company with the requirements of the contract. The case was not one of works constructed for the City and to become its property upon acceptance; and the acceptance related merely to the sufficiency of the structures for fire service at the time.

(8) The agreement in regard to the purchase from the City of the water mains, and the contract formed by the ordinance and its acceptance, must be considered as one contract and construed together, and the agreement in regard to the water mains did not constitute an absolute sale of them, except on the compliance on the part of Shelton and his assigns with the conditions contained in the agreement itself in regard to the water mains. The City was not at any time to be deprived of the fire service of which the mains were a part, and they were not to be disturbed until Shelton or the Water Company were able to connect their works with those mains and continue the efficiency of the service by the new works when in successful operation; and the successful erection of those works and the accomplishment of the things required by the ordinance were a condition to the sale of the mains. The agreement as to the mains was therefore a conditional contract, and such delivery as was made under it was a conditional delivery. The City's mains were never disturbed in its streets, except to the extent of making connections with the mains subsequently laid by the Water Company and the attachment of some new hydrants. The valuation of the mains and the adoption of such valuation by the council amounted to no more than if their value had been stated at a definite sum in the agreement in regard to them. The letter of the mayor, written, in fact, after his term of office had expired, and antedated, stating that the mains had been delivered by the City to the Water Company, was of no effect; and, even if it had been written by him during his term of office, it was simply the expression of a legal opinion, and was not within the line of his official duty, without especial authority from the council.

(9) After the passage of the ordinance of June 1, 1885, rescinding the contract between the City and the Water Company, the City forcibly disconnected its mains from the system of mains laid by the Water Company, and restored the system of fire protection which it had enjoyed before the Water Company constructed its works.

(10) The period within which the Water Company was required to complete its works and put them in successful operation expired in August, 1884. It failed to comply with its contract, and acknowledged that failure. It then resorted to the sinking of gang wells, which it completed in November, 1884; but they also failed as a source of supply. The City showed great patience and forbearance, and waited more than eight months after August, 1884, and then passed the repealing ordinance of June 1, 1885.

(11) The recaption of the mains, which were only conditionally in the possession of the Water Company under a conditional sale, and which conditions had not been complied with by Shelton and his assigns, was therefore rightful; and the Water Company can have no right to restitution, nor had it any legal right to a further extension of time for further experiments in respect to a new source of water supply.

(12) As to the question whether the plaintiffs in the cross-suit are entitled to any relief which could not be granted to the Water Company, the effect of the decree, sale and deed in the foreclosure suit was to vest in the purchasers at the sale the equitable interest of the trustee and of the bondholders and all the legal interest of the Water Company. Before the decree, the bill of foreclosure had been dismissed as against the City, and its interests were in no manner affected by the foreclosure. The foreclosure suit, having been initiated and brought to a conclusion while the present suit of the City against the Water Company was pending, was, as to this suit, a proceeding pendente lite; but the plaintiffs in the cross-suit stand as the representatives of the bondholders, and the equities of the latter should be considered in fixing the terms of the decree. The bondholders, as between them and the Water Company, were bona fide purchasers of the bonds. The Water Company and its agents holding the bonds for sale in 1884 and 1885, prior to May 20, 1885, represented that the works of the Water Company were in successful operation, and that it had complied, when the bonds were sold, with all the conditions of its contract with the City; and, the bonds being negotiable, there was no proof of any notice to any of their purchasers which would affect their validity. The bonds and the mortgage, however, were in no sense obligations of the City, nor was it a party to their issue; and it did not become in any manner responsible for any part of the debt created by the bonds. The letters written by the city engineer, the city attorney, the chairman of the water committee, the mayor of the City and perhaps other officers cannot operate as an estoppel on the City, because they were not written in pursuance of direct authority and were not within the official duty of those officers. They tend, however, to show the bona fides of the purchases made by the bondholders; and the plaintiffs in the cross-suit cannot have imputed to them the actual bad faith which may be inferred as against Shelton and the Water Company in regard to the construction of the works, the water supply and the management of the affairs of the Water Company. They can have, however, no greater right than the Water Company would have had to be restored to the possession of the City's mains, and to be permitted by the City to further experiment in regard to securing a supply of water and complying with the contract.

(13) The City never paid any interest upon the bonds. The first payment of interest was made by the Water Company, and the fact of such payment was made known to some of the purchasers before they would purchase the bonds. The mortgage provided for the direct payment of hydrant rents to the trustee, to be applied in payment of interest; but no payment was ever thus made by the City to the trustee. That fact was known to the trustee, and, it being the agent of the bondholders, such knowledge was imputable to them. The Water Company afterwards defaulted in the payment of interest, and the foreclosure proceedings were had upon the basis of a default made in the payment of the interest due February 1, 1885. The bondholders knew or were chargeable with knowledge that there was a default in the payment of interest early in 1885 and a long time before June 1, 1885; and they also had knowledge of the existence of trouble between the City and the Water Company.

(14) There was a clause in the mortgage providing that if the Water Company should fail to perform any of its agreements contained in the mortgage it should be lawful for the trustee to take possession of the mortgaged property and operate it as a mortgagee in possession, for the benefit of the bondholders, and during such possession to make all needful repairs and replacements in the mortgaged property, and to receive the rents and profits therefrom until foreclosure. This could have been done at least as early as February, 1885, when there was a default in the payment of interest. The trustee, and the bondholders for whom it was acting, failed to take such possession; and the plaintiffs in the cross-suit are not entitled to the relief prayed in their cross-bill, while the City is entitled to have the ordinance of May 12, 1883, annulled.

(15) The decree canceling the franchise ought not to be unconditional, however, but should be conditioned that the City, or some person or corporation authorized by it, should pay into court, for the use of the plaintiffs in the cross-suit, the reasonable cash value of the mains constructed by the Water Company, the machinery, the stand-pipe, the engine-house, the land on which the same are located and perhaps other property, to be ascertained by a master, and also an equitable amount in satisfaction of water rents.

The City excepted to this report, and the trustee also excepted to it. The case was heard before Judge Gresham, and his opinion is reported in 34 Fed. Rep. 675. He concurred generally with the master in his views of the case, and said: "The purchasers of the bonds knew that unless water was furnished in quantity and quality as called for by the contract nothing would be due from the City for water rents. A different ruling would be equivalent to holding that by adopting the resolution of December 6, 1888, the City guaranteed the payment of interest which would thereafter accrue on the bonds. The City did nothing of the kind, nor is it believed that the purchasers of the bonds invested their money believing that this resolution amounted to such guaranty. By the trust deed or mortgage the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and the bondholders succeeded to the rights of the Water Company. If this were a suit between the City and the Water Works Company I should grant the relief prayed for without allowing anything for water furnished, for none was furnished in compliance with the contract. But the controversy now is between the City and persons representing the bondholders, and I think it equitable that the City should pay them a reasonable compensation for the water which was furnished up to the time it resumed possession of the old mains. I do not think the bondholders' committee is entitled to the old mains. They were not sold to Shelton unconditionally and absolutely. They were sold to him to be used in a particular way and for a particular purpose, and to be paid for by water furnished under the terms of the contract. Shelton and his successor, the Water Company, having failed to comply with the contract, although afforded ample time to do so, the City was authorized to resume possession of its old mains and protect its inhabitants as best it could against fire."

On the 2d of May, 1888, the court entered a decree adjudging that the contracts granting the franchise to Shelton and his assigns and providing for the sale of the water mains, and the ordinance of May 12, 1883, and all rights, franchises and privileges granted thereunder, were annulled and canceled, and the property in the water mains was revested and confirmed in the City; dismissing the supplemental and cross-bill of Parrish, Bond and Benson; ordering the City to pay to them a reasonable sum for water used from December 1, 1883, to June 1, 1885, and referring it to a master to ascertain such sum; and dividing the costs of the suit equally between the City and the plaintiffs in the cross-suit. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and the plaintiffs in the cross-suit prayed an appeal to this court from that decree.

The master, on the 13th of June, 1888, reported the sum to be paid, as the value of the use of the water, at $3,000. The plaintiffs in the cross-suit excepted to this report, and on the 18th of June, 1888, the court overruled their exceptions, confirmed the report, and directed the City to pay into court for the use of the plaintiffs in the cross-suit the sum of $3,000. From that decree, and from the prior decree of May 2, 1888, the plaintiffs in the cross-suit and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company prayed an appeal to this court.

The appellants urge that the circuit court erred (1) in not dismissing the bill for want of equity, because the conditions of the contract were conditions subsequent; (2) in not holding that the City was estopped by the resolution of December 6, 1883; (3) in not dismissing the bill on the merits, on the ground that the Water Company was not in default; (4) in holding that the City had a right to repossess itself of the old mains which it had sold to Shelton and through him to the Water Company; (5) in not granting the prayer of the cross-bill; and (6) in not sustaining the exceptions of the appellants to the first report of the master, and particularly those to his findings respecting the nature and scope of the contract.

It is quite clear, on the proofs, that the water furnished by the Water Company for the period of about nine months during which its works were operated was unfit for domestic purposes; that the course of the City was entirely forbearing and generous towards the Water Company; and that after the gang wells were completed in November, 1884, the supply of water was inadequate for the protection of the City from fire, and its quality was but little better than it was before the construction of the gang wells. After they were constructed the water distributed to the customers of the Company was surface water mixed with water from the gang wells. The Company was at no time able to furnish even bad water in the quantity required by the contract, or needed by the City for fire protection or for flushing the sewers. During the eighteen months which elapsed after the completion of the works, the Company had ample time to comply with the contract, and the City was under no obligation to give it further time to experiment. The taking possession by the City of the old water mains, after the passage of the resolution of June 1, 1885, was necessary for the protection of the City from fire. It could not continue, after annulling the contract, to receive from the Water Company water for fire purposes. The contract for the sale of the old mains was a part of the contract with the City in relation to the water works. The two agreements constituted one contract. The contract for the sale was merely a contract to sell, and not an executed contract of sale. The delivery of the old water mains was conditional, and made for a special purpose; and, the conditions not having been performed, no title to them passed either to the Water Company or to the trustee under the mortgage, and the recaption of them by the City was lawful. By the contract for their purchase, both what mains were to be purchased and the price to be paid for them remained to be determined, and so the agreement was executory. It was also by its terms conditional; and the delivery, too, was conditional, for a specific purpose, and without any intention that the City should, by the making of the agreement, part with its title to the mains.

In regard to the rights of the bondholders, although the purchasers of the bonds may have been influenced to purchase them by the terms of the resolutions of December 6, 1883, and by the letters from the officers and citizens of the City introduced in evidence, the City was not thereby estopped from refusing to pay the rental for the hydrants, which by the terms of the mortgage was to be applied in payment of the interest on the bonds, or from having the contract canceled. Although the bondholders exercised good faith in purchasing the bonds, they bought them knowing that the City was not a party to them, and that the payment of water rents by the City for the hydrants depended upon a continued compliance by the Water Company with the terms of the contract. The letters of the private citizens could not affect the City; and the letters from the officers of the City could not affect its rights, because they were not written by its authority or within the scope of their powers as its officers.

The scope of the resolution of December 6, 1883, accepting the works, extended only to the fact that the provisions of the ordinance respecting their construction had been complied with and the test required by the ordinance had been satisfactorily made. It covered only the physical existence and condition of the artificial structures. The contract extended, however, to the amount of water which the works should be able actually and permanently to supply, and the character of the water to be supplied, all of which was uncertain, and the risk of which was assumed by Shelton and his assigns, their obligation being a continuing obligation, and their right to the continued enjoyment of the consideration for it being dependent upon their continuing to perform it. There was in the resolution of December 6, 1883, no guaranty that the Water Company could or would in the future comply with its contract. The liability of the City to pay in future the hydrant rents depended upon the future compliance of the Water Company with its contract; and in case of its failure the City would have the right to ask for the rescission of the contract. This the bondholders knew when they purchased the bonds. The City entered into no contract with them, and the passage of the resolution of December 6, 1883, could not deprive the City of the relief to which it would otherwise be entitled, on the failure of the Water Company to comply with its contract. The provisions of the ordinance requiring the Water Company to furnish the amount of water called for by it, and that the water supplied by the works should be good, clear water, and the source of supply not be contaminated by the sewerage of the City, were known to the bondholders when they purchased the bonds, and they also knew that the payment of the hydrant rents which would go to pay the interest on the bonds must depend upon the furnishing of water by the Water Company according to the contract.

Nor could the test required by the ordinance and satisfactorily made by the Water Company be a test of anything but the pressure power of the works. It could not be a test of the quantity of water which would thereafter be supplied by the works, nor of its continuing quality for domestic purposes. The resolution of acceptance cannot be considered as a guaranty to the bondholders that the Water Company would thereafter perform its contract for furnishing water in the quantity and of the quality called for by the ordinance. The bondholders were bound to take notice of the contents of the ordinance before purchasing their bonds, and purchased and held them subject to the continuing compliance of the Water Company with the terms of the ordinance. They bought the bonds as obligations of the Water Company, and not as evidences of indebtedness of the City; and they had information from the ordinance that the City would not be liable for hydrant rents if the Water Company failed to furnish water as agreed, and that if the Water Company neglected to comply with its contract the City would have the right to invoke the aid of a court of equity to enforce a cancellation of the contract.

As to the old water mains, the trustee and the bondholders took the lien of the mortgage subject to the conditions of the agreement for the sale of them by the City to Shelton. Immediately after the passage of the rescinding resolution of June 1, 1885, the City proceeded to resume possession of the old mains, and its bill against the Water Company was filed immediately thereafter, and on the 20th of June, 1885. The Water Company never credited the City with any money due on account of rent for the hydrants, applying it as payment on account of the old water mains; nor did the City ever apply any money due by it to the Water Company for hydrant rents towards paying itself for the old mains.

The principal contention on the part of the appellants is that, on the acceptance of the ordinance by Shelton, a right in the franchise vested in him, which could not be defeated even though he afterwards failed to comply with its terms; that the failure of the Water Company to furnish water in the quantity and of the quality called for by the ordinance was only a breach of a condition subsequent; and that a court of equity will not lend its aid to divest an estate for such a breach. But it seems to us that in respect to a contract of the character of the present one, the ability of the Water Company to continue to furnish water according to the terms of the ordinance was a condition precedent to the continuing right of Shelton and his assigns to use the streets of the City and to furnish water for a period of thirty years; and that when, after a reasonable time, Shelton and his assigns had failed to comply with the condition as to the quantity and quality of the water, the City had a right to treat the contract as terminated, and to invoke the aid of a court of equity to enforce its rescission. A suit for a specific performance of the contract, or a suit to recover damages for its nonperformance, would be a wholly inadequate remedy in a case like the present. The danger to the health and lives of the inhabitants of the City, from impure water, and the continued exposure of the property in the City to destruction by fire, from an inadequate supply of water, were public questions peculiarly under the care of the municipality; and it was entitled and bound to act with the highest regard for the public interests, and at the same time, as it did, with due consideration for the rights of the other parties to the contract.

We see no error in the decree of the Circuit Court, and it is affirmed.

JEROME F. MANNING, Plff. in Err.,

ASA FRENCH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 186-188.)

Jurisdiction to review state judgment—federal

NOTE.—As to jurisdiction in the United States Supreme Court, where federal question arises, or where are drawn in question statutes, treaty or Constitution, see notes to Martin v. Hunter, Bk. 4, p. 97, Matthews v. Zane, Bk. 2, p. 654, and Williams v. Norris, Bk. 6, p. 571.

question—decision of state court—petition for writ of error.

1. This court has no jurisdiction to review the final judgment of the state court in this case, being an action for damages for being prevented from acting as attorney and counselor in the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, on the ground of the denial by the state courts of any title, right, privilege or immunity claimed under the Constitution, or treaty, or statute of, or commission or authority under, the United States, as the plaintiff in error set up and claimed; none such.
2. The decision that the defendant was not liable in damages, because in concurring in the order complained of he acted in his judicial capacity, in itself involved no federal question.
3. Nor can the plaintiff object that a federal question arose on the ground that the defendant claimed to exercise an authority under Acts of Congress, or under a commission held under the United States, since this was not plaintiff's contention, but the defendant's, and the state courts decided, not against but in favor of the authority so claimed.
4. The petition for a writ of error forms no part of the record upon which action here is taken.

[No. 1188.]

Submitted Jan. 13, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment of that court in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages for being prevented from acting as an attorney and counselor in the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims of the United States.

On motions to dismiss and affirm. Dismissed.
Opinion below, 149 Mass. 891.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Jerome F. Manning brought an action of tort in the Superior Court of Massachusetts against James Harlan of Iowa, Andrew S. Draper of New York and Asa French of Massachusetts, to recover damages for being prevented from acting as an attorney and counselor in or before the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims of the United States, or in relation to any matter of business pending therein, by the defendants, who "falsely pretended to be judges of said Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, and actually acted as judges thereof, though in truth and fact neither of them was a judge thereof." Service was had upon the defendant French, but upon neither of the other defendants, and he, for answer, denied each and every allegation in the declaration. The following statement appears in the record, in the "plaintiff's exceptions," which were allowed by the presiding judge:

"At the trial, which was without a jury, it appeared that the plaintiff in 1885 was and for many years had been an attorney and counselor at law duly admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Court of Claims of the United States and in all the courts of this Commonwealth; that he acted as an attorney and counselor before the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, commencing in January, 1875, and ending July 29, 1885; that he presented and prosecuted before said Court of Commissioners about seven hundred and fifty petitions of the class known as 'Alabama Claims,' representing about fourteen hundred claimants and beneficiaries, and thereby became entitled to receive from said claimants and beneficiaries divers sums of money, amounting in all to many thousands of dollars; that the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims was established by Act of Congress approved June 28, 1874, chapter 459; re-established by another Act approved June 5, 1882, chapter 195, and continued by another Act approved June 8, 1884, chapter 62; that in 1874 said Court of Commissioners adopted, among other rules, the following: 'Rule V. Any person of good moral character admitted to practice as attorney or counsel in the Supreme Court of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or in any of the federal courts, on filing with the clerk a written statement of the date and place of such admission, with his name and post-office address in full, may, on motion, be admitted to practice in this court;' that on January 26, 1875, the plaintiff was, on motion of Robert M. Corwine, Esquire, admitted to practice in said Court of Commissioners; and that on October 5, 1882, said Court of Commissioners adopted certain additional rules, among which was the following: 'Rule XIV. All attorneys admitted to practice in the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims as created under the Law of Congress approved June 28, 1874, will be recognized as attorneys in this court, re-established under Law of Congress approved June 5, 1882;' but the plaintiff claimed that said Rules five and fourteen were unauthorized and of no effect, and that the said Court of Commissioners had no power to create a bar or to admit attorneys thereto or to expel them therefrom."

The record of the proceedings in In Re Manning in the said Court of Commissioners, duly attested, was put in evidence, which proceedings culminated in an order, made July 25, 1885, that "the said Jerome F. Manning be, and he hereby is, prohibited from appearing and acting in this court in relation to any matter or business therein pending, and from exercising in any way the functions of an attorney and counselor of this court,—this decree to stand until further order of the court." That record also contained a motion to rescind the foregoing order, and the action of the court denying the same.

The exceptions thus continue:

"It also appeared that on the twenty-ninth of July, 1885, said Court of Commissioners made the following order: 'Ordered, that the clerk of the court is hereby authorized to substitute the name of any attorney of this court in place of said Jerome F. Manning in any case upon the receipt of the request in writing from the claimant therein or from his legal representatives to that effect.'

"It also appeared that the defendant French was commissioned and qualified as a judge of said Court of Commissioners on or about July 5, 1882, and not otherwise, and that the defendant Harlan was commissioned and qualified about the same time, and not otherwise, and that the defendant Draper was commissioned and qualified in the year 1885, and not otherwise, and that each of said judges concurred in said orders of July 24, July 25, July 29 and October 15, 1885, touching the plaintiff.

"It also appeared that in addressing the court on July 25, as mentioned in the foregoing record, Robert Christy, Esq., as counsel for the plaintiff, read to said Court of Commissioners section 725 of the Revised Statutes of the United States and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of Ex parte Robinson, in 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 505 [22: 205], and Ex parte Bradley, in 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 864 [19: 214], and argued that said commissioners had no power to prohibit the plaintiff from practicing before them.

"The defendant French admitted that he concurred with the other members of said Court of Commissioners in issuing and enforcing said orders of July 24 and 29, and that the plaintiff was thereby damaged, and claimed that the said Court of Commissioners had authority to issue and enforce the same, and that any loss sustained by the plaintiff thereby was damnum absque injuria.

"The plaintiff introduced evidence tending to show that each of the allegations in his declaration was true, and asked the court to make the following rulings:

"First. That the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims had no authority to make the order made by them touching the plaintiff on July 29, 1885, and that the same was unlawful.

"Second. That the defendant French having admitted that he concurred with the other defendants in issuing and enforcing said order of July 29, 1885, and that the plaintiff was thereby injured, the plaintiff is entitled to recover from said French compensation for all losses sustained by him as the direct result of said order of July 29, 1885, and of the enforcement thereof from thence to December 31, 1885.

"Third. That more than two years having elapsed after the reorganization of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, under the Act of June 5, 1882, and after the appointment of the defendant French and the other defendants, but prior to July 24, 1885, the said French and the other defendants had, on said last-mentioned day and thereafter, no lawful authority to act as judges of said Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims.

"But the court declined so to rule, found the facts to be as stated in said printed record, ruled that the action could not be maintained, and found for the defendants.

"The plaintiff, being aggrieved by the foregoing rulings and refusals to rule, excepts thereto, and prays that his exceptions may be allowed."

The exceptions having been entered in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, the cause was there argued and the exceptions overruled on the 21st day of June, 1889. (149 Mass. 391.) As to the contention of the plaintiff that the judges who in fact composed the court on July 25, 1885, were not lawfully in office, and particularly that the defendant French was not then lawfully in office, the court said: "It appears that French was commissioned and qualified as judge 'on or about July 5, 1882.' The argument is that, as by the Act of June 5, 1882, the existence of the court was limited to two years, the commission of Judge French had expired before July 25, 1885, when the court passed the order of which the plaintiff complains. It is contended that, when the existence of the court was continued beyond two years by the Statute of June 8, 1884, it was necessary that the judges be reappointed in order lawfully to hold their office during the continued existence of the court." The court held that it was unnecessary to consider whether the plaintiff's right in the matter of his complaint would be greater against a judge de facto than against a judge de jure; that it did not appear that the judges were originally commissioned for any definite time; that they would continue to hold their office while the court continued to exist, unless they were lawfully removed; that it was within the power of Congress, by statute, to extend the existence of the court before the original term of its existence expired; and that the judges, by virtue of their original appointment, continued to be judges while the court continued to exist. It was also held that the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims had the powers which the statutes conferred upon it, and that under the Acts of Congress it had the power to prescribe by rule the qualification of attorneys to be admitted to practice before it, and therefore the power to determine whether the persons who asked to be admitted had the requisite qualifications, and whether the persons who had been admitted retained the requisite qualifications; and that "in the exercise of this power, after notice to the plaintiff and a hearing, that court prohibited the plaintiff from further exercising before it the functions of an attorney of the court. Congress had the right to confer this power exclusively upon that court, to be exercised as a judicial power, and the judges of the court are not liable to individuals for judicial acts done within their jurisdiction. Randall v. Brigham, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 528 [19: 285]; Randall, Petitioner, 11 Allen, 473."

On the first day of July, 1889, judgment for costs was entered for the defendant. The plaintiff, Manning, thereupon sued out a writ of error from this court, and a motion to dismiss or affirm was made by defendant in error.

Mr. Chas. Theo. Russell, Jr., for defendant in error, in support of motion:

No federal question appears from the record to have been raised and decided adversely to the validity of any statute or authority of the United States.

Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 181, 181 (31: 80, 91); Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394 (31: 454); Ocean Ins. Co. v. Polleys, 38 U. S. 18 Pet. 157 (10: 105.); Crowell v. Randell, 85 U. S. 10 Pet. 368 (9: 458); Williams v. Norris, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 117 (6: 571); Miller v. Nicholls, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 311 (4: 578); Lange v. Benedict, 99 U. S. 68 (25: 469); Montgomery v. Hernandez, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 129, 132 (6: 575, 576); Ryan v. Thomas, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 603 (18: 460); Rector v. Ashley, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 143 (18: 783).

Upon a writ of error to a state court, this court can examine the recorded opinion to ascertain the ground of the judgment.

Kreiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 89 (81: 675).

The Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, as a court, had power to regulate the admission and removal of attorneys practicing before it.

Randall v. Brigham, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 523, 535 (19: 285, 291); Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 333 (18: 366); Ex parte Seacombe, 60 U. S. 19 How. 9 (15: 565); Re Wall, 18 Fed. Rep. 820, note; Ex parte Wall, 107 U. S. 265 (27: 552); Bradley v. Fisher, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 335 (20: 646); Ex parte Burr, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 529 (6: 152); Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 289, 309 (32: 405, 408); Savin, Petitioner, 131 U. S. 267 (33: 150).

Even if the action of the court was unjustified or illegal, no action of law lies against the judges.

Ex parte Robinson, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 505 (22: 205); Randall v. Brigham, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 536 (19: 291); Pratt v. Gardner, 2 Cush. 68; Chickering v. Robinson, 3 Cush. 543; Raymond v. Bolles, 11 Cush. 315; Wells v. Stevens, 2 Gray, 115; Kelley v. Dresser, 11 Allen, 81.

Mr. Charles Cowley, for plaintiff in error, in opposition:

This court has jurisdiction when the record shows that a federal question was raised and decided adversely to the plaintiff in error.

Richards v. Mackall, 113 U. S. 539 (28: 1182); Whitney v. Cook, 99 U. S. 607 (25: 446); Kansas Endowment & B. Assn. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 108 (30: 593); Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282 (30: 960); Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395 (32: 487); Bridge Props. v. Hoboken Land & I. Co. 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 116 (17: 571); McGuire v. Massachusetts, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 882 (18: 164).

Want of jurisdiction and irregularity of the writ are the only grounds for dismissal.

Foster v. Kansas, Johnston, 112 U. S. 205 (28: 680); Crane Iron Co. v. Hoagland, 108 U. S. 5 (27: 630); Hecker v. Fowler, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 95 (17: 45); Sparrow v. Strong, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 97 (18: 49); Canter v. American & O. Ins. Co. 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 54 (7: 517); Jacks v. Helena, 115 U. S. 288 (30: 392).

The federal question must have been decided against the right claimed by the plaintiff in error.

Burke v. Gaines, 60 U. S. 19 How. 388 (15: 655); Smith v. Adsit, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 185 (31: 810); Chapman v. Goodnow, 128 U. S. 548 (31: 238).

The federal question need not have been formally raised; but it is sufficient if it appears by clear and necessary intendment that a federal question was raised and presented to the state court.

Crowell v. Randell, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 368 (9: 458); Udell v. Davidson, 48 U. S. 7 How. 769 (12: 907); Wabworth v. Kneeland, 56 U. S. 15 How. 348 (14: 724).

An attorney cannot be disbarred for contempt, as from time immemorial fine or imprisonment is the only penalty for contempt.

Clark v. People, Breese (Ill.) 840, 12 Am. Dec. 186; State v. Start, 7 Iowa. 499; Ex parte Smith, 28 Ind. 47; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 143; Turner v. Com. 2 Met. (Ky.) 619; Rice v. Com. 18 B. Mon. 472; Dillon v. State, 6 Tex. 55; Jackson v. State, 21 Tex. 668.

138 U. S. U. S., Book 83.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Jurisdiction to review the final judgment rendered in this case cannot be maintained upon the ground of the denial by the state courts of any title, right, privilege or immunity claimed under the Constitution, or some treaty, or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States, as the plaintiff in error set up and claimed none such. Spies v. Illinois, 128 U. S. 131, 181 [31: 80, 91]; Chappell v. Bradshaw, 128 U. S. 132 [32: 369]. And the decision that the defendant was not liable in damages, because in concurring in the order complained of he acted in his judicial capacity, in itself involved no federal question. Lange v. Benedict, 99 U. S. 68, 71 [25: 469, 470]. Nor can the plaintiff object that the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States was drawn in question, or that a title, right, privilege or immunity was claimed under the Constitution, or a statute of, or a commission held, or an authority exercised under, the United States, on the ground that the defendant claimed to exercise an authority under Acts of Congress, or under a commission held under the United States, since this was not plaintiff's contention, but the defendant's, and the state courts decided not against but in favor of the authority, title, right, privilege or immunity so claimed.

The three rulings asked by the plaintiff and refused by the court, were:

First. That the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims had no authority to make the order entered by them, touching the plaintiff.

Second. That the defendant French having admitted that he concurred with the other defendants in issuing and enforcing said order, the plaintiff was entitled to recover from him compensation for all loss sustained by him, as the direct result of its entry and enforcement.

Third. That more than two years having elapsed after the reorganization of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, under the Act of Congress of June 5, 1882, and after the appointment of the defendants, but prior to the date of the order, the defendants had no lawful authority to act as judges of said Court of Commissioners.

The court held that the term of the judges had not expired, and that they had authority to make the order, and, therefore, that the plaintiff could not recover, and in so holding decided in favor of the validity of the authority exercised by the defendant under the United States, and of the right he claimed under the statutes of the United States, and the commission held by him.

The petition for the writ of error avers "that said action involves divers federal questions, one of which is whether said Acts of Congress authorized said defendants to promulgate or enforce said order, and another of which is whether so much of said Acts of Congress as undertakes (if any part thereof undertakes) to authorize the defendants to make such order was not in violation of articles V. and VIII. of the Amendments of the Constitution of the United States, and the decision of said state court was adverse to the plaintiff's contention upon all of said federal questions."

The grounds thus suggested have been disposed of by what has been said, and it may be added that the petition for a writ of error forms no part of the record upon which action here is taken. Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395 [32: 487]; Warfield v. Chaffe, 91 U. S. 690 [28: 888].

The writ of error must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

KNOX COUNTY, MISSOURI, Appt.,

v.

GEORGE W. HARSHMAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 152-156.)

When courts of equity will interfere with judgments at law—allegations in bill—decision in Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 306 (30: 1152), effect of—service upon county, how made—officer's return, effect of—neglect of the clerk.

1. A court of equity does not interfere with judgments at law, unless the complainant has an equitable defense of which he could not avail himself at law, or had a good defense at law which he was prevented from availing himself of by fraud or accident, unmixd with negligence of himself or his agents.
2. The allegation in the bill that the record of the judgment as it stands is a gross fraud upon the judgment debtor, is limited to the particulars specified in the bill.
3. The ground that the allegations in the petition on which the judgment was recovered were false in that they alleged that the subscription was made under the General Statutes of Missouri, authorizing the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the amount of the bonds and coupons, is fully met and disposed of by the opinion in Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 306 (30: 1152), that, by the judgment in favor of the relator, it was determined that the bonds sued on were issued under a statute which prescribed no limit to taxation for their payment, and that the findings in the judgment on that point are conclusive and bind the County.
4. By the Statutes of Missouri, the clerk of the county is made the agent of the county for the purpose of receiving service of process against it, and service upon him is legal and sufficient service upon the county.
5. The officer's return having stated that he served a copy of the summons upon the clerk, if the return were false, yet no fraud being charged or proved against the petitioner, redress can be sought at law only, and not by this bill.
6. Any neglect of the clerk in communicating the fact of such service to the county court was

NOTE.—In what cases equity will relieve from mistake or ignorance of material fact, see note to M'Ferran v. Taylor, Bk. 2, p. 436.

Whether equity will relieve against a mistake of law, see note to Hunt v. Rousmanler, Bk. 7, p. 27, Bk. 5, p. 589.

As to equity jurisdiction after trial at law, see note to Smith v. M'Iver, Bk. 6, p. 152.

As to when a judgment at law will be enjoined by a bill in equity, see note to Davis v. Tileston, Bk. 12, p. 366.

As to who are necessary parties in equity, see note to Marshall v. Beverley, Bk. 5, p. 97; also Christian v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. post, 589.

neglect of an agent of the County, and did not affect the validity of the service or of the judgment.

[No. 1212.]

Submitted Jan. 10, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri dismissing a suit in equity by the County of Knox, Missouri, against Harshman, a citizen of Ohio, for a perpetual injunction against the prosecution of the peremptory writ of mandamus issued by that court pursuant to the judgment and mandate of this court in Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 306 (30: 1152), to compel the judges of the county court to levy a tax to pay a judgment recovered by him on bonds of the County issued for a subscription to the capital stock of the Missouri and Mississippi Railroad Company. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was a bill in equity by the County of Knox, in the State of Missouri, against Harshman, a citizen of Ohio, in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri, for a perpetual injunction against the prosecution of the peremptory writ of mandamus issued by that court, pursuant to the judgment and mandate of this court in Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 306 [30: 1152], to compel the judges of the county court to levy a tax sufficient to pay a judgment recovered by Harshman in the circuit court of the United States for $77,874.46, on bonds issued by the County for a subscription to the capital stock of the Missouri and Mississippi Railroad Company.

The bill set forth that this judgment was rendered on default, upon a petition alleging that the subscription was authorized by a vote of two thirds of the qualified voters of the County at a special election held under § 17 of chap. 63 of the General Statutes of Missouri of 1866; and upon a return of the marshal that fifteen days before the return day he had made service upon the County by delivering a copy of the petition and summons to Frank P. Hall, the clerk of the county court, at Edina, in the County and district aforesaid.

The bill averred that the allegations of the petition were false; and that the bonds were in fact issued without the assent of two thirds of the voters, and under § 18 of the charter of the railroad company, by which the tax to be levied in payment of the bonds was limited to one twentieth of one per cent upon the assessed value of taxable property for each year.

The bill further alleged that neither the county court, nor any of the judges thereof, nor the county attorney, had any notice or knowledge of the commencement of the suit until after the end of the term at which the judgment was rendered, when they were informed thereof by Harshman's attorney; that Hall, the county clerk, after the pretended service upon him, never handed to the county court the copy of the petition and summons, or called the attention of the county court or its judges, or of the county attorney, to the fact of service, or said anything about it until, upon being inquired of by them after they had been informed of it as aforesaid, he denied that a copy of the petition or summons had been served upon him, or that he had any knowledge or notice thereof; and the bill alleged, and charged the fact to be, "that neither a copy of said summons and petition, nor either of them, was served upon said Frank P. Hall, as stated by the marshal in his return to said summons, and that said return was and is false."

The bill also alleged that "said judgment on default was rendered on a false allegation of facts, and as the record stands it is a gross fraud upon your orator to the extent and in the particulars herein mentioned."

The answer averred that the allegations of the petition and the statements in the return were true, and that the County had full notice of the commencement of the action; and denied that the judgment was rendered upon a false allegation of facts, or was a fraud upon the plaintiff. The plaintiff filed a general replication.

At a hearing upon pleadings and proofs, the bill was dismissed, and the plaintiff appealed to this court.

Mr. James Carr, for appellant:

The subscription was not made under the vote cast at the special election held on the 12th day of March, 1887.

State v. Macon County Ct. 41 Mo. 453; Macon County v. Shores, 97 U. S. 273 (24:889); Elliot v. Peirce, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 829 (7:164); Maupin v. Franklin County, 87 Mo. 827.

The 14th section of the 11th article of the Constitution of 1865 required legislative enactment to carry it out.

St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Buchanan County Ct. 39 Mo. 485; Norton v. Brownsville Taxing Dist. Comrs. 129 U. S. 479 (32:774); Groves v. Slaughter, 40 U. S. 15 Pet. 449 (10:800); United States v. Bevans, 16 U. S. 3 Wheat. 336 (4:404); Ex parte Wall, 48 Cal. 279.

The 17th section of chapter 68 of the General Statutes of 1866 does not provide the machinery for carrying the Constitution into effect. And said special election was void for want of proper legislation. If said subscription shall be held to have been made under said special election and said judgment by default enforced under chapter 68 of the General Statutes of Missouri of 1866, then the taxpayers would be deprived of their property for private purposes without "due process of law."

Earle v. McVeigh, 91 U. S. 508 (23:898); Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274 (23:914); Nations v. Johnson, 65 U. S. 24 How. 203 (16:631); Hagar v. Reclamation District No. 108; 111 U. S. 701 (28:569); Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97 (24:616); Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516 (28:232); Foster v. Kansas, Johnston, 112 U. S. 201 (28:629); Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480 (23:478); Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608 (28:258); McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429 (24:129).

If the county court had held the opinion that two thirds of the qualified voters had voted in favor of making the subscription and that the election was in every other way a legal election, still it was discretionary with it whether to act under and by authority of it or not.

St. Joseph & D. C. R. Co. v. Buchanan 133 U. S.

County Ct. 89 Mo. 485; Aspinwall v. Davies County Comrs. 63 U. S. 22 How. 364 (16:296); Marsh v. Fulton County, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 676 (19:1040); Dallas County v. MacKenzie, 94 U. S. 660 (24:182); Norton v. Brownsville Taxing Dist. Comrs. 129 U. S. 479 (32:774).

A State or county shall not lose its rights because an officer upon whom the law devolves a duty to be performed in order to secure the rights neglects to perform the duty.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Smith, 76 U. S. 9 Wall. 95 (19:599); Northern Nat. Bank v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608 (28:258); Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 139 (32:77).

Where the officers of a private corporation are unfaithful to their trust, a court of equity, upon a proper showing, will allow stockholders to file a bill to prevent an intended fraud on them, or to set aside a fraud already consummated.

Dodge v. Woolsey, 59 U. S. 18 How. 338 (15:401); Memphis v. Dean, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 64 (19:326); Bronson v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 288 (17:725); Hawes v. Oakland, 104 U. S. 450 (26:827); Newmeyer v. Missouri & M. R. Co. 52 Mo. 81; Dennison v. Kansas, 14 West. Rep. 806, 95 Mo. 416.

The unauthorized ex parte statement by the county clerk that the bonds were issued in payment of the first subscription pursuant to said election does not bind the appellant for want of authority.

Kelley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 139 (32:77); Jarroll v. Moberly, 103 U. S. 580 (26:492); Concord v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 92 U. S. 625 (23:628); Norton v. Brownsville Taxing Dist. Comrs. 129 U. S. 505 (32:784).

Mr. T. K. Skinner, for appellee:

The judgment complained of was regularly rendered upon process duly served.

The marshal's return of service cannot be controverted in this suit; it is conclusive as between the parties.

Walker v. Robbins, 55 U. S. 14 How. 584 (14:552); McDonald v. Leewright, 81 Mo. 29; Heath v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 83 Mo. 623; Hallowell v. Page, 24 Mo. 590; Delinger v. Higgins, 26 Mo. 180; Reeves v. Reeves, 83 Mo. 28; Stewart v. Stringer, 41 Mo. 400; Jeffries v. Wright, 51 Mo. 215; Phillips v. Evans, 64 Mo. 17.

The presumption of law is that public officers do their duty.

Miller v. Dunn, 62 Mo. 225; Baker v. Underwood, 68 Mo. 889.

It is not averred in the bill or shown by the evidence, that there was either fraud, accident or mistake in the rendition of this judgment. The judgment being regularly rendered upon process duly served, in the absence of such averments, with evidence to support them, the court cannot disturb it.

Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 58 U. S. 17 How. 443 (15:123); Orim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652 (24:216); Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 157 (24:422); Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3 (27:346); George v. Tuttle, 36 Mo. 141; Dunn v. Hansard, 87 Mo. 199; State, Phelan, v. Engelmann, 3 West. Rep. 217, 86 Mo. 562, 563; Vastine v. Bast, 41 Mo. 493; Davis v. Staples, 45 Mo. 567; Ritter v. Democratic Press Co. 63 Mo. 459; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 887; Freeman Judgments, § 486.

The fraud must be extrinsic to the matter tried,—not merely fraud in the matter on which the judgment was rendered. Much less will mere falsity or error in the plaintiff's allegations suffice.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68 (25:96); Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & R. Co. 106 U. S. 453, 454 (27:228); Moffatt v. United States, 112 U. S. 82 (28:625); Carolus v. Koch, 72 Mo. 647; Smith v. Sims, 77 Mo. 278; Miller v. Major, 87 Mo. 247.

The bill does allege that as the record stands the judgment is a gross fraud on the County. But as the pleader sets forth no fact which, if proven, would constitute fraud, this cannot be taken as entitling complainant to relief on the ground of fraud, even if the evidence were appropriate to sustain such a charge.

United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372 (26:218); Marquez v. Friable, 101 U. S. 473, 478 (25:800, 802); Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 16, 29 (21:268, 270); Noonan v. Lee, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 499, 508 (17: 278, 281); Smith v. Sims, 77 Mo. 269; Duffy v. Byrne, 7 Mo. App. 417; Dritt v. Snodgrass, 66 Mo. 286; 1 Dan. Ch. Pl. and Pr. §24, and note; Bliss, Code Plead. § 211.

Original process is served by leaving a copy of the summons with the clerk of the county court.

Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 59 U. S. 18 How. 408 (15:453); Leavenworth Co. Comrs. v. Sells, 99 U. S. 624 (25:333); Thompson v. United States, 103 U. S. 484 (26:523); Labette Co. Comrs. v. United States, Moulton, 112 U. S. 221 (28:699); Cloud v. Pierce City, 86 Mo. 363; Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 76 Mo. 176; Hannon v. St. Louis County, 62 Mo. 318.

The subscription to pay which the bonds were issued, was made by authority of the vote taken under the General Law. The bonds are therefore voted bonds. This question is to be determined by the records of the county court alone.

Maupin v. Franklin County, 67 Mo. 327; Kansas City v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 81 Mo. 296; Johnson County v. Wood, 84 Mo. 489, 514; Dennison v. St. Louis County, 33 Mo. 168.

The proposed recipient of the subscription was designated by the route it was to traverse, not by name.

Johnson County Comrs. v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631 (24:133); Moultrie County v. Fairfield, 105 U. S. 370 (26:945); Morgan County v. Allen, 103 U. S. 498 (26:498).

The General Railroad Law expressly gave unlimited power of taxation.

State, Aull, v. Shortridge, 56 Mo. 130.

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

A court of equity does not interfere with judgments at law, unless the complainant has an equitable defense of which he could not avail himself at law, or had a good defense at law which he was prevented from availing himself of by fraud or accident, unmixed with negligence of himself or his agents. Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 382, 386 [3:362, 363]; Hendrickson v. Hinckley, 58 U. S. 17 How. 443, 445 [15: 123, 124]; Crim v. Handley, 94 U. S. 652 [24: 216]; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 675 [29: 1013, 1015].

588

In the case before us, the bill in equity of the judgment debtor contains no allegation of any fraud on the part of the judgment creditor or his agents. The allegation that the record of the judgment as it stands is a gross fraud upon the judgment debtor is in terms, as it must be in legal effect, limited to the particulars specified in the bill. United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372 [26: 218]; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 586, 590, 591 [27: 322, 324]. The grounds assigned for the interposition of equity reduce themselves to two.

The first ground is that the allegations in the petition on which the judgment was recovered were false, especially in that they allege that the subscription was made under the General Statutes of Missouri, authorizing the levy of a tax sufficient to pay the amount of the bonds and coupons. But this ground is fully met and disposed of by the opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Matthews in Harshman v. Knox County, 122 U. S. 806 [30: 1152], in which it was said: "By the terms of the judgment in favor of the relator it was determined that the bonds sued on were issued under the authority of a statute which prescribed no limit to the rate of taxation for their payment. In such cases, the law which authorizes the issue of bonds gives also the means of payment by taxation. The findings in the judgment on that point are conclusive. They bind the respondents in their official capacity, as well as the county itself." 122 U. S. 819, 820 [30: 1155].

The other ground relied on is that the County had no notice of the commencement of the action against it. The bill of the County and the argument of its counsel proceed on two hardly consistent suppositions—that the clerk of the county court was never served with process, and that he was negligent in not seasonably informing the county court or county attorney that service had been made upon him. But in either aspect of the case the bill cannot be maintained.

The Statutes of Missouri provide that "where any action shall be commenced against any county, a copy of the original summons shall be left with the clerk of the county court fifteen days, at least, before the return day thereof." Missouri Rev. Stat. of 1879, § 3489. The clerk is thus made the agent of the county for the purpose of receiving service of process against it, and service upon him is legal and sufficient service upon the county. Leavenworth County v. Sells, 99 U. S. 624 [25: 533]; Thompson v. United States, 103 U. S. 480 [26: 521]; Weil v. Greene County, 69 Mo. 281. The officer's return stated that he served a copy of the summons upon the clerk. If that return were false, yet, no fraud being charged or proved against the petitioner, redress could be sought at law only, and not by this bill. Walker v. Robbins, 55 U. S. 14 How. 584 [14: 552]. But if the question of the truth of the return could be considered as open in this suit, the proofs given at the hearing clearly show that such service was in fact made. Any neglect of the clerk in communicating the fact to the county court was neglect of an agent of the County, and did not affect the validity of the service or of the judgment.

Decree affirmed.

133 U. S.

WILLIAM E. CHRISTIAN ET AL., Appts.,
v.
THE ATLANTIC AND NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 233-246.)

State, when necessary party—parties to equity suits—pledge in statute—declaration, when not a pledge—pledge as a mortgage—interest of State—right of redemption—State cannot be sued—where State is indispensable party, suit cannot be sustained.

1. Dividends due to the State cannot be seized and appropriated to the payment of its bonds, nor can stock held and owned by the State be sold and transferred, through the medium of a suit in equity, without making the State a party to the suit.
2. All persons whose interests are directly to be affected by a suit in chancery must be made parties.
3. A pledge, in the legal sense, requires to be delivered to the pledgee. He must have the possession of it.
4. A declaration in a Statute that as security for the redemption of state certificates of debt the public faith of the State is pledged to the holders thereof, is only a promise on the part of the State to redeem the certificates.
5. A further declaration in such Statute that all the stock held by the State in a Railroad Company shall be pledged for the same purpose, and any dividend declared thereon shall be applied to pay the interest on said bonds, is only a promise that the stock shall be held and set apart for the payment of the bonds, and that the dividends shall be applied to the interest. It is no actual pledge.
6. If such pledge amounted to a mortgage, it merely gave the mortgagee the right to a decree of foreclosure and sale; and the mortgagor, or his assignee, would be a necessary party in such a proceeding; but where the mortgagor in possession is a sovereign State, no such proceeding can be maintained.
7. In some cases where the State, not having the title in fee or the possession of the property, has some lien upon it, or claim against it, the foreclosure and sale of the property will not be prevented by the interest which the State has in it; but its right of redemption will remain.
8. A suit to effect a foreclosure and sale, or to obtain possession of property belonging to the State, cannot be maintained, for the reason that, in such a case, the State is a necessary party, and it cannot be sued.
9. The State is an indispensable party to any suit in equity in which its property is sought to be taken and subjected to the payment of its obligations; and, as the State cannot be sued, such a suit cannot be sustained.

[No. 46.]

Argued Oct. 30, 1889. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of North Carolina, dismissing a suit in equity to reach dividends on stock and apply them to bonds of the State, and for a sale of the stock held by the State, and that the Railroad Company be enjoined from paying to the State any dividends. Affirmed.

183 U. S.

The facts are sufficiently stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Jos. B. Batchelor, S. F. Phillips, W. H. Lamar and J. G. Zachry, for appellants:

The plaintiffs have a statutory lien.

Beall v. White, 94 U. S. 882, 886 (24: 173, 174); Wilson v. Boyce, 92 U. S. 820 (23: 608); White Water Valley Canal Co. v. Vallette, 62 U. S. 21 How. 414 (16: 154); Baring v. Dabney, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 1 (22: 90); Woodson v. Murdock, 89 U. S. 23 Wall. 851 (22: 716); U. S. v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72 (23: 224); Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306 (25: 999); Whitehead v. Vineyard, 50 Mo. 30; Collins v. Georgia Cent. Bank, 1 Kelly (Ga.) 439; Woodruff v. Trapnall, 51 U. S. 10 How. 190 (12: 388); Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 6 Ired. Eq. 463.

The security attaches to the bonds and follows them into whosoever hands they may come.

Curran v. Arkansas, 56 U. S. 15 How. 304 (14: 708); Furman v. Nichol, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 44 (19: 870).

The circuit court, sitting as a court of equity, has jurisdiction of this suit.

Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 54 U. S. 13 How. 563 (14: 268); Robinson v. Campbell, 16 U. S. 8 Wheat. 212 (4: 872); Boyle v. Zacharie, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 658 (8: 586); Fitch v. Creighton, 65 U. S. 24 How. 159 (16: 596); Barber v. Barber, 62 U. S. 21 How. 591, 592 (16: 229, 230); South Fork Canal Co. v. Gordon, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 581 (18: 594); Massie v. Watts, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 148 (3: 181); Payne v. Hook, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 430 (19: 261); Irvine v. Marshall, 61 U. S. 20 How. 565 (15: 998); Clark v. Smith, 88 U. S. 13 Pet. 195 (10: 123).

The fact that the State claims to be the owner of this stock does not oust the jurisdiction of the court.

Osborn v. Bank of U. S. 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 859 (6: 233); U. S. v. Peters, 9 U. S. 5 Cranch, 115 (3: 58); Curran v. Arkansas, 56 U. S. 15 How. 304 (14: 705); Woodruff v. Trapnall, 51 U. S. 10 How. 206 (18: 389); Furman v. Nichol, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 44 (19: 870); U. S. Bank v. Planters Bank, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 907 (6: 244); Brisco v. Bank of Kentucky, 86 U. S. 11 Pet. 257 (9: 709); Louisville, C. & C. R. Co. v. Letson, 43 U. S. 2 How. 497 (11: 853); Darrington v. Alabama, 54 U. S. 18 How. 17 (14: 82); State v. Wagner, v. Stoll, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 425 (21: 650); Baring v. Dabney, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 1 (22: 90); Elliot v. Van Voorst, 3 Wall. Jr. 299; Wabash & E. Canal Co. v. Beers, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 448 (17: 327); U. S. v. Wilder, 8 Sumn. 308; Davis v. Gray, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 203 (21: 447); Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 581 (23: 623); Louisiana, Elliott v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711 (27: 448); Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446 (27: 992); Ketchum v. St. Louis, 101 U. S. 306 (25: 999).

The corporation is the only necessary party; it is a trustee and holds the stock in trust for its stockholders.

Vose v. Grant, 15 Mass. 505; Wood v. Dummer, 3 Mason, 368, opinion by Judge Story; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1252; Upton v. Tribblecock, 91 U. S. 47 (23: 203).

Mr. R. H. Battle, for appellees:

A written transfer which shall pass the legal title is essential in the pledge of stock.

Jones, Pledges, § 152, and cases cited.

After the debt falls due, the pledgee may proceed personally against the pledgor for his debt or file a bill in chancery and have a judicial sale under a regular decree for foreclosure; or sell without judicial process, upon reasonable notice to the debtor to redeem.

Robinson v. Hurley, 11 Iowa, 410; Jones, Pledges, § 720; 2 Kent, Com. 12th ed. 582; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. Sr. 878; Vanderzee v. Willis, 8 Bro. Ch. 21.

The mortgagor and every other person having an interest in the mortgaged property should be made defendants.

Jones, Chattel Mort. 788; 2 Jones, Mort. § 1868; Greither v. Alexander, 15 Iowa, 470; Terrill v. Allison, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 289 (22: 684); Robertson v. Carson, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 94 (22: 178); Shields v. Barrow, 58 U. S. 17 How. 180, 189 (15: 158, 160); Russell v. Clark, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 98 (3: 281); Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 446 (21: 367); N. Y. City Bank v. Carrollton R. Co. 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 624 (20: 82); Williams v. Bankhead, 89 U. S. 19 Wall. 563 (22: 184).

Whenever it appears that a State is an indispensable party to enable the court to grant the relief sought, it will refuse to take jurisdiction of the suit.

Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446 (27: 992); Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52 (29: 805); Re Ayres, 123 U. S. 448 (31: 216).

If there is a contract to pledge, of course a bill for specific performance would not lie because the owner, who is to pledge, is the State of North Carolina.

United States, Levey, v. Stockslager, 129 U. S. 470 (32: 785); Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52 (29: 805).

Mr. Justice Bradley delivered the opinion of the court:

The State of North Carolina, by virtue of an Act of its Legislature, passed 12th February, 1855, and through its Board of Internal Improvements subscribed for $1,066,600 of the capital stock of The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company, a corporation created by Act of the Legislature of said State for the purpose of building a railroad from Beaufort to Goldsborough. In order to raise money to pay for this stock, the Board of Internal Improvement, by virtue of the same Act, issued the bonds of the State, signed by the governor and countersigned by the public treasurer, each for the sum of five hundred dollars, and in the following form, to wit:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

"$500.00. $500.00.

"It is hereby certified that the State of North Carolina is justly indebted to ——— or bearer five hundred dollars, redeemable in good and lawful money of the United States, at the Bank of the Republic, in the City of New York, on the first day of January, eighteen hundred and eighty-six, with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable half yearly, at the said bank, on the first days of July and January in each year from the date of this bond until the principal be paid, on surrendering the proper coupon hereto annexed. In witness whereof the governor of the said State, in virtue of power conferred by law, hath signed this bond and caused the great seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, and her public treasurer hath countersigned the same at the seat of government of the said State, this first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-six.

590

"(Signed)

"Thomas Bragg, Governor.

"Countersigned:

"D. W. Courts, Public Treasurer."

"Issued under an Act to amend an Act entitled An Act to Incorporate The Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company and The North Carolina & Western Railroad Company, chapter 282."

The Act which authorized the issue of these bonds contained the following guaranty of their payment (sec. 10):

"Be it further enacted, That as security for the redemption of said certificates of debt the public faith of the State of North Carolina is hereby pledged to the holders thereof, and in addition thereto all the stock held by the State in The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company hereby created shall be pledged for that purpose, and any dividend of profit, which may from time to time be declared on the stock held by the State as aforesaid shall be applied to the payment of the interest accruing on said coupon bonds; but until such dividends of profit may be declared, it shall be the duty of the treasurer, and he is hereby authorized and directed, to pay all such interest as may accrue out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated."

The State received certificates for the stock subscribed and still holds the same, which stock is represented in the meetings of the stockholders of the Railroad Company by a proxy appointed by the governor of the State, by virtue of the charter of the Railroad Company.

William E. Christian, a citizen of Virginia, the complainant in this suit, is the holder of ten of the bonds issued as aforesaid; and as no interest had been paid thereon since the year 1868, he filed this bill in July, 1888, in behalf of himself and all other holders of the bonds referred to who should come in and contribute to the expenses of the suit; and he made defendants to the suit The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company, the president and directors of said Company, personally, F. M. Simmons, the proxy representing the stock owned by the State, and J. M. Worth, treasurer of the State. The bill sets forth the material parts of the Acts in question, which Acts created the Company and authorized the Board of Internal Improvements, on behalf of the State, to subscribe for two-thirds of the capital stock of the Company; and, for that purpose, to borrow money on the credit of the State and issue bonds therefor. It particularly sets forth the section before referred to, which guaranteed the payment of the bonds, and thereto pledged the stock held by the State. It states the fact of the subscription of the stock and the issue of the bonds, and alleges that the complainant is the bona fide holder for value of ten of the bonds, whose numbers are given, all having interest-coupons attached, the first payable January 1, 1866, and one on each bond for every six months thereafter. The bill then avers that, ever since the year 1868, the State has neglected and refused to make any provision for the payment of the interest, and that all interest accruing since that time remains due. As the next averment indicates the legal view on which the bill seems to be founded, we quote it in full. It alleges as follows, to wit:

133 U. S.

"That the aforesaid certificates of debt or bonds are by virtue of the Act of the General Assembly of the said State of North Carolina hereinbefore recited, and of the pledges therein made by the said State, a lien upon the 10,666 shares of stock owned and held by said State, in the said The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company, in payment for which the said bonds or certificates of debt were issued, and upon all dividends of profits that have been and that may hereafter be declared upon said stock, and that the holders of said certificates, among whom is your orator, are in equity and good conscience entitled to have and receive all such dividends of profits as the same are paid for and upon account of the interest due and accruing on said certificates."

The bill then states that it appears from the report of the officers of the Railroad Company made to the annual meeting of stockholders in June, 1881, that for the preceding fiscal year the Company had received more money than was expended in running and operating the road; and that, on the 1st of July, 1881, the Company leased all its property to The Midland North Carolina Railroad Company for the sum of $40,000 per year, the lessee to keep the same in good repair; and then adds:

"That these sums not being required for the necessary expenses of said Company, or a large part thereof, should have been distributed to and among the stockholders of said Company by way of dividends, and that the holders of the coupons of said bonds or certificates, among whom is your orator, are entitled in equity and good conscience to have whatever sum may be received by the State as and for dividends on the stock owned by said State in said Company appropriated to the payment of the interest due and in arrears on said bonds."

The bill further states that the Midland Company having failed to comply with its contract, the lease has been declared forfeited and rescinded, and the property has been restored to the management of The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company.

The bill then states on information and belief that it is the purpose and intent of the directors to again lease the road and property of the Company, to which the complainant objects for reasons set forth in the bill, and asks for an injunction to prevent the same being done; but as this part of the bill and the relief sought in relation thereto was abandoned at the hearing in the court below, and is not urged on this appeal, it is unnecessary to notice it further, except to quote the concluding paragraph, which states the nature of the claim of the bondholders upon the stock owned by the State in the Railroad Company, and is apposite to a full understanding of complainants' position. It is as follows, to wit:

"XXII. That the holders of said bonds, having a lien on the said stock for the payment of the principal and interest of their said debt, are in equity the real owners of said stock, and that the same should be applied by said State, through its proper officers, to the payment of said debt, and that the State should do nothing herself nor allow anything to be done by her officers or by her associates in said Company which would destroy or impair the value of this security to her said creditors; and he insists, being so advised, that it is contrary to equity and good conscience for the proxy of the State to give his consent and thereby the consent of the State to any contract of lease to be made by said Company, without the consent and concurrence of the holders of said bonds, until the State shall have made adequate provisions for the payment of said debt, both principal and interest."

The prayer of the bill, so far as relates to the stock held by the State in the Railroad Company, and to the dividends thereon, is substantially as follows, to wit:

1st. That the bonds or certificates of debt held by the complainant and others may be decreed to be a lien upon the said stock and dividends until paid or redeemed.

2d. That all dividends on said stock may be paid to the complainant and the other bondholders who may join him in the suit.

3d. That if said dividends prove insufficient for this purpose, that a sale of said stock, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay said certificates, may be made under the decree of the court.

4th. That an account may be taken of the amount due for interest, etc.

5th. That a receiver may be appointed to take possession of the dividends hereafter payable to the State.

6th. That the officers of the Railroad Company may be enjoined from paying to the state treasurer, or to any other person on behalf of the State, any dividends which may accrue to the State, and that the treasurer may be enjoined from receiving the same.

To this bill, Simmons, the proxy of the state stock, and Worth, the state treasurer, filed a joint answer, separate from the other defendants, admitting the material statements of the bill, so far as relates to the origin and character of the stock and bonds referred to, but denying that any dividends were or could be made on the stock, in consequence of the expenses and legitimate obligations of the Railroad Company. The concluding averment of their answer is as follows, to wit:

"VII. These defendants, further answering, say that two certificates of stock, one for one thousand and sixty-six shares, and the other for two hundred shares, have been issued to the State of North Carolina by the defendant Company, which certificates, together with the stock represented thereby, are the property of the State and are in her possession, and have been for a long time before the commencement of this suit, with authority in no one to part with the same except by the direction of the General Assembly of the State; and these de-defendants are advised that, so being the property of the State and in her actual possession, they cannot be taken therefrom or in any wise be affected by any decree rendered in a cause to which the State is not a party; and these defendants rely upon the fact that the State is not a party to this suit as if the same had been specially pleaded."

The other defendants also filed answers to the bill, but it is unnecessary to refer to them, or to other incidental proceedings which took place in the cause. The important facts on which relief is claimed are as above recited from the statements of the pleadings. The bill was dismissed by the court below, and from that decree the present appeal was taken.

From the foregoing summary of the statements and prayer of the bill we see that its object and purpose is to obtain, in behalf of the complainant and other bondholders, the adjudication of a lien upon the stock held by the State of North Carolina in The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company, and upon the dividends on said stock; and the enforcement of that lien by requiring said dividends to be paid to the bondholders, in satisfaction of the amount due on their bonds; and, if these are insufficient, by a sale of said stock, or so much thereof as may be necessary; aided by the appointment of a receiver to take possession of said dividends, and an injunction to restrain the Railroad Company, and its officers, from paying to the State treasurer, or to any other person on behalf of the State, and to restrain said treasurer from receiving, any moneys accruing and payable as dividends on said stock.

How the dividends due to the State can be seized and appropriated to the payment of the bonds, or how the stock held and owned by the State can be sold and transferred, through the medium of a suit in equity, without making the State a party to the suit, it is difficult to comprehend. The general rule certainly is, that all persons whose interests are directly to be affected by a suit in chancery must be made parties. Russell v. Clark, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 98 [8: 281]; Shields v. Barrow, 58 U. S. 17 How. 180, 189 [15: 158, 160]; Ridon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 446 [21: 367]; Williams v. Bankhead, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 563 [22: 184]; McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 340 [28: 1015]. The exceptions to the rule are pointed out in these cases, and do not touch the present case. The State has a direct interest to be affected by such a proceeding. The proposal is to take the property of the State and apply it to the payment of its debts due to the plaintiffs, and to do it through the instrumentality of a court of equity.

The ground on which it is contended that this may be done is, that the property is affected by a pledge, and may therefore be dealt with in rem. But a pledge, in the legal sense, requires to be delivered to the pledgee. He must have the possession of it. He may then, in default of payment of the debt for which the thing is pledged, sell it for the purpose of raising the amount, by merely giving proper notice to the pledgor. In the case of stocks and other choses in action, the pledgee must have possession of the certificate or other documentary title, with a transfer executed to himself, or in blank (unless payable to bearer), so as to give him the control and power of disposal of it. Such things are then called pledges, but more generally collaterals; and they may be used in the same manner as pledges properly so called. If there is no transfer attached to or accompanying the document, it is imperfect as a pledge, and requires a resort to a court of equity to give it effect.

These propositions are so elementary that they hardly need a citation of authorities to support them. Reference may be made, however, to Story on Bailments, § 297 et seq.; Casey v. Cavaroc, 96 U. S. 467 [24: 779].

The stock and dividends of the State of North Carolina, now in question, have nothing about them in the nature of a pledge. The 10th section of the Act of 1855, relied on by the complainant for creating a pledge, must be understood as using the word in a popular and not in a technical sense. That section declares, first, that as security for the redemption of said certificates of debt the public faith of the State is hereby pledged to the holders thereof. This is no more than a solemn promise on the part of the State to redeem the certificates. The section next, in addition to the pledge of the public faith, declares that all the stock held by the State in The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company shall be pledged for the same purpose, and any dividend of profit declared thereon shall be applied to the payment of the interest on said bonds. This was nothing more than a promise that the stock should be held and set apart for the payment of the bonds, and that the dividends should be applied to the interest. There was no actual pledge. It was no more of a pledge than is made by a farmer when he pledges his growing crop, or his stock of cattle, for the payment of a debt, without any delivery thereof. He does not use the word in its technical, but in its popular, sense. His language may amount to a parol mortgage, if such a mortgage can be created; but that is all. So in this case, the pledge given by the State in a Statute may have amounted to a mortgage, but it could amount to nothing more; and if a mortgage, it did not place the mortgagee in possession, but gave him merely a naked right to have the property appropriated and applied to the payment of his debt. But how is that right to be asserted? If the mortgagor be a private person, the mortgagee may cite him into court and have a decree for the foreclosure and sale of the property. The mortgagor, or his assignee, would be a necessary party in such a proceeding. Even when absent, beyond the reach of process, he must still be made a party and at least constructively cited by publication or otherwise. This is established by the authorities before referred to, and many more might be cited to the same effect. The proceeding is a suit against the party to obtain, by decree of court, the benefit of the mortgage right. But where the mortgagor in possession is a sovereign State, no such proceeding can be maintained. The mortgagee's right against the State may be just as good and valid, in a moral point of view, as if it were against an individual. But the State cannot be brought into court or sued by a private party without its consent. It was at first held by this court that, under the Constitution of the United States, a State might be sued in it by a citizen of another State, or of a foreign state; but it was declared by the 11th Amendment that the judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to such suits. New Hampshire v. La. 108 U. S. 76 [27: 656]; Louisiana, Elliott, v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711 [27: 448]; Marye v. Parsons, 114 U. S. 327 [29: 207]; Hagood v. Southern, 117 U. S. 52 [29: 805]; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443 [31: 216].

There is a class of cases, undoubtedly, in which the interests of the State may be indirectly affected by a judicial proceeding without making it a party. Cases of this sort may arise in courts of equity where property is brought under its jurisdiction for foreclosure or some other proceeding, and the State, not having the title in fee or the possession of the property, has some lien upon it, or claim against it, as a judgment against the mortgagor, subsequent to the mortgage. In such a case the foreclosure and sale of the property will not be prevented by the interest which the State has in it; but its right of redemption will remain the same as before. Such cases do not affect the present, in which the object is to take and appropriate the State's property for the purpose of satisfying its obligations. The Siren, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 152, 157 [19: 129, 181]; Briggs v. Light Boat, 11 Allen, 158, 178.

It remains true, therefore, that a bill will not lie to effect a foreclosure and sale, or to obtain possession of property belonging to the State; and for the very plain reason that, in such a case, the State is a necessary party and cannot be sued. This was distinctly held by this court in the case of Cunningham v. Macon & Brunswick R. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446 [27: 992]. In that case the State of Georgia had indorsed the bonds of a railroad company, taking a lien upon the railroad as security. The company failed to pay the interest of the indorsed bonds, and the governor of the State, under the power vested in him, took possession of the road, and put it into the hands of a receiver, who sold it to the State of Georgia and made a conveyance to the State accordingly. Thereupon the State, by the governor and other officers and directors, took possession of and operated the road. The holder of a second mortgage on the same property filed a bill to foreclose their mortgage and to set aside the sale made by the receiver as invalid, and to have priority of lien for reasons stated in the bill. They made the governor, the state treasurer and the state directors of the road parties defendant. This court held that the bill would not lie, because the State was an indispensable party. Mr. Justice Miller, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Whenever it can be clearly seen that the State is an indispensable party to enable the court, according to the rules which govern its procedure, to grant the relief sought, it will refuse to take jurisdiction." Again: "In the case now under consideration the State of Georgia is an indispensable party. It is in fact the only proper defendant in the case. No one sued has any personal interest in the matter, or any official authority to grant the relief asked. No foreclosure suit can be sustained without the State, because she has the legal title to the property, and the purchaser under a foreclosure decree would get no title in the absence of the State. The State is in the actual possession of the property, and the court can deliver no possession to the purchaser. The entire interest adverse to the plaintiff in this suit is the interest of the State of Georgia in the property, of which she has both the title and possession."

148 U. S.

These remarks are strikingly applicable to the present case. The State of North Carolina is the only party really concerned. The whole proceeding is virtually against her. The object of the suit is to get possession of her property; to sequester her dividends (if any there may be), and to compel the payment of them to the complainants; to seize and sell her stock in the railroad, stock of which she is in sole possession. Be it true that the bondholders have a lien on said dividends and stock, it is not a lien that can be enforced without suit, and that a suit against the State.

We are referred to a decision made at the circuit by Chief Justice Waite in the case of Swasey v. North Carolina R. Co. 1 Hughes, 17, in which, in a case similar to the present, it was held that, inasmuch as the shares of stock belonging to the State were pledged for the payment of the complainants' bonds, they were held by the railroad company as trustee for the bondholders as well as the State; and that if the trustee was a party to the suit, it was not necessary that the State should be a party. We are not certain that we are fully in possession of the facts of that case; but if they were the same as in the present case, with the highest respect for the opinions of the lamented chief justice, we cannot assent to the conclusions to which he arrived. In the general principles that a State cannot be sued; that its property, in the possession of its own officers and agents, cannot be reached by its creditors by means of judicial process, and that in any such proceeding the State is an indispensable party, Chief Justice Waite certainly did express his emphatic concurrence, in the able opinion delivered by him on behalf of the court, in the case of Louisiana, Elliott, v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711 [27: 448]. His views in the Swasey Case seem to have been based on the notion that the stock of the State was lodged in the hands of the railroad company as a trustee for the parties concerned, and was not in the hands of the State itself, or of its immediate officers and agents. But if the facts in that case were as he supposed them to be, the facts in the present case are certainly different from that. No stockholder of any company ever had more perfect possession and ownership of his stock than the State of North Carolina has of the stock in question. There may be contract claims against it; but they are claims against the State, because based solely on the contract of the State, and not on possession.

We think that the State is an indispensable party to any proceeding in equity in which its property is sought to be taken and subjected to the payment of its obligations; and that the present suit is of that character, and cannot be sustained.

The decree of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
CHARLES C. WATERS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 208-216.)

Fees of district attorney—not subject to review by Attorney-General—power of Attorney-General over orders of courts.

1. The discretionary fee that may be allowed to a district-attorney for securing a conviction in a case of indictment for a crime tried by a jury is none the less an incident to the trial and judgment because its allowance is contingent upon a conviction.
2. In allowing the counsel fee to the district-attorney the court acts in its judicial capacity, and such allowance, being a judicial act of a court of competent jurisdiction, is not subject to the re-examination and reversal of the Attorney-General.
3. The supervisory power given the Attorney-General by section 868 of the Revised Statutes does not include the power of reviewing the discretion of a judge in making allowances, or of altering his orders and decrees therein.
4. The authority of the Attorney-General is purely of an executive character and cannot by any stretch of construction be made to extend over the proceedings, the judgments or the orders of the courts under whose jurisdiction the district-attorneys, under the law, are required to perform their duties.

[No. 95.]

Submitted Nov. 11, 1889. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims, in favor of claimant, in an action by a District-Attorney of the United States to recover a balance for services performed under section 824 of the Revised Statutes and withheld from him by the Treasury Department under the instructions of the Attorney-General. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Reported below, 21 Ct. Cl. 80.

Mr. Benjamin Wilson for appellants.

Mr. Charles C. Lancaster for appellees.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought in the Court of Claims on the 18th of February, 1885, by a district attorney of the United States to recover a balance of $320, alleged to be due him for services performed under section 824 of the Revised Statutes, and withheld from him by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, under instructions from the Attorney-General.

The material facts in the case, as found by the court below, are substantially as follows: The claimant, Charles C. Waters, for six years immediately preceding the commencement of the action, had been United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of Arkansas, and in his official capacity, during that period, had tried twenty-two indictments for crimes, before a jury, securing a conviction in each case. The district court before which those causes were tried allowed him $30 counsel fee in each case, in addition to the fees otherwise provided for, in accordance, as is claimed, with the provisions of section 824 of the Revised Statutes. When his accounts were forwarded to the accounting officers of the Treasury Department they were submitted to the Attorney-General for his supervision (Rev. Stat. § 368), who reduced the amounts allowed claimant to $10 in five, $15 in fourteen and $20 in three of the cases—in all $320. The accounting officers of the Treasury Department followed the action of the Attorney-General and passed the accounts as reduced.

The practice of reducing the allowances made to district attorneys for counsel fees first began about 1878, when Attorney-General Devens issued the following circular:

"Department of Justice,
"Washington, ———, 1878.

"———, Esq.,

"United States Attorney, District of ———:

"Sir: Your attention is invited to the concluding clause of section 824 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, permitting an allowance not exceeding $30, in addition to the other legal fees of the United States attorney, in proportion to the importance and difficulty of the cause, when a conviction is had before a jury on an indictment for crime. Whenever you have obtained the approval of the court to a special fee under this clause, you will forward with your account of the same to the first auditor a brief statement of the points and circumstances in each case, which render it one of the importance and difficulty contemplated by the statutes. Your account, together with the statement, will be submitted by the first auditor (in such cases as he deems necessary) to the Attorney-General, in order to determine from the means afforded whether such special counsel fees should be allowed in the final settlement.

"Very respectfully, Charles Devens,
"Attorney-General."

Previously to that time such allowances by the court were accepted without alteration. The claimant's whole counsel fees would not exceed the maximum of $6,000 in any one year.

It is to recover this balance of $320 that the suit is brought. The Court of Claims, upon the foregoing facts, rendered judgment in favor of claimant for the amount in dispute. 21 Ct. Cl. 80. The assignment of errors is a general one, and is merely to the effect that the court below erred, upon the facts found, in its conclusion of law, that the appellee was entitled to recover from the United States the sum of $320.

The fees in question were allowed by the court under sections 823 and 824 of the Revised Statutes. Section 823 provides that "the following and no other compensation shall be taxed and allowed to attorneys, solicitors and proctors in the courts of the United States, to district attorneys, clerks, etc., . . . except in cases otherwise expressly provided for by law." Section 824, after limiting the fees to the district attorneys for their official services therein named, each at a specific amount, irrespective of the labor and responsibility involved, provides in its concluding clause that, "when an indictment for crime is tried before a jury and a conviction is had, the district attorney may be allowed, in addition to the attorney's fees herein provided, a counsel fee, in proportion to the importance and difficulty of the cause, not exceeding thirty dollars."

The exact amount of the allowance, within the prescribed limit, thus authorized, is left discretionary; but the section does not, in so many words, designate the person or tribunal by whom that discretion shall be exercised. The contention of the United States is that this discretionary power is vested in the Attorney-General; and that the fixing of the amount of a special counsel fee, in the absence of express legislative provision, is not a judicial but an executive act, to be exercised by the Attorney-General, as chief of the department to which district attorneys belong. The view on which the court below rested its decision was that this discretionary power pertains to the judicial functions of the court before which the cause was tried, and by which Congress manifestly intended that its importance and difficulty should be determined; and that, therefore, the allowance by the district court of the fees in question was conclusive upon the Attorney-General and the accounting officers of the Treasury Department.

It will be observed that none of the provisions of these sections has any reference whatever to the matter of rendering or revising accounts, or to the powers and duties of the Attorney-General, or of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, in relation to the accounts of district attorneys. They relate exclusively to the compensation or fees to be taxed and allowed those officers; and the concluding paragraph applies alone to the allowance of the additional fee to the district attorney, for services rendered within the court on the trial of a cause, all the steps and incidents of which, including the taxation of costs arising in the course of the proceedings, are within the knowledge and under the jurisdiction of the court. They, in express terms, require the district attorney's fees to be taxed, and no other tribunal can tax them except the court having jurisdiction. In the case of The Baltimore, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 377 [19: 463], referring to the provision of the Statute of February 26, 1853 (10 Stat. 161), part of the first section of which was incorporated in hac verba into these two sections of the Revised Statutes, it was held that fees and costs allowed to attorneys, solicitors and proctors in admiralty cases were taxable as costs, as an incident to the trial and judgment. Says the court in that case, page 392:

"Fees and costs, allowed to the officers therein named, are now regulated by the Act of the 26th of February, 1853, which provides in its first section that, in lieu of the compensation now allowed by law to attorneys, solicitors, proctors, district attorneys, clerks, marshals, witnesses, jurors, commissioners and printers, the following and no other compensation shall be allowed. Attorneys, solicitors and proctors may charge their clients reasonably for their services, in addition to the taxable costs, but nothing can be taxed as costs against the opposite party, as an incident to the judgment, for their services, except the costs and fees therein described and enumerated."

No distinction is made by the court or by the statutes between the fees prescribed in admiralty cases as an incident to the judgment and those so incident in other cases. All the costs and fees "therein described and enumerated" are put on the same footing, as taxable costs, incident to the judgment. The discretionary fee that "may be allowed" to a district attorney for securing a conviction in a case of indictment for a crime tried by a jury is none the less an incident to the trial and judgment because its allowance is contingent upon a conviction. Both before and since the enactment of the Statute of 1853, courts in the exercise of their discretion have allowed counsel fees in many cases without question when reviewed by this court. In The Apollon, 23 U. S. 9 Wheat. 362, 379 [6: 111, 115], and in Canter v. The American and Ocean Insurance Companies, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 307, 319 [7: 688, 692], the allowance of counsel fees by the court below was affirmed by this court as a matter within the sound discretion of the court before whom the cause was tried; and those decisions were cited with approval in Glendale Elastic Fabric Co. v. Smith, 100 U. S. 110 [25: 547], and Paper Bag Cases, 105 U. S. 766, 772 [26: 959, 961]. In United States v. Ingersoll, 1 Crabbe, 135, suit was brought by the United States against a United States district attorney, for money had and received. He pleaded, as a set-off, among other items, $5,083.20 for costs taxed and allowed in criminal cases, payment of which had been withheld by the Treasury Department. It was held that those costs (which were attorney's fees) constituted a fair and legal set-off; and the court laid down the principle, as concisely stated in the syllabus, that "the allowance of costs to a district attorney is altogether in the jurisdiction of the judge, and not within the power of the officers of the treasury."

In harmony with those decisions, and in accordance with the practical construction placed by the courts, by the Attorney-General himself and by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, upon the Act of February 26, 1853 (now sections 823 and 824, Revised Statutes), the judge before whom the case was tried always exercised the discretion of allowing an additional counsel fee to district attorneys, in the specified cases, without the revision of any executive officer, from the passage of that Act until 1878.

But in 1878 the Attorney-General, in the circular letter hereinbefore set forth, assumed the authority to change the uniform practice, and to revise and alter the allowances of those counsel fees made by the judge. In our opinion this attempted change was not warranted by law. In allowing the counsel fee to the district attorney the court acted in its judicial capacity, and such allowance, being a judicial act of a court of competent jurisdiction, was not subject to the re-examination and reversal of the Attorney-General. United States v. O'Grady, 89 U. S. 22 Wall. 641 [22: 773]; Butterworth v. United States, Hoe, 112 U. S. 50, 67 [28: 656, 661]; Hayburn's Case, 2 Dall. 409, 410 [1: 436], note a.

If the Attorney-General has the right, upon information derived from a statement made to him by a district attorney as to the facts and circumstances of a trial in court, to reduce a fee allowed by the court, he may with equal right and propriety increase such fee should he determine that the judge had underestimated the importance and difficulty of the cause tried before him, and had undervalued the services of such district attorney.

It is contended that the power of the Attorney-General to make the reduction in question is vested in him by virtue of section 368 of the Revised Statutes, which provides as follows:

"The Attorney-General shall exercise general supervisory powers over the accounts of district attorneys, marshals, clerks and other officers of the courts of the United States."

The supervisory powers given in this section are precisely those which were exercised by the Secretary of the Interior before the Department of Justice was established, and which were transferred from the Secretary of the Interior to the Attorney-General by the 15th section of the Act of June 22, 1870, chap. 150 (16 Stat. 164). That section provides that "the supervisory powers now exercised by the Secretary of the Interior over the accounts of the district attorneys, marshals, clerks and other officers of the courts of the United States shall be exercised by the Attorney-General, who shall sign all requisitions for the advance or payment of moneys out of the treasury, on estimates or accounts, subject to the same control now exercised on like estimates or accounts by the first auditor or first comptroller of the treasury."

It was never claimed by the Secretary of the Interior, nor considered by the officers of the Treasury Department, that those supervisory powers over accounts gave him any authority to make an allowance of fees under section 824 of the Revised Statutes, or to review and reverse a judicial order allowing such fees.

A close examination of the Statutes by which these supervisory powers are defined shows, as well stated in the opinion of the court below, that they extend to seeing that the accounts are in due form, in accordance with the law and regulations; that all receipts are properly credited; that all items of payments and allowances are authorized by law; that nothing is retained beyond the maximum fixed by the statute, and that in every respect the law relating to the same has been fully complied with; and does not include the power of reviewing the discretion of a judge in making allowances, or of altering his orders and decrees therein.

We are unable to perceive the pertinence and force of the argument drawn from the authority of the Attorney-General, as chief of the Department of Justice, exercising the power of superintendence and direction over the district attorneys as subordinate officers belonging to that Department. This authority is purely of an executive character, analogous to that of all the other chiefs of their respective Departments. The superintendence and direction which he exercises, however comprehensive and minute it may be, over the duties of those officers which are purely administrative and executive, cannot by any stretch of construction be made to extend over the proceedings, the judgments or the orders of the courts under whose jurisdiction the district attorneys, under the law, are required to perform their duties.

With regard to the supervisory power of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department in this connection, it is to be observed that, according to the record in the present case, those officers simply "followed the action of the Attorney-General," which, as we have already seen, was unauthorized by law. The counsel for the United States, while insisting that the discretion in question is vested in the Attorney-General, concedes in his brief that it was not meant to be given to the accounting officers. In this connection he says:

"The accounting officers of the treasury could never have been given this discretion in fixing an additional allowance; for, from the nature of the case, they know nothing about the difficulty and importance of the work done by a district attorney, and because fixing compensation for services is foreign to their ordinary business. The discretion is of a kind they never exercise, and, moreover, when exercised by another, they cannot alter or amend what is done."

Further discussion of this point is not necessary. The powers and duties of the accounting officers are well described by the court below in the following language, with which we agree:

"Those powers and duties are well understood. The auditor merely examines and audits accounts, neither allowing nor disallowing the same, certifies balances, and transmits the same to the comptroller for his decision thereon. The comptroller decides whether or not the items are authorized by statute, and are legally chargeable. He has no power to review, revise and alter items expressly allowed by statute, nor items of expenditures or allowances made upon the judgment and discretion of other officers charged with the duty of expending the money or of making the allowances. His duty extends no further than to see that the officers charged with that duty have authorized the expenditures or have made the allowances." 21 Ct. Cl. 87, 88.

For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the Court of Claims is affirmed.

JOHN COULAM ET AL., Appts.

v.

ANN DOULL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 216-233.)

Utah Statute as to wills—extrinsic evidence—ambiguity in will—when explainable by parol evidence—construction of the courts of the State from whence Statute was derived.

1. Under the Statute of Utah, that when any testator shall omit to provide in his or her will for any of his or her children or for the issue of any deceased child, unless it shall appear that such omission was intentional, such child, or the issue of such child, shall have the same share in the estate of the testator as if he or she had died intestate, extrinsic evidence is admissible to show that the testator's omission to provide for a child was intentional.
2. Where a devise is, on the face of it, clear and intelligible, yet from external circumstances an ambiguity arises as to which of two or more things or persons the testator referred to, it being legally certain that he intended one or the other, evidence of his declarations, of the instructions given for his will and of other circumstances of the like nature, is admissible to determine his intention.

3. The rule ordinarily followed in construing statutes is to adopt the construction of the courts of the country by whose Legislature the statute was originally adopted. In this case the court follows the construction of the State which was the source of the Statute, to wit: Massachusetts; not that of the State from which the Statute was immediately taken, to wit: California.

[No. 124.]

Submitted Nov. 18, 1889. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah, in favor of defendant, in an action by the children of John Coulam and by Zera Snow to recover an undivided interest in real estate in Salt Lake City. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

John Coulam of Salt Lake City, in the County of Salt Lake and Territory of Utah, died at that place on the 20th day of May, A. D. 1877, leaving him surviving his widow, now Ann Doull (she having since his death intermarried with one George Doull), and John Coulam, George Coulam, Henry Coulam, Fanny Baker and Sarah J. Heiner, his children and only heirs-at-law. At the time of his death, the said John Coulam was seised in fee simple, and in possession, of the following described real property, to wit: "All of lot No. six (6), in block fifty-nine (59), in plot 'B,' Salt Lake City survey, in the City and County of Salt Lake and Territory aforesaid, with the tenements and appurtenances thereunto belonging." He left a last will and testament, which was duly admitted to probate, and was as follows:

"I, John Coulam, being of sound mind and memory, do make and publish this my last will and testament in manner and form following: I give and bequeath unto my beloved wife, Ann Coulam, all my personal property and real estate, to wit, the sum of one thousand and twenty-five ($1,025) dollars, held in trust by Wells, Fargo & Co., and now due me from the Hon. William A. Hamill by note now in my possession; and I also give and bequeath unto my said beloved wife Ann my freehold estate known and recorded as lot six (6), block fifty-nine (59), plot 'B,' Salt Lake City survey, with all the messuages, tenements and appurtenances thereunto belonging; and all the rest, residue and remainder, and all the debts accruing to me, of my personal estate, goods and chattels of what kind and nature, soever, I give and bequeath the same to my said beloved wife, and I hereby revoke all former wills by me made."

Upon the 2d of November, 1885, the children of the testator and one Zera Snow brought an action in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory to recover an undivided interest in the real estate above described, the children claiming, as heirs-at-law, three quarters of the estate, real and personal, of Coulam, deceased, and Zera Snow, as owner by conveyance from said heirs-at-law made since the death of John Coulam, an undivided one-fourth part of the real estate in question, the plaintiffs together averring title to an undivided three quarters thereof.

The complaint set up the will, and alleged "that in or by said will said John Coulam, testator, omitted to provide for any of his said children, the said plaintiffs; that it does not appear that said omission was intentional." The defendant answered, and denied "that the omission of said decedent testator to provide in his said will for his said children was not intentional on the part of said testator, and, on the contrary, alleges that said omission was intentional on the part of said testator and so appears." A jury having been expressly waived, the cause was heard by the court.

Upon the trial evidence was offered on behalf of the defendant, and admitted over the objection of the plaintiffs, tending to show that before and after and at the time of the execution and publication of the will, and up to the time of his death, the testator was in full possession of his faculties, and of sound and perfect memory; that he had no other property, when the will was executed or at his death, than that mentioned in the will; that he had previously personally prepared the drafts of two other wills, which he called for and which were before him when the will in question was drawn, both of those prior wills being in his own handwriting and signed by him, and omitting to provide for his children; that the instrument in question was drawn by a Mr. Campbell, to whom the testator gave instructions as to what it should contain; that the testator's wife, the defendant in this action, had lived with him for nearly thirty years, had raised his children, the youngest from babyhood, and had worked hard and helped to make the money with which the houses upon the lot were built; that the children had all attained maturity, were married and had homes of their own (chiefly bestowed on them by the testator and his wife), and were in comfortable circumstances; and that his daughters and sons were in daily attendance upon him during his last illness, and when the will was drawn up and executed. None of the evidence was offered for the purpose of showing advancements.

The court thereupon rendered its decision in writing, and made and filed the following finding of fact:

"That the omission and failure of John Coulam, senior, the testator, to provide for any of his children, the said plaintiffs, in his last will and testament, was intentional on his part."

And the conclusion of law: "That the defendant is entitled to recover herein."

Judgment was accordingly entered for the defendant, and the cause is brought here on appeal.

Messrs. William C. Hall and John A. Marshall, for appellants:

The intent of a testator must be found on the face of the will, and extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to show it, the exception being where such evidence is needed to remove a latent ambiguity.

1 Jarman, Wills, 708-710, and note; 1 Redfield, Wills, 589; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 290; Hawkins, Wills, 9; Mann v. Mann, 1 Johns. Ch. 281; Tucker v. Seaman's Aid Society, 7 Met. 188; Spencer v. Higgins, 22 Conn. 526; Kurtz v. Hibner, 55 Ill. 514; Kenebel v. Scrafton, 2 East, 541.

No extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove an intention against revocation.

Marston v. Roe, 8 Ad. & El. 14; 2 Greenl. Ev. §§ 684, 685; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Wasserman, 22 Fed. Rep. 874.

Although a child had no legacy left him in the will of the parent, yet in Massachusetts, if an intention to omit him appeared, he would not be entitled to any portion of the estate.

Tucker v. Boston, 18 Pick. 167; Wilson v. Fosket, 6 Met. 400.

Parol evidence, including evidence of the parol declarations of the testator, is admissible in that State to show that the testator intended to omit to provide for his child.

Wilson v. Fosket, 6 Met. 400.

Iowa adopted the Massachusetts Statute and adopted with it the judicial construction placed thereon by the Massachusetts courts.

Lorieux v. Keller, 5 Iowa, 196.

Such mistake or accident as will permit the child to inherit has been held in Massachusetts to be perfectly consistent with an intentional omission of the child's name from the will.

Ramsdill v. Wentworth, 101 Mass. 126.

In Missouri to disinherit a child it is not necessary that he should be named or provided for in the will of the parent, if the omission to do so appears to be intentional; and such intention can be proved by intrinsic evidence.

Bradley v. Bradley, 24 Mo. 811; Burch v. Brown, 46 Mo. 441; Pounds v. Dale, 48 Mo. 270; Wetherall v. Harris, 51 Mo. 65; Chace v. Chace, 6 R. I. 407.

In adopting the California Statute, we adopted its received construction in California, which must be considered as accompanying the Statute to this Territory, and forming an integral part of it.

Cathcart v. Robinson, 30 U. S. 5 Pet. 264 (8: 120); Wells, Res. Adjudicata and Stare Decisis, § 500; Bemis v. Becker, 1 Kan. 248; Estate of Garraud, 35 Cal. 336; Estate of Utz, 43 Cal. 200; Pearson v. Pearson, 46 Cal. 610.

Evidence of surrounding circumstances cannot change the legal effect of clear and unambiguous words.

2 Taylor, Ev. (8th Eng. ed.) §§ 1201, 1202; 8 Jarman, Wills, 700, note g; 2 Jarman, Wills, 115; Reynolds v. Commerce Fire Ins. Co. 47 N. Y. 606; Partridge v. Phoenix Mut. F. Ins. Co. 32 U. S. 15 Wall. 578 (21: 280); Maryland v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 89 U. S. 22 Wall. 105 (22: 713); Kurtz v. Hibner, 55 Ill. 514; Waldron v. Waldron, 45 Mich. 350.

No intention to omit to provide for the children appears by reason of the absolute devise to the appellee.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Wasserman, 22 Fed. Rep. 874; Pounds v. Dale, 48 Mo. 270; Ramsdill v. Wentworth, 106 Mass. 320; Bush v. Lindsey, 44 Cal. 126.

Messrs. Ben Sheeks and Joseph L. Rawlins, for respondent:

The evidence was admissible.

Greenl. Ev. § 297; 2 Whart. Ev. § 956; At- kinson v. Cummins, 50 U. S. 9 How. 479 (13: 223); Tillotson v. Race, 22 N. Y. 122-126.

It was to afford relief to a child in case of actual oversight or mistake, and not to defeat the real intention of the testator, that the Statute was enacted.

Church v. Crocker, 8 Mass. 20; Wilson v. Fosket, 6 Met. 400; Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 291-303.

The effect of extrinsic evidence in this case is not to change the will, but to show that the will is precisely what it purports to be. For such purpose, extrinsic evidence is competent and admissible.

Stephen, Dig. of Ev. art. 91 (9) Chase's ed. 170; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 296; Reynolds v. Robinson, 32 N. Y. 103; Hurst v. Beach, 5 Madd. 351; Abbott, Trial Ev. 182, 186; Taylor, Ev. §§ 1227, 1229, 1231, and cases cited; 1 Williams, Exrs. 237, note S; Wilson v. Fosket, 6 Met. 400; Buckley v. Gerard, 123 Mass. 8; Peters v. Siders, 126 Mass. 135; Loring v. Marsh, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 350 (18: 804); Lorieux v. Keller, 5 Iowa, 196, 203; Reynolds v. Robinson, 32 N. Y. 107.

The evidence was admitted to show that the publication of the will as it is, giving the property to the wife to the exclusion of the children, was not the result of oversight or mistake, but the intentional act of the testator.

Abbott, Trial Ev. 186.

The implied revocation, by a subsequent marriage and birth of a child, being founded on the presumption of intention, may be rebutted by parol evidence.

4 Kent, Com. 523; Brady v. Cubitt, 1 Doug. (Eng.) 81; Brush v. Wilkins, 4 Johns. Ch. 506.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Accepting the finding of fact that the testator intentionally excluded his children from any share of the property disposed of by the will, respecting which, upon this record, there could be no doubt, the only question in the case is as to whether the court erred in admitting extrinsic evidence to establish that the omission to provide for the children was intentional. The solution of this question depends upon the proper construction of the Statutes of Utah bearing upon the subject.

Under those Statutes a will or codicil to "pass the estate of the devisor" must be in writing; and by section 1 of "An Act Relative to the Estates of Decedents," approved February 18, 1876, which is section 685 of the Compiled Statutes of Utah of that year "every devise purporting to convey all the real estate of the testator" carried that subsequently acquired, "unless it shall clearly appear by his or her will that he or she intended otherwise."

Sections 9, 10 and 12 are as follows:

(693) "Sec. 9. When any child shall have been born after the making of its parent's will, and no provision shall have been made for him or her therein, such child shall have the same share in the estate of the testator as if the testator had died intestate; and the share of such child shall be assigned as provided by law, in case of intestate estates, unless it shall be apparent from the will that it was the intention of the testator that no provision should be made for such child.

(694) "Sec. 10. When any testator shall omit to provide in his or her will for any of his or her children or for the issue of any deceased child, unless it shall appear that such omission was intentional, such child, or the issue of such child, shall have the same share in the estate of the testator as if he or she had died intestate, to be assigned as provided in the preceding section."

(696) "Sec. 12. If such child or children, or their descendants, so unprovided for, shall have had an equal proportion of the testator's estate bestowed on them in the testator's lifetime, by way of advancement, they shall take nothing in virtue of the provisions of the three preceding sections." (Compiled Laws of Utah, 1876, chap. II. tit. XIV. pp. 270, 271, 272.)

Section 19 provides that, in case of intestacy, if the decedent left a husband or a wife and more than one child, the estate of the decedent shall go, one fourth to the surviving husband or wife for life, and the remainder, with the other three fourths, to the children.

It will be seen that section 12 applies to advancements during the lifetime of the testator, and section 9 to a child born after the execution of the will, no provision having been made for it therein. The child is to take its share as provided by law in case of intestacy, "unless it shall be apparent from the will that it was the intention of the testator that no provision should be made for such child." And section 10 relates to children in being, or the issue of any deceased child, at the time of the execution of the will, who are to take as in case of intestacy, "unless it shall appear that such omission was intentional."

As to a child born after the making of the will, the intention to omit must be apparent from the will; as to children in being when the will is made, the Statute does not say how it shall appear that the omission was intentional. But it is insisted on behalf of appellants that such intention is required in the latter case also to appear from the will, and cannot be shown by evidence aliunde.

The source of the Statute under consideration was undoubtedly that of Massachusetts upon the same subject, though it is said that this particular Statute was taken from a similar one in California.

The first and second sections of an Act of the Province of Massachusetts, passed in the year 1700 (12 Wm. III.), with their preambles, read as follows:

"Forasmuch as it often happens that children are not borne till after the death of their fathers, and also have no provision made for them in their wills,—

"Be it therefore enacted, etc., That as often as any child shall happen to be borne after the death of the father, without having any provision made in his will, every such posthumous child shall have right and interest in the estate of his or her father, in like manner as if he had died intestate, and the same shall accordingly be assigned and set out as the law directs for the distribution of the estates of intestates.

"And whereas, through the anguish of the deceased testator, or through his solicitous intention though in health, or through the oversight of the scribe, some of the testator's children are omitted and not mentioned in the will, many children also being borne after the making of the will, tho' in the lifetime of their parents,—

"Be it therefore enacted, etc., That any child or children not having a legacy given them in the will of their father or mother, every such child shall have a proportion of the estate of their parents given and set out unto them as the law directs for the distribution of the estates of intestates; provided, such child or children have not had an equal proportion of his estate bestowed on them by the father in his lifetime." (1 Mass. Prov. Laws, 480.)

This Provincial Act was in effect repealed by an Act of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, passed February 6, 1784, by which it was revised, the phraseology somewhat changed and the preambles omitted. (Mass. Stat. 1788, chap. 24, §§ 1, 8.)

By the first section of this latter Act any person seised in fee simple of any estate is authorized to devise the same to and among his children or others, as he shall think fit, without any limitation of persons whatsoever. By the eighth section it is provided "that any child or children, or their legal representatives in case of their death, not having a legacy given him, her or them in the will of their father or mother, shall have a proportion of the estate of their parents assigned unto him, her or them, as though such parent had died intestate; provided such child, children or grandchildren have not had an equal proportion of the deceased's estate bestowed on him, her or them in the deceased's lifetime."

The supreme judicial court held that the object of the Statute was to furnish a remedy solely for those cases, where, from accident or other causes, the children or grandchildren might be supposed to have been forgotten by the testator in making his will; and that, whenever from the tenor of the will or any part of it, sufficient evidence appeared to indicate that the testator had not forgotten his children or grandchildren, as the case might be, when he made his will, they should not be entitled to a distributive share of his estate, although no legacy was given them by the will. Terry v. Foster, 1 Mass. 146; Wild v. Brewer, 2 Mass. 570; Church v. Crocker, 3 Mass. 17; Wilder v. Goss, 14 Mass. 357.

Thus, although the Statute provided that a child should take, notwithstanding its name was omitted, the court ruled that if on the face of the will it appeared that such omission was intentional, the child could not take; hence, whenever the will was silent, the child took, and to prevent that result, where such silence was by design, the Statute was amended, so as to read as follows:

"When any testator shall omit to provide in his will for any of his children, or for the issue of any deceased child, they shall take the same share of his estate, both real and personal, that they would have been entitled to if he had died intestate, unless they shall have been provided for by the testator in his lifetime, or unless it shall appear that such omission was intentional, and not occasioned by any mistake or accident." (Sec. 21, chap. 62, Rev. Stat. Mass. 1836.)

How appear? Evidently aliunde the will. If it must appear upon the face of the will that the omission was intentional, the words inserted in the Statute were superfluous; for, if it did so appear the child could not take, notwithstanding the provision that in case of omission it should take, inasmuch as the latter provision was only inserted to give the omitted child a share, not against the intention of the testator, but because of the presumption of an oversight. Hence, in Wilson v. Fosket, 6 Met. 400, the court held that under the Statute as amended evidence dehors the will was admissible to establish that the omission was intentional; and such is the settled law of Massachusetts. Converse v. Wales, 4 Allen, 512; Buckley v. Gerard, 128 Mass. 8; Ramodill v. Wentworth, 101 Mass. 125. In the latter case the court said: "The operation of the Statute is peculiar, but there is no violation under it of the rules of evidence. The only issue is whether provision was omitted in the will by design, and without mistake or accident. Parol evidence is admitted, although the result may change or modify the disposition of the testator's estate. The will is used to show that there is no legacy under it; and however the issue may be established, there is no conflict with its terms."

In Bancroft v. Ives, 3 Gray, 367, the Statute of Massachusetts was held to apply to children born after the making of the will and before the death of their father. The argument was pressed that the language "omit to provide in his will" necessarily meant and should be confined to children living at the time of making the will. This argument was regarded by Chief Justice Shaw as plausible but not sound, because as a man's will is ambulatory until his decease, the time to which the question of omission applied was the time of the testator's death. If, therefore, he had then made no provision by his will, the case of the Statute arose, for he had made a will, but left a child without having made any provision for such child.

By the Utah Statute, however, specific provision is made for children born after the making of the will, and also for children in being but omitted when the will is made. Children born after the making of the will but before the decease inherit, unless it appears from the will that the testator intended that they should not. And this applies to posthumous children.

Mr. Jarman lays it down that marriage and the birth of a child, conjointly, revoked a man's will, whether of personal or real estate, these circumstances producing such a total change in the testator's situation as to lead to a presumption that he could not have intended a disposition of property previously made to continue unchanged. But this effect is not produced where there is a provision made for both wife and children by the will itself (Kenebel v. Scrafton, 2 East, 580), or by a previous settlement providing for both. 1 Jarman on Wills, *123, 125.

Revocation, treated as matter of presumption merely, was thought, in Brady v. Cubitt, 1 Doug. (Eng.) 31, open to be rebutted by parol evidence, and this is guardedly conceded by Chancellor Kent in Brush v. Wilkins, 4 Johns. Ch. 506, and by Mr. Greenleaf, 2d vol., § 684.

But, as is stated in a note to that section, the doctrine that the presumption is not conclusive has been overruled, upon great consideration, in the cases of Marston v. Roe, 8 Ad. & El. 14, and Iraell v. Rodon, 2 Moore, P.C. 51, in the former of which it was, among other things, resolved, that "where an unmarried man, without children by a former marriage, devises all the estate he has at the time of making his will, and leaves no provision for any child of a future marriage, the law annexes to such will the tacit condition that, if he afterwards marries, and has a child born of such marriage, the will shall be revoked;" and that "evidence not amounting to proof of publication cannot be received in a court of law, to show that the testator intended that his will should stand good, notwithstanding his subsequent marriage and the birth of issue; because these events operate as a revocation by force of a rule of law, and independent of the testator."

The subject is regulated in this country by the statutes of the several States and Territories, marriage alone working revocation under some, and both marriage and birth of issue being required under others, while subsequently born children unprovided for are allowed to take unless a contrary intention appears.

But the provision we are considering concerns children in being when the will is made. As to children born after death or the making of the will, the reason why the intention to omit them should appear on the face of the will is obvious. It is the same as that upon which the doctrine of revocation rests—the change in the testator's situation. But this reason loses its force so far as children living when the will is made are concerned; and this explains the marked difference between the sections of the Statute before us applicable to the two classes.

The Statute raises a presumption that the omission to provide for children or grandchildren living when a will is made is the result of forgetfulness, infirmity or misapprehension, and not of design; but this is a rebuttable presumption, in view of the language employed, which negatives a taking contrary to an intentional omission, and at the same time leaves undefined the mode by which the affirmative purpose is to be established.

Legal presumptions drawn by the courts independently of or against the words of an instrument may be, in some instances, repelled by extrinsic evidence, and this statutory presumption of an unexpressed intention to provide may be rebutted in the same way.

Under section 12, a pretermitted child is entitled to no share if it has had an equal proportion by way of advancement, but it is not contended that this fact must necessarily appear from the will when that is not required by statute, yet proof of advancements and of intentional omission alike defeat the claimant.

The rule as to patent and latent ambiguities, so far as analogous, sustains the same conclusion. Where a devise is, on the face of it, clear and intelligible, yet from external circumstances an ambiguity arises as to which of two or more things, or of two or more persons, the testator referred to, it being legally certain that he intended one or the other, evidence of his declarations, of the instructions given for his will, and of other circumstances of the like nature, is admissible to determine his intention.

The will in this case is entirely unambiguous. The testator's intention was that his wife should have the property. There being children at the time of the execution of the will, an ambiguity may be said to have been created by operation of the Statute, as to their having been intentionally omitted, which ambiguity evidence of the character named at once removed.

Children so situated do not set up title under the will but under the Statute. The will is used to establish that they have no legacy or devise under it. Then the inquiry arises whether the testator intended to omit them. Evidence that he did does not conflict with the tenor of the will. It simply proves that he meant what he said. Instead of tending to show the testator's real purpose to have been other than is apparent upon the face of the will, it confirms the purpose there indicated. The fact of the existence of children when a will is made is proven dehors the instrument, and since under the Statute that evidence opens up a question as to the testator's intention, which but for the Statute could not have arisen, and which by the Statute is not required to be determined by the will, we cannot perceive why the disposal of it should be so limited.

It is contended that the statutory provision in question was copied from that of California, and that we are bound by the construction previously put upon it by the courts of the latter State. The California Act declared that in case of the omission of the testator to provide in his will for his children, they should be entitled to the same share as in case of intestacy, "unless it shall appear that such omission was intentional." Laws of California, 1850, chap. 52, sec. 17.

In Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 291, 302, the Supreme Court of California, speaking through its then chief justice, Mr. Justice Field, said: "The only object of the Statute is to protect the children against omission or oversight, which not unfrequently arises from sickness, old age or other infirmity, or the peculiar circumstances under which the will is executed. When, however, the children are present to the mind of the testator, and the fact that they are mentioned by him is conclusive evidence of this, the Statute affords no protection, if provision is not made for them. The inference follows that no provision was intended;" and Terry v. Foster, Wild v. Brewer, Church v. Crocker and Wilder v. Goss, supra, were cited.

But in Re Estate of Garraud, 35 Cal. 386, it was held that evidence aliunde the will was not admissible to show that the omission to make provision for children was intentional, and, in respect to the Massachusetts decisions, the court was of opinion that the words "and not occasioned by any mistake or accident," found in the Statute of Massachusetts but not in that of California, were very material, and furnished the real ground for the admission of extrinsic evidence. We do not think so. While those words may strengthen the argument in favor of the admissibility of the evidence, it by no means follows that the construction of the Statute should be otherwise in their absence. The evidence which shows that the omission was intentional establishes that it was not through accident or mistake. Action purposely taken by one in the sufficient possession of his faculties, and not induced by fraud or undue influence, excludes in itself the idea of casualty or error.

We are satisfied that this particular phraseology was used out of abundant caution, as serving to render the proper construction somewhat plainer, and that the construction must be the same, although those words are not used.

The rule ordinarily followed in construing statutes is to adopt the construction of the courts of the country by whose Legislature the statute was originally adopted, but we are not constrained to apply that rule in this instance. The original source of the Statute is to be found in the legislation of Massachusetts. The Supreme Court of California declined to treat the received construction in Massachusetts as accompanying the Statute and forming an integral part of it, upon a distinction which we do not regard as well drawn. That construction commends itself to our judgment, and we hold that the Supreme Court of the Territory properly applied it.

The evidence was competent, and the judgment must be affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer, not having been a member of the court at the time this case was considered, took no part in its decision.

UNITED STATES, Appt., v.

JOHN HANCOCK, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 196-197.)

Mexican grant, confirmation of—decree, when conclusive—Act of July 1, 1864—proof of fraud must be clear—survey.

1. A confirmation of a Mexican grant of a tract with specified boundaries, covered all the land within those boundaries, irrespective of quantity, and this, notwithstanding there appeared in the prior proceedings statements that the tract contained a certain amount, "a little more or less," which amount was very much less than that included within the boundaries.
2. When a decree gives the boundaries of the tract to which the claim is confirmed with precision, and has become final by stipulation of the United States and the withdrawal of their appeal therefrom, it is conclusive, not only on the question of title, but also as to the boundaries which it specifies.
3. The Act of Congress of July 1, 1864 (13 U. S. Stat. 334, § 7), requires the surveyor-general, in making surveys of the private land claims finally confirmed, to follow the decree of confirmation as closely as practicable whenever such decree designates the specific boundaries of the claim.
4. Clear, convincing and unambiguous proofs of fraud are required to set aside a patent; proofs which only create a suspicion do not bring the assurance of certain wrong.

NOTE.—That patents for land may be set aside for fraud, see note to Miller v. Kerr, Bk. 5, p. 381.

As to errors in surveys and descriptions in patents for lands and how construed, see note to Watts v. Lindsey, Bk. 5, p. 423.

5. Where a survey was made in good faith and has been unchallenged for over fifteen years, whatever doubts may exist as to its correctness must be resolved in favor of the title as patented.

[No. 688.]

Submitted Jan. 8, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California, dismissing a suit in equity to set aside a patent of land in California. Affirmed.

Reported below, 80 Fed. Rep. 851.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This is a bill filed to set aside a patent. The facts are these:

In 1848 Michael White petitioned for a tract of land at the mouth of the Cajon de los Mejicanos. This petition was sustained and a grant made by Governor Manuel Micheltorena, the Mexican governor of the Californias, which reads:

"Whereas Don Michael White, a Mexican by naturalization, has petitioned for his own benefit and that of his family for the place known by the name of 'Muscupiate,' bounded on the north by the foot of the mountain, on the south by Agua Caliente, and on the west by the 'Alisos' (sycamores), which are on the other side of the creek called 'De los Negros,' having practiced the proceedings and relative observation, according to the direction of the laws and regulations, exercising the authority conferred upon me in the name of the Mexican nation, I have concluded to grant him the aforesaid land, declaring it to be his property, by the present letters, subject to the approval of the most excellent Departmental Assembly, in and under the following conditions.

"8d. The land of which grant is hereby made consists of one league (un sitio de granada mayor), a little more or less, according to the explanation of the diagram which is attached to the respective 'expediente.'

"The judge that shall give the possession shall cause it to be measured in conformity with the ordinance, reserving the overplus that may result to the nation for convenient uses."

On February 8, 1858, a petition for confirmation was presented in the name of the original grantee to the board of commissioners appointed to ascertain and settle private land claims, and on March 6, 1855, the grant was confirmed by an order in these words:

"In this case, on hearing the proofs and allegations, it is adjudged by the commission that the claim of the petitioner is valid, and it is therefore decreed that his application for a confirmation be allowed, with the following boundaries, to wit: On north and east by the foot of the mountains, on the south by the Agua Caliente, and on the west by the cottonwoods, which are on the other side of the creek, reference being had to the map accompanying the 'expediente.'

An appeal was taken from this order of confirmation, but was dismissed on June 8, 1857. This confirmation is not challenged.

In 1867 instructions were issued by the surveyor-general of California for the survey; and the survey as made and returned to the surveyor-general's office was by him approved, and, on July 11, 1868, forwarded to Washington. This survey in January, 1871, was disapproved by the Secretary of the Interior as not conforming to the decree of confirmation, and a new survey ordered. On June 10, 1872, the surveyor-general reported that he had examined the original title papers and had compared them with the calls of the decree of confirmation, and had caused an examination to be made of the premises, and that therefrom he found that a survey made in strict accordance with the boundary calls of the decree of confirmation would include something like a league more of land than the present survey, and that the owners of the grant were satisfied with the present survey, and therefore suggested the propriety of accepting it. This report was returned to the Secretary of the Interior, by him approved, and, on June 22, 1872, the patent was issued. This bill was filed on May 29, 1885. The bill charges that the surveyor, Henry Hancock, who made the survey was the real owner of a large interest in the grant, although the title was nominally in another party; that concealing his interest, he secured his appointment as deputy surveyor, and in making the survey fraudulently included within its limits about twenty-six thousand acres more of land than justly belonged therein; that without any knowledge of the fraudulent acts of Hancock in the premises the surveyor-general thereafter published the required notice of the survey in a newspaper published in the City of Los Angeles, a city of another county and over fifty miles from the land, whereas, at the time, there was a newspaper published within the county and within two miles of the land. It also charges that after the survey had been disapproved by the Secretary of the Interior, Hancock fraudulently represented to the surveyor-general that a correct survey would include about one league in addition to what was embraced within the present survey, but that the owners were content to take the survey as it stood; and that, induced by and relying upon these fraudulent representations, the surveyor-general made the report and recommendation heretofore mentioned. The Circuit Court, on final hearing, dismissed the bill, and the United States appeals to this court.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Atty-Gen., for United States:

As against the government in its own suit, the regularity of all proceedings prior to issue of patent is not presumed, and the decision of the Land Department, therefore, is not binding upon the government when attacked on the ground of fraud.

U. S. v. Moffatt, 112 U. S. 24 (28: 623); U. S. v. White, 17 Fed. Rep. 561; U. S. v. Rose, 24 Fed. Rep. 196; U. S. v. Marshall Silver Min. Co. 5 McCrary, 825; U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233 (29: 110).

No person can be the agent of two contracting parties in the same transaction where their interests are conflicting.

Story, Agency, § 210; Paley, Id. §§ 10, 11; Whart. Agency, §§ 244, 245; Flourance v.

Adams, 2 Rob. (La.) 556; New York Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nat. Protection Ins. Co. 20 Barb. 470; Panama & S. P. Teleg. Co. v. India Rubber, G. P. & T. W. Co. L. R. 10 Ch. 515-520; Michoud v. Girod, 45 U. S. 4 How. 508 (11: 1076); Ex parte Bennett, 10 Ves. Jr. 381.

The policy of equity is to remove every possible temptation from the agent.

Pomeroy, Eq. § 958; Story, Eq. § 315 et seq.; Fox v. MacKreth, 1 Lead. Cas. in Eq. (4th Am. ed.) 188 et seq.

Nothing will defeat the principal's right of remedy except his own confirmation after a full knowledge of all the facts.

Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. § 959, and cases cited; York Bldgs. Co. v. Mackenzie, 8 Bro. Parl. Cas. 42; Whelpdale v. Cookson, 1 Ves. Sr. 9, 5 Ves. Jr. 682, note; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. 252.

The government cannot be estopped by the frauds or crimes or laches of its agents.

U. S. v. Southern Colorado Coal & T. Co. 5 McCrary, 568; Gausson v. U. S. 97 U. S. 584 (24: 1009); U. S. v. Beebe, 4 McCrary, 12; U. S. v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233 (29: 110); U. S. v. Thompson, 98 U. S. 486 (25: 194); Michoud v. Girod, 45 U. S. 4 How. 505 (11: 1077).

In case of conflict between the description in the deed and in the map, the map will prevail, if it is shown that the parties relied upon it.

McIver v. Walker, 18 U. S. 9 Cranch, 178 (3: 694); Fossat Case, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 650 (17: 789); U. S. v. Halleck, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 439 (17: 664).

Under the Mexican land-grant system, juridical possession bound the former government, and is equally binding upon our government.

U. S. v. Pico, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 539 (18: 696); Graham v. U. S. 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 260 (18: 334); Van Reynegan v. Bolton, 95 U. S. 33 (24: 351); Biley v. Heisch, 18 Cal. 199; Carpentier v. Thirston, 24 Cal. 269; Rich v. Maples, 33 Cal. 102; Thornton v. Mahoney, 24 Cal. 569.

If any one of the boundaries is vague or uncertain, quantity will govern.

Field v. Columbet, 4 Sawy. 528; Winans v. Cheney, 55 Cal. 567.

Every purchaser under patent buys with notice of every material recital upon the face of the same, and must look to every part of the title which is essential to its validity; and he is presumed to be cognizant of not only its character, but also of the proceedings upon which it rests for a foundation.

Brush v. Ware, 40 U. S. 15 Pet. 111 (10: 679); Hardy v. Harbin, 4 Sawy. 545; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 420; More v. Massini, 37 Cal. 432; 2 Pomeroy, Eq. Jur. 626; 1 Story, Eq. 899, 400; 2 Washburn, Real Prop. 596; U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co. 21 Fed. Rep. 19.

The action of no officer or tribunal is binding upon the government when the same is beyond its jurisdiction.

U. S. v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co. 21 Fed. Rep. 19; Stoddard v. Chambers, 43 U. S. 2 How. 284 (11: 269); Rose v. Richmond Mining Co. 17 Nev. 25; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761 (23: 769); Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Dull, 22 Fed. Rep. 489, 10 Sawy. 506.

Messrs. A. T. Britton and A. B. Browne, for appellees:

183 U. S.

When a decree gives the boundaries of the tract, it is conclusive.

U. S. v. Halleck, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 439 (17: 664); U. S. v. Billing, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 444 (17: 848); Higuera v. U. S. 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 827 (18: 469).

Where no quantity is named in a final decree of confirmation, the only limitation as to quantity is that provided by the Colonization Laws of Mexico, which is eleven square leagues, or 48,825 acres of land.

U. S. v. Larkin, 59 U. S. 18 How. 561 (15: 486); U. S. v. Sutherland, 60 U. S. 19 How. 364 (15: 666); U. S. v. Hartnell, 63 U. S. 22 How. 289 (16: 841); U. S. v. Vallejo, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 551 (17: 283); U. S. v. D'Aguirre, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 816 (17: 597).

Errors of judgment, committed after full and fair investigation by the Land Department as the special tribunal clothed with jurisdiction over a survey, cannot be reviewed or corrected by any judicial proceeding.

U. S. v. Flint, 4 Sawy. 61; U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 10 Sawy. 639.

San Bernardino was a grant of a quantity within larger exterior boundaries; it was therefore a floating grant, attaching to no defined tract until segregated by a legal survey from the balance of the land within the exterior boundaries.

Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 59 U. S. 18 How. 25 (15: 827); Stanford v. Taylor, 59 U. S. 18 How. 412 (15: 454); Henshaw v. Bissell, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 266 (21: 839); Maguire v. Tyler, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 661 (19: 823); Miller v. Dale, 92 U. S. 477 (23: 737); Dodge v. Perez, 2 Sawy. 648; U. S. v. Billing, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 448, 449 (17: 849); Reed v. Ybarra, 50 Cal. 465-468; Freemont v. U. S. 58 U. S. 17 How. 558 (15: 246).

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

It is obvious that the confirmation was of a tract with specified boundaries, and as such covered all the land within those boundaries, irrespective of quantity, and this notwithstanding there appeared in the prior proceedings statements that the tract contained a certain amount, "a little more or less," which amount was very much less than that included within the boundaries. "When a decree gives the boundaries of the tract to which the claim is confirmed, with precision, and has become final by stipulation of the United States and the withdrawal of their appeal therefrom, it is conclusive, not only on the question of title, but also as to the boundaries which it specifies." United States v. Halleck, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 439 [17: 664]; United States v. Billing, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 444 [17: 848]; Higuera v. United States, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 827 [18: 469]. And the Act of Congress of July 1, 1864 (18 U. S. Stat. 334, § 7), requires the surveyor-general, "in making surveys of the private land claims finally confirmed, to follow the decree of confirmation as closely as practicable whenever such decree designates the specific boundaries of the claim."

The charge of fraudulent misconduct on the part of the surveyor, Hancock, is not substantiated. Mr. Hancock was not appointed surveyor with reference to this survey. He was the regular deputy surveyor for this district, having been appointed more than ten years prior thereto. While at one time he had owned an interest in the grant, he had more than eight years before the survey sold and conveyed it for a full consideration to his brother, and from that time forward, during all these proceedings, was without any interest in the premises. It is true that during these years Mr. Hancock acted as the general agent of his brother, and that is all the ground there is to suspect wrong on his part. There is not a syllable of testimony that after the Secretary had ordered the new survey, Mr. Hancock had anything to do with the matter, either in suggestion, recommendation or otherwise, so that the report of the surveyor-general was not made by virtue of anything that Hancock had said or done. The examination referred to by the surveyor-general in his report was made by one R. C. Hopkins, under the direction of the surveyor-general, a person who was at the time, so far as the testimony discloses, entirely disinterested.

It is true there is testimony furnished by Mr. Hopkins himself that some time after the patent had been issued he accepted a deed of a portion of this grant as a present from the owners—a tract which he subsequently sold for $1,500. Whatever criticism may be placed upon the acceptance of this gift—a gift made long after his relations to the survey had ceased—it certainly does not establish dereliction in his discharge of prior official duty.

These matters, together with the failure to publish notice in the nearest paper, are all the evidences of fraud in the transaction. Not only are they not "the clear, convincing and unambiguous" proofs of fraud required to set aside a patent, as declared by this court in the case of Colorado Coal & Iron Company v. United States, 128 U. S. 317 [31: 186], but they all combined create nothing more than a suspicion. They may leave a doubt, but they do not bring the assurance of certain wrong.

Some question is made as to the correctness of the survey, and that turns as a question of fact upon what is meant by the expression "Agua Caliente" in the various descriptions. If it means a stream known as Agua Caliente then the government has no cause to challenge the survey, for it includes less than was really confirmed, but if it means a district of country known by that name in the northwestern portion of the San Bernardino rancho, a neighboring tract then the survey was excessive. If it were necessary for us to determine this question, we think the evidence in the case indicates that the stream and not the district was intended, but it is not the province of this court to correct a mere matter of survey like that. If made in good faith and unchallenged, as this has been for over fifteen years, whatever doubts may exist as to its correctness must be resolved in favor of the title as patented.

We see no error in the decree, and it is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Field takes no part in this decision.

THE BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF THE COUNTY OF COMANCHE, IN THE STATE OF KANSAS, Pff. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES EDWARD LEWIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 198-208.)

Legislative power to organize counties in Kansas—Act recognizing corporation—county bonds, when valid—organization of County—recitals in county bonds, effect of—certificate of auditor, when estops the County—recital, when sufficient—power of County to issue bonds.

1. Ample power is delegated by the Constitution of Kansas to the Legislature of that State to organize a county in any manner it sees fit, and to validate by recognition any organization already existing, no matter how fraudulent the proceedings therefor have been.

2. When a Legislature has full power to create corporations, its Act, recognizing as valid a de facto corporation, whether private or municipal, operates to cure all defects in steps leading up to the organization, and makes a de jure out of what before was only a de facto corporation.

3. When both the legislative and executive departments of a State give notice to the world that a county within the territorial limits of the State has been duly organized and exists with full power of contracting, a purchaser can in open market safely purchase the securities of such county.

4. The debts of a county, contracted during a valid organization, remain the obligations of the county, although for a time the organization be abandoned and there be no officers to be reached by the process of the courts.

5. The recital in the bond of a county which shows a compliance in all substantial respects with the Statute giving authority to issue the bonds, makes the bond valid in the hands of a bona fide holder.

6. The official certificate of the auditor of the State that the bonds had been regularly and legally issued, that the signatures were genuine and that the bonds had been duly registered in his office in accordance with the Act of the Legislature of March 2, 1872, estops the County.

7. The recitals are sufficient although the particular bridge, for the building of which the bonds were to be issued, is not specified; a full and minute detail of all the proceedings is not essential to the validity of a recital.

NOTE.—As to municipal bonds as affected by change in the ruling of the highest court of a State, or by change in the Constitution, see note to Mitchell v. Burlington, Bk. 18, p. 350.

As to negotiability of railroad bonds, see note to White v. Vermont & M. R. Co. Bk. 16, p. 221.

As to suits on coupons detached from bonds, see note to Kenosha v. Lamson, Bk. 19, p. 725.

As to overdue coupons; rights of holders of; effect of, on bonds to which they are attached,—see note to Texas v. White, Bk. 19, p. 889.

As to mandamus to compel city, town or county to levy tax to pay bonds or interest on bonds,—see note to Davenport v. U. S. Bk. 19, p. 704.

As to recitals in negotiable bonds or securities, as evidence of the fact recited, and as an estoppel,—see note to Mercer County v. Hackett, Bk. 17, p. 548.

As to municipal bonds, reference to statute in,—see note to Ogden v. Daviess County, Bk. 23, p. 263.

8. The Act of February 22, 1888, gave the County the power to borrow money for the erection of county buildings and issue bonds therefor.

[No. 1022.]

Submitted Jan. 7, 1890. Decided Jan. 27, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff on coupons of bonds of the County of Comanche, Kansas, issued for county and bridge purposes. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 35 Fed. Rep. 843.

Meers, G. C. Clemens and A. H. Smith, for plaintiff in error:

Even in the hands of a bona fide holder, and notwithstanding the auditor's certificate of registration, the bonds are void, without regard to the question of the organization of the County.

Burlington Twp. v. Beasley, 94 U. S. 810 (24: 161); Osborne v. Adams County, 106 U. S. 181 (27: 129); Lewis v. Sherman Co. Comrs. 1 McCrary, 377; Doty v. Ellabee, 11 Kan. 209-218; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 186, 187 (27: 90, 91); Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S. 685 (25: 1037); Thompson v. Perrine, 103 U. S. 806-810 (26: 612, 613); Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 93 (28: 863); Katsenberger v. Aberdeen, 121 U. S. 172-177 (30: 911, 913).

The bonds are open to proof of the actual facts and are therefore void. No purchaser of otherwise negotiable paper payable upon its face "to . . . or bearer," can enjoy the law merchant's protection.

Hogarth v. Latham, L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 648; France v. Clark, L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 257; Hatch v. Seales, 2 Smale & G. 147, 153; Taylor v. Great Indian Pen. R. Co. 4 DeG. & J. 559, 574; Toledo Nat. Bk. v. Porter Township, 110 U. S. 608 (28: 258); Buchanan v. Litchfield, 103 U. S. 278 (26: 188); Bissell v. Spring Valley Township, 110 U. S. 162 (28: 105).

The bonds were not issued by the plaintiff in error.

State v. Sillon, 21 Kan. 207; State v. Stevens, 21 Kan. 210; McClure v. Oxford Township, 94 U. S. 429 (24: 129); State v. Ford County, 12 Kan. 441-446; Barkley v. Leece Comrs. 93 U. S. 258 (23: 898); U. S. v. Heth, 7 U. S. 3 Cranch, 399-413 (2: 479, 483); Chew Heong v. U. S. 112 U. S. 536-559 (28: 770, 771); Murray v. Gibbon, 56 U. S. 15 How. 421-423 (14: 755, 756); McEwen v. Den, 65 U. S. 24 How. 242-244 (16: 672); Harvey v. Tyler, 69 U. S. 2 Wall. 328-347 (17: 871, 875); Sohn v. Waterson, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 596-599 (21: 737, 738).

Mr. W. H. Rossington, for defendant in error:

The whole power of organizing new counties belongs in this State to the Legislature. The Legislature has cured defects by recognizing the County.

Beach v. Leahy, 11 Kan. 28; Borton v. Buck, 8 Kan. 308; Leavenworth County v. State, 5 Kan. 688; State v. Ford County, 12 Kan. 445; State v. Sillon, 21 Kan. 207; State v. Pawnee County, 12 Kan. 426.

The bonds recite that they were issued in conformity to law, and as between the County and a bona fide holder no question involving the infirmity of the security can be raised.

Johnson County v. January, 94 U. S. 202 (24: 183 U. S.

110); Knox County v. Aspinwall, 62 U. S. 21 How. 539 (16: 208); Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 65 U. S. 24 How. 287 (16: 664); Marcy v. Onwego, 92 U. S. 637 (23: 748); Coloma v. Eaves, 93 U. S. 484 (23: 579); Moran v. Miami County, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 732 (17: 347); Mercer County v. Hackett, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 83 (17: 548); Marshall County v. Schenck, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 784 (18: 559); Myer v. Muscatine, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 884 (17: 564); Von Hostrup v. Madison, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 291 (17: 538); St. Joseph Township v. Rogers, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 644 (21: 828); Humboldt Township v. Long, 92 U. S. 642 (23: 752); Roberts v. Bolles, 101 U. S. 119 (25: 880); Brooklyn v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. 99 U. S. 362 (25: 416); Rock Creek Twp. v. Strong, 96 U. S. 271 (24: 815); Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494 (23: 688); Converse v. Fort Scott, 92 U. S. 503 (23: 621); Burlington Twp. v. Beasley, 94 U. S. 810 (24: 161); Leavenworth County v. Barnes, 94 U. S. 70 (24: 63); Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631 (24: 133); Marion County v. Clark, 94 U. S. 278 (24: 59); East Lincoln v. Davenport, 94 U. S. 801 (24: 322); Clay County v. Savings Society, 104 U. S. 579 (26: 856); Block v. Bourbon County, 99 U. S. 686 (25: 491); Lyons v. Munson, 99 U. S. 684 (25: 451); Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676 (25: 404); Lynde v. Winnebago County, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 6 (21: 272); Weyauwaga v. Ayling, 99 U. S. 112 (25: 470); Calhoun County v. Galbraith, 99 U. S. 214 (25: 410); Wilson v. Salamanca Twp. 99 U. S. 499 (25: 830); Douglas County v. Bolles, 94 U. S. 104 (24: 46).

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on coupons. There were three classes of bonds, namely, court-house, bridge and current-expense bonds. The circuit court held the latter void, the others valid, and judgment was rendered accordingly. Lewis v. Comanche County, 35 Fed. Rep. 843. The County alleges error. Our inquiry, therefore, is limited to the bridge and court-house bonds.

The first and principal contention of the plaintiff in error is that at the time of the issue of these bonds there was no valid county organization, no corporate entity capable of contracting; that the pretended organization in 1878 was fraudulent and void, and shortly thereafter abandoned, the County remaining unorganized until 1885, when, upon memorial presented and census taken, it was organized anew as in the case of an unorganized county.

In order to fully understand the question here presented a brief retrospect of the condition, the legislation and judicial decisions of the State is necessary.

At the time of its admission into the Union, in 1861, the settlements were confined to the eastern portion of the State, the west being wholly unoccupied. The territory of the State was divided into counties, those in the eastern portion being organized, and those in the western unorganized, the legislation as to the latter being limited to the matter of names and boundaries. Of course there were no courts in these unorganized counties, for the machinery was wanting; there were no county buildings, county officers or jurors. So they were by statute attached to the organized counties for judicial purposes. It was foreseen that they would, in course of time, become occupied, and that provision must be made for their organization as political subdivisions of the State. So, by the Constitution, in section 1 of article 9, power was given to the Legislature in these words: "The Legislature shall provide for organizing new counties, locating counties and changing county lines."

The first Legislature, on the fourth day of June, 1861, passed an Act entitled "An Act Relating to the Organization of New Counties." This was amended in 1872, and under the Act as so amended the County of Comanche was organized. Section 1 of this chapter prescribes the proceedings, and is as follows:

"Section 1. Section 1 of an Act Relating to the Organization of New Counties is hereby amended so as to read: Section 1. When there shall be presented to the governor a memorial, signed by forty householders, who are legal electors of the State, of any unorganized county, showing that there are six hundred inhabitants in such county, and praying that such county may be organized, accompanied by an affidavit attached to such memorial, of at least three householders of such county, showing that the signatures to such memorial are the genuine signatures of householders of such unorganized county, and that the affiants have reason to and do believe that there are six hundred inhabitants in such county as stated in the memorial, it shall be the duty of the governor to appoint some competent person, who is a bona fide resident of the county, to take the census and ascertain the number of bona fide inhabitants of such unorganized county, who shall, after being duly sworn to faithfully discharge the duties of his office, proceed to take the census of such county, by ascertaining the name and age of each of the bona fide inhabitants of such unorganized county, who shall receive for services rendered under this section pay at the rate of three dollars per day, from the state treasurer, upon an itemized account, verified by affidavit. The person who shall take the census as required shall return to the governor, upon appropriate schedules, the census authorized to be taken herein, certified to be correct and true, and if it appear by such return that there are in such unorganized county at least six hundred bona fide inhabitants, he shall appoint three persons, who shall be recommended in the memorial hereinbefore provided for, to act as county commissioners, and a proper person to act as county clerk, to be recommended in like manner as the commissioners, and shall designate such place as he may select, centrally located, as a temporary county seat for such county, and shall commission such persons as such officers, and declare such place the temporary county seat of such county; and from and after qualification of the officers appointed under this section, the said county seat shall be deemed duly organized."

Obviously, full control over the matter of organization of new counties was, by the constitutional provision quoted, given to the Legislature, as was held by the Supreme Court of the State in the case of the State v. Pawnee County, 12 Kan. 426, in which case the court says:

606

"The whole power of organizing new counties belongs in this State to the Legislature. It may provide for their organization by general laws and through the intervention of the governor, or of any other officer, agent, commissioner or person it may choose, or it may directly organize a new county itself by special Act. The provisions of article 12 of the Constitution have no application to counties as counties. See Beach v. Leahy, 11 Kan. 23. It may organize a county with six hundred inhabitants, or any other number more or less than six hundred. It may organize a county whenever there shall be a sufficient number of persons to hold the county offices, and the Legislature may provide for a less number of county officers than the usual number. See Borton v. Buck, 8 Kan. 308; Leavenworth County v. State, 5 Kan. 688."

In the fall of 1878 proceedings looking to the organization of Comanche County were had, which were in form in full compliance with the requirements of section 1, above quoted. These proceedings closed, as required, with the proclamation of the governor, and upon the face of the papers was presented a clear case of a regular and valid organization. But while these proceedings were regular on their face, the agreed statement of facts shows that "said organization was effected solely for purposes of plunder by a set of men intending to secure a de facto organization and issue the bonds of said County, register and sell them to distant purchasers ignorant of the facts, and enrich the schemers, while plundering the future inhabitants and taxpayers of the County; and upon the consummation of said scheme, in the spring or early summer of 1874, all of said schemers, together with those who were the said de facto officers of the said County, left said County and never returned, and said County remained with said organization totally abandoned until in February, 1885, when said County was, upon memorial presented and census taken, organized as in cases of unorganized counties."

If these were all the facts, a very interesting inquiry would arise as to how far an organization fraudulent in fact but regular in form, and duly approved by the executive, could bind the County by an issue of bonds prima facie valid, and passing into the hands of a bona fide holder. But that inquiry is not before us. The ample power delegated by the Constitution to the Legislature enabled it not only to organize a county in any manner it saw fit, but also to validate by recognition any organization already existing, no matter how fraudulent the proceedings therefor had been.

This proposition has been distinctly ruled by the Supreme Court of the State. See the case of State v. Pawnee County, in 12 Kan. supra; see also State v. Steers, 21 Kan. 210, and State v. Hamilton, 40 Kan. 323.

Nor is this ruling peculiar to the jurisdiction of Kansas. It is universally affirmed that when a Legislature has full power to create corporations, its Act recognizing as valid a de facto corporation, whether private or municipal, operates to cure all defects in steps leading up to the organization and makes a de jure out of what before was only a de facto corporation. It is true that there must be a de facto organization upon which this recognition may act, as was held in State v. Ford County, 13 Kan. 446; and in this case it appears from the findings, as well as from the testimony, that there was such de facto organization. There being this de facto organization, there was ample recognition by the Legislature. The very matter appears which, in State v. Stevens, was, by the Supreme Court of Kansas, declared a legislative recognition sufficient to cure all defects; namely, an Act detaching the County from an organized county to which, for judicial purposes, it had theretofore been attached, and establishing courts therein. This Act was approved March 9, 1874, the day before these bonds were signed. But this, which, by the Supreme Court of Kansas, was adjudged alone sufficient, is not all. Chapter 24 of the General Statutes of 1868, creating some new counties, divided the State into seventy-nine counties, numbered, named and described, among which was the unorganized County of Comanche; and provided that no county should be entitled to representation in the Legislature until it should have been organized. During the session of 1874, the session immediately succeeding this attempted organization, and before the issue of these bonds, A. J. Mowry represented Comanche County in the Legislature, taking active part in its proceedings, voting for senator, introducing bills, and otherwise. His right to a seat was challenged, examined by the committee on elections, and, after report therefrom, he was admitted and acted as a member during the entire session. Further than that, this organization having become a matter of discussion and challenge, the Legislature passed a joint resolution, which recited that it appears from the report of the secretary of state that there were but 634 inhabitants in the County of Comanche, and from the report of the auditor of the State that the bonded indebtedness of the County was $72,000; that the interests of the people and the honor of the State required an investigation; and directed that a committee of two should be appointed, one from each House, who, together with the Attorney-General, should make an investigation and report to the succeeding Legislature. By that report, in January, 1875, the character of the organization was disclosed, and from that time on the County was, as stated, treated as an unorganized County until 1885. It also appears that in December, 1878, not only was a member of the Legislature elected, but, in addition, a new commissioner and a new county clerk, in the places of those temporarily appointed by the governor. There thus appears ample recognition, on the part of the Legislature, of the validity of the organization, and, under repeated adjudications, its validity cannot now in this collateral way be challenged. And this is no mere technical ruling. It rests on foundations of substantial justice. It is true that the present inhabitants have been wronged by the fraudulent acts of these conspirators in 1878-74, and it is a hardship for them to be bound for debts they did not contract and from which they received no benefit; but, on the other hand, it would be an equal hardship to the plaintiff to lose the money he has invested in securities placed on the market, whose validity was attested to the fullest extent by both the executive and legislative departments of the State. When both of those departments give notice to the world that a county within the territorial limits of the State has been duly organized and exists with full power of contracting, can it be that a purchaser cannot in open market safely purchase the securities of that county? Does the duty rest on him to traverse the limits of the county and make personal inspection of the number of the inhabitants? If any wrong has been done to the County through the want of attention on the part of the state authorities, equity would suggest that the State should bear the burden, and not cast it upon an innocent party residing far from the State and acting in reliance upon what it has done.

188 U. S.

183 U. S.

But it is urged that whatever may be said as to the organization in 1873-74, and its temporary validity, that organization was in 1874 abandoned, the County deserted, and a new organization made in 1885, and, it being a new organization, there is no responsibility on its part for debts fraudulently contracted more than a decade before, by a confessedly fraudulent organization. Why should honest and industrious citizens, who have recently moved into hitherto unoccupied territory, be held responsible for debts fraudulently contracted years before by a set of rascals who stopped but for a day, and then decamped with the proceeds of their rascality? But it must be borne in mind that the County, as a territorial subdivision of the State, has been in existence and unchallenged for more than a score of years. It matters not how many political organizations there may have been, or what changes in the form of organization, the County has been ever the same, and, although the name of the political community given by the statutes is the "Board of County Commissioners" of the County, it is, after all, the County, with its property and population, which is the debtor. No one would for a moment suppose that when a county has contracted a valid obligation, the fact, if it could be made to appear, that all its inhabitants had removed and their places been supplied by others, would affect that obligation. There has been no subdivision of the original territory; no addition to or subtraction from it. The only change has been in the continuity of political organization, and that, neither by municipal law nor the law of nations, destroys the territorial responsibility for legal obligations. Even a change in form does not destroy responsibility. The Republic of France recognizes as valid the debts of the Empire. A town whose growth enables it to cast off its village organization and assume the habiliments of a city continues liable for all debts theretofore contracted. And so the debts of a county, contracted during a valid organization, remain the obligations of the county, although for a time the organization be abandoned and there be no officers to be reached by the process of the courts. State v. Hamilton, 40 Kan. 323; The Sapphire, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 164 [20: 127]; Broughton v. Pensacola, 98 U. S. 268 [23: 896]; Mount Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514 [25: 699].

Passing to the question of the bonds themselves, the first to be considered are the bridge bonds. The recital is in these words:

607

"This bond is executed and issued in pursuance of and in accordance with an Act of the Legislature of the State of Kansas, entitled 'An Act to Authorize Counties, Incorporated Cities and Municipal Townships to Issue Bonds for the Purpose of Building Bridges, Aiding in the Construction of Railroads, Water-Power or Other Works of Internal Improvement, and Providing for the Registration of Such Bonds, the Registration of Other Bonds, and the Repealing of All Laws in Conflict Therewith,' approved March 2, 1872, and also in accordance with the vote of a majority of the qualified electors of said County of Comanche, at a special election duly and regularly held therefor on the 31st day of January, 1884."

The Act referred to therein gave to counties full power to issue bonds for the building of bridges and prescribed the proceedings, including therein a vote of the people, essential to the vesting of authority in the county commissioners. The recital that the bond was executed and issued in pursuance of and in accordance with that Act, and also in accordance with the vote of the majority of the qualified electors, is, within repeated rulings of this court, sufficient to validate the bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder. It shows, in the language of Independent School District v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183 [27: 90], "a compliance in all substantial respects with the Statute giving authority to issue the bonds," and does not come within the limitations noticed in that case. Further than that, the bonds are indorsed with the official certificate of the auditor of the State that the bonds had been regularly and legally issued, that the signatures were genuine and that the bonds had been duly registered in his office in accordance with the Act of the Legislature of March 2, 1872. Inasmuch as these bonds were issued after the Act of 1872 went into effect, they fall within the decision in the case of Lewis v. Barbour County, 105 U. S. 789 [26: 993], rather than within that in the case of Bissell v. Spring Valley Township, 110 U. S. 162 [28: 105], as to the conclusiveness of the certificate of the auditor.

The suggestion that the recitals are not sufficient because the particular bridge, for the building of which the bonds were to be issued, is not specified, carries no weight. Power is given by the first section of the Act of 1872 to issue bonds for building bridges, and while the subsequent sections providing for a vote and other preliminaries seem to contemplate that a particular bridge should be the subject of consideration, yet it has never been held by this court, and ought not to be, that a full and minute detail of all the proceedings is essential to the validity of a recital. The main thing is that the County has promised to pay, and that the people by their vote have authorized such a promise for one of the purposes for which, under the Statute, they may bind themselves.

The other series of bonds is what is known as "court-house bonds," so named on the face of the bonds themselves. The recital in this bond is as follows: "This bond is executed and issued for the purpose of erecting county buildings in pursuance of and in accordance with an Act of the Legislature of the State of Kansas, entitled, 'An Act Relating to Counties and County Officers,' approved February 29, 1868, and 'An Act to Authorize Counties,'" etc., reciting the title of the Act referred to in the bridge bonds, as well as a vote similar thereto. On the back of each bond appears the auditor's certificate, as in the bridge bonds.

But it is insisted that county buildings are not works of internal improvement within the meaning of the Act last referred to. Be that as it may—and it is unnecessary to decide this question, although in considering it reference may well be had to the opinion of the Supreme Court of Kansas in the case of Leavenworth County v. Miller, 7 Kan. 479—the Act first referred to, the Act of February 29, 1868, gave ample authority. That Act, section 16, provides: "The Board of County Commissioners of each county shall have power, at any meeting: . . . Fourth, . . . to borrow, upon the credit of the county, a sum sufficient for the erection of county buildings, or to meet the current expenses of the county in case of a deficit in the county revenue."

Prior to the issue of these bonds the Supreme Court of the State had held, in the case of Doty v. Ellsbee, 11 Kan. 209, that the power to borrow money carries with it the power to issue the ordinary evidences and security of a loan, and, among them, county bonds. So that, by that Act, the County had power to borrow money for the erection of county buildings and issue bonds therefor. There is no force in the suggestion that the purpose expressed in the recital is that of erecting county buildings, instead of borrowing money for the erection of county buildings. A general statement of the purpose, with direct reference to the Act granting authority, and a recital that the bond is issued in pursuance of and in accordance with the Act, is sufficient. The case of Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S. 665 [25: 1037], rested entirely on the fact of the uniform and continuous ruling on the part of the highest court in the State of New York, in which the bonds were issued, and was a case arising between a municipality and a purchaser who took with notice of the manner in which the bonds had been disposed of. So that this cannot be considered an authority in the case before us.

These are all the matters we deem necessary to notice, and, there appearing no error in the ruling of the Circuit Court, its judgment is affirmed.

S. GRANVILLE BEALS, Appt.,

THE ILLINOIS, MISSOURI AND TEXAS RAILROAD COMPANY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 290-295.)

Allegations in pleas, when admitted to be true—sworn answers as evidence—bondholders, when

NOTE.—Equity:—more than one witness required to overcome sworn answer; answer of defendant verified in evidence. See note to Hughes v. Blake, Bk. 5, p. 308.

Parties necessary, in equity, want of; when a defense; when objection to be made. See notes to Morgan v. Morgan, Bk. 4, p. 242, and Marshall v. Beverley, Bk. 5, p. 97.

bound by decree—effect of allegations of sworn answer.

1. Where the plaintiff's replication is only to "the answers" of the three defendant corporations, and not to their pleas, although each of them had filed a plea, and the only answers in the cause were those filed by two of them in support of their pleas, and no proofs are taken, and the case is set down for hearing upon the bill and pleas, the facts alleged by the defendants in their pleas are admitted to be true.
2. If the replication is treated as taking issue on the pleas as well as on the answers, and the case was submitted upon the bill, pleas, answers and replication, the facts relied upon by defendants were proved by the sworn answers, so far as they were responsive to the bill, where the plaintiff gave no evidence.
3. Where a former judgment was rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, to which the Railroad Company that issued the bonds, and the surviving trustee under the mortgage made to secure the bonds, were made parties, the bondholders, being represented by the trustee, are bound by the decree canceling and annulling the bonds and mortgage, unless the decree was fraudulently obtained.
4. Where the bill alleges that that decree was obtained by fraud and collusion, and the pleas and answers, under oath, deny the fraud and collusion charged, and aver a purchase of the property in good faith, for valuable consideration and without knowledge or notice of any fraud in obtaining the decree, these averments, being responsive to the allegations of the bill, are conclusive in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff's claim, no proofs in the case having been taken.

[No. 111.]

Argued Jan. 16, 17, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri dismissing a suit in equity brought to declare a mortgage and bonds valid, and to apply the mortgaged property to the payment of the bonds, and for further relief. Affirmed.

Opinion below, 27 Fed. Rep. 721.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was a suit in equity by Beals, a citizen of New York, against the Illinois, Missouri and Texas Railway Company, the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad and the Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company, all three corporations of Missouri, and Thilenius and Blow, trustees of the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad, and Fletcher, all three citizens of Missouri.

The amended bill (which was the only one copied in the transcript of the record) alleged that in April, 1871, the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad, pursuant to a contract with Fletcher, executed a deed conveying all its property and franchises in its road, as then existing or afterwards to be constructed, from the shore of the Mississippi River in the City of Cape Girardeau in the State of Missouri to the boundary line between the States of Missouri and Arkansas, to Thilenius and Blow in trust, and directing them as trustees and Thilenius, the president of that Company, to join with the Illinois, Missouri and Texas Railway Company (which had been organized under the General Laws of Missouri for the purpose of completing the road) in the execution of a mortgage of all the said property and franchises to secure the payment of bonds issued by the last-named Company; that in May, 1871, such a mortgage, afterwards duly recorded, was executed by those two Companies and by Thilenius and Blow, trustees as aforesaid, to Winston and Hoadley in trust to secure the payment of 1,500 bonds of $1,000 each of the Company last named, which were afterwards issued; that the plaintiff was the bona fide owner and holder for value of sixty-eight of those bonds; that by default in payment of interest on those bonds there had been a breach of condition of the mortgage; that most or all of the rest of such bonds had come into the possession of the defendants, or of one or more of them, and thereby the defendants had controlled the action of Winston, the surviving trustee named in the mortgage, to the prejudice of the plaintiff; that Winston was now dead and no other trustee had been appointed; that the Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company for several years had had the sole use and possession of the property and franchises, and claimed a right therein, by purchase or otherwise, prior to the plaintiff's lien; that a systematic, fraudulent and continuous effort had been made by the defendants, or some of them, to prevent the collection of interest or principal on the plaintiff's bonds; that the judgment set up in bar in the defendant's plea to the bill of complaint in this suit, and alleged to have been obtained on or about March 30, 1876, in the Circuit Court of Cape Girardeau County, Missouri, by the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad, one of the defendants in this cause, was obtained by the said defendants in fraud against the bondholders, in that Winston was served and appeared in person only and not as trustee, and allowed the judgment to be entered by default, without notice to the bondholders, and by collusion with Houck, then attorney for the petitioners and now president of the Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company, both Winston and Houck knowing that the allegations of the petition were false and fictitious, and intending to defraud the bondholders; and that the plaintiff was not a party to the action and had no knowledge of it until his counsel examined the record on August 22, 1884.

The bill prayed for answers under oath, an injunction, and a decree declaring the mortgage and the plaintiff's bonds to be valid, and applying the mortgaged property to the payment of the bonds, and for further relief.

To the amended bill the three defendant corporations severally filed pleas, and two of them filed answers under oath in support of their pleas.

The plea of the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad specifically denied all the allegations of the bill as to fraud and collusion; and alleged that on March 30, 1876, it brought an action in the Circuit Court of Cape Girardeau County, being a court of general jurisdiction and possessed of full chancery powers (the principal office and place of business of that corporation, as well as the largest part of the real estate to be affected by that action, being in that county), alleging that the conveyance and the mortgage made in its name were without authority and in fraud of its stockholders; that the property conveyed to Thilenius and Blow was reconveyed by them to the plaintiff in December, 1871, and before the mortgage was recorded; and that the bonds of the Illinois, Missouri and Texas Railway Company, pretended to be secured by the mortgage, were issued after that time, and were held by the defendants, but not as purchasers for value; and praying that the conveyance and mortgage, as well as the bonds, might be canceled and declared void; that in that action said Railway Company, Winston, as sole surviving trustee under the mortgage, and a large number of corporations and individuals claiming to be holders of bonds secured by the mortgage, as well as all other persons whose names were unknown, but who might claim to be holders of such bonds, were made defendants; that said Railway Company, Winston, as surviving trustee, and various other defendants claiming to be holders of bonds, were actually served with process, and all nonresident bondholders who could be named, together with all unknown bondholders, were duly served by publication; that said Railway Company and Winston, as surviving trustee, as well as many bondholders, appeared and pleaded, putting in issue the allegations of the petition; that on January 25, 1878, the court entered a decree (a certified copy of which was set forth in the plea) establishing the allegations and granting the prayer of the petition, which was the same decree described in the amended bill as a judgment entered March 30, 1876; and that that decree was obtained on due and legal service of process, and after appearance of the defendants and hearing of proofs, and without any fraud, covin or concealment of any kind, or any collusion, agreement or understanding between Winston and the plaintiff's attorney, and had never been appealed from, but remained in full force. Wherefore the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad pleaded that decree in bar. The plea was supported by an answer under oath, denying generally and specifically all fraud charged in the amended bill.

The Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company, by plea, and answer under oath in support thereof, set up the same defense; and also, by permission of the court, the further defense that in August, 1880, the Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad, claiming to be the owner and being in full possession of the property, conveyed it for valuable consideration to Houck by deed duly recorded; that Houck took the deed in good faith and without any knowledge or notice of any right of the plaintiff or any other bondholder, or of any incumbrance on the property, or defect in the decree; that afterwards the Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company was incorporated and organized under the General Statutes of Missouri on August 10, 1880, and took from Houck a conveyance of the property for valuable consideration, in good faith, and without any knowledge or notice of any fraud or irregularity in obtaining the decree, and afterwards proceeded to construct the railroad.

The plea of the Illinois, Missouri and Texas Railway Company set up the decree of January 25, 1878, by which it was enjoined from making any claim to the property; and alleged that it had not since claimed any right in or exercised any control over the property, or received any income therefrom.

The plaintiff filed a general replication to "the answers" of the three corporations. The Cape Girardeau and State Line Railroad and the Cape Girardeau Southwestern Railway Company moved the court for "judgment on the pleas and replication in this cause, for the reason that the plaintiff has not taken issue on the said pleas, nor is the alleged replication thereto any reply in law."

No separate ruling or order was made upon this motion. Nor were any proofs taken in the case. But the case was afterwards submitted and argued "upon the bill, pleas, answers and replication," and thereupon the court, being of opinion that the equities were with the defendants, dismissed the bill. (27 Fed. Rep. 721.) The plaintiff appealed to this court.

Messrs. Henry H. Dennison and A. G. Vanderpoel, for appellant:

Notice to agent is notice to principal.

Sias v. Roger Williams Ins. Co. 8 Fed. Rep. 186; United States v. Distilled Spirits, 3 Cliff. 308; Smith v. Ayer, 101 U. S. 320 (25: 955); Warrick v. Warrick, 3 Atk. 291; Mountford v. Scott, 1 Turn. & Russ. 274; Dresser v. Norwood, 17 C. B. N. S. 466; Holden v. New York & E. Bank, 72 N. Y. 298.

A person will be held to have notice as an individual of what he does as president of a corporation.

Lancaster v. Collins, 2 McCrary, 355, 356, 115 U. S. 222 (29: 373); Carter v. Ottawa, 24 Fed. Rep. 546; Gay v. Parpart, 106 U. S. 697 (27: 263).

Where no real defense was made in the suit because of the unfaithful conduct of the trustee and the attorney, a court of equity will take cognizance of the suit.

Pacific R. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 111 U. S. 505 (28: 498).

The frauds for which courts of equity will interfere to set aside or stay the enforcement of a judgment of a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties, must consist of extrinsic collateral acts, not involved in the consideration of the merits. They must be acts by which the successful party has prevented his adversary from presenting the merits of his case, or by which the jurisdiction of the court has been imposed on.

United States v. Flint, 4 Sawy. 51; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 68 (25: 96); Wierich v. DeZoja, 7 Ill. 385; Pearce v. Olney, 20 Conn. 553, 554; Kent v. Richards, 8 Md. Ch. 395-397; State of Iowa v. Gorley, 2 Iowa, 54-59; Wells, Res Adjudicata, § 499, pp. 428-490, and cases cited in notes; Smith v. Lowry, 1 Johns. Ch. 321-324.

Mr. Geo. D. Reynolds, for appellees:

The trustee, Frederick S. Winston, was a party to the suit. The beneficiaries were not necessary parties. He was in court on their behalf, and the appellant, as one of the beneficiaries, though not a party to the suit, is concluded in the decree, unless it is impeached for fraud or collusion.

Kerrison v. Stewart, 98 U. S. 155 (23: 848); Corcoran v. Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. 94 U. S. 741 (24: 190); Shaw v. Little Rock & F. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 605 (25: 757); McArthur v. Scott, 118 U. S. 396 (28: 1038); Rand v. Walker, 117 U. S. 844 (29: 909); Cleveland First Nat. Bank v. Shedd, 121 U. S. 84 (30: 881); Richter v. Jerome, 128 U. S. 246 (31: 137); Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 172 (31: 401).

The appellant was also represented in the suit as being a bondholder of the Illinois, Missouri & Texas Railway Co., which was a party to it.

Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Ailing, 99 U. S. 463 (25: 438).

The appellant has no right to bring this suit alone. The other bondholders are necessary parties.

Nashville & D. R. Co. v. Orr, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 471 (21: 810).

The decree of the Circuit Court of Cape Girardeau County is conclusive and binding, unless impeached for fraud.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351 (24: 195); Stout v. Lye, 103 U. S. 66 (26: 428).

The rule that a decree cannot be pronounced fraudulent on the testimony of a single witness, unaccompanied by corroborating circumstances, against a positive denial by answer, applies to an answer in support of a plea.

Hughes v. Blake, 19 U. S. 6 Wheat. 458 (5: 303).

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

The irregular form in which the plaintiff's case is presented need not be dwelt upon, because, in any possible aspect of the controversy between the parties, the result is not doubtful.

The former judgment, upon which the plaintiff anticipated that the defendants would rely, is not described in the amended bill otherwise than by reference to a plea to the original bill, neither of which is made part of the record transmitted to this court. But the pleas to the amended bill clearly identify the judgment drawn in issue.

The plaintiff's replication is, in terms, only to "the answers" of the three defendant corporations, and not to their pleas, although each of them had filed a plea, and the only answers in the cause were those filed by two of them in support of their pleas. But it is immaterial to consider whether the effect of the submission of the case to the court "upon the bill, pleas, answers and replication," after the defendants had moved for judgment for insufficiency of the replication, was, so far as the pleas were concerned, to set down the case for hearing upon the bill and pleas, or to treat the replication as taking issue on the pleas as well as on the answers. In the one view, the facts relied on by the defendants were conclusively admitted to be true; in the other view, so far as they were responsive to the allegations of the bill, they were conclusively proved by the answers under oath, which the plaintiff introduced no evidence to control. Mitford, Pl. (4th ed.) 301, 302; Rules 33 and 38 in Equity; Farley v. Kitten, 120 U. S. 308, 315 [30: 684]; Vigil v. Hopp, 104 U. S. 441 [26: 765].

Upon the facts thus established, no ground is shown for maintaining the bill. The former judgment was rendered by a court of competence jurisdiction, to which not only the Railroad Company that issued the bonds, but the surviving trustee under the mortgage made in the name of another company to secure the payment of those bonds, were made parties. The bondholders were thus fully represented in that suit, and bound by the decree canceling and annulling the bonds and mortgage, unless the decree was fraudulently obtained. Kerrison v. Stewart, 98 U. S. 155 [23: 848]; Shaw v. Little Rock & F. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 605 [25: 757]; Richter v. Jerome, 128 U. S. 233 [31: 132]; Knox County v. Harshman, ante, p. 536. The bill alleges that that decree was obtained by fraud, and by collusion between the trustee and second Company and Houck its attorney, and that the third Company claimed a right in the property, by purchase or otherwise, prior to the plaintiff's supposed lien. The pleas and answers under oath of both these Companies fully and explicitly deny the fraud and collusion charged; and those of the third Company further aver that after the decree the property was conveyed by the second Company to Houck and by him to the third Company, and that both Houck and the third Company purchased the property in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without knowledge or notice of any fraud or irregularity in obtaining the decree.

These averments being "directly responsive to the allegations of the bill, and therefore conclusive in favor of the defendants' title to the property and against the plaintiff's claim, it is unnecessary to consider other grounds taken in argument.

Decree affirmed.

CALVIN R. CORBIN ET AL., Appls.,

v.

WALTER J. GOULD ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 308-314.)

Infringement of trade-mark—the word "Tycoon" not proper for a trade-mark—what words are improper as trade-marks—no trade-mark in the word "Tycoon" used alone.

1. Where the labels of complainants and defendants are so entirely dissimilar that one cannot readily be mistaken for the other, and a mere glance is sufficient to distinguish them, and there is no more similarity between them than is to be found ordinarily between tea labels, the fact that the word "Tycoon" is found in both of them does not make a case of infringement of a trade-mark.
2. A word such as "Tycoon," which has been for many years in general and common use as a term descriptive of a class of teas introduced into the American market, belongs to the public, as the common property of the trade, and therefore is not subject to appropriation by any person as a trade-mark.
3. One has no right to appropriate as a trade-mark a sign, or a symbol, or a name which, from the nature of the fact it is used to signify,

NOTE.—As to when an injunction will be granted restraining the unauthorized use of trade-marks, see note to McLean v. Fleming, Bk. 24, p. 822.

others may employ with equal truth, and therefore have an equal right to employ for the same purpose.

4. If the complainants can claim a trade-mark for the combination of a diamond and the words "The Tycoon Tea" inclosed in it, as described in their application to the Patent Office, there is no trade-mark in the word "Tycoon" considered by itself.

[No. 131.]

Argued Nov. 22, 1889. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Michigan to review a decree dismissing a suit for the infringement of a trade-mark. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lewis L. Coburn for appellants.

Messrs. Elliott G. Stevenson and Don M. Dickinson for appellees.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity brought in the court below by Calvin R. Corbin and Horatio N. May, copartners as Corbin, May & Company, doing business in Chicago, against Walter J. Gould, Edward Telfer, David D. Cady and L. F. Thompson, copartners as W. J. Gould & Company, doing business in Detroit, for the alleged infringement of a trade-mark.

The bill, filed on the 24th of September, 1885, alleged substantially as follows: That for over six years complainants had been engaged in manufacturing, preparing and shipping to the United States, and selling in the United States and elsewhere, a particular quality of tea, of which their immediate predecessors in business, Ingraham, Corbin & May, were the first and exclusive manufacturers, importers and wholesale dealers in this country; that during this period they had imported large quantities of such tea, which, by reason of its superior quality and because of the advertising they gave it, became well and favorably known, and was sold extensively in the chief cities and towns of the United States, particularly in Michigan; that said particular tea was known as "Tycoon Tea," the word "Tycoon" being properly attached to the cases and coverings in which the tea was imported; that this name "Tycoon" was given by them to their tea in 1879 in order to more clearly identify it, and had since been used as their adopted trade-mark for it; that having complied with the Act of Congress in such case made and provided, and with the regulations prescribed by the commissioner of patents, they procured the registration and recording of said trade-mark in the Patent Office on the 27th of December, 1881, and received from the commissioner of patents a certificate showing such record; that since the word "Tycoon" was first applied by them as a trade-mark, and since the date of such registration, the defendants, confederating with divers other persons in different parts of the United States, with full knowledge of complainants' rights under and by virtue of their trade-mark, in violation thereof, without complainants' consent, and with the intent fraudulently to divert to themselves complainants' trade in such tea, put upon the market in Detroit and elsewhere large quantities of tea in packages or cases of the same size and general appearance as those used by complainants, with the word "Tycoon" stamped thereon in imitation of complainants' trade-mark—all of which was intended to deceive and mislead the public into buying defendants' tea, which is of an inferior quality, greatly to the injury of the reputation of complainants' tea; that by reason of such fraudulent acts and practices on the part of defendants, complainants had been deprived of great gains and profits in the sale of their tea, and had been damaged more than $10,000; and that defendants were still using the aforesaid facings or labels with the word "Tycoon" stamped thereon upon tea, and threaten to continue to do so, to the great injury and damage of plaintiffs. The bill prayed for an injunction to restrain the defendants and their agents from the further use of complainants' trade-mark, for an accounting, and for damages.

Upon the filing of this bill, supported by a number of affidavits corroborating its allegations, the court issued a temporary restraining order as prayed for, and the defendants thereupon filed their answer denying specifically all the material allegations of the bill. The answer further alleged that the word "Tycoon" could not have been lawfully adopted and used as a trade-mark, because it had been a word in common use in trade as a brand or name for various kinds of tea imported from Japan, for many years prior to the time when complainants claim to have adopted it as a trade-mark. It further set forth that the defendants had been using the word "Tycoon" on the facings or labels of their tea in connection with the word "chop;" but it denied that these labels bore any more similarity to those of complainants than is usually the case with tea labels, and alleged that except in the word "Tycoon" there was no resemblance whatever between them. It therefore prayed that the bill be dismissed.

Considerable testimony was taken in the case, and the court below, on the 14th of June, 1886, rendered a decree dismissing the bill, without delivering any opinion. An appeal from that decree brings the case here.

We are of opinion that the decree below must be affirmed. The material allegations of the bill are not sustained by the evidence, and the one which presents the entire foundation for the claim of relief is disproved by the exhibit which the complainants append to their bill. After alleging that complainants had adopted as their trade-mark the word "Tycoon," and stamped it upon packages of a particular kind of tea manufactured and imported by themselves alone into the American market in 1879, and that the word "Tycoon," having never before been adopted as a trade-mark, had become known to the trade as exclusively designating a particular kind of tea dealt in by the complainants, the bill states that, for the purpose of obtaining protection for their exclusive right to the said word "Tycoon" as a trade-mark, they deposited it as above described in the Patent Office at Washington; and that in 1881 the same was registered and recorded by the commissioner of patents of the United States, and a certificate was issued therefor, securing to the complainants protection for the said trade-mark. The exhibits A and B, appended to the bill, and other exhibits attached to Corbin's deposition, show that the trade-mark adopted by the complainants, deposited and registered in the Patent Office, is not the word "Tycoon," as stated in the bill, but a transverse diamond-shaped symbol inclosing the word "The" at the top, and "Tea" at the bottom, between which, lengthwise the diamond, is the word "Tycoon." A fac-simile is as follows:

The claim of the complainants, filed in the Patent Office for the registration of the trade-mark in question, is in these words: "Our trade-mark consists of the letters and words and arbitrary symbols 'The Tycoon Tea, I. C. & M. C., Japan Tea,' ornamental scroll border, transverse diamond shape. . . . The letters or words 'I. C. & M. C., Japan Tea,' may be omitted or they may be partly omitted and partly changed as to their position within the square without materially altering the character of our trade-mark, the essential features of which are the symbol of a diamond and the arbitrarily selected word 'Tycoon.'"

It is not pretended that this combination, claimed and registered as the trade-mark of complainants, has ever been used by the defendants either in the identical form, or in a form having such resemblance thereto as might be calculated to deceive. A comparison of the label of defendants with that of the complainants, as given in the exhibit to the bill, shows many striking points of difference, and but few, if any, points of similarity, except that the word "Tycoon" is found in both. In the complainants' label, the diamond figure, the words "The Tycoon Tea," "Choicest" and "Spring Leaf" are printed in blue ink; and the other words are printed in black ink, all in different kinds of ornamental letters—the whole surrounded by an ornamental black scroll border. The defendants' label is water-marked in red and pink colors, surrounded by a heavy blue border with black decorations. The words are printed in various styles of letters of different colors—the words "Tycoon Chop," for instance, being in large white letters with red facings on a solid black ground; and "Japan Tea," in large black letters, some of which are plain and some ornamental. On the complainants' label the proprietorship of the tea is indicated by the letters "I. C. & M.," representing Ingraham, Corbin & May, the predecessors of the present firm; while on the defendants' label the name of their firm and their place of business appear prominently near the bottom of it.

These labels are so entirely dissimilar that it is difficult to perceive how they could be mistaken the one for the other. A mere glance is sufficient to distinguish them. There are certainly no more points of similarity between them than are to be found ordinarily between tea labels or facings; and were it not for the fact that the word "Tycoon" is found in both of them there would be no semblance of a case of infringement.

With respect to the word "Tycoon," the evidence shows beyond question that it has been used as a name or brand for Japan tea for many years. Invoices of "Tycoon tea" were received at the custom-house in San Francisco as early as May 15, 1873, as shown by a copy of the official records of that office filed in this case; and the evidence of dealers and merchants of California is all to the effect that the word was in common use as a brand for Japan tea for several years prior to that date. It is unnecessary to go into this evidence in detail; but it is conclusive as to the long use of the word prior to the alleged adoption of it as a part of the trade-mark of the complainants.

The authorities cited by complainants' counsel, to show that the prior use of a word as a trade-mark by another party who had abandoned it is not sufficient to debar the present owner of it from protection, do not apply to this case. At the time complainants claim to have adopted the word "Tycoon" as their trade-mark, for the particular species of tea dealt in by them, it was not an abandoned trade-mark previously used by some other person or firm to designate a particular quality of tea; but it was, and had been for many years, in general and common use as a term descriptive of a class of teas introduced into the American market—a term which all men engaged in the tea business had an equal right to use, and which belonged to no one individual either as a trade-mark or a trade label. It belonged to the public, as the common property of the trade, and therefore was not subject to appropriation by any one person. The following language used in Amoskeag Mfg. Co. v. Spear, 2 Sandf. 599, quoted with approval by this court in Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Clark, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 311, 324 [20:581, 583], is applicable to the claim of the complainant in this case: "He has no right to appropriate a sign or a symbol [or a name] which, from the nature of the fact it is used to signify, others may employ with equal truth, and therefore have an equal right to employ for the same purpose." See also Goodyear India Rubber Glove Co. v. Goodyear Rubber Co. 128 U. S. 598 [32:585]; Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. v. Finzer, 128 U. S. 182 [32:395]; Stachelberg v. Ponce, 128 U. S. 686 [32:569]; Menendez v. Holt, 128 U. S. 514 [32:526].

Even conceding that the complainants may claim a trade-mark for the combination of the diamond and the words inclosed in it, as described in their application to the Patent Office, there was, upon the authorities above cited, clearly no trade-mark in the word "Tycoon" considered by itself.

The decree of the court below dismissing the bill should be, and it hereby is, affirmed.

GEILINGER AND BLUM ET AL., Plffs.
in Err.

v.

CÆSAR PHILIPPI, Syndic of the Insolvent,
 GILBERT H. GREEN, ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 246-257.)

Effect of a cessio bonorum by insolvent in Louisiana—extent of title of syndic—property not liable to execution or attachment—distribution among creditors—property not included in schedule—property omitted by mistake or fraud—intention of insolvent—property claimed by wife of insolvent—creditors, when not estopped—nonresident creditors—seizure, when invalid—judgment of the court below.

1. By the laws of Louisiana, when a cessio bonorum has been accepted by the court and the creditors, and a syndic has been appointed and qualified, all the property and rights of property of the insolvent are vested in his creditors, represented by the syndic as their trustee, and pass to the creditors by the cession, whether included in his schedule or not.
2. This rule relates to possession and disposition, and the surrender of the insolvent does not divest him of the title to the property surrendered, though it strips him of the power to control, alienate or dispose of the same during the administration of his estate.
3. Such surrender so vests the property in the creditors, or in the syndic for them, that it is no longer liable to seizure, attachment or execution, but is held to be administered and disposed of according to law for the benefit of the creditors.
4. Although the title may not vest absolutely in the syndic or creditors, yet the surrender operates as a transfer for the specific purpose of the disposal of the property and the distribution of the proceeds in concursu among the creditors.
5. In this case, the order of the court in insolvency which stayed all judicial proceedings against the insolvent and his property and passed all his assets to the syndic for the creditors, was not confined in its operation to the property specifically named in the schedule, nor did the acceptance by the creditors have that effect.
6. If property be omitted by mistake or with fraudulent intention, it is the duty of the syndic to have the schedule amended so as to include it, and to take possession and administer upon it, and it is the duty of the creditors to bring it to his attention that he may do so.
7. Evidence offered that the insolvent did not intend to include such property, because advised by counsel that it was not liable for his debts, was properly excluded, as his intention could not control the operation of the law, or defeat the rights of his creditors.
8. Where such property was named in the schedule as belonging to the wife individually and not claimed by the debtor, the action of creditors in signing consents to the insolvent's discharge, under the erroneous belief that this property was not subject to their claims, does not estop them, and they are entitled to share in its proceeds when the mistake is discovered.
9. While nonresident creditors are entitled to come in pari passu with domestic, yet, if they do not do so, they cannot participate in the distribution.

10. Under the circumstances of this case, this property formed part of the assets belonging to an administration pending when the writs of f. fa. were issued, and its seizure under such writs was invalid.

11. The judgment of the circuit court which released the property upon condition that the costs in the making of the seizure be paid by the syndic, and that he present and file an order from the state district court authorizing and directing him to take possession of the property and administer the same as part of the insolvent estate, was proper.

[No. 367.]

Submitted Jan. 8, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana to review a judgment in an action brought by Cæsar Philippi, syndic of the creditors of Gilbert H. Green, an insolvent, decreeing that the seizure of certain property of the insolvent on execution be set aside and the marshal be restrained from selling the property. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a suit by way of third opposition, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana, by Cæsar Philippi, syndic of the creditors of Gilbert H. Green individually, and as a member of the late commercial firm and partnership of Gilbert H. Green & Co., of New Orleans, and also of Green, Stewart & Co., of Liverpool, England, in the suits of Bank in Winterthur v. Gilbert H. Green and Geilinger and Blum v. Gilbert H. Green, on the docket of said circuit court. After the answers were filed, the two causes were consolidated and tried by the court as one case.

The submission, findings of fact and judgment are as follows:

"This cause came on this day for trial, and the parties having filed a stipulation in writing waiving the intervention of a jury and submitting the cause to the court on the issues of law and of fact, with the request that the court do make a special finding of the facts—

"Whereupon the court makes the following finding of facts:

"Geilinger & Blum, a commercial firm, domiciled and doing business at Winterthur, in Switzerland, filed their action against the defendant, Gilbert H. Green, on November 25th, 1886, and on the 31st day of January, 1887, recovered a verdict and judgment in this court against Gilbert H. Green for the sum of ten thousand five hundred and nine $\frac{1}{10}$ dollars, with interest. The Bank in Winterthur, a corporation organized under the laws of the Canton of Zurich, in the Swiss Republic, filed its action against Gilbert H. Green on the 25th day of November, 1886, and on the 31st day of January, 1887, recovered a verdict and judgment in this court against Gilbert H. Green for the sum of forty thousand three hundred and six $\frac{1}{10}$ dollars, with interest. On December 26th, 1886, Gilbert H. Green made a surrender under the Insolvent Law of the State of Louisiana, individually and as a member of the com-

NOTE.—As to priority of United States in cases of insolvency, see notes to Prince v. Bartlett, Bk. 3, p. 614, and to Field v. U. S. Bk. 9, p. 94.

As to assignments with preferences, when valid and when not, see note to Marbury v. Brooks, Bk. 5, p. 522.

mercial copartnership of Gilbert H. Green & Company, of New Orleans, Green, Stewart & Co., of Liverpool, England, in the form and manner set forth in the certified copy of the record of said insolvent proceedings, No. 19,784 of the docket of the Civil District Court, Parish of Orleans, which said record is made part of the finding of facts in this cause to show the character and contents of the proceedings had in said cause; that on or about the 20th of May, 1887, under writs of alias fi. fa. issued in the case of Geilinger & Blum v. Gilbert H. Green and in the case of the Bank in Winterthur v. Gilbert H. Green, the marshal of this court levied upon certain real estate described in the petition of Cæsar Philippi, syndic. This property was acquired by act before Theodore Guyol, notary public, of date May 19th, 1882, and said deed is hereto annexed and made part of this statement of facts to show the form, purport and contents thereof.

"At the time that this levy was made the said property was in possession of Gilbert H. Green and his wife and was their matrimonial domicile, and the said property had been continuously in possession of the said Green and wife from the date of the purchase thereof down to the date of the seizure thereof under writs of fi. fa. in these causes. Up to the time that this seizure was made no demand had been made upon Green and wife by Cæsar Philippi, syndic, for the said property, and no claim of title or possession had been set up by the said Philippi, syndic, for the said property.

"And thereupon the court, upon these facts, finds the issues of law in favor of the said Cæsar Philippi, syndic, and it is thereupon ordered, adjudged and decreed that the seizure of the said property above described under the alias writ of fi. fa. issued in these causes, dated May 20th, 1887, be set aside and the property released by the marshal, and that R. B. Pleasants, United States marshal for the Eastern District of Louisiana, be restrained and enjoined from proceeding to advertise and sell the property herein claimed, upon this condition, however, that said Philippi shall pay all the costs which have been incurred in the making of said seizure, and shall also present and file in this cause an order from the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, Division E, authorizing and directing him to take possession of said property from the said Green and wife, and to administer the same as part of the insolvent estate of the said Gilbert H. Green committed to the charge of the said court and the said syndic.

"It is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that Geilinger & Blum and the Bank of Winterthur be condemned jointly to pay the costs of this suit.

"Judgment rendered June 18, 1887. Judgment signed June 17, 1887."

Annexed to the findings was a certified copy of the insolvency proceedings and of the deed to Mrs. Green.

The schedule of his assets showed this entry therein by Green:

"The house in which I reside on St. Charles street, and the furniture therein, is the individual property of my wife, and I have no claim thereto."

From the procès-verbal of the meeting of the 188 U. S.

creditors, it appeared that Philippi was unanimously elected syndic, and letters issued to him accordingly; that nineteen out of twenty-seven local creditors of Green & Co. appeared and took part in the proceedings, accepted the surrender of property made by the insolvent, and voted to grant him a full discharge; and that the court appointed an attorney to represent the absent creditors, who declared that he had taken full cognizance of the meeting.

The deed was dated May 19, 1882, and purported to grant, bargain, sell, assign, convey, transfer and deliver with full warranty to Mrs. Green, wife of Gilbert H. Green, "by whom she is herein assisted and authorized," the property therein described. The notes for the deferred payments were signed by her, but it did not appear in the deed that the purchase price was paid for with the paraphernal or separate estate of Mrs. Green.

Upon the trial a bill of exceptions was taken, which states that Geilinger and Blum and the Bank of Winterthur "placed Gilbert H. Green upon the witness stand and offered to prove by the said Gilbert H. Green that in making the surrender of his property, as set forth in the record No. 19,784, division E, civil district court, referred to in the statement of facts in this cause, he did not intend to include in that surrender the property seized in this cause, for the reason that he was informed and advised by his counsel that the said property was the property of his wife and was not liable for his debts or covered by the said surrender; to the introduction of which testimony the said Cæsar Philippi, syndic, then and there objected, on the ground that the said testimony was irrelevant and that Green's intention in making his surrender would not affect the issue in this cause; which objections the court sustained, and refused to allow said testimony to be adduced. To which ruling Geilinger and Blum and the Bank in Winterthur then and there excepted." To the judgment rendered as above, the pending writ of error was sued out from this court.

The errors assigned are:

1. That the court erred in refusing plaintiffs in error the right to prove the facts set forth in the bill of exceptions herein filed.
2. That the court erred in concluding as a matter of law that Gilbert H. Green had surrendered the property seized in this cause under and by virtue of the insolvent proceedings No. 19,784, of the civil district court.
3. That the court erred in ordering the release of the property herein sued for.

Messrs. Edgar H. Farrar, B. F. Jonas and Ernest B. Kruttschnitt, for plaintiffs in error:

The insolvent proceedings in the State court and the Insolvent Laws of Louisiana have no extraterritorial effect, and do not affect or control nonresident creditors, unless they voluntarily make themselves parties to the proceedings.

Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 213 (6: 606); Baldwin v. Hale, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 223 (17: 581); Gilman v. Lockwood, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 411 (18: 432); Towne v. Smith, 1 Woodb. & M. 136; Kettlewell v. Stewart, 8 Gill, 499; Poe v. Duck, 5 Md. 1.

Where the parties are not the same, nor the cause of action the same in both courts, that court holds the property which first obtained physical custody of it.

Payne v. Drewe, 4 East, 528; Taylor v. Carryl, 61 U. S. 20 How. 594 (15: 1081); Freeman v. Howe, 65 U. S. 24 How. 450 (16: 749); Wilmer v. Atlantic & R. Air-Line R. Co. 2 Woods, 409.

Messrs. Thomas J. Semmes and Alfred Goldthwaite, for defendants in error:

The property ought to have been surrendered to the creditors by Green, and should have been placed upon the schedule of assets, being community property and liable for the debts of Green.

Miller v. Handy, 38 La. Ann. 160; Bouligny v. Fortier, 16 La. Ann. 214; Shaw v. Hill, 20 La. Ann. 581; Reid v. Rochereau, 2 Woods, 151; Duncan v. Duncan, 3 Mart. O. S. (La.) 232.

The whole property must be surrendered, to be administered and disposed of according to law.

Muse v. Yarborough, 11 La. 530.

If any property has been omitted from the schedule, it does not belong to the debtor, but passes to the creditors by the cession.

Levy v. Jacobs, 12 La. 112; Baldwin v. Union Ins. Co. 2 Rob. (La.) 188; West v. Creditors, 8 Rob. (La.) 128; Dwight v. Smith, 9 Rob. (La.) 83; Dwight v. Simon, 4 La. Ann. 490; Duplessis v. Boutte, 11 La. 345; Bank of Tennessee v. Horn, 58 U. S. 17 How. 157 (15: 70); Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 208 (29: 857).

After acceptance of the cessio bonorum by the judge for the benefit of creditors, the property surrendered is vested in the latter so as to be no longer liable to seizure, attachment or execution, but they acquire no real ownership in it.

Walling v. Morefield, 38 La. Ann. 1177; Jacquet v. His Creditors, 38 La. Ann. 866; La Forest v. His Creditors, 18 La. Ann. 293; Civ. Code, 2175; Rivas v. Hunstock, 2 Rob. (La.) 194; Elmes v. Estevan, 1 Mart. O. S. (La.) 198.

Not only the property omitted from the schedule is transferred to the creditors, but the syndic as their representative, may sue to annul the transfer of any property which the debtor has made to their prejudice prior to his cession.

Chaffe v. Scheen, 34 La. Ann. 686.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It is conceded by counsel for the plaintiffs in error that the St. Charles Street property was under the law of Louisiana community property, and liable for Green's debts, and should have been surrendered to the syndic; that if Green had casually omitted it from his schedules it would have passed under the control of the syndic; and that if he had fraudulently omitted the property from his schedules and put the title in the name of his wife before the insolvency proceedings, an action would lie by the syndic to recover it. But it is contended that as Green declared the property to be his wife's, and did not intend it to go under his insolvent proceedings, and as his surrender in the form and manner as made was accepted, and the syndic set up no claim of title or possession until after the seizure by the marshal, "the property remaining thus in Green's actual possession was not in gremio legis so as to exclude his foreign creditors, who were in no manner bound by his insolvent proceedings, from levying their writs upon it."

The Louisiana Code contains these articles (Rev. Civ. Code La. 1875, 478):

"Art. 2175 [2171]. The surrender does not give the property to the creditors; it only gives them the right of selling it for their benefit and receiving the income of it, till sold.

"Art. 2178 [2174]. As the debtor preserves his ownership of the property surrendered, he may divest the creditors of their possession of the same, at any time before they have sold it, by paying the amount of his debts, with the expenses attending the cession."

Sections 1781 to 1822, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes of Louisiana constitute a system of Insolvent Laws. (Rev. Stat. La. 1870, 853.)

Section 1791 reads: "From and after such cession and acceptance, all the property of the insolvent debtor mentioned in the schedule shall be fully vested in his creditors; and the syndic shall take possession of, and be entitled to claim and recover, all the property, and to administer and sell the same according to law."

These provisions have formed part of the laws of Louisiana for many years, and the Supreme Court of that State has repeatedly held in respect to them that, when a cessio bonorum has been accepted by the court and the creditors, and a syndic has been appointed and qualified, all the property and rights of property of the insolvent are vested in his creditors, represented by the syndic as their trustee, and pass to the creditors by the cession, whether included in his schedule or not. Dwight v. Simon, 4 La. Ann. 490; Muse v. Yarborough, 11 La. 521; West v. His Creditors, 8 Rob. (La.) 128; Dwight v. Smith, 9 Rob. (La.) 82. These cases sustain and are therefore cited to the proposition by Chief Justice Taney, delivering the opinion of this court in Bank of Tennessee v. Horn, 58 U. S. 17 How. 157, 160 [15: 70, 71]. The rule relates to possession and disposition, and it has been frequently decided that the surrender of the insolvent does not divest him of the title to the property surrendered, though it strips him of the power to control, alienate or dispose of the same during the administration of his estate, and so vests it in the creditors or in the syndic for them that it is no longer liable to seizure, attachment or execution, but is held to be administered and disposed of according to law for the benefit of the creditors. Rivas v. Hunstock, 2 Rob. (La.) 187; Jacquet v. His Creditors, 38 La. Ann. 866; Walling v. Morefield, 38 La. Ann. 1174, 1177; Nimick v. Ingram, 17 La. Ann. 85.

It is therefore immaterial that title may not vest absolutely in the syndic or creditors. It is enough that the surrender operates as a transfer for the specific purpose of the disposal of the property and the distribution of the proceeds in concursu among the creditors, and is protected accordingly. Laforest v. His Creditors, 18 La. Ann. 292; West v. His Creditors, ubi supra.

In Nimick v. Ingram, 17 La. Ann. 85, Nimick & Co., judgment creditors of Ingram, issued execution against him from the Fourth District Court of New Orleans, where they had recovered their judgment, and caused property to be seized thereunder after Ingram had gone into insolvency and made a surrender in the fifth district court. The proceedings in Nimick & Co's suit were transferred to the fifth district court and cumulated with the insolvent proceedings. Thereupon, Ingram took out of the latter court a rule on Nimick & Co. to show cause why all further action under the writ of fi. fa. should not be stayed and set aside, which rule was made absolute; and from that order an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of Louisiana. There Nimick & Co. urged that by their diligence they had discovered the property seized by them, and that, Ingram having fraudulently attempted to screen the property, it was legally incompetent for him to take any steps in relation to it to affect their rights; but the Supreme Court said:

"What these rights are it is not necessary for us to decide, being understood, as we are, that they can only be determined contradictorily with the mass of the insolvent's creditors, before the court seized of the concursio, as the whole proceedings in the suit pending originally in the fourth district court were . . . properly ordered to be cumulated with the insolvent proceedings in the fifth district court. . . .

"Any informality in the proceedings, when questioned, must be by direct action. No creditor will be permitted to disregard and treat as an absolute nullity a judgment accepting a surrender made by his debtor, and granting a stay of proceedings.

"The acceptance for the creditors by the court of the ceded estate vests in them all the rights and property of the insolvent, whether placed on the schedule or not; and the syndic may sue to recover them.

"But any creditor may show, provided it be contradictorily with the mass of the creditors, or their legal representative, that any particular object or fund is not embraced in the surrendered estate, but is subject exclusively to his individual claim. And this is the remedy of the plaintiffs, if any they have."

Nimick v. Ingram is quoted from and approved in Tva v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 207 [29: 855, 857].

In the case in hand, the order of the court in insolvency stayed all judicial proceedings against the insolvent and his property, and, by the acceptance of the cession, passed all the insolvent's assets to the syndic for the benefit of creditors; but its operation was not confined to the property specifically named, nor did the acceptance by the creditors have that effect. If property be omitted by mistake or with fraudulent intention, it is the duty of the syndic to have the schedule amended so as to include it, and to take possession and administer upon it (Chaffe v. Scheen, 34 La. Ann. 686); and it is the duty of the creditors to bring it to his attention, that he may do so. The evidence offered by appellants that Green did not intend to include this property because advised by counsel that it was not liable for his debts was properly excluded, as his intention could not control the operation of the law, or defeat the rights of his creditors.

The property was named in the schedule as belonging to the wife individually and therefore not claimed by the debtor; but any creditor, by inquiry, could have ascertained the circumstances and been informed of its liability under the law. There is nothing to impugn the good faith of the syndic; and if there were, he could have been compelled to act and was liable to removal. (Rev. Stat. La. § 1814.) Nor was there any element of estoppel involved in the action of the creditors who signed the consents to Green's discharge. The surrender which they accepted covered all the insolvent's assets, and even if they were laboring under the erroneous belief that this particular property was not subject to their claims, they would be entitled, so far as appears from this record, to share in its proceeds when the mistake was discovered. No other creditor was misled to his injury by their action, and no adjudication foreclosed their rights.

And in addition to this, as Geilinger and Blum and the Bank in Winterthur recovered their judgments after the insolvency proceedings were commenced and the surrender made by Green, if they wished to attack those proceedings they should have done so, as we have seen, "contradictorily with the mass of the insolvent's creditors, before the court seized of the concursio."

It is said, however, that insolvency proceedings and laws can have no extraterritorial effect, and do not affect or control nonresident creditors unless they voluntarily make themselves parties to the proceedings.

And it is argued that, as these were foreign creditors who had not made themselves such parties, and had sought relief through the United States circuit court, that placed them on different ground as to the property of an insolvent from that occupied by the creditors of his domicile. But so far as the property of an insolvent is concerned in the jurisdiction within which proceedings against him are taken, its destination is fixed (existing priorities being of course respected) by the laws of that jurisdiction. The insolvency decree is in the nature of an execution, and, though it cannot by its own force attach assets in another State, it takes the assets within its own. And while nonresident creditors are entitled to come in pari passu with domestic, if they do not do so they cannot participate in the distribution.

By the insolvency proceedings Green's assets were placed in gremio legis, and could not be seized by process from another court. Peale v. Phipps, 55 U. S. 14 How. 368, 375 [14: 459, 461]; Tva v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 208 [29: 855, 857]. What the rights of the appellants might be if they declined to prove their claims or intervene in the state court, upon the termination of the administration there, it is not necessary to consider. Williams v. Benedict, 49 U. S. 8 How. 107, 112 [12: 1007, 1008]; Union Bank of Tennessee v. Vaiden, 59 U. S. 18 How. 503 [15: 472]; Green v. Creighton, 64 U. S. 28 How. 90, 107 [16: 419, 428]. The conclusion that under the particular circumstances disclosed, this property formed part of the assets belonging to an administration pending when the writs of fi. fa. were issued, determines the invalidity of the seizure under them. Rio Grande R. Company v. Gomila, 182 U. S. 478 [38: 400].

The judgment of the circuit court released the property upon condition that the costs in the making of the seizure be paid by the syndic, and that he present and file an order from the state district court authorizing and directing him to take possession of the property and administer the same as part of the insolvent estate of Green. This was an eminently judicious and proper order, apparently effectual to secure the appropriation of the property to the claims to which it was subject, while these judgment creditors were absolved from the expense incurred in emphasizing the fact of its liability.

We see no error in the record, and the judgment is therefore affirmed.

M. B. BUFORD ET AL., Appts.,

v.

JOHN S. HOUTZ ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 320-322.)

Unoccupied public lands, use of for stock raising—implied license to use—government permission—duty of owner of cattle—law and customs of Utah—law of England—inequitable suit.

1. Plaintiffs, engaged in stock raising on unoccupied public lands of the United States, although owning detached uninclosed portions of such land, cannot, by suit in equity, enjoin defendants, owning none of such lands, from the use of such public lands for pasturage, on the ground that defendants' sheep pastured thereon will trespass and pasture on plaintiff's uninclosed lands; plaintiffs cannot, by so excluding defendants, secure to themselves the exclusive right of pasturage on such public lands.
2. There is an implied license, growing out of the custom of nearly a hundred years, that the public lands of the United States, especially those in which the native grasses are adapted to the growth and fattening of domestic animals, shall be free to the people who seek to use them, when left open and uninclosed.
3. The government of the United States in all its branches has known of this use, has never forbidden it, nor taken any steps to arrest it, but has consented to and encouraged it.
4. In this country, in the progress of its settlement, the principle that a man was bound to keep his cattle confined within his own grounds or else would be liable for their trespasses upon the uninclosed grounds of his neighbors was never adopted or recognized as the law of the country, except as it might refer to animals known to be dangerous.
5. The law of Utah and its customs in this regard are the same as above stated, and the privileges accorded by the United States for grazing upon her public lands are subject alone to their control.
6. There is no equity in allowing plaintiffs to deprive defendants of this recognized right to permit their cattle to run at large over the unoccupied lands of the United States and feed upon the grasses found in them, and, under pretense of owning a small proportion of the land in controversy, obtain for themselves the monopoly of this valuable privilege.

[No. 711.]

Submitted Jan. 6, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

NOTE.—As to pre-emption rights to public lands, see note to U. S. v. Fitzgerald, Bk. 10, p. 788.

APPEAL from a decree of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah affirming a decree of the Third Judicial District Court of Utah Territory in and for Salt Lake County, dismissing a suit to enjoin defendants from pasturing their sheep upon certain lands.

Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. M. Kirkpatrick, for appellants:

An equitable action will lie to restrain parties who severally contribute to a nuisance.

Chipman v. Palmer, 77 N. Y. 56; Blaisdell v. Stephens, 14 Nev. 22; Keyes v. Little York Gold W. & W. Co. 53 Cal. 724; Hillman v. Newington, 57 Cal. 64; Oliver v. Platt, 44 U. S. 8 How. 413 (11: 658); Gaines v. Chew, 48 U. S. 2 How. 642 (11: 411); Cent. Pac. R. Co. v. Dyer, 1 Sawy. 641.

In actions to quiet title to lands against persons setting up adverse claims, the rule is that all such persons are properly made defendants.

Fisher v. Hepburn, 48 N. Y. 41-55; Pomeroy, Remedies, § 372; Comstock v. Rayford, 1 Smedes & M. 423, 40 Am. Dec. 102, and note, 106; Fellows v. Fellows, 4 Cow. 682, 15 Am. Dec. 427, note, and cases cited; Dinmock v. Birby, 20 Pick. 377; Bowers v. Keescher, 9 Iowa, 422; Bugbee v. Sargent, 23 Me. 269; Lewis v. St. Albans Iron & S. Works, 50 Vt. 477; Butler v. Spann, 27 Miss. 234.

The complaint states a good cause of action in equity for injunctive relief.

Watson v. Sutherland, 72 U. S. 5 Wall. 74 (18: 580); Boyce v. Grundy, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 210 (7: 655); Mulry v. Norton, 1 Cent. Rep. 743, 100 N. Y. 424.

The legal remedy is not adequate; the inadequacy of legal remedies is the test and limit of the injunctive jurisdiction.

8 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1857, and note 1; Sullivan v. Finnegan, 101 Mass. 447; Clouston v. Shearer, 99 Mass. 209; Gage v. Rohrbach, 56 Ill. 262, 266; McDowell v. Langdon, 3 Gray, 518; Buxton v. Broadway, 45 Conn. 540; Ferguson v. Fisk, 23 Conn. 501; Gage v. Billings, 56 Ill. 268.

There is a strong analogy between the facts in this case and those of the Mining Debris Case, 9 Sawy. 441.

When the United States sells land and parts with the fee by patent, it retains no right to take that land for public use without just compensation, nor does it confer such a right on the State within which it lies.

Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 181 (20: 581); Eaton v. B. C. & M. R. Co. 51 N. H. 510; Cooley, Torts, 569; Mining Debris Case, 9 Sawy. 508.

Messrs. Joseph L. Rawlins, Ogden Hiles and James N. Kimball, for appellees:

It is not true that the law bounds every man's property, and is his fence, in the sense for which appellants contend in this case.

Laws of the Territory of Utah, 1886, p. 8, chap. 8; Keruehaker v. Cleveland, C. & O. R. Co. 8 Ohio St. 172; Seeley v. Peters, 10 Ill. 130; Studwell v. Ritch, 14 Conn. 293; Beaufort v. Danner, 1 Strobl. L. 176; Fripp v. Hasell, 1 Strobl. L. 173; Utah Comp. Laws 1888, § 2234; Comerford v. Dupuy, 17 Cal. 808; Logan v. Gedney, 88 Cal. 579.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Utah.

The bill was originally filed by the appellants in the Third Judicial District Court of Utah Territory in and for Salt Lake County, and in that court a demurrer was filed setting forth two grounds of objection to the bill: first, that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; and, second, that several causes of action have been improperly united in this, that said complaint states a separate cause of action against each individual defendant, and nowhere states or attempts to state a cause of action against all of the defendants. This demurrer was sustained, and a decree rendered dismissing the bill at the costs of plaintiffs, and on appeal to the Supreme Court of the Territory that decree was affirmed.

The case is here on an appeal from that judgment. The complainants were M. B. Buford, J. W. Taylor, Charles Crocker and George Crocker, copartners under the firm name and style of the Promontory Stock Ranch Company. The defendants were John S. Houtz and Henry and Edward Conant, under the firm name and style of Houtz & Conant, the Box Elder Stock and Mercantile Company, a corporation, and twenty individuals whose names are given in the bill.

The plaintiffs allege that they are the owners of certain sections and parts of sections of land in the Territory of Utah, which they describe specifically by the numbers and the style of their congressional subdivisions, very much of which is derived from the Central Pacific Railroad Company, to which they were granted by the Congress of the United States. These lands were alternate sections of odd numbers according to the congressional grant to the railroad company, and they with the other tracts mentioned in the plaintiffs' bill are said to amount to over 850,000 acres, "and extend over an area of forty miles in a northerly and a southerly direction, by about thirty-six miles in an easterly and westerly direction."

The allegation is that these lands are very valuable for pasturage and the grazing of stock, and are of little or no value for any other purpose, and were held by the plaintiffs, and are now held by them, for that purpose solely. That owing to their character, the scarcity of water and the aridity of the climate where these lands are situated, they can never be subjected to any beneficial use other than the grazing of stock. That plaintiffs own and are possessed of large numbers of horned cattle, to wit, 20,000 head, of the value of $100,000, and are engaged in the sole business of stock raising. That for a long time they have had and now have all said cattle running and grazing upon these lands. That all the even-numbered sections in each and all of the townships and fractional townships above mentioned belong to and are part of the public domain of the United States. That the defendants have not, nor has either of them, any right, title, interest or possession or right of possession, of or to any of the lands embraced in any of the townships or fractional townships above mentioned, nor have they ever had any such right, title, interest or possession.

188 U. S.

That none of the lands included within said townships or fractional townships are fenced or inclosed, except a small portion owned by plaintiffs, which they have heretofore inclosed with fences for use as corrals, within which to gather from time to time their cattle in order to brand the young thereof. They allege that for various reasons they cannot fence and inclose their lands without inclosing large portions of the lands of the United States, and without rendering large and valuable portions of their own of no value, by reason of the shutting off and preventing their own cattle from obtaining necessary water. That the defendants Houtz and Conant, now and for a long time past, have owned a large number, to wit, 15,000 head, of sheep, and each of the other defendants to this action is now, and for a long time past has been, the owner of a large flock or herd of sheep. The smallest number owned by any one party exceeds, as plaintiff believes, five thousand, and the aggregate number of sheep so held exceeds two hundred thousand.

It is then alleged that the official survey of the United States has been extended over all land within the townships and fractional townships mentioned in the bill, and that there are seven well-defined and well-known traveled highways over those lands, four of which run in a northerly and southerly direction, and three in an easterly and westerly direction, entirely across the lands embraced in said townships and fractional townships, along which the sheep of the defendants may be driven without injury to plaintiffs' lands, notwithstanding which each of said defendants claims and asserts that he has the lawful right and is entitled to drive all sheep owned by him over and across any of said lands of these plaintiffs, and to pasture and graze his sheep thereon whenever and wherever he may desire so to do. That all of said defendants respectively rely upon and set up a common, though not a joint, pretended right to drive, graze and pasture his sheep thereon, and each of said defendants bases his pretended right to drive, graze and pasture his sheep upon the lands of the plaintiffs upon precisely the same state of facts as that relied upon by each of the other defendants. That is to say, each of said defendants claims that, all the even-numbered sections in each of said townships and fractional townships being unoccupied public domain of the United States, he has an implied license from the government of the United States to drive, graze and pasture his sheep thereon, and that he cannot do this without having them run, graze and pasture upon the lands of the plaintiffs. Therefore each of said defendants claims and asserts that he is entitled to have his said sheep run, graze and pasture upon the lands of the plaintiffs as aforesaid; and that during the year past each of said defendants did repeatedly drive large bands and herds of sheep over, upon and across the lands of these plaintiffs, and graze and pasture the same thereon, to the great injury and damage of the said plaintiffs, and that they and each of them threaten to continue to do this and will do it unless restrained by order of the court.

It is then alleged that the sheep, in grazing upon the lands, do it a permanent injury, and drive away the cattle from such lands, whereby, if the defendants are permitted to drive and pasture their sheep on the lands of the plaintiffs, those lands will be greatly damaged, and, for a long period of time in the future, rendered valueless for the purpose of grazing and pasturing their cattle. They then allege that they have no adequate way of estimating the damage which they will suffer should defendants, or either of them, do as they have threatened to do as herein stated, for the reason, among others, that the destruction of the food grasses and herbage on plaintiffs' lands will result in depriving plaintiffs' cattle of necessary food, thereby causing great deterioration in flesh and consequent value, which loss and deterioration cannot be adequately determined by witnesses; which will result in the destruction of plaintiffs' business, will waste and impair their freehold, and obstruct them and each of them in the use of their said property. They allege, therefore, that they have no plain, adequate and speedy remedy at law; and that it will be impossible to establish the amount of damages which said plaintiffs will suffer by the wrong or trespass of any particular one of said defendants.

619

The prayer of the plaintiffs is for a judgment and decree of the court—

1st. That said defendants have not, nor has either of them, any right of way for any of his or their sheep over said lands of plaintiffs or any part thereof, except over and along the highways aforesaid; that they have not, nor has either of them, any right to graze or pasture any of his or their sheep thereon or on any part thereof.

2d. That, pending this action, said defendants and each of them, their and each of their agents, servants and employes, be enjoined from driving any of his or their sheep upon any of said lands, except over and along said highways, or permitting any of them to go, graze or pasture thereon, and that upon the final decree herein said injunction be made perpetual.

3d. For such other and further relief as may be just and equitable, together with their costs in this behalf incurred.

The Supreme Court of the Territory, in affirming the judgment of the court of the third judicial district, did not consider the question of the misjoinder of defendants, but rested its judgment upon the want of equity in the bill. It might be difficult to sustain a bill which, like this, united fifteen or twenty different defendants, to restrain them from committing a trespass, where, if the parties are guilty or should attempt to commit the trespass, they do it without concert of action, at different times, in different parts of a large district of country such as here described, and each in his own way and by his own action or that of his servants. But, waiving this question, we are of opinion that the bill has no equity in it.

The appellants being stock-raisers, like the defendants, whose stock are raised and fattened on the unoccupied public lands of the United States mainly, seek by the purchase and ownership of parts of these lands, detached through a large body of the public domain, to exclude the defendants from the use of this public domain as a grazing ground, while they themselves appropriate all of it to their own exclusive use. This they propose to do, not by any Act of Congress or of any legislative body whatever, but by means of this bill in chancery, obtaining an injunction against the defendants, who they allege to be the owners of 200,000 sheep grazing upon these public lands, which shall exclude defendants from the use of them, and thereby secure to themselves the exclusive right to pasture their 20,000 head of cattle upon the same lands.

If we look at the condition of the ownership of these lands, on which the plaintiffs rely for relief, we are still more impressed with the injustice of this attempt. A calculation of the area from which it is proposed to exclude the defendants by this injunction, under the allegation that it is forty miles in one direction and thirty-six in another, shows that it embraces 1,440 square miles, or 921,000 acres, all of which, as averred by the bill, is uninclosed and unoccupied except for grazing purposes. Of this 921,000 acres of land the plaintiffs only assert title to 350,000 acres; that is to say, being the owners of one third of this entire body of land, which ownership attaches to different sections and quarter-sections scattered through the whole body of it, they propose by excluding the defendants to obtain a monopoly of the whole tract, while two thirds of it is public land belonging to the United States, in which the right of all parties to use it for grazing purposes, if any such right exists, is equal. The equity of this proceeding is something which we are not able to perceive.

It seems to be founded upon the proposition that while they, as the owners of the 350,000 acres thus scattered through the whole area, are to be permitted for that reason to exercise the right of grazing their own cattle upon all of the land embraced within these 1,440 square miles, the defendants cannot be permitted to use even the lands belonging to the United States, because in doing this their cattle will trespass upon the uninclosed lands of plaintiffs. In other words, they seek to introduce into the vast regions of the public domain, which have been open to the use of the herds of stock-raisers for nearly a century without objection, the principle of law derived from England and applicable to highly cultivated regions of country, that every man must restrain his stock within his own grounds, and if he does not do so, and they get upon the uninclosed grounds of his neighbor, it is a trespass for which their owner is responsible.

We are of opinion that there is an implied license, growing out of the custom of nearly a hundred years, that the public lands of the United States, especially those in which the native grasses are adapted to the growth and fattening of domestic animals, shall be free to the people who seek to use them, where they are left open and uninclosed, and no act of government forbids this use. For many years past a very large proportion of the beef which has been used by the people of the United States is the meat of cattle thus raised upon the public lands without charge, without let or hindrance or obstruction. The government of the United States in all its branches has known of this use, has never forbidden it nor taken any steps to arrest it. No doubt it may be safely stated that this has been done with the consent of all branches of the government, and, as we shall attempt to show, with its direct encouragement.

The whole system of the control of the public lands of the United States as it has been conducted by the government, under Acts of Congress, shows a liberality in regard to their use which has been uniform and remarkable. They have always been open to sale at very cheap prices. Laws have been enacted authorizing persons to settle upon them, and to cultivate them, before they acquire any title to them. While in the incipency of the settlement of these lands, by persons entering upon them, the permission to do so was a tacit one, the exercise of this permission became so important that Congress, by a system of laws called the Pre-emption Laws, recognized this right so far as to confer a priority of the right of purchase on the persons who settled upon and cultivated any part of this public domain. During the time that the settler was perfecting his title, by making the improvements which that Statute required, and paying, by installments or otherwise, the money necessary to purchase it, both he and all other persons who desired to do so had full liberty to graze their stock upon the grasses of the prairies and upon other nutritious substances found upon the soil.

The value of this privilege grew as the population increased, and it became a custom for persons to make a business or pursuit of gathering herds of cattle or sheep and raising them and fattening them for market upon these uninclosed lands of the government of the United States. Of course the instances became numerous in which persons purchasing land from the United States put only a small part of it in cultivation, and permitted the balance to remain uninclosed and in no way separated from the lands owned by the United States. All the neighbors who had settled near one of these prairies or on it, and all the people who had cattle that they wished to graze upon the public lands, permitted them to run at large over the whole region, fattening upon the public lands of the United States and upon the uninclosed lands of the private individual without let or hindrance. The owner of a piece of land, who had built a house or inclosed twenty or forty acres of it, had the benefit of this universal custom, as well as the party who owned no land. Everybody used the open uninclosed country which produced nutritious grasses as a public common on which their horses, cattle, hogs and sheep could run and graze.

It has never been understood that in those regions and in this country, in the progress of its settlement, the principle prevailed that a man was bound to keep his cattle confined within his own grounds or else would be liable for their trespasses upon the uninclosed grounds of his neighbors. Such a principle was ill adapted to the nature and condition of the country at that time. Owing to the scarcity of means for inclosing lands, and the great value of the use of the public domain for pasturage, it was never adopted or recognized as the law of the country, except as it might refer to animals known to be dangerous and permitted to go where their dangerous character might produce evil results. Indeed, it is only within a few years past, as the country has been settled and become highly cultivated, all the land nearly being so used by its owners or by their tenants, that the question of compelling the owner of cattle to keep them confined has been the subject of agitation.

Nearly all the States in early days had what was called the Fence Law, a law by which a kind of fence, sufficient in a general way to protect the cultivated ground from cattle and other domestic animals which were permitted to run at large, was prescribed. The character of this fence in most of the Statutes was laid down with great particularity, and unless it was in strict conformity to the Statute there was no liability on the part of the owner of cattle if they invaded the inclosure of a party and inflicted injury on him. If the owner of the inclosed ground had his fence constructed in accordance with the requirements of the Statute, the law presumed then that an animal which invaded this inclosure was what was called a breachy animal, was not such animal as should be permitted to go at large, and the owner was liable for the damages done by him. Otherwise the right of the owner of all domestic animals to permit them to run at large, without responsibility for their getting upon the lands of his neighbor, was conceded.

The Territory of Utah has now, and has always had, a similar Statute, section 2234 of the Compiled Laws of Utah. It is now a matter of occasional legislation in the States which have been created out of this public domain, to permit certain counties, or parts of the State, or the whole of the State, by a vote of the people within such subdivisions, to determine whether cattle shall longer be permitted to run at large and the owners of the soil compelled to rely upon their fences for protection, or whether the cattle-owner shall keep them confined, and in that manner protect his neighbor without the necessity on the part of the latter of relying upon fences which he may make for such protection.

Whatever policy may be the result of this current agitation can have no effect upon the present case, as the law of Utah and its customs in this regard remain such as we have described it to be in the general region of the northwest, and the privileges accorded by the United States for grazing upon her public lands are subject alone to their control.

These principles were very clearly enunciated by the Supreme Court of Ohio in 1854 in the case of Kerwaker v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co. 8 Ohio St. 179. In discussing this question, the court expresses so well the principle which we are considering that we venture to make an extensive quotation from the opinion:

"Admitting the rule of the common law of England in relation to cattle and other live stock running at large to be such as stated, the question arises whether it is applicable to the condition and circumstances of the people of this State, and in accordance with their habits, understandings and necessities. If this be the law in Ohio now, it has been so since the first settlement of the State, and every person who has allowed his stock to run at large and go upon the uninclosed grounds of others has been a wrong-doer, and liable to an action for damages by every person on whose lands his creatures may have wandered. What has been the actual situation of affairs, and the habits, understandings and necessities of the people of this State from its first settlement up to the present period in this respect? Cattle, hogs and other kinds of live stock not known to be breachy and unruly, or dangerous, have been allowed at all times and in all parts of the State to run at large and graze on the range of uncultivated and uninclosed lands.

So that it has been the general custom of the people of this State, since its first settlement, to allow their cattle, hogs, horses, etc., to run at large, and range upon the uninclosed lands of the neighborhood in which they are kept; and it has never been understood by them that they were tortfeasors, and liable in damages for letting their stock thus run at large. The existence or enforcement of such a law would have greatly retarded the settlement of the country, and have been against the policy of both the general and the state governments.

"The common understanding upon which the people of this State have acted since its first settlement has been that the owner of land was obliged to inclose it with a view to its cultivation; that without a lawful fence he could not, as a general thing, maintain an action for a trespass thereon by the cattle of his neighbor running at large; and that to leave uncultivated lands uninclosed was an implied license to cattle and other stock at large to traverse and graze them. Not only, therefore, was this alleged rule of the common law inapplicable to the circumstances and condition of the people of this State, but inconsistent with the habits, the interests, necessities and understanding of the people."

In the case of Seeley v. Peters, 10 Ill. 142, in the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1848, six years earlier than the Ohio case, the court in reference to the same subject, by Judge Trumbull, uses the following language:

"Perhaps there is no principle of the common law so inapplicable to the condition of our country and people as the one which is sought to be enforced now for the first time since the settlement of the State. It has been the custom in Illinois, so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, for the owners of stock to suffer them to run at large. Settlers have located themselves contiguous to prairies for the very purpose of getting the benefit of the range. The right of all to pasture their cattle upon uninclosed ground is universally conceded. No man has questioned this right, although hundreds of cases must have occurred where the owners of cattle have escaped the payment of damages on account of the insufficiency of the fences through which their stock have broken, and never till now has the common-law rule, that the owner of cattle is bound to fence them up, been supposed to prevail or to be applicable to our condition. The universal understanding of all classes of the community, upon which they have acted by inclosing their crops and letting their cattle run at large, is entitled to no little consideration in determining what the law is, and we should feel inclined to hold, independent of any statutes upon the subject, on account of the inapplicability of the common law rule to the condition and circumstances of our people, that it does not and never has prevailed in Illinois. But it is unnecessary to assume that ground in this case. The legislation upon this subject, from the time when we were a part of the Indiana Territory down to the last law contained in the Revised Statutes, clearly shows that the Legislature never supposed that this rule of the common law prevailed in Illinois, or intended that it should."

The same principle is asserted in the case of Comerford v. Dupuy, 17 Cal. 310; and in the case of Logan v. Gedney, 88 Cal. 579, the court distinctly held that "the rule of the law of England, that every man is bound to keep his beasts in his own close under the penalty of answering in damages for all injuries resulting from their being permitted to range at large, never was the law in California." This decision is the more in point, as California, like Utah, was acquired from Mexico by the same treaty. See also Studdwell v. Ritch, 14 Conn. 293.

As evidence of the liberality with which the government of the United States has treated the entire region of country acquired from Mexico by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, it is only necessary to refer to the fact that while by the laws of Mexico every discoverer of a mine of the precious metals was compelled to pay a certain royalty to the government for the use of the mine in extracting its minerals, as soon as the country came under the control of the United States an unlimited right of mining by every person who chose to enter upon and take the risks of the business was permitted without objection and without compensation to the government; and while this remained for many years as a right resting upon the tacit assent of the government, the principle has been since incorporated into the positive legislation of Congress, and to-day the larger part of the valuable mines of the United States are held by individuals under the claim of discovery, without patent or any other instrument from the government of the United States granting this right, and without tax or compensation paid to the government for the use of the precious metals.

As showing this extreme liberality on the part of the general government, reference may be had to the case of Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762 [24: 818]. In that case a mining company which had no title whatever from the United States, and which was taking out mineral ore of immense value from the lands of the United States, sought to enjoin the State of Nevada from taxing the ore thus taken, on the ground that it was the property of the United States and not taxable by the State of Nevada. But this court, reverting to the liberality of the government in that regard, decided that the moment the ore became detached from the main vein in which it was embedded in the mine, it became the property of the miner, the United States having no interest in it, and was therefore subject to state taxation.

Upon the whole, we see no equity in the relief sought by the appellants in this case, which undertakes to deprive the defendants of this recognized right to permit their cattle to run at large over the lands of the United States and feed upon the grasses found in them, while, under pretense of owning a small proportion of the land which is the subject of controversy, they themselves obtain the monopoly of this valuable privilege.

The decree of the Supreme Court of Utah is therefore affirmed.

ADAM G. ADAMS, Trustee, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JAMES C. CONNER, Administrator, ET AL.

(See S.C. Adams v. Ottenden, Reporter's ed. 290-299.)

Bankruptcy—title from assignee—foreclosure of liens—jurisdiction of state court—error—remedy by appeal.

1. Where the assignee in bankruptcy sold land recovered by him as the property of the bankrupt, and deeded the same to the purchaser and put him in possession, those having liens on the land, not having been made parties to the proceedings in the bankrupt court, nor having proved their claims there, may afterwards foreclose their liens in the state court, making the bankrupt, his assignee in bankruptcy and the purchaser parties defendant.
2. The state court had jurisdiction of the parties who were served with process and appeared, and of the foreclosure of the liens, and could determine whether the alleged liens existed, and whether there was any defense to them, the property being not in the possession of the bankrupt court, but in that of the purchaser, who was a party to the foreclosure proceedings.
3. Whether the state court erred in deciding that the lienholders had a claim upon the land, rather than upon the fund in the hands of the assignee in bankruptcy, presented simply a matter of error, its ruling upon which, if erroneous, did not oust it of jurisdiction, and could only be corrected by appeal.
4. The failure of the party, the purchaser from the assignee in bankruptcy, to exhaust his remedy by appeal, does not entitle him to disregard the entire proceedings as without jurisdiction.

[No. 952.]

Submitted Jan. 15, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Alabama to review a judgment dismissing an action of ejectment, brought by a purchaser from an assignee in bankruptcy against a purchaser at subsequent foreclosure sale in a state court. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. S. Watson, H. E. Jones and Lawrence Cooper, for plaintiff in error:

To set up a claim in a court against the estate of a bankrupt, without such proof as can only be made in a court of bankruptcy, would be an attempt to nullify the provisions of the Bankrupt Act, and a contempt of the bankrupt court.

NOTE.—As to Bankrupt and Insolvent Laws of State, constitutionality of; laws of United States suspend State Bankrupt Laws; discharge in foreign country no bar.—see note to Sturges v. Crowninshield, Bk. 4, p. 529.

133 U. S.

Davis v. Anderson, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 159; Re Vogel, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 427, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 198; Bump, Bankruptcy (10th ed.) 817; Rev. Stat. U. S. § 5081.

By section 5081 the court or any creditor has a right to question every claim.

The defendants never proved their claims in bankruptcy according to the requirements of the Bankrupt Act, and are therefore in no condition to ask any court to enforce them. The Act expressly says that unless so proven they shall not be allowed.

Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 180 (23: 833).

The jurisdiction of a district court of the United States, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, is superior and exclusive in all matters arising under the statutes.

Bump, Bankruptcy (10th ed.) 327, 638; Hewett v. Norton, 1 Woods, 71.

The legal title to the lands, by the surrender to the assignee, and by operation of the Bankrupt Act, vested in the assignee, as the officer of the bankrupt court.

Bump, Bankruptcy (10th ed.) 328; Phelps v. Sellick, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 390; Watson v. Citizens Sav. Bank, 11 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 161.

The lien creditor must prove his demand in the bankrupt court or lose it.

Davis v. Anderson, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 145; Steele v. Moody, 53 Ala. 425; Glover v. Love, 68 Ala. 219; Pollock v. Hill, 69 Ala. 515; Tennessee & C. R. Co. v. East Alabama R. Co. 75 Ala. 516.

Where the bankrupt court has first taken jurisdiction by ordering a sale of mortgaged premises discharged of liens, it thereby ousts a state court of jurisdiction to foreclose the mortgage.

Re Devore, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 56; Atkins v. Strodley, 51 Iowa, 414.

Messrs. Milton Humes and R. C. Brickell, for defendants in error:

In Alabama, the vendor of lands, though making an absolute conveyance, reciting full payment of the consideration, retains a lien for the unpaid purchase money, if he does not take some independent security, which a court of equity will enforce against the vendee and his privies in estate, other than bona fide purchasers for value.

Simpson v. McAllister, 56 Ala. 228; Craft v. Russell, 67 Ala. 9; Stringfellow v. Ivis, 73 Ala. 209; Wilkinson v. May, 69 Ala. 33; Napier v. Jones, 47 Ala. 90; Foster v. Athenaeum Trustees, 3 Ala. 302; Burns v. Taylor, 23 Ala. 255.

A purchaser is bound to take notice of all that appears upon the face of conveyances which are links in his chain of title, and if the lien be shown by a deed which is a link in his chain of title, he cannot claim protection as a bona fide purchaser.

Manich v. Shearer, 49 Ala. 226; Burch v. Carter, 44 Ala. 115; Ketchum v. Creagh, 58 Ala. 224; Johnson v. Thweatt, 18 Ala. 741; Rosette v. Wynn, 73 Ala. 146.

An assignee in bankruptcy is not, nor is a purchaser from him, a bona fide purchaser, entitled to protection against equities to which the estate of the bankrupt is subject.

Smith v. Perry, 56 Ala. 266; 2 Story, Eq. § 1228; Cook v. Tullis, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 333 (21: 933).

The lien of the vendor is assignable, and passes as an incident to the assignee of the debt for the purchase money.

Latham v. Staples, 46 Ala. 462; White v. King, 53 Ala. 162; Wolfe v. Nall, 62 Ala. 24; Wilkinson v. May, 69 Ala. 33; Preston v. Elington, 74 Ala. 133.

The vendor having the lien has and retains only the right to charge the land with the payment of the purchase money through the decree of a court of equity.

Gilman v. Brown, 1 Mason, 221; Bankhead v. Owen, 60 Ala. 457; Stringfellow v. Ivie, 73 Ala. 209.

The court of bankruptcy did not have jurisdiction to enforce the lien on the lands for the unpaid purchase money due to Mrs. Weaver and Crittenden.

Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 (23: 408); Smith v. Mason, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 419 (20: 748); Marshall v. Knox, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 551 (21: 481).

The Chancery Court of the State had plenary jurisdiction to enforce the lien.

Hunt v. Hunt, 72 N. Y. 217-229.

The court of chancery having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, and the assignee in bankruptcy and the plaintiff in error having appeared and litigated all the questions now involved, and from an adverse decree having prosecuted an appeal to the Supreme Court of the State, resulting in an affirmation of the decree, that litigation cannot be opened, and, in a collateral suit or proceeding, these decrees declared void.

Mays v. Fritton, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 314 (22: 389); Doe v. Childress, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 642 (22: 549); Scott v. Kelly, 89 U. S. 22 Wall. 57 (22: 759); Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521 (23: 408); Burbank v. Bigelow, 92 U. S. 179 (23: 542); Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570 (26: 818); Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450 (30: 462).

As to those who were not parties to the bankruptcy proceedings and had no notice of them, those proceedings are res inter alios acta.

Smith v. Mason, 81 U. S. 14 Wall. 419 (20: 748); Marshall v. Knox, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 551 (21: 481); Ray v. Norneworthy, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 128 (23: 116).

Sec. 121, Rev. Stat., did not divest the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery of the State to enforce the lien on the lands.

Thatcher v. Rockwell, 105 U. S. 467 (26: 949); Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450 (30: 462); Goodrich v. Wilson, 119 Mass. 429; Kidder v. Horrobin, 72 N. Y. 159; Ansley v. Patterson, 77 N. Y. 156.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of ejectment, and was submitted to the trial court upon an agreed statement of facts, which appears in the record. The contest is between a purchaser from an assignee in bankruptcy and a purchaser at subsequent foreclosure proceedings in a state court. The land was incumbered with liens at the time the bankruptcy proceedings were commenced. The title was not in the bankrupt, nor was the property surrendered by him to the assignee. Subsequently, however, the assignee sued the party in whose name the title stood and recovered the land. Thereafter it was sold by the assignee, and the plaintiff in error became the purchaser. Such sale was for one third cash, the balance on time, a lien being retained for the deferred payments. Upon this sale a deed was made, and the purchaser put in possession. The lienholders were not made parties to any proceedings in the bankrupt court. They never proved their claims there. After the conveyance by the assignee to the plaintiff in error, these lien owners commenced proceedings in the Chancery Court of the State to foreclose their liens, making the bankrupt, the assignee in bankruptcy and the purchaser, among others, parties defendant. The assignee and the purchaser defended on the ground that the state court had no jurisdiction to ascertain and enforce liens upon property of a bankrupt which had passed into the jurisdiction of the bankrupt court and by it been disposed of; but this defense was overruled, the liens declared and the land ordered to be sold. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of the State, but it affirmed the decree. Pending the proceedings in the State Chancery Court, a bill was filed in the United States circuit court to enjoin those proceedings, but, after hearing, that bill was dismissed. After the affirmation by the supreme court of the decree of the chancery court, the land was sold, and the defendants in error became the purchasers. Upon such purchase they received the ordinary deed and were put in possession. Thereupon this action of ejectment was brought.

The regularity of the proceedings of the state court is not challenged. They were all subsequent to the proceedings in the bankrupt court, and were not commenced until after the title had passed away from the assignee in bankruptcy. The general jurisdiction of the state court is conceded. The purchaser, the plaintiff in error, was a party to that suit, and the claim of the plaintiff in error can only be sustained upon the theory that by reason of the bankrupt proceedings the state court was prevented from taking jurisdiction.

But the truth is, the question is one of error and not of jurisdiction. The state court had jurisdiction of the parties, and they were served with process and appeared. It had jurisdiction of the foreclosure of liens, and it had a right to hear and determine whether the alleged liens still existed, and whether there was any valid defense to their enforcement. The property upon which the liens were claimed was not in the possession of the bankrupt court, but only in the possession of the party purchasing from it. So whether it erred in deciding that the lienholders had a claim upon the land rather than upon the fund in the hands of the assignee in bankruptcy is immaterial. It presented simply a matter of error. An error in its ruling did not oust it of jurisdiction. The error, if error it was, could be corrected only by appeal. The failure of the party to exhaust his remedy in that direction does not now entitle him to disregard the entire proceeding as without jurisdiction. Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450 [30: 462].

We see no error in the ruling of the Circuit Court and its judgment is affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
JOHN S. MOSBY.
JOHN S. MOSBY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 273-280.)

Public officers—payment of money into treasury does not estop—consul at Hong Kong—fees for examining Chinese emigrants—official and unofficial services—certifying invoices and shipments of merchandise—fees for recording—interest on public moneys—certifying signature of notary public—fees for settling estate—for shipping and discharging seamen—free goods—jurisdiction as to amount.

1. Public officers, upon the question of their compensation and the payment of money into the treasury, are not bound, in order to save their rights, to place themselves in antagonism to the accounting officers of the Department, suffer themselves to be sued, and incur the odium, for the time, of being in default; but have the right to pay into the treasury the disputed moneys, and then seek the courts to adjust and determine their claims against their superior and sovereign. Such payment is not an estoppel against the claimant.
2. The consul of the United States at Hong Kong, in examining Chinese emigrants going to the United States on foreign vessels, does not perform a service required by law or by the regulations, or any service specified in any tariff of fees, or any official service.
3. The fees received for such service, being paid voluntarily to the consul by the person to whom it was rendered, became the private property of the consul and not the money of the United States, although the consul attached his seal as evidence of his official character.
4. The consul in all such cases acts as a private citizen, and the government cannot in any way be made responsible for his acts. The statutes and regulations make a distinction between official and unofficial services rendered by a consul.
5. Certifying extra copies of quadruplicate invoices of goods shipped to the United States before the Regulations of 1881 are official services, which can be performed only under the hand of the consul and his seal of office to the certificate, and the emolument therefor is an official fee.
6. Fees received for certificates of shipment of merchandise in transit through the United States to other countries, where the law did not require the consul to issue those certificates, belong to such consul and not to the United States.
7. Fees collected for recording, which did not relate to official instruments, or to official acts, but related to private transactions for individuals, not requiring the use of the consul's title or seal of office, belonged to the consul individually; so also the fees for cattle-disease certificates.
8. Interest on public moneys deposited, in respect to which the consul was a trustee, belonged to the United States. He was not required to put the funds out at interest, but if he did so the accretion belonged to the government.
9. Certifying by such consul of official character and signature of notary public was not an official service, and the fees therefor were his individually.

10. A fee in the settlement of a private estate belongs to the consul individually.
11. Fees collected by such consul for shipping and discharging seamen on foreign-built vessels sailing on the China coast under the United States flag belong to the consul individually, where the seamen were not American citizens and the vessel did not clear from a port of the United States.
12. Fees for certifying invoices by such consul for free goods imported into the United States concern an official duty, and do not belong to such consul, but to the government.
13. Section 707 of the Revised Statutes authorizes an appeal to this court on behalf of the United States, from all judgments of the Court of Claims adverse to the United States; and as the appeal by the United States in this case is from the judgment of $13,889.21 in favor of the claimant, it is competent for the claimant, as he also has taken an appeal from that judgment, to avail himself of anything in the case which properly shows that that judgment was not for too large a sum. And the fact that the items for the disallowance of which the claimant appealed do not amount to over $3,000, does not take away such right.

[Nos. 1112, 1420.]

Argued Jan. 17, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEALS from a judgment of the Court of Claims in favor of claimant, John S. Mosby, against the United States, for moneys which he had received as fees while he was consul of the United States at Hong Kong, and had paid into the treasury, and which he claimed to belong to himself individually. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 24 Ct. Cl. 1.

Mr. Wm. A. Maury, Assistant Atty-Gen., for the United States:

All public offices are trusts to be exercised for the public good. The claimant is forbidden by law to receive the fees claimed.

U. S. v. Shoemaker, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 898 (19: 80); Hall v. U. S. 91 U. S. 565 (23:448); Converse v. U. S. 62 U. S. 21 How. 471 (16: 194); U. S. v. Saunders, 120 U. S. 126 (80:594); Oscanyan v. Winchester R. Arms Co. 108 U. S. 273 (26: 544); Conner v. Mayor of New York, 5 N. Y. 285; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 157.

Mr. Jno. S. Mosby, pro se:

The President cannot delegate the legislative power granted by section 1745, Rev. Stat. Such grants of power are always strictly construed.

Cooley, Const. Lim. (5th ed.) 249; Clark v. Washington, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 40 (6: 544); Lyon v. Jerome, 26 Wend. 494; Runkle v. U. S. 122 U. S. 557 (80: 1171).

A tariff of consular fees is nothing but a presidential ordinance, issued by statutory authority. An ordinance to be valid must be certain.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 248; Dillon, Mun. Corp. §§ 819, 820, 822; Robinson v. Mayor of Franklin, 1 Humph. (Tenn.) 156, 34 Am. Dec. 635, note; McConvill v. Jersey City, 39 N. J. L. 42; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 852; 2 Kent, Com. (12th ed.) 364; The Idaho, 98 U. S. 575 (23: 978); Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511; Bank of State v. Cooper, 2 Yerg. 599, 24 Am. Dec. 517; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 38 Am. Rep. 239; Re Frazer, 68 Mich. 896, 6 Am. St. Rep. 810.

NOTE.—As to extra pay and compensation to officers, see note to U. S. v. Macdaniel, Bk. 8, p. 587.

The law must be impartial and general, or it is no law.

Waite v. Garston Local Board of Health, L. R. 8 Q. B. 5; U. S. v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 555 (23: 592); Pick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 856 (30: 220); Dillon, Mun. Corp. §§ 819, 820, 822; Ex parte Frank, 52 Cal. 606; U. S. v. Badeau, 33 Fed. Rep. 573, 81 Fed. Rep. 697.

It has always been the policy of the government to allow salaried consuls to retain a certain amount of fees.

Pickett's Claim, 9 Ops. Atty-Gen. 496; Appointment of Consuls, 7 Ops. Atty-Gen. 242; Notarial Powers of American Consuls, 12 Ops. Atty-Gen. 1; U. S. v. Moore, 95 U. S. 763 (24: 589); U. S. v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 269 (25: 823); U. S. v. Macdaniel, 33 U. S. 7 Pet. 14 (8: 592).

The collector has no authority to take a bond; if he exacts a bond with an arbitrary sum as a penalty it is void.

U. S. v. Tyngey, 30 U. S. 5 Pet. 114 (8: 66); U. S. v. Rice, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 246 (4: 562).

Certifying invoices for free goods is not a part of the business of a consul.

Siegfried v. Phelps, 40 Fed. Rep. 660; Balfour v. Sullivan, 8 Sawy. 649, and cases cited; Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 695, 700 (26: 896); Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466 (27: 287).

Foreign-built vessels, owned by citizens of the United States, are not embraced in the provisions of the Act of 1884 (June), forbidding the collection of fees by consular officers from American vessels.

Ops. Atty-Gen. July 20, 1885; Badger v. Gutierrez, 111 U. S. 736 (28: 581); White's Bank v. Smith, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 656 (19: 218).

Fees for examining Chinese going to the United States on foreign vessels were voluntarily paid and belong to claimant.

Chao Chan Ping v. U. S. 130 U. S. 581 (32: 1068); Siemen v. Sellers, 123 U. S. 285 (31: 156); U. S. v. Duval, 1 Gilp. 872; Runkel v. U. S. 122 U. S. 544 (30: 1168); Ah Kow v. Nunan, 5 Sawy. 559.

The doctrine of estoppel by voluntary payment applies only to parties standing on an equal footing.

Swift Co. v. U. S. 111 U. S. 22 (28: 841); U. S. v. Lawson, 101 U. S. 169 (25: 863); U. S. v. Ellsworth, 101 U. S. 178 (25: 862); Huguenin v. Baseley, 14 Ves. Jr. 273; Dent v. Bennett, 4 Myl. & C. 277.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit brought in the Court of Claims by John S. Mosby against the United States, claiming to recover the sum of $29,180.01, moneys which he had received while he was consul of the United States at Hong Kong, from February 4, 1879, to July 21, 1885, and had paid into the treasury, the items composing the above sum being as follows: (1) for examining Chinese emigrants departing on foreign vessels for the United States, $5,147; (2) for certifying extra copies or quadruplicate invoices, about $2,000; (3) for certifying invoices for goods in transit through the United States to other countries, $5,805; (4) for notarial and clerical work, $644.01; (5) for services to foreign-built vessels carrying the American flag, $584; and (6) for certifying invoices for goods exported to the United States, which were on the free list, and for which no invoice was required by law as a condition of entry, about $15,000.

The petition alleged that those fees were paid voluntarily to the claimant by persons at whose request the services were performed, and were turned by him into the treasury because he did not wish to involve himself in a controversy with the Department as long as he held a subordinate position in it, and because he was compelled to obey its orders or be dismissed from office and subjected to the imputation of appropriating money which did not belong to him; and that he credited the fees to the treasury, relying on the good faith of the government to restore to him whatever belonged to him on the final settlement of his accounts.

The Court of Claims found the facts as follows:

"1. The claimant was consul of the United States at Hong Kong from February, 1879, until July, 1885, and remained at his post until the latter date, when he returned to the United States.

"2. During his term he turned into the treasury the sum of $5,147 on account of fees collected for examining Chinese emigrants going to the United States on foreign vessels; of this sum $3,923.50 were collected prior to September 1, 1881, and $1,223.50 were collected between September 1 and December 31, 1881. Said fees were voluntarily paid by the masters and charterers of said vessels at whose solicitation the service was rendered, and were collected in good faith by the consul.

"3. Soon after assuming charge of the consulate, to wit, February 21 and March 19, 1879, claimant informed the Department of State that, since the enactment of the Law of February 19, 1862, prohibiting the coolie trade in which American vessels had been engaged, it had been the practice at Hong Kong to procure for American and foreign vessels carrying Chinese passengers to the United States a consular certificate of the fact that they were free and voluntary emigrants. The claimant addressed said communications to the State Department to establish that the fees belonged to him, but paid into the treasury, before receiving a reply, the sum of $731.75. In reply to a claim that he, the consul, was entitled to such fees, the Secretary of State replied, in substance, that the fee is an official fee, and must be accounted for to the treasury.

"4. He gave written advice to the agent of the O. & O. S. S. Co., at Hong Kong, to send steamships which were under the English flag without a consular certificate for the Chinese emigrants, as no law required it, and the agent declined to do so. A copy of his letter to the said agent was forwarded to the State Department. It does not appear that the Department replied to his communication accompanying said letter.

"5. The Bothwell Castle, an English steamship, sailed from Hong Kong about January 6, 1882, carrying Chinese emigrants without the usual consular certificate of examination, but with a letter from the United States consul addressed to the collector at San Francisco, explaining why the master did not have it. Said vessel entered the Port of San Francisco without trouble about February 1, 1882; all other foreign vessels after that time ceased to procure the said consular certificate. A copy of said letter to the collector at San Francisco was forwarded to the State Department; but claimant did not receive a reply. All emigration fees collected up to December 31, 1881, were turned into the treasury.

"6. The sum of $638.25 was collected in January, 1882, for examination of Chinese on foreign vessels, which was first credited and then charged back to the treasury; and a letter was written by the claimant to the first comptroller explaining that item in his accounts. The comptroller allowed the item as a proper charge.

"7. The charterers of foreign vessels who had paid these fees to the consul afterwards applied to the treasury to have them refunded, which was refused by the comptroller on the ground 'that the collection of said fees was proper and they should not be refunded.'

"8. The claimant, after his removal from office, claimed the emigration fees from foreign vessels. His claim was also disallowed. The fees collected subsequently to January 8, 1882, were refunded by the consul to the parties who paid them. The consul was not charged with the fees so refunded, or those he might have collected if he had not declined to continue the practice of examining Chinese emigrants on foreign vessels. The claimant refused to collect fees after receiving from the State Department notice that such fees must thereafter be accounted for as official fees. Said notice, in the form of a letter from the Department, was dated on said date, and reached claimant in due course of mail.

"9. The claimant paid into the treasury the sum of $5,805 on account of fees received by him for certificates of shipment of merchandise in transit through the United States to other countries.

"10. The claimant paid into the treasury the sum of $1,592 for certifying extra copies or quadruplicate invoices of goods shipped to the United States. The said sum was collected by claimant before the 1st day of September, 1881.

"11. He credited and paid to the treasury $584 on account of fees collected for shipping and discharging seamen on foreign-built vessels sailing on the China coast under the United States flag. He credited and paid into the treasury $2,095 on account of invoices certified by him for free goods imported into the United States.

"12. The claimant credited and paid into the treasury fees aggregating $644.01, accruing as follows:

(a) Recording instruments at various times between February 4, 1879, and December 31, 1880.....	$39 29
(b) Cattle-disease certificates collected in small items from time to time, between February 4, 1879, and September 30, 1880.....	152 00
(c) Interest on deposits at the bank (public moneys deposited between February 4, 1879, and June 30, 1882).....	1 104 51
(d) Acknowledgments and authentications of instruments collected from time to time in small quantities, between February 4, 1879, and December 31, 1879, certifying official character and signature of notary public.....	48 00
(e) Certificates of shipments, or extra in-
138 U. S.

voices, collected during the December quarter, 1881, $2.50 each.....	202 00
(f) Five per cent commission on the estate of Alice Evans, May, 1881.....	8 21
	$644 01

"13. The payment by the claimant of these several sums of money into the treasury was for the purpose of avoiding a controversy with the Department. Soon after the claimant was removed from office, and before a final settlement of his accounts, he made a demand that all fees now claimed be credited to him.

"14. At the request of claimant's counsel, the following facts are also found: Said claimant wrote to the State Department, March 19, 1879, as stated in finding 8, in which communication he informed said Department that it had been the habit of his predecessors to retain said fees as unofficial, and asked to be instructed whether he, the claimant, was not entitled to same. The said Department replied as follows: 'It is now deemed to be the more advisable course to prescribe the fee as an official one to be accounted for to the treasury.' In instructions to said claimant, dated August 26, 1879, the said Department instructed claimant that the fees for acts which the consul is empowered but not required by law to perform, and which relate only to private transactions, are unofficial."

As conclusions of law, the court held that the claimant was entitled to recover, for item (1) in the petition, $5,147; for item (3), $5,805; for items b, d and f in finding 12, being part of item (4), $208.21; for item (5), $584; and, as a part of item (6), $2,095. It rejected the claim of $1,592 for certifying extra copies or quadruplicate invoices of goods shipped to the United States, being the amount proved and found as to item (2); and also items a, c and e, in finding 12, amounting to $485.80, being a part of the $644.01 in item (4). A judgment was rendered for the claimant for $18,839.21, from which both parties appealed. The opinion of the Court of Claims, disposing of the various matters involved, is reported in 24 Ct. Cl. 1.

It is provided as follows by section 1745 of the Revised Statutes: "The President is authorized to prescribe, from time to time, the rates or tariffs of fees to be charged for official services, and to designate what shall be regarded as official services, besides such as are expressly declared by law, in the business of the several legations, consulates and commercial agencies, and to adapt the same, by such differences as may be necessary or proper, to each legation, consulate or commercial agency; and it shall be the duty of all officers and persons connected with such legations, consulates or commercial agencies to collect for such official services such and only such fees as may be prescribed for their respective legations, consulates and commercial agencies, and such rates or tariffs shall be reported annually to Congress."

This section concerns itself wholly with "official services." The tariffs of fees to be prescribed by the President from time to time are those to be charged for "official services." The President is to designate what are to be regarded as "official services," in addition to such as are expressly declared by law. The inhibition on consular officers, as to the collection of fees, is only against the collection, for "such official services," of other fees than the prescribed fees. It is not claimed by the United States in this case that the fees sued for by the claimant fall within the class mentioned in section 1745, of "such as are expressly declared by law." The question for determination is, whether the fees collected by the claimant, and paid into the treasury, were fees for official services, within the regulations prescribed by the President under section 1745.

The claimant acted with propriety, and with a high sense of honor, in paying the fees into the treasury, in order to avoid a controversy with the Department; and he asserted his right to have the fees refunded to him by making a demand that they should be credited to him in his accounts, before such accounts were finally settled. He did not concede the right of the government to retain the fees, and his action was equivalent to a formal protest made at the time of paying them over. As is said by Judge Weldon, speaking for the Court of Claims in its opinion: "Public officers (upon the question of their compensation and the payment of money into the treasury) are not bound, in order to save their rights, to place themselves in antagonism to the accounting officers of the Department, suffer themselves to be sued, and incur the odium, for the time, of being in default; but have the right to pay into the treasury the disputed moneys, and then seek the courts to adjust and determine their claims against their superior and sovereign." Nothing done in the present case can amount to an estoppel against the claimant.

Part of the fees in question accrued while the Consular Regulations of 1874 were in force, and part under those of 1881. These Regulations must be considered in regard to each specific item.

1. As to item (1), $5,147, the facts relating to that item are in findings 2 to 8, both inclusive. The Consular Regulations of 1874 were prescribed by the President on September 1, 1874, and those of 1881 on May 1, 1881.

Paragraph 321 of the Regulations of 1874 is as follows:

"321. All acts are to be regarded as 'official services' when the consul is required to use his seal and title officially, or either of them; and the fees received therefor are to be accounted for to the Treasury of the United States."

It is to be observed that this paragraph uses the word "required," and does not say that all acts are to be regarded as official services when the consul uses his seal and title officially, or either of them.

Paragraph 333 of those Regulations contains a tariff of fees for 107 different services; but none of them specifies the fee for an examination of Chinese emigrants going to the United States on foreign vessels.

Paragraph 489 of the Regulations of 1881 reads as follows:

"489. All acts or services for which a fee is prescribed in the tariff of fees are to be regarded as official services, and the fees received therefor are to be reported and accounted for to the treasury of the United States, except when otherwise expressly stated therein."

Paragraph 496 in those Regulations says: "The following is the revised tariff of official fees, prescribed by order of the President, and to be observed by all consular officers." Among 106 items contained in that tariff, item 85 prescribes a fee of 25 cents for a certificate "to the examination required by section 2162 of the Revised Statutes, for each emigrant. (Art. XXI.)" Section 2162 of the Revised Statutes, in connection with section 2158, provides for a certificate to be signed by the consul of the United States residing at the port from which any vessel registered, enrolled or licensed in the United States may take her departure carrying a subject of China, Japan or any other Oriental country, known as a coolie, containing his name, and setting forth the fact of his voluntary emigration from such port, such certificate to be given to the master of the vessel, and not to be given until the consul is first personally satisfied by evidence of the truth of the facts therein contained. These provisions do not refer to foreign vessels. Article XXI. of the Regulations of 1881, referred to in item 85 of paragraph 496, embraces 7 paragraphs, and is headed: "Duties as to American Vessels Engaged in the Transportation of Chinese and other Emigrants;" and the article expressly states that the duties of the consul under it apply to vessels of the United States. Article XVIII. of the Regulations of 1874 is to the same purport as Article XXI. of the Regulations of 1881.

Neither in the Regulations of 1874 nor in those of 1881 is there any designation, as an official service, of the examination of the subjects of China, Japan or any other Oriental country, known as coolies, carried as passengers on board of any vessel other than a vessel registered, enrolled or licensed in the United States. Therefore the consul, in examining Chinese emigrants going to the United States on foreign vessels, did not perform a service required by law or by the Regulations, or any service specified in any tariff of fees, or any official service. The fees received for such service, being paid voluntarily to the consul by the person to whom it was rendered, became the private property of the consul and not the money of the United States. This view is not varied by the fact that the person employed the consul to render the service because he was consul, or by the fact that the consul attached his seal as evidence of his official character; because he was not required by any law or regulation to use either his seal or his title of office officially, nor was any fee prescribed for the service in any tariff of fees.

The practice of consuls to do acts which are not official is recognized in several places in the Consular Regulations of 1874, as in paragraphs 296 and 297, where it is stated that consuls are at liberty to examine titles for their countrymen at home, "or to do other services for them in a foreign land," "for a private compensation, if it does not interfere with the performance of their official duties;" in paragraph 308, the performing of notarial acts; in paragraph 309, the taking the acknowledgment of deeds, and the taking of depositions and affidavits under the laws of the States and Territories of the Union, for use as evidence in such States and Territories, respectively; in paragraph 310, the execution of a commission for taking testimony under the authority of a state or territorial tribunal, which function paragraph 311 states "is regarded as outside of the regular duties and responsibility of a consular officer," and in regard to which paragraph 312 states as follows: "It is to be understood that in such cases the consular officer does not act in his quality of an agent of the federal government, but simply as a citizen of the United States whose local position and character rendered him available to his fellow-citizens for such services as might have been rendered by a private individual. He should make himself as useful as he can to his fellow citizens, without giving offense to the government which gives him his exequatur. But it must be understood in all such cases that he acts as a private citizen, and that the government cannot in any way be made responsible for his acts."

Like provisions are found in paragraphs 471 to 477 of the Consular Regulations of 1881; and paragraph 478 of the latter says: "The compensation or fee of a consular officer for performing a notarial service, executing a judicial commission, or letters rogatory, or the unofficial services referred to in paragraphs 471, 472 and 475, is not an official but a personal fee, for which he is not responsible to the government as for official fees, unless the service, or a part of it, is one for which a fee is prescribed in the tariff of fees. In that case he must account to the government for the fee prescribed in the tariff."

Section 1724 of the Revised Statutes makes a consul liable for the omission to collect any fees "which he is entitled to charge for any official service." By section 1726 it is made the duty of a consular officer to "give receipts for all fees collected for his official services;" by section 1727, to keep a fee-book for the registry of "all fees so received by him;" and by section 1728, to render with his account of fees received a full transcript of such register, and make oath that it contains "a full and accurate statement of all fees received by him, or for his use, for his official services as such consular officer, during the period for which it purports to be rendered."

It is quite clear, therefore, that the Statutes and Regulations make a distinction between official and unofficial services rendered by a consul.

The allowance to the claimant of the item of $5,147 was therefore proper.

2. The next item, but which was disallowed, is $1,592, for certifying extra copies of quadruplicate invoices of goods shipped to the United States, and which sum was collected by the claimant before the 1st of September, 1881, and is covered by finding 10. It is stated in the opinion of the Court of Claims that all such fees paid after the Regulations of 1881 took effect have been refunded, and are not now in controversy.

Sections 2853 and 2855 of the Revised Statutes, as they stood prior to the 1st of July, 1880, when the Act of June 10, 1880, chap. 190 (21 Stat. 173), took effect, provided as follows:

"Sec. 2853. All invoices of merchandise imported from any foreign country shall be made in triplicate, and signed by the person owning or shipping such merchandise, if the same has actually been purchased, or by the manufacturer or owner thereof, if the same has been procured otherwise than by purchase, or by the duly authorized agent of such purchaser, manufacturer or owner."

"Sec. 2855. The person so producing such invoice shall at the same time declare to such consul, vice-consul or commercial agent the port in the United States at which it is intended to make entry of merchandise; whereupon the consul, vice-consul or commercial agent shall indorse upon each of the triplicates a certificate, under his hand and official seal, stating that the invoice has been produced to him, with the date of such production, and the name of the person by whom the same was produced, and the port in the United States at which it shall be the declared intention to make entry of the merchandise therein mentioned. The consul, vice-consul or commercial agent shall then deliver to the person producing the same one of the triplicates, to be used in making entry of the merchandise; shall file another in his office, to be there carefully preserved; and shall, as soon as practicable, transmit the remaining one to the collector of the port of the United States at which it shall be declared to be the intention to make entry of the merchandise."

Paragraph 491 of the Consular Regulations of 1874 reads as follows:

"491. Consular officers will, on request of the proper collectors, supply them, free of charge, with copies of any such documents on file in their offices as they may need in the discharge of their official duties. Copies prepared by other persons for their own use will, on request, be certified on payment of two dollars. When, however, duplicates of originals are required, or the copy is prepared by the consul, the schedule fee will be exacted as for original service."

A like provision is found in paragraph 668 of the Regulations of 1881.

By section 4 of the Act of June 10, 1880, before referred to, it was provided that sections 2853 and 2855 of the Revised Statutes should be so amended as to require that all invoices of merchandise imported from any foreign country and intended to be transported without appraisement to any of the ports mentioned in section 7 of that Act, should be made in quadruplicate, and that the consul, vice-consul or commercial agent, to whom the same should be produced, should certify each of said quadruplicates under his hand and official seal in the manner required by section 2855, and should "then deliver to the person producing the same two of the quadruplicates, one to be used in making entry at the port of first arrival of the merchandise in the United States, and one to be used in making entry at the port of destination, file another in his office, there to be carefully preserved, and as soon as practicable transmit the remaining one to the collector or surveyor of the port of final destination of the merchandise: Provided, however, That no additional fee shall be collected on account of any service performed under the requirements of this section."

By item 86 of the tariff of fees in paragraph 833 of the Regulations of 1874, a fee of $2.50 is prescribed for a certificate "to invoice, including declaration, in triplicate." Nothing is there said as to a fee for a copy of an invoice, but in paragraph 491, before quoted, a fee of $2 is prescribed for a certificate to a copy of a document on file in the office of a consular officer, which would include an invoice. In the tariff of fees in paragraph 496 of the Regulations of 1881, in item 36, a like fee of $2.50 is prescribed for certificate "to invoice, including declaration, in triplicate," and a like fee of $2 under paragraph 668 of the Regulations of 1881.

The charges which make up the $1,592 are manifestly for official services, which can be performed only under the hand of the consul and his seal of office to the certificate. As is said by the Court of Claims: "The act pertains to a duty specifically prescribed by the laws of the United States, and, upon a tender of the fee, the party making application is entitled to have a certificate attached to the instrument, if it is a copy of the document executed in triplicate. The party being entitled to the certificate, it is the duty of the officer to attach his official seal upon payment of the fees. This is an official duty, and the emolument becomes an official fee." The item of $1,592 was therefore properly disallowed.

3. The item of $5,805, which was allowed, is covered by finding 9, and is for fees received for certificates of shipment of merchandise in transit through the United States to other countries. These were not the invoices referred to in sections 2853 and 2855 of the Revised Statutes, either as they originally stood or as they were amended by the Act of June 10, 1880. The law did not require the consul to issue those certificates; no provision was made for a fee for them in the Regulations of 1874 or in those of 1881; and it does not appear that the regulations of the Treasury Department required a consul to perform any duty in relation to such goods. This item was therefore properly allowed.

4. The next item, $644.01, relates to fees "for notarial and clerical work," being six items covered by finding 12. Of these, item a, being fees collected for "recording instruments at various times, between February 4, 1879, and December 31, 1880, $39.29," was disallowed. This item was rejected by the Court of Claims because it did not appear, from the specification or proof, what was the character of the instruments recorded, and because it was therefore said to be impossible to determine whether the recording came within the Regulations of 1874 or those of 1881, and because, for aught that appeared, the instruments might have been those specially provided for by the tariff of fees in the Regulations.

But we think the Court of Claims erred in rejecting that item. The fees accrued from February 4, 1879, to December 31, 1880, while the Regulations of 1874 were in force. Article XXV. of those Regulations, headed "Record-Books and Archives," in paragraphs 398 to 414, requires that a consul shall keep various books of records. Of course, the fees in question were not for keeping such record books or for recording in them the instruments which were recorded in them, because such instruments were all of them official documents, and the fact that the item covers fees collected by the consul for recording instruments and paid into the treasury shows that the recording did not relate to official instruments, or to official acts, but related to private transactions for individuals, not requiring the use of the consul's title or seal of office. This item should have been allowed.

Item b in finding 12, which was allowed, is for "cattle-disease certificates, collected in small items from time to time, between February 4, 1879, and September 30, 1880, $152." It was properly allowed, as there is nothing in the Statutes or in the Regulations in relation to the duties or powers of a consul as to "cattle disease" or certificates respecting the same.

Item c, in finding 12, is "interest on deposits at the bank (public moneys deposited between February 4, 1879, and June 30, 1882), $104.51." This was disallowed, and we think properly. The moneys are stated to be "public moneys," in respect to which the consul was a trustee, and any interest which he received on the funds belonged to the United States. He was not required to put the funds out at interest, but if he did so the accretion belonged to the government.

Item d in finding 12, which was allowed, is for "acknowledgments and authentications of instruments, collected from time to time in small quantities, between February 4, 1879, and December 31, 1879, certifying official character and signature of notary public, $48." These were not official services required by statute or the Regulations, and were rendered to persons who requested their performance. The allowance of this item was proper.

Item e in finding 12, which was disallowed, is for "certificates of shipments, or extra invoices, collected during the December quarter, 1881, $2.50 each, $292." This disallowance was proper, for the reasons stated in regard to the item of $1,592.

Item f in finding 12 is for "five per cent commission on the estate of Alice Evans, May, 1881, $8.21." This evidently was a fee in the settlement of a private estate, and was properly allowed.

Thus, of the $644.01 in finding 12, items a, b, d and f are allowable, amounting in all to $247.50, instead of $208.21 allowed by the Court of Claims.

5. The next item, and which was allowed, is $584, on account of fees collected for shipping and discharging seamen on foreign-built vessels sailing on the China coast under the United States flag, and is covered by finding 11. The claimant insists that, while he had authority to perform those services, he was not required to do so by any statute or regulation.

Paragraph 194 of the Regulations of 1881 says:

"194. In the case of American or foreign-built vessels purchased abroad and wholly owned by American citizens, it is known that the crews are usually made up of men who are not American citizens, and who have not acquired the character of American seamen under the law and as set forth in paragraph 190. Seamen of this class, when not serving under a contract made in the United States, are not regarded as within the jurisdiction of a consular officer as to their shipment or discharge."

In paragraph 181 of the Regulations of 1874 it is said that the statutory authority of a consul to act in respect to the discharge of seamen from a vessel of the United States clearing from a port of the United States is limited to: "1st. The sale in a foreign country of a ship or vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States. 2d. The discharge, with his own consent, of a seaman or mariner, being a citizen of the United States. 3d. A discharge after a survey of the vessel, and finding the same unseaworthy."

In the present case, what the consul did was to ship and discharge seamen on foreign-built vessels sailing on the China coast under the United States flag. It must be taken that these seamen were not American citizens, and that the vessel did not clear from a port of the United States, so as to come within the provisions of paragraphs 128, 129, 180 and 181 of the Regulations of 1874. The item of $584 was therefore properly allowed.

6. The next item allowed was one of $2,095, for certifying invoices "for free goods imported into the United States," and is covered by finding 11. This allowance seems to have proceeded upon the view that the law did not require an invoice of goods which were not subject to duty; that the consul had no official duty to perform in respect to an invoice of such goods; that the service was performed at the instance of the shipper, and for his convenience; that the matter was one purely personal between the consul and the party who paid the fee for the certificate; and that, as the government was not interested in the goods, the consul was under no obligation to account to the United States for the fees.

We think this view was erroneous. By section 2853 of the Revised Statutes, "all invoices of merchandise imported from any foreign country" are to be made in triplicate, whether the goods have actually been purchased or have been procured otherwise than by purchase. By section 2854, "all such invoices" are required, before the merchandise is shipped, to be produced to the proper consul. By section 2855, the person producing "such invoice" is to make a specified declaration, and the consul is to indorse upon each of the triplicates a specified certificate, and is to transmit one of the triplicates "to the collector of the port of the United States at which it shall be declared to be the intention to make entry of the merchandise." By section 2860 it is provided that, except as allowed in the four preceding sections, which do not apply to the present question, "no merchandise imported from any foreign place or country shall be admitted to an entry unless the invoice presented in all respects conforms to the requirements" of sections 2853, 2854 and 2855, and has thereon the certificate of the consul specified in those sections, nor unless the invoice is verified, at the time of making the entry, by a specified oath, nor unless the triplicate transmitted by the consul to the collector has been received by him. By section 2851, a consul is entitled to demand and receive a fee of $2.50 for taking the verification of an invoice and making the certificate. It is quite clear, therefore, that there can be no entry without a properly certified invoice.

By paragraph 462 of the Regulations of 1874 and paragraph 637 of those of 1881, "all invoices of importations from countries in which there are" consul officers, "must, before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to and authenticated by the United States consular officer nearest the place of shipment for the United States."

In addition to this, it is entirely clear that the question of determining whether goods to be shipped will, when imported into the United States, be free from duty, is a question which could not be left to the determination of a consul. It often involves intricate points of fact and of law, and must be as wholly cognizable by the proper officers and tribunals of the United States, appointed for the purpose, as the question of the proper rate of duty, on dutiable goods.

The item of $2,095 was therefore improperly allowed.

It results, therefore, that the items to be allowed are $5,147, $5,805, $247.50 and $584, being an aggregate of $11,783.50.

It is contended for the United States that the claimant has no right to appeal in regard to the items which he claims were improperly disallowed, because they do not in the aggregate amount to more than $8,000. But we are of opinion that, as section 707 of the Revised Statutes authorizes an appeal to this court on behalf of the United States, from all judgments of the Court of Claims adverse to the United States, and as the appeal by the United States in this case is from the judgment of $18,889.21 in favor of the claimant, it is competent for the claimant, as he also has taken an appeal from that judgment, to avail himself of anything in the case which properly shows that that judgment was not for too large a sum.

The judgment of the Court of Claims is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court with a direction to enter a judgment in favor of the claimant for $11,783.50.

HARLOW L. STREET, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 299-307.)

Act of July 13, 1866—power of President to reduce army officers—proceedings to muster out—limit as to time—Sunday—legislative recognition.

1. The Act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat. 92), was not intended to have any effect on the power of a subsequent Congress to reduce the army by appropriate legislation in respect to either its officers or enlisted men.
2. The Act of July 15, 1870 (16 Stat. 315), is a grant of a general power to the President to reduce the number of officers of the army by selecting the best and mustering out the residue.
3. The government could abandon the proceedings initiated under section 11 of that Act and, without an adjudication of unfitness, proceed to muster out the appellant under section 12.
4. The President could muster out an officer who

NOTE.—As to when Sunday begins and ends; contracts made on; injuries incurred in travelling on; work done on; sales on,—see note to Powhatan Steamboat Co. v. Appomattox R. Co. Bk. 16, p. 682.

was transferred to the supernumerary list on the second day of January, 1870, although Congress prescribed the thirty-first day of that month as the limit of the time; there is no subordination of the power to the matter of time.

5. Sunday is a dies non, and a power that may be exercised up to and including a given day of the month may generally, when that day happens to be Sunday, be exercised on the succeeding day.
6. The power which can give authority to act, can ratify any act that is taken, and legislative recognition of an act validates the act, although it may not have had full prior legal authority.

[No. 1128.]

Submitted Jan 10, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Claims dismissing an action for sixteen years' salary as first lieutenant, due by reason of alleged illegality in the order discharging appellant from the service. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 24 Ct. Cl. 280.

Mr. J. M. Vale, for appellant:

Appellant, then an officer in the military service of the United States, could not be legally mustered out of the service under the Act of July 15, 1870, without being allowed a hearing before the board provided for in section 11 of said Act.

Congressional Globe, part 2, p. 1848, 2d sess. 41st. Cong.; Congressional Globe, 3398, 5386, 5843, 5401, 5533, 2d sess. 41st Cong.; U. S. v. Bassett, 2 Story, 389; Muster-out of Army Officers, 18 Ops. Atty-Gen. 353; Army Officers Unfit for Discharge of Duty, Id. 412; U. S. v. Freeman, 44 U. S. 3 How. 556-565 (11: 724, 728).

The 12th section of the Act of July 15, 1870, gave to the President authority to transfer certain officers from active duty to the list of supernumeraries; but no transfers could legally be made to or from that list on the 2d day of January, 1871.

Brown v. Barry, 8 U. S. 3 Dall. 365 (1: 638); Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 46 (7: 47); Thornley v. U. S. 118 U. S. 810 (28: 999).

The acceptance or non-acceptance by appellant of the discharge and year's pay, provided for officers discharged under the Act of July 15, 1870, with or without protest, did not alter his legal status, if notified of his discharge as a supernumerary officer under the erroneous construction of the law.

Brant v. Virginia Coal Co. 93 U. S. 326 (28: 927); Ketchum v. Duncan, 96 U. S. 659 (24: 868); Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 96 U. S. 716 (24: 743); Ops. Atty-Gen. March 6, 1886; Genl. Order Navy Dept., No. 844, March 10, 1886; Redgrave's and Perkin's Cases, 116 U. S. 474, 483 (29: 697, 700).

The nomination of Wainright by the President vice Weisendorf promoted, and his confirmation by the Senate, did not operate to supersede appellant.

Official Army Register, 1871; Blake v. U. S. 108 U. S. 227 (26: 462); Army Regulations, 1868, par. 20.

Appellant's muster-out was in contravention of the clause of section 11 inhibiting muster-out of officers reported without opportunity for defense.

U. S. v. Bassett, 2 Story, 389; U. S. v. Freeman, 44 U. S. 3 How. 556-565 (11: 724, 728); Congressional Globe, 1848, part 2, 2d sess. 41st Cong.

When the intention of the Legislature in enacting a law can be discovered from the language used, it should prevail.

Brown v. Barry, 8 U. S. 3 Dall. 365 (1: 638); Minor v. Mechanics' Bank, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 46 (7: 47); Thornley v. U. S. 118 U. S. 810 (28: 999).

Appellant's acceptance of pay cannot operate as an estoppel concluding him from questioning the regularity of his discharge.

Brant v. Virginia Coal Co. 93 U. S. 326 (28: 927).

Messrs. John B. Cotton, Assistant Atty-Gen., and F. P. Dewees, for appellee:

Under the opinion and judgment in Hildeburn's Case, 13 Ct. Cl. 62, the claimant was without standing in the Court of Claims.

Duryea v. U. S. 17 Ct. Cl. 88; Redgrave v. U. S. 20 Ct. Cl. 226, 116 U. S. 474 (29: 697).

The board of officers was in no sense a court or quasi judicial tribunal.

Shereburne v. U. S. 16 Ct. Cl. 499; Duryea v. U. S. 17 Ct. Cl. 24.

There was no purpose by the fifth section of the Act of July 18, 1866, to withdraw from the President the power, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to supersede an officer in the military or naval service by the appointment of someone in his place.

Blake v. U. S. 103 U. S. 227 (26: 462); Gratiot's Case, 1 Ct. Cl. 258; Smith v. U. S. 2 Ct. Cl. 206; Winter v. U. S. 3 Ct. Cl. 137; Keynolds v. U. S. 3 Ct. Cl. 198; Barnes v. U. S. 4 Ct. Cl. 217; Montgomery v. U. S. 5 Ct. Cl. 94; Mimmack v. U. S. 10 Ct. Cl. 584, 97 U. S. 426 (24: 1087).

When, for any reason, an officer of the army or navy loses his position, nothing short of a new appointment, confirmed by the Senate, can have the effect of restoring him to the office.

Mimmack's Case, 12 Ops. Atty-Gen. 555; Du Barry's Case, 4 Ops. Atty-Gen. 608; Bennett's Case, 19 Ct. Cl. 379; McElraith's Case, 12 Ct. Cl. 201, 102 U. S. 426 (26: 189); Miller v. U. S. 19 Ct. Cl. 338; Badeau's Case, 15 Ops. Atty-Gen. 407; Blake's Case, 14 Ct. Cl. 462, 103 U. S. 227 (26: 462); Montgomery's Case, 19 Ct. Cl. 870; Palen's Case, 19 Ct. Cl. 889; McBlair's Case, 19 Ct. Cl. 528; Vanderslice's Case, 19 Ct. Cl. 480; Corson's Case, 17 Ct. Cl. 344, 114 U. S. 619 (29: 254).

A new appointment to the place of an officer of the army or navy supersedes such officer.

Blake v. U. S. 14 Ct. Cl. 462, 103 U. S. 227 (26: 462); McElraith v. U. S. 12 Ct. Cl. 201, 102 U. S. 426 (26: 189).

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment of the Court of Claims. (24 Ct. Cl. 280.) Appellant brought his action in that court to recover, not for services actually rendered, but for sixteen years' salary as first lieutenant, claiming that this was due by reason of an alleged illegality in the order of January 2, 1871, discharging him from the service. That order is therefore the matter of inquiry.

In 1869 and 1870 Acts of Congress were passed looking to a reduction in the army, and the order in question was made in pursuance of the last of these Acts. The intent of Congress is obvious, and all proceedings had to carry such intent into effect should be liberally construed, and not subjected to any such technical limitations as will thwart such obvious purpose. The Act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat. 92), has no bearing on the case at bar, for, as held by this court in Blake v. U. S. 108 U. S. 227 [26: 462], it simply placed a limitation on the personal power of the President, as commander-in-chief in time of peace, to dismiss from the service. It was not intended to have—as it could not have—any effect on the power of a subsequent Congress to reduce the army by appropriate legislation in respect to either its officers or enlisted men.

The Act of March 8, 1869 (15 Stat. 315, §§ 2-7 inclusive), is significant only as indicating the intent of Congress that the army should be reduced, for the method of reduction there provided is simply the cessation of enlistments and appointments. Evidently the reduction by this method was not as rapid as was desired, for on July 15, 1870, an Act was passed making provision for a direct reduction. (16 Stat. 315.) Section 2 authorizes and directs the President to reduce on or before the first day of July, 1871, the number of enlisted men to thirty thousand. With respect to the officers, there were several sections aimed at reduction, some abolishing certain offices, others providing that no appointments to particular offices should be made until the number of incumbents was reduced below a prescribed limit. In addition, there were four provisions having general application. Section 3 authorized the President to grant an honorable discharge to all officers applying on or before the first of January, 1871, and giving the officers so discharged an additional year's pay and allowances. Sections 4 and 5 increased the retired list to 800, and authorized the President to place on such list, on their own application, officers with thirty years' service. The other provisions are found in sections 11 and 12, which, as being the sections especially bearing on the questions in this case, are quoted as follows:

"SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the general of the army and commanding officers of the several military departments of the army shall, as soon as practicable after the passage of this Act, forward to the Secretary of War a list of officers serving in their respective commands deemed by them unfit for the proper discharge of their duties, from any cause except injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of their duty, setting forth specifically in each case the cause of such unfitness. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to constitute a board to consist of one major-general, one brigadier-general and three colonels, three of the said officers to be selected from among those appointed to the regular army on account of distinguished services in the volunteer force during the late war; and on recommendation of such board, the President shall muster out of the service any of the said officers so reported, with one year's pay; but such muster-out shall not be ordered without allowing such officer a hearing before such board to show cause against it.

188 U. S.

U. S., Book 38.

"SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That the President is hereby authorized to transfer officers from the regiments of cavalry, artillery and infantry to the list of supernumeraries, and all vacancies now existing, or which may occur prior to the first day of January next, in the cavalry, artillery or infantry, by reason of transfer, or from other causes, shall be filled in due proportion by the supernumerary officers, having reference to rank, seniority and fitness, as provided in existing law regulating promotions in the army. And if any supernumerary officers shall remain after the first day of January next they shall be honorably mustered out of the service with one year's pay and allowances: Provided, That vacancies now existing in the grade of second lieutenants, or which may occur prior to said date, may be filled by the assignment of supernumerary first lieutenants, or officers of higher grades, who, when so assigned, shall rank as second lieutenants, provided such officer shall prefer to be assigned, instead of being mustered out under the provisions of this section; and officers so assigned shall take rank from the date of their original entry into the service: And provided further, That no chaplain be appointed to posts or regiments until those on waiting orders are assigned."

It appears from the findings that on October 27, 1870, the claimant, who was on active duty at Fort Bidwell, California, was reported by the department commander, Lieutenant-Colonel George Crook, as unfit for the proper discharge of his duties from other causes than injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of his duties. His name was submitted to the board organized in pursuance of the 11th section quoted supra. On the 17th of November the board requested that he, with others named, be given a hearing, as required by that section. On November 19th the adjutant-general informed the board that the stations of these officers were so remote that it was impossible for it to consider their cases, and that the Secretary of War had directed that they be not ordered to appear. In compliance with this order, on November 22d, the papers in these cases were returned to the Secretary of War. In other words, the proceedings initiated under section 11 were abandoned. No inquiry was ever made as to the alleged unfitness for the proper discharge of his duties from causes other than injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of duty. It appears, further, than on January 2, 1871, January 1st being Sunday, an order was issued by the Secretary of War, which, so far as it affects this claimant, reads as follows:

"(General Orders, No. 1.)

"War Department, Adjutant-General's Office,

"Washington, January 2, 1871.

"By direction of the President, the following officers of the Army are transferred, assigned or mustered out of the service, to take effect from the 1st instant:

"I.—Transfers to the List of Supernumeraries, under Section 12 of the Act Approved July 15, 1870.

* * * * *

"First Lieutenant Harlow L. Street, First Cavalry.

* * * * *

"II.—Transfers and Assignments to Fill Vacancies to the Present Date.
* * * * *

"First Lieutenant Max Wessendorff, unassigned, to the First Cavalry, vice Street, transferred to the list of supernumeraries.
* * * * *

"III.—Unassigned Officers whose Commissions have Expired under Section 12 of the Act of Congress approved July 15, 1870, and who are Honorably Mustered out of the Service.
* * * * *

"First Lieutenant Harlow L. Street.
* * * * *

"By order of the Secretary of War:

"E. D. Townsend,

"Adjutant-General."

Subsequently, on September 18, 1871, he received the year's pay provided for in section 12, and still later, on the 18th of February, 1881, he was paid the sum of $117.95 upon treasury settlement, on account of some errors in the previous payment.

The principal contention of the appellant is that, proceedings having been commenced under section 11, they should have been carried to a close, and that he could be mustered out of the service only upon an adjudication by that board of unfitness. But this view cannot be sustained. It arises from a misconception of the scope of the two sections. The first aims to eliminate from the army those officers who are unfit for the discharge of their duties, and whose unfitness springs from no cause of meritorious claim upon the consideration of the government; while the other is a grant of general power to the President to reduce the number of officers by selecting the best and mustering out the residue. It is comprehensive in its scope, and not at all dependent upon the failure to accomplish the requisite reduction through proceedings under section 11. It is in no manner subordinated to or dependent upon that section, and grants a power which can be exercised irrespective of all other proceedings.

The appellant had no vested right to an adjudication upon the matter reported against him. In the absence of express limitation, the government may always withdraw charges which it has made. There is nothing in the words of either section, nothing in the scope and purpose of their provisions, or in any general rule of law, which prevented the government from abandoning the proceedings initiated under section 11, and proceeding to muster out the appellant under section 12.

The other proposition of the appellant is that the authority given by section 12 was not strictly pursued. While it is conceded that the President might add to or take from the list of supernumerary officers, it is urged that he could muster out only those who were supernumerary officers at the close of the first day of January, 1879, the language being: "And if any supernumerary officers shall remain after the first day of January next they shall be honorably mustered out," etc., whereas, by the order actually made, he was transferred to the supernumerary list only on the second day of January. Concede the irregularity, and it is not such as vitiates the order. The purpose of the Act is obvious. The direction of Congress was clear and distinct, and it would be strange if any executive officer could, by irregularity in executing the mandate of Congress, thwart this purpose. The matter of time was not vital. The purpose was reduction and a reduction to be accomplished by selecting the best and mustering out the poorer element; and while Congress prescribed the time within which this mandate was to be executed, there is neither in terms nor by implication any subordination of the power to the matter of time.

Again, it must be noticed that the first day of January was Sunday, that is, a dies non, and a power that may be exercised up to and including a given day of the month may generally, when that day happens to be Sunday, be exercised on the succeeding day. So that it is a matter worthy at least of consideration whether the power was not exercised within the very limits of time prescribed by the Act.

It is well in this respect to compare this section with section 3. By that the President was authorized to honorably discharge, with pay and allowances, officers who should apply on or before January 1, 1871. By that section a reduction through the voluntary act of army officers was contemplated, and such voluntary action was authorized and invited to be had on the first day of January. While section 12 was not dependent upon section 3, yet it is obvious that action so voluntarily taken by any army officer would limit the amount of enforced reduction, and to that extent relieve the President from embarrassment in the selection authorized by section 12; and there was a propriety, if nothing else, in waiting until the close of the first day of January before exercising the power of selection and mustering out.

It will also be noticed that section 12 places no limitation on the time within which the President is authorized to transfer officers to the list of supernumeraries. If voluntary resignation by the close of the first day of January made sufficient reduction, there would be no necessity of transferring any to the list of supernumeraries, and it was only the supernumerary officers remaining after the 1st of January—that is, the officers then found not to be needed for the service—who were to be mustered out under that section. There was therefore no requirement that the President should transfer to the supernumerary list before the close of the 1st of January; the number which it was necessary to transfer could not be absolutely determined until the close of that day, and it was only those who, at the close of that day were not needed in the service, that the President could muster out. All these matters justified the action of the President taken on the 2d of January, and if they do not establish that it was in full and literal compliance with the exact provisions of section 12, they certainly leave so slight a departure as scarcely to be worthy of mention. It is certainly no such deviation from the prescribed course as to vitiate the order and thus nullify the express direction of Congress.

But we are not limited to this. Full power of legislation in the matter of increase and reduction of the army is with Congress. It prescribed in this Act the proceedings by which that reduction was to be accomplished. In pursuance of that Act certain proceedings were had. The power which can direct what proceedings shall be had can approve and make valid any proceedings which are actually taken. The power which can give authority to act can ratify any act that is taken, and generally legislative recognition of an act or a corporation validates the act or the corporation, although neither one nor the other may have had full prior legal authority. County of Comanche v. Lewis, 133 U. S. 198 [33:604].

There was but one order issued under section 12 for the mustering-out of supernumerary officers. In that order were many names besides that of the appellant, and the Act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. 497, § 2), refers to "any person who was mustered out as a supernumerary officer of the army with one year's pay and allowances," under the Act of 1870, that we have been considering. Further, on April 8, 1878 (20 Stat. 85), 25th of February, 1879 (20 Stat. 321), March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 354), and March 3, 1881 (21 Stat. 510), Acts were severally passed authorizing the restoration to the army of John A. Darling, Michael O'Brien, Phillip W. Stanhope and Redmond Tully, who had been mustered out by this order of January 2, 1871, and those Acts all assume the validity of that order. There has been thus full legislative recognition of its validity. It is too late, therefore, now to inquire as to whether it was in technical compliance with the procedure prescribed by the Act of 1870.

We see no errors in the ruling of the Court of Claims, and its judgment is affirmed.

C. H. SMITH ET AL., Plffs. in Err.,

v.

O. T. LYON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 815-820.)

Jurisdiction by reason of diverse citizenship—when plaintiffs must all be citizens of State where suit is brought—co-plaintiffs and co-defendants.

1. A suit by two partners, where one of them is a resident and citizen of the Eastern District of Missouri, and the other is a resident and citizen of Arkansas, and the defendant is a resident and citizen of Texas, cannot be brought in the United States Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Missouri.
2. Under the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 552), as amended by the Act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. 433), where two plaintiffs are citizens of different States, they cannot both unite in one suit in a State of which only one of them is a citizen.
3. If there are several co-plaintiffs, each plaintiff must be competent to sue, and if there are several co-defendants, each defendant must be liable to be sued, or the jurisdiction cannot be entertained.

[No. 1164.]

Submitted Jan. 6, 1890. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri to review a judgment dismissing a suit for want of jurisdiction, by reason of the want of proper residence and citizenship of the parties. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion. Opinion below, 38 Fed. Rep. 53.

Mr. Jefferson Chandler for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. R. C. Foster for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Miller delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Missouri. It was dismissed in that court for want of jurisdiction, and judgment rendered accordingly, to which this writ of error is prosecuted.

The facts out of which the controversy arises are found in the first few lines of plaintiffs' petition. In this they allege that they are partners doing business under the firm name of C. H. Smith & Co.; that the said C. H. Smith is a resident and citizen of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, and Benjamin Fordyce is a resident and citizen of Hot Springs, in the State of Arkansas; and that the defendant, O. T. Lyon, is a resident and citizen of Sherman, in the State of Texas.

To this petition, which set out a cause of action otherwise sufficient, the defendant, Lyon, who was served with the summons in the Eastern District of Missouri, filed a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, appearing by attorney especially for that purpose, the ground of which is that one of the plaintiffs, Benjamin Fordyce, is and was at the time of the institution of this suit a resident and citizen of Hot Springs, in the State of Arkansas, and the defendant was a resident and citizen of Sherman, in the State of Texas, and that the suit was not brought in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff Fordyce or of the defendant.

The motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction was sustained by the circuit court, and the soundness of that decision is the question which we are called upon to decide.

The decision of it depends upon the proper construction of the first section of the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. 552), as amended by the Act of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. 433). That Statute professes to be an Act to amend the Act of March 3, 1875, and its object is "to determine the jurisdiction of circuit courts of the United States and to regulate the removal of causes from state courts, and for other purposes." The first section of the Act confers upon the circuit courts of the United States original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several States, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds the sum of $2,000, and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States or treaties made or which shall be made under their authority. It then proceeds to establish a jurisdiction in reference to the parties to the suit. These are controversies in which the United States are plaintiffs, or in which there shall be a controversy between citizens of different States, with a like limitation upon the amount in dispute, and other controversies between parties which are described in the Statute. This first clause of the Act describes the jurisdiction common to all the circuit courts of the United States, as regards the subject matter of the suit, and as regards the character of the parties who by reason of such character may, either as plaintiffs or defendants, sustain suits in circuit courts. But the next sentence in the same section undertakes to define the jurisdiction of each one of the several circuit courts of the United States with reference to its territorial limits, and this clause declares "that no person shall be arrested in one district for trial in another in any civil action before a circuit or district court; and no civil suit shall be brought before either of said courts against any person by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant, but where the jurisdiction is founded only on the fact that the action is between citizens of different States, suit shall be brought only in the district of the residence of either the plaintiff or the defendant."

In the case before us, one of the plaintiffs is a citizen of the State where the suit is brought, namely, the State of Missouri, and the defendant is a citizen of the State of Texas. But one of the plaintiffs is a citizen of the State of Arkansas. The suit, so far as he is concerned, is not brought in the State of which he is a citizen. Neither as plaintiff nor as defendant is he a citizen of the district where the suit is brought. The argument in support of the error assigned is that it is sufficient if the suit is brought in a State where one of the defendants or one of the plaintiffs is a citizen. This would be true if there were but one plaintiff or one defendant. But the Statute makes no provision in terms for the case of two defendants or two plaintiffs who are citizens of different States. In the present case, there being two plaintiffs, citizens of different States, there does not seem to be in the language of the Statute any provision that both plaintiffs may unite in one suit in a State of which either of them is a citizen.

It may be conceded that the question thus presented, if merely a naked one of construction of language in a statute, introduced for the first time, would be one of very considerable doubt. But there are other considerations which must influence our judgment, and which solve this doubt in favor of the proposition that such a suit cannot be sustained.

The original Judiciary Act of 1789, which established the courts of the United States and defined their jurisdiction, declared in reference to the circuit courts, in section one of that Act (1 Stat. 78), that the circuit courts shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the several States, of all suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of $500, and the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or an alien is a party, or the suit is between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought and a citizen of another State. The construction of this phrase, "where the suit is between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought and a citizen of another State," came before the supreme court at an early day in the case of Straubridge v. Curtiss, 7 U. S. 8 Cranch, 267 [2: 485], and Chief Justice Marshall delivered the opinion of the court, which was without dissent, in the following language:

"The court understands these expressions" [referring to the words "suit between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought and a citizen of another State"] "to mean that each distinct interest should be represented by persons all of whom are entitled to sue or may be sued in the federal courts. That is, that where the interest is joint each of the persons concerned in that interest must be competent to sue, or liable to be sued, in those courts."

This construction has been adhered to from that day to this, and although the statutes have modified the jurisdiction of the court as regards the amount in controversy and in many other particulars, the language construed by the court in Straubridge v. Curtiss has been found in all of them. This Statute, conferring and defining the jurisdiction of circuit courts of the United States, has been re-enacted and recast several times since the original decision of Straubridge v. Curtiss. The first of these was the general revision of the statutes of the United States, passed in 1874, in which the language of the Statute of 1789 is supposed to be reproduced accurately. But an Act of March 8, 1875 (18 Stat. 470), undertook to recast the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, and its first section, the important one in this connection, contains the same language in regard to the jurisdiction of the court in controversies between citizens of different States, and also the provision that no civil suit shall be brought in either of said courts by any original process or proceeding in any other district than that whereof he is an inhabitant or in which he shall be found at the time of serving process. The Statute remained in this condition until the Act of 1887, which we are now considering, as amended by the Act of August 18, 1888 (25 Stat. 438).

During this period, and since the case of Straubridge v. Curtiss, this jurisdictional clause has been frequently construed by this court, and that case has been followed. In the case of New Orleans v. Winter, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 91 [4: 44], the same question arose, and was decided in the same way. In the case of Susquehanna & W. V. R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 172 [20:179], Mr. Justice Field, referring to these decisions, states the effect of them in the following language:

"In other words, if there are several co-plaintiffs, the intention of the Act is that each plaintiff must be competent to sue, and if there are several co-defendants, each defendant must be liable to be sued, or the jurisdiction cannot be entertained."

The question was very fully considered in the case of The Sewing Machine Companies, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 553 [21: 914], where the same proposition is stated in almost identical language. And in the case of Peninsular Iron Company v. Stone, 121 U. S. 631 [30:1020], the chief justice reviews all these cases and reaffirms the doctrine as applicable to cases arising under the Act of 1875.

The Statute which we are now construing leaves out the provision that if the party has the diverse citizenship required by the Statute he may be sued in any district where he may be found at the time of the service of process. The omission of these words, and the increase of the amount in controversy necessary to the jurisdiction of the circuit court, and the repeal of so much of the former Act as allowed plaintiffs to remove causes from the state courts to those of the United States, and many other features of the new Statute, show the purpose of the Legislature to restrict rather than to enlarge the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, while, at the same time, a suit is permitted to be brought in any district where either plaintiff or defendant resides.

We do not think, in the light of this long-continued construction of the Statute by this court during a period of nearly a hundred years, in which, though the Statute has been the subject of renewed legislative consideration and of many changes, it has always retained the language which was construed in the case of Strawbridge v. Curtis, that we are at liberty to give that language a new meaning, when it is used in reference to the same subject matter. It is not readily to be conceived that the Congress of the United States, in a Statute mainly designed for the purpose of restricting the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States, using language which has been construed in a uniform manner for over ninety years by this court, intended that that language should be given a construction which would enlarge the jurisdiction of those courts, and which would be directly contrary to that heretofore placed upon it by this court.

These considerations require the affirmance of the judgment of the Circuit Court, and it is so ordered.

SAMUEL D. DAVIS, Appt.,

v.

H. G. BEASON, Sheriff of ONEIDA COUNTY, IDAHO TERRITORY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 333-348.)

Jurisdiction of Idaho court—Mormons, as voters—habeas corpus—questions examinable—bigamy and polygamy—constitutional provision—punitive power of the government—power of Territorial Legislatures to prescribe qualifications of voters—Statutes of Idaho forbidding bigamists or polygamists to vote—Act of March 22, 1882.

1. The District Court of the Territory of Idaho has jurisdiction of the offense charged in an indictment for a conspiracy by defendant and others to pervert and obstruct the laws of the Territory by unlawfully procuring themselves to be registered as voters, while members of the Mormon Church.

2. If it had jurisdiction, this court cannot look into any alleged errors in the rulings on the trial of the defendant. The writ of habeas corpus cannot be turned into a writ of error to review the action of that court; nor can this court inquire whether the evidence established the facts alleged, that the defendant was a member of the Mormon Church, which taught its members to commit the crimes of bigamy and polygamy as duties.

3. On this hearing, this court can only consider whether, such allegations being taken as true, an offense was committed of which the territorial court had jurisdiction to try the defendant.

4. Bigamy and polygamy are crimes by the laws of all civilized and Christian countries, and the First Amendment to the Constitution that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or forbidding the free exercise thereof, cannot be invoked as a protection against legislation for their punishment.

5. The punitive power of the government for acts recognized by the general consent of the Christian world in modern times as proper matters for prohibitory legislation cannot be suspended in order that the tenets of a religious sect encouraging crime may be carried out without hindrance.

6. Territorial Legislatures have the power to prescribe any reasonable qualifications of voters and for holding office, not inconsistent with the limitations of the United States Statutes.

7. The Statutes of Idaho Territory, forbidding bigamists or polygamists to vote, and requiring an oath by the voter that he is not a member of an order that teaches the commission of those crimes, are valid.

8. The Statute of Congress of March 22, 1882, in reference to bigamy, does not restrict the legislation of the Territories over kindred offenses, or over the means for their ascertainment and prevention.

[No. 1261.]

Argued Dec. 9, 10, 1889. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Third Judicial District Court of the Territory of Idaho, deciding that sufficient cause was not shown for the discharge of the defendant, Samuel D. Davis, upon a writ of habeas corpus, who had been convicted and imprisoned for an unlawful conspiracy, and ordering him to be remanded to the custody of the sheriff. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Field:

In April, 1889, the appellant, Samuel D. Davis, was indicted in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Idaho, in the County of Oneida, in connection with divers persons named, and divers other persons whose names were unknown to the grand jury, for a conspiracy to unlawfully pervert and obstruct the due administration of the laws of the Territory in this, that they would NOTE.—As to civil rights; state decisions; removal of causes, where denied,—see note to Civil Rights Cases, Bk. 27, p. 335.

As to jurisdiction of U. S. Supreme Court, where federal question arises, and where are drawn in question statutes, treaty or Constitution, see notes to Martin v. Hunter, Bk. 4, p. 97; Matthews v. Zane, Bk. 2, p. 654, and Williams v. Norris, Bk. 6, p. 571.

As to jurisdiction of U. S. Supreme Court to declare state law void, and to review state decrees, see notes to Hart v. Lamphire, Bk. 7, p. 379, and to Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, Bk. 12, p. 169.

133 U. S.

As to when habeas corpus may issue, and when not; and from what courts, and by what judges; what may be inquired into by writ of,—see note to U. S. v. Hamilton, Bk. 1, p. 490.

As to what questions may be considered on habeas corpus, see note to Ex parte Carll, Bk. 27, p. 238.

As to suspension of writ of habeas corpus, see note to Luther v. Borden, Bk. 12, p. 531.

unlawfully procure themselves to be admitted to registration as electors of said County of Oneida for the general election then next to occur in that county, when they were not entitled to be admitted to such registration, by appearing before the respective registrars of the election precincts in which they resided, and taking the oath prescribed by the Statute of the State, in substance as follows: "I do swear (or affirm) that I am a male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years (or will be on the 6th day of November, 1888); and that I have (or will have) actually resided in this Territory four months and in this county for thirty days next preceding the day of the next ensuing election; that I have never been convicted of treason, felony or bribery; and that I am not registered or entitled to vote at any other place in this Territory; and I do further swear that I am not a bigamist or polygamist; that I am not a member of any order, organization or association which teaches, advises, counsels or encourages its members, devotees or any other person to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law as a duty arising or resulting from membership in such order, organization or association, or which practices bigamy, polygamy or plural or celestial marriage as a doctrinal right of such organization; that I do not and will not, publicly or privately, or in any manner whatever, teach, advise, counsel or encourage any person to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, either as a religious duty or otherwise; that I do regard the Constitution of the United States and the laws thereof and the laws of this Territory, as interpreted by the courts, as the supreme laws of the land, the teachings of any order, organization or association to the contrary notwithstanding, so help me God," when, in truth, each of the defendants was a member of an order, organization and association, namely, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, commonly known as the Mormon Church, which they knew taught, advised, counseled and encouraged its members and devotees to commit the crimes of bigamy and polygamy as duties arising and resulting from membership in said order, organization and association, and which order, organization and association, as they all knew, practiced bigamy and polygamy and plural and celestial marriage as doctrinal rights of said organization; and that in pursuance of said conspiracy the said defendants went before the registrars of different precincts of the county (which are designated) and took and had administered to them respectively the oath aforesaid.

The defendants demurred to the indictment, and the demurrer being overruled they pleaded separately not guilty. On the trial which followed on the 12th of September, 1889, the jury found the defendant Samuel D. Davis guilty as charged in the indictment. The defendant was thereupon sentenced to pay a fine of $500, and in default of its payment to be confined in the county jail of Oneida County for a term not exceeding 250 days, and was remanded to the custody of the sheriff until the judgment should be satisfied.

Soon afterwards, on the same day, the defendant applied to the court before which the trial was had, and obtained a writ of habeas corpus, alleging that he was imprisoned and restrained of his liberty by the sheriff of the county; that his imprisonment was by virtue of his conviction and the judgment mentioned and the warrant issued thereon; that such imprisonment was illegal; and that such illegality consisted in this: (1) that the facts in the indictment and record did not constitute a public offense, and the acts charged were not criminal or punishable under any statute or law of the Territory; and (2) that so much of the Statute of the Territory which provides that no person is entitled to register or vote at any election who is "a member of any order, organization or association which teaches, advises, counsels or encourages its members, devotees or any other person to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, as a duty arising or resulting from membership in such order, organization or association, or which practices bigamy or polygamy or plural or celestial marriage as a doctrinal rite of such organization," is a "law respecting an establishment of religion," in violation of the First Amendment of the Constitution, and void.

The court ordered the writ to issue, directed to the sheriff, returnable before it, at three o'clock in the afternoon of that day, commanding the sheriff to have the body of the defendant before the court at the hour designated, with the time and cause of his imprisonment, and to do and receive what should then be considered concerning him. On the return of the writ, the sheriff produced the body of the defendant and also the warrant of commitment under which he was held, and the record of the case showing his conviction for the conspiracy mentioned and the judgment thereon. To this return, the defendant, admitting the facts stated therein, excepted to their insufficiency to justify his detention. The court, holding that sufficient cause was not shown for the discharge of the defendant, ordered him to be remanded to the custody of the sheriff. From this judgment the defendant appealed to this court. (Rev. Stat. § 1909.)

Messrs. Franklin S. Richards, Jeremiah M. Wilson and Samuel Shellabarger, for appellant:

The power of Congress to pass a statute under which a prisoner is held in custody may be inquired into under a writ of habeas corpus.

Nielsen's Case, 181 U. S. 193 (32: 120); Re Coy, 127 U. S. 759 (32: 281); Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 376, 377 (25: 719); Re Snow, 120 U. S. 274 (30: 658); Ex parte Lang, 35 U. S. 18 Wall. 163 (21: 872).

The Idaho Statute disfranchising and disqualifying citizens from holding office because of membership in the Mormon Church is unconstitutional and void, because it prohibits the free exercise of religion.

Constitution, art. 1, Amendments; Reynolds' Case, 98 U. S. 164 (25: 249); 2 Kent, Com. 35; Cooley, Torts, 33; 1 Jefferson's Works, 45; 8 Writings of Washington, 568; Board of Education v. Minor, 23 Ohio St. 211; Atty-Gen. v. Detroit, 58 Mich. 213; Georgia Const. 1777, art. 56; Maryland Declaration of Rights, 1776, art. 83; Massachusetts Declaration of Rights 1780, art. 3; New Jersey Const. 1776, art. 18; North Carolina Const. 1776, art. 84; N. Y. Const. 1777, art. 83; New Hampshire Bill of Rights 1784, art. 5; Pennsylvania Declaration of Rights 1776, art. 11; Virginia Bill of Rights 1776, § 16; 1 Tucker's Blackstone, Appendix, 296, 297; 2 Tucker's Blackstone, Appendix, 4, 6, 10; 2 Story, Const. §§ 1876, 1879; Cooley, Const. Lim. 469, 470.

The Idaho Statute violates the XIVth Article of Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Strauder v. West Va. 100 U. S. 307 (25:665); Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 347 (25: 679); Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 369 (30: 226); U. S. v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, 92 U. S. 555 (28: 592); Minor v. Happersett, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 176 (22: 631); Hamilton's History of the Republic of the United States, vol. III. p. 24; Cummings v. Missouri, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 320 (18: 356).

"It cannot be necessary to say much in refutation of the idea that there cannot be a legal interest or ownership in anything which does not yield a pecuniary benefit; as, if the law regarded no rights but rights of money and visible, tangible property, of what nature are all rights of suffrage? No elector has a particular personal interest, but each has a legal right, to be exercised at his own discretion, and it cannot be taken away from him."

*Daniel Webster in Dartmouth College Case, 5 Webster's Works, 479.

Congress, in legislating for the Territories, has no right to prescribe a religious test for the qualification of voters and for holding office.

Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 44 (29: 57).

This Idaho Statute violates Article VI. of the Constitution of the United States and is void because Congress has exercised its power on the same subject.

Paschal's Annotated Const. (3d ed.) § 288; Ex parte McNeil, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 240 (20: 625); Pennsylvania v. Wheeling Bridge, 59 U. S. 18 How. 490 (15: 436); Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Fuller, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 568 (21: 714); 1 Kent, Com. 859; Houston v. Moore, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 22, 24 (5: 24).

The Mormon Church is not a criminal organization.

People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 471; Lanning v. Carpenter, 48 N. Y. 408; Atty-Gen. v. St. Clair County, 11 Mich. 63; Calder v. Bull, 3 U. S. 3 Dall. 888 (1: 649); Vanhorne v. Dorrance, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 808, 809 (1: 393); Osborn v. Nicholson, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 662 (20: 695); Gunn v. Barry, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 622 (21: 214); Loan Assn. v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 668 (22: 462).

Mr. H. W. Smith, for appellee:

The right to vote may be granted, abridged or taken away by the state government in its discretion, except so far as it is secured by the State Constitution.

Anderson v. Baker, 28 Md. 581, Brightly's Lead. Cas. on Elections, 27; Blair v. Ridgely, 41 Mo. 63, Brightly's Lead. Cas. on Elections, 90; Minor v. Happersett, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 177

(22:631); Paine, Elections, §§ 2, 22, 94; Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 43 (29: 57); Case of Reynolds, 98 U. S. 168 (25: 250); Wooley v. Watkins (Idaho) 22 Pac. Rep. 106; Innis v. Bolton (Idaho) 17 Pac. Rep. 264; Cooley, Torts, 83; Spear, Religion and State, 317.

This Law of Idaho does not violate the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

Minor v. Happersett, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 177 (22:631); Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 45 (29:57); Clawson v. U. S. 114 U. S. 477 (29: 179); Blain v. Bailey, 25 Ind. 165.

To repeal a statute by implication there must be such a positive repugnancy between the provisions of the new law and the old that they cannot stand together or be consistently reconciled.

Wood v. U. S. 41 U. S. 16 Pet. 342 (10: 987); McCool v. Smith, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 459 (17: 218); Furman v. Nichol, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 44 (19: 370); Clay County v. Savings Society, 104 U. S. 579 (26: 856); Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556 (27: 1080); Chew Heong v. U. S. 112 U. S. 586 (28: 770); Red Rock v. Henry, 116 U. S. 596 (27: 251).

The question presented by this case is very materially different from that passed on by this court in Cummings v. Missouri, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 277 (18: 356); Ex parte Garland, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 883 (18: 366), and Pierce v. Car-skaddon, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 284 (21: 276).

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

On this appeal our only inquiry is whether the District Court of the Territory had jurisdiction of the offense charged in the indictment of which the defendant was found guilty. If it had jurisdiction, we can go no farther. We cannot look into any alleged errors in its rulings on the trial of the defendant. The writ of habeas corpus cannot be turned into a writ of error to review the action of that court. Nor can we inquire whether the evidence established the fact alleged, that the defendant was a member of an order or organization known as the Mormon Church, called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, or the fact that the order or organization taught and counseled its members and devotees to commit the crimes of bigamy and polygamy as duties arising from membership therein. On this hearing we can only consider whether, these allegations being taken as true, an offense was committed of which the territorial court had jurisdiction to try the defendant. And on this point there can be no serious discussion or difference of opinion. Bigamy and polygamy are crimes by the laws of all civilized and Christian countries. They are crimes by the laws of the United States, and they are crimes by the laws of Idaho. They tend to destroy the purity of the marriage relation, to disturb the peace of families, to degrade woman and to debase man. Few crimes are more pernicious to the best interests of society and receive more general or more deserved punishment. To extend exemption from punishment for such crimes would be to shock the moral judgment of the community. To call their advocacy a tenet of religion is to offend the common sense of mankind. If they are crimes, then to teach, advise and counsel their practice is to aid in their commission, and such teaching and counseling are themselves criminal and proper subjects of punishment, as aiding and abetting crime are in all other cases.

*See same words in argument of Daniel Webster, in full, in report of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 571, 572 (4: 643). Ed.

The term "religion" has reference to one's views of his relations to his Creator, and to the obligations they impose of reverence for his being and character, and of obedience to his will. It is often confounded with the cultus or form of worship of a particular sect, but is distinguishable from the latter. The First Amendment to the Constitution, in declaring that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or forbidding the free exercise thereof, was intended to allow everyone under the jurisdiction of the United States to entertain such notions respecting his relations to his Maker and the duties they impose as may be approved by his judgment and conscience, and to exhibit his sentiments in such form of worship as he may think proper, not injurious to the equal rights of others, and to prohibit legislation for the support of any religious tenets, or the modes of worship of any sect. The oppressive measures adopted, and the cruelties and punishments inflicted by the governments of Europe for many ages, to compel parties to conform in their religious beliefs and modes of worship to the views of the most numerous sect, and the folly of attempting in that way to control the mental operations of persons and enforce an outward conformity to a prescribed standard, led to the adoption of the Amendment in question. It was never intended or supposed that the Amendment could be invoked as a protection against legislation for the punishment of acts inimical to the peace, good order and morals of society. With man's relations to his Maker and the obligations he may think they impose, and the manner in which an expression shall be made by him of his belief on those subjects, no interference can be permitted, provided always the laws of society, designed to secure its peace and prosperity, and the morals of its people, are not interfered with. However free the exercise of religion may be, it must be subordinate to the criminal laws of the country, passed with reference to actions regarded by general consent as properly the subjects of punitive legislation. There have been sects which denied as a part of their religious tenets that there should be any marriage tie, and advocated promiscuous intercourse of the sexes as prompted by the passions of their members. And history discloses the fact that the necessity of human sacrifices, on special occasions, has been a tenet of many sects. Should a sect of either of these kinds ever find its way into this country, swift punishment would follow the carrying into effect of its doctrines, and no heed would be given to the pretense that, as religious beliefs, their supporters could be protected in their exercise by the Constitution of the United States. Probably never before in the history of this country has it been seriously contended that the whole punitive power of the government, for acts recognized by the general consent of the Christian world in modern times as proper matters for prohibitory legislation, must be suspended in order that the tenets of a religious sect encouraging crime may be carried out without hindrance.

On this subject the observations of this court through the late Chief Justice Waite, in Reynolds v. United States, are pertinent. (98 U. S. 145, 165, 166 [25:244, 250]). In that case the defendant was indicted and convicted under section 5852 of the Revised Statutes, which declared that "every person having a husband or wife living, who marries another, whether married or single, in a Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, is guilty of bigamy, and shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment for a term not more than five years." The case being brought here, the court, after referring to a law passed in December, 1788, by the State of Virginia, punishing bigamy and polygamy with death, said that from that day there never had been a time in any State of the Union when polygamy had not been an offense against society cognizable by the civil courts and punished with more or less severity; and added: "Marriage, while from its very nature a sacred obligation, is, nevertheless, in most civilized nations a civil contract, and usually regulated by law. Upon it society may be said to be built, and out of its fruits spring social relations and social obligations and duties, with which government is necessarily required to deal. In fact, according as monogamous or polygamous marriages are allowed, do we find the principles on which the government of the people, to a greater or less extent, rests." And referring to the Statute cited, he said: "It is constitutional and valid as prescribing a rule of action for all those residing in the Territories, and in places over which the United States have exclusive control. This being so, the only question which remains is, whether those who make polygamy a part of their religion are excepted from the operation of the Statute. If they are, then those who do not make polygamy a part of their religious belief may be found guilty and punished, while those who do must be acquitted and go free. This would be introducing a new element into criminal law. Laws are made for the government of actions, and while they cannot interfere with mere religious belief and opinions, they may with practices. Suppose one believed that human sacrifices were a necessary part of religious worship, would it be seriously contended that the civil government under which he lived could not interfere to prevent a sacrifice? Or, if a wife religiously believed it was her duty to burn herself upon the funeral pile of her dead husband, would it be beyond the power of the civil government to prevent her carrying her belief into practice? So here, as a law of the organization of society under the exclusive dominion of the United States, it is provided that plural marriages shall not be allowed. Can a man excuse his practices to the contrary because of his religious belief? To permit this would be to make the professed doctrines of religious belief superior to the law of the land, and in effect to permit every citizen to become a law unto himself. Government could exist only in name under such circumstances." And in Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 15, 45 [29:47, 57], referring to the Act of Congress excluding polygamists and bigamists from voting or holding office, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Matthews, said: "Certainly no legislation can be supposed more wholesome and necessary in the founding of a free, self-governing commonwealth, fit to take rank as one of the co-ordinate States of the Union, than that which seeks to establish it on the basis of the idea of the family, as consisting in and springing from the union for life of one man and one woman in the holy estate of matrimony—the sure foundation of all that is stable and noble in our civilization; the best guaranty of that reverent morality which is the source of all beneficent progress in social and political improvement. And to this end no means are more directly and immediately suitable than those provided by this Act, which endeavors to withdraw all political influence from those who are practically hostile to its attainment."

It is assumed by counsel of the petitioner that, because no mode of worship can be established or religious tenets enforced in this country, therefore any form of worship may be followed and any tenets, however destructive of society, may be held and advocated, if asserted to be a part of the religious doctrines of those advocating and practicing them. But nothing is further from the truth. Whilst legislation for the establishment of a religion is forbidden, and its free exercise permitted, it does not follow that everything which may be so called can be tolerated. Crime is not the less odious because sanctioned by what any particular sect may designate as religion.

It only remains to refer to the laws which authorized the Legislature of the Territory of Idaho to prescribe the qualifications of voters and the oath they were required to take. The Revised Statutes provide that "the legislative power of every Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States. But no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of nonresidents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents." (Rev. Stat. § 1851.)

Under this general authority it would seem that the Territorial Legislature was authorized to prescribe any qualifications for voters calculated to secure obedience to its laws. But, in addition to the above law, section 1859 of the Revised Statutes provides that "every male citizen above the age of twenty-one, including persons who have legally declared their intention to become citizens in any Territory hereafter organized, and who are actual residents of such Territory at the time of the organization thereof, shall be entitled to vote at the first election in such Territory, and to hold any office therein; subject, nevertheless, to the limitations specified in the next section," namely, that at all elections in any Territory subsequently organized by Congress, as well as at all elections in Territories already organized, the qualifications of voters and for holding office shall be such as may be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly of each Territory, subject, nevertheless, to the following restrictions:

First. That the right of suffrage and of holding office shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States above the age of twenty-one or persons above that age who have declared their intention to become such citizens;

Second. That the elective franchise or the right of holding office shall not be denied to any citizen on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude;

Third. That no soldier or sailor or other person in the army or navy, or attached to troops in the service of the United States, shall be allowed to vote unless he has made his permanent domicile in the Territory for six months; and,

Fourth. That no person belonging to the army or navy shall be elected to or hold a civil office or appointment in the Territory.

These limitations are the only ones placed upon the authority of Territorial Legislatures against granting the right of suffrage or of holding office. They have the power, therefore, to prescribe any reasonable qualifications of voters and for holding office not inconsistent with the above limitations. In our judgment, section 501 of the Revised Statutes of Idaho Territory, which provides that "no person under guardianship, non compos mentis or insane, nor any person convicted of treason, felony or bribery in this Territory, or in any other State or Territory in the Union, unless restored to civil rights; nor any person who is a bigamist or polygamist, or who teaches, advises, counsels or encourages any person or persons to become bigamists or polygamists, or to commit any other crime defined by law, or to enter into what is known as plural or celestial marriage, or who is a member of any order, organization or association which teaches, advises, counsels or encourages its members or devotees or any other persons to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, either as a rite or ceremony of such order, organization or association, or otherwise, is permitted to vote at any election, or to hold any position or office of honor, trust or profit within this Territory," is not open to any constitutional or legal objection. With the exception of persons under guardianship or of unsound mind, it simply excludes from the privilege of voting, or of holding any office of honor, trust or profit, those who have been convicted of certain offenses, and those who advocate a practical resistance to the laws of the Territory and justify and approve the commission of crimes forbidden by it. The second subdivision of section 504 of the Revised Statutes of Idaho, requiring every person desiring to have his name registered as a voter to take an oath that he does not belong to an order that advises a disregard of the criminal law of the Territory, is not open to any valid legal objection to which our attention has been called.

The position that Congress has, by its Statute, covered the whole subject of punitive legislation against bigamy and polygamy, leaving nothing for territorial action on the subject, does not impress us as entitled to much weight. The Statute of Congress of March 22, 1882, amending a previous section of the Revised Statutes in reference to bigamy, declares "that no polygamist, bigamist or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor or emolument in, under or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States." (22 Stat. 31.)

This is a general law applicable to all Territories and other places under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. It does not purport to restrict the legislation of the Territories over kindred offenses or over the means for their ascertainment and prevention. The cases in which the legislation of Congress will supersede the legislation of a State or Territory, without specific provisions to that effect, are those in which the same matter is the subject of legislation by both. There the action of Congress may well be considered as covering the entire ground. But here there is nothing of this kind. The Act of Congress does not touch upon teaching, advising and counseling the practice of bigamy and polygamy, that is, upon aiding and abetting in the commission of those crimes, nor upon the mode adopted, by means of the oath required for registration, to prevent persons from being enabled by their votes to defeat the criminal laws of the country.

The judgment of the court below is therefore affirmed.

NOTE.—The Constitutions of several States, in providing for religious freedom, have declared expressly that such freedom shall not be construed to excuse acts of licentiousness, or to justify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the State. Thus, the Constitution of New York of 1777 provides as follows: "The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever hereafter be allowed, within this State, to all mankind: Provided, That the liberty of conscience, hereby granted, shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State." (Art. XXXVIII.) The same declaration is repeated in the Constitution of 1821 (art. VII. § 3), and in that of 1846 (art. I. § 3), except that for the words "hereby granted," the words "hereby secured" are substituted. The Constitutions of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada and South Carolina contain a similar declaration.

GEORGE LOUIS DOMINIQUE ANTOINE
DE GEOFROY ET AL., Appts.,

v.

E. FRANCIS RIGGS ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 258-273.)

French citizens can take by descent land in District of Columbia—treaty power of U. S.—Treaty of 1800 between France and U. S.—

NOTE.—As to construction and operation of treaties, see note to U. S. v. Amistad, Bk. 10, p. 826.

642

District of Columbia, a State—"States of the Union" in French Treaty of 1853 include that District—right of Frenchmen to inherit—construction of treaties—Act of March 3, 1857.

1. Citizens of France can take land in the District of Columbia by descent from citizens of the United States.
2. The treaty power of the United States extends to all proper subjects of negotiation between our government and the governments of other nations.
3. During the continuance of the Treaty of 1800 between France and this country, citizens of France could take property in the District of Columbia by inheritance from citizens of the United States.
4. According to the definition of writers on general law, the District of Columbia, being a separate political community, is a State.
5. By the words "States of the Union" in the Treaty between the United States and France, concluded February 28, 1853, is meant all political communities exercising legislative powers in the country, not only the United States, but also the Territories and the District of Columbia.
6. By that Treaty the disability of Frenchmen from alienage in disposing and inheriting property, real and personal, is removed.
7. Treaties should be liberally construed, so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties to secure equality and reciprocity between them.
8. In the Act of March 3, 1857, there is a plain implication that property in the District of Columbia and in the Territories may be acquired by aliens by inheritance under existing laws.

[No. 1431.]

Submitted Dec. 23, 1889. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia sustaining a demurrer and dismissing an action for the sale of real estate of an intestate, situate in the District of Columbia, and a division of the proceeds among his heirs, citizens of France. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Field:

On the 19th day of January, 1888, T. Lawrason Riggs, a citizen of the United States and a resident of the District of Columbia, died at Washington, intestate, seised in fee of real estate of great value in the District. The complainants are citizens and residents of France and nephews of the deceased. On the 12th of March, 1872, the sister of the deceased, then named Kate S. Riggs, intermarried with Louis de Geofroy, of France. She was at the time a resident of the District of Columbia and a citizen of the United States. He was then and always has been a citizen of France. The complainants are the children of this marriage, and are infants now residing with their father in France. One of them was born July 14, 1873, at Pekin, in China, whilst his father was the French minister plenipotentiary to that country, and was there only as such minister. The other was born October 18, 1875, at Cannes, in France. Their mother, who was a sister of all the defendants except Medora, wife of the defendant E. Francis Riggs, died February 7, 1881. The deceased, T. Lawrason Riggs, left one brother, E. Francis Riggs, and three sisters, Alice L. Riggs, Jane A. Riggs and

138 U. S.

Cecilia Howard, surviving him, but no descendants of any deceased brother or deceased sister, except the complainants.

The defendants, with the exception of Cecilia Howard, are, and always have been, citizens of the United States and residents of the District of Columbia. Cecilia Howard, in 1867, intermarried with Henry Howard, a British subject, and since that time has resided with him in England.

The real property described in the bill of complaint cannot be divided without actual loss and injury, and the interest of the complainants, if they have any, as well as of the defendants, in the property would be promoted by its sale and a division of the proceeds.

To the bill of complaint setting up these facts and praying a sale of the premises described and a division of the proceeds among the parties to the suit according to their respective rights and interests, the defendants demurred, on the ground that the complainants were incapable of inheriting from their uncle any interest in the real estate. The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia sustained the demurrer and dismissed the bill. From the decree the case is brought to this court on appeal.

Mr. J. Hubley Ashton, for appellants:

Aliens, at the date of the Treaty of February 23, 1853, were permitted to take and hold an indefeasible title, in fee, to real estate in the District of Columbia.

Van Ness v. Hyatt, 88 U. S. 13 Pet. 298 (10: 169); Morsell v. Washington First Nat. Bank, 91 U. S. 359 (23: 436); 1 Dorsey, Laws of Md. 158; Buchanan v. Deshon, 1 Harr. & G. 291; Chirac v. Chirac, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 269 (4: 286); Spratt v. Spratt, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 343 (7: 171), 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 393 (7: 897).

All international treaties are to be equitably, and not technically, construed.

Phillimore, Int. Law, chap. 8, p. 79; Shanks v. Dupont, 28 U. S. 3 Pet. 249 (7: 666); U. S. v. Arredondo, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 710 (8: 554); Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 487 (25: 629); The Choctaw Nation v. U. S. 119 U. S. 28 (30: 815); Fairfax v. Hunter, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 627 (8: 461).

The Treaty includes and applies to the District of Columbia.

Jost v. Jost, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 487; Hepburn v. Elzey, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 452 (2: 385); Re Bryant, Deady, 118.

Treaties are to be interpreted according to the law of nations.

Drummond's Case, 2 Knapp, P. C. Rep. 295.

The intention of the law-maker constitutes the law, and what is implied in a statute is as much part of it as what is expressed.

U. S. v. Babbitt, 66 U. S. 1 Black, 61 (17: 96); Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Horst, 98 U. S. 301 (23: 901); Platt v. Union Pac. R. Co. 99 U. S. 60 (25: 428); Oates v. Montgomery First Nat. Bk. 100 U. S. 244 (25: 532); Postmaster-Gen. v. Early, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 148 (6: 582); Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 134 (24: 87); King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 395 (27: 60); Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 617 (22: 437); U. S. v. Tynen, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 88 (20: 153); Bartlett v. King, 12 Mass. 183 U. S.

546; U. S. v. Freeman, 44 U. S. 3 How. 565, (11: 738.)

Mr. John Selden, for appellees:

The Convention between the United States and France of 1800 expired by its own limitation eight years afterwards.

Chirac v. Chirac, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 272, 277 (4: 287, 288); Carneal v. Banks, 22 U. S. 10 Wheat. 182, 189 (6: 297, 299); Buchanan v. Deshon, 1 Harr. & G. 290, 291.

Neither the District of Columbia, nor a Territory of the United States, falls within the definition of a State, as that term is employed in the Constitution, or in the Acts of Congress.

Hepburn v. Elzey, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 445 (2: 332); Corporation of New Orleans v. Winter, 14 U. S. 1 Wheat. 94 (4: 45); Barney v. Baltimore, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 287 (18: 827).

This District was not embraced in the words "States of the American Union," as used in the Convention concluded between the United States and the Swiss Confederation, on November 25, 1850.

Jost v. Jost, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 487.

Whether the United States could by treaty alter the rules of inheritance within the several States of the Union was considered a question of great magnitude for some years after the conclusion of the Consular Convention of 1858.

Frederickson v. Louisiana, 64 U. S. 28 How. 448 (16: 578).

The Treaty is expressly limited to the States of the Union whose laws permit it.

Prevost v. Greneaux, 60 U. S. 19 How. 7 (15: 574).

Two clauses cannot be inverted, for the purpose of creating a meaning for them.

Doe v. Considine, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 458 (18: 869).

By the common law, as the same was transplanted into Maryland, the alien was excluded from the acquisition of land by descent.

Buchanan v. Deshon, 1 Harr. & G. 289; Guyer v. Smith, 22 Md. 247.

The Act of Maryland of December 19, 1791, does not remove the disability, arising from common-law principles, of an alien to inherit lands lying in this District, from a citizen thereof.

Spratt v. Spratt, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 343 (7: 171), 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 393 (7: 897); Jost v. Jost, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 493.

A later statute which does not expressly repeal previous legislation upon the subject does not supersede such legislation unless the new statute embraces the entire field covered by the former, or manifests a plain intention to furnish a new and exclusive system upon the subject.

U. S. v. Tynen, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 92 (20: 154); Henderson's Tobacco, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 657 (20: 237); Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 617 (22: 438); King v. Cornell, 106 U. S. 396 (27: 60); Red Rock v. Henry, 106 U. S. 601, 602 (27: 258); Cook County v. U. S. Nat. Bank, 107 U. S. 451 (27: 539); Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 538 (27: 428).

Repeals by implication are not to be favored.

Arthur v. Homer, 96 U. S. 140 (24: 812); Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 570 (27: 1035); Cheo Heong v. U. S. 112 U. S. 549, 550 (28: 778, 774); U. S. v. Langston, 118 U. S. 898 (80: 165); Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. U. S., 127 U. S. 409 (82: 182).

Even in penal enactments, the intention of the Legislature is to be collected from the words they employ.

U. S. v. Wiltberger, 18 U. S. 5 Wheat. 95 (5: 42); The Emily and Caroline, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 888 (6: 117); American Fur Co. v. U. S. 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 387 (7: 453); U. S. v. Morris, 39 U. S. 14 Pet. 475 (10: 548); U. S. v. Hartwell, 78 U. S. 6 Wall. 396 (18: 832).

No statute is to be construed as altering the common law, further than its words import.

Shaw v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 565 (25: 894); McCool v. Smith, 66 U. S. 1 Black. 470 (17: 221); U. S. v. Herron, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 263 (22: 279); McCreery v. Somerville, 22 U. S. 9 Wheat. 354 (6: 109); Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 835 (6: 648).

A lien upon land is a vested right of property, which no subsequent law of the State can defeat or destroy.

Gunn v. Barry, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 622 (21: 214); Royal Ins. Co. v. Stinson, 103 U. S. 80 (26: 477).

What is an acquisition by inheritance, as distinguished from an acquisition by purchase, must depend upon the local law.

Jost v. Jost, 1 Mackey (D. C.) 491; Barnitz v. Casey, 11 U. S. 7 Cranch, 464 (8: 406); Brown v. Maryland, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 488 (6: 685); Morgan v. Louisiana, 118 U. S. 464 (80: 241).

The duty of the Judicial Department is to execute the law, not to make it.

Doe v. Considine, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 490 (18: 876); Spratt v. Spratt, 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 408 (7: 902).

Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court:

The complainants are both citizens of France. The fact that one of them was born in Peking, China, does not change his citizenship. His father was a Frenchman, and by the law of France a child of a Frenchman, though born in a foreign country, retains the citizenship of his father. In this case, also, his father was engaged, at the time of the son's birth, in the diplomatic service of France, being its minister plenipotentiary to China, and by public law the children of ambassadors and ministers accredited to another country retain the citizenship of their father.

The question presented for solution, therefore, is whether the complainants, being citizens and residents of France, inherit an interest in the real estate in the District of Columbia of which their uncle, a citizen of the United States and a resident of the District, died seised. In more general terms the question is, Can citizens of France take land in the District of Columbia by descent from citizens of the United States?

The complainants contend that they inherit an estate in the property described, by force of the stipulation of article VII. of the Convention between the United States and France, concluded February 23, 1853, and the provisions of the Act of Congress of March 3, 1887, to restrict the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens. Before considering the effect of this article and of the Act of 1887, a brief reference will be had to the laws of Maryland in force on the 27th of February, 1801, which were on that day declared by Act of Congress to be in force in the District of Columbia. The language of the Act is "that the laws of the State of Maryland as they now exist shall be and continue in force in that part of the said District which was ceded by that State to the United States, and by them accepted." (2 Stat. 103.)

A part of these laws was the common law, and two Acts of Maryland, one passed in March, 1780, "to declare and ascertain the privileges of the subjects of France" within that State; the other, passed December 19, 1791, to ratify her cession to the United States, entitled "An Act Concerning the Territory of Columbia and the City of Washington." The common law, unmodified by statute or treaty, would have excluded aliens from inheriting lands in the United States from a citizen thereof. Its doctrine is that aliens have no inheritable blood through which a title can be transferred by operation of law. The Act of Maryland of 1780 modified that law so far as to allow a subject of France who had settled in that State, and given assurances of allegiance and attachment to it as required of citizens, to devise to French subjects, who for that purpose were to be deemed citizens of the State. (Dorsey's Laws of Md. 158.)

It also provided that if the decedent died intestate his natural kindred, whether residing in France or elsewhere, should inherit his real estate in like manner as if such decedent and his kindred were citizens of the United States. It had no bearing, however, upon the inheritance of a subject of France, except from a Frenchman domiciled in the State. The Act of Maryland of December 19, 1791, which provided in its sixth section that any foreigner might, by deed or will thereafter made, take and hold lands within the State in the same manner as if he were a citizen thereof, and that the lands might be conveyed by him, and transmitted to and inherited by his heirs and relations as if he and they were citizens of the State, did not do away with the disability of foreigners to take real property within that State by inheritance from a citizen of the United States. It was so held in effect in Spratt v. Spratt, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 848 [7: 171], and 29 U. S. 4 Pet. 398 [7: 897].

On the 30th of September, 1800, a Convention of Peace, Commerce and Navigation was concluded between France and the United States, the 7th article of which provided that "the citizens and inhabitants of the United States shall be at liberty to dispose by testament, donation or otherwise, of their goods, movable and immovable, holden in the territory of the French Republic in Europe, and the citizens of the French Republic shall have the same liberty with regard to goods, movable and immovable, holden in the territory of the United States, in favor of such persons as they shall think proper. The citizens and inhabitants of either of the two countries, who shall be heirs of goods, movable or immovable, in the other, shall be able to succeed ab intestato, without being obliged to obtain letters of naturalization, and without having the effect of this provision contested or impeded under any pretext whatever." (8 Stat. 182.)

This article, by its terms, suspended, during the existence of the Treaty, the provisions of the common law of Maryland and of the Statutes of that State of 1780 and of 1791, so far as they prevented citizens of France from taking by inheritance from citizens of the United States, property, real or personal, situated therein.

That the treaty power of the United States extends to all proper subjects of negotiation between our government and the governments of other nations, is clear. It is also clear that the protection which should be afforded to the citizens of one country owning property in another, and the manner in which that property may be transferred, devised or inherited, are fitting subjects for such negotiation and of regulation by mutual stipulations between the two countries. As commercial intercourse increases between different countries the residence of citizens of one country within the territory of the other naturally follows, and the removal of their disability from alienage to hold, transfer and inherit property in such cases tends to promote amicable relations. Such removal has been within the present century the frequent subject of treaty arrangement. The treaty power, as expressed in the Constitution, is in terms unlimited except by those restraints which are found in that instrument against the action of the government or of its departments, and those arising from the nature of the government itself and of that of the States. It would not be contended that it extends so far as to authorize what the Constitution forbids, or a change in the character of the government or in that of one of the States, or a cession of any portion of the territory of the latter, without its consent. Fort Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 541 [29: 264, 270]. But with these exceptions, it is not perceived that there is any limit to the questions which can be adjusted touching any matter which is properly the subject of negotiation with a foreign country. Ware v. Hylton, 3 U. S. 8 Dall. 199 [1: 568]; Chirac v. Chirac, 15 U. S. 2 Wheat. 259 [4: 284]; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 488 [25: 628]; Droit d'Aubaine, 8 Ops. Atty-Gen. 417; People v. Gerke, 5 Cal. 381.

Article VII. of the Convention of 1800 was in force when the Act of Congress adopting the Laws of Maryland, February 27, 1801, was passed. That Law adopted and continued in force the law of Maryland as it then existed. It did not adopt the law of Maryland as it existed previous to the Treaty; for that would have been in effect to repeal the Treaty so far as the District of Columbia was affected. In adopting it as it then existed, it adopted the law with its provisions suspended during the continuance of the Treaty so far as they conflicted with it—in other words, the Treaty, being part of the supreme law of the land, controlled the statute and common law of Maryland whenever it differed from them. The Treaty expired by its own limitation in eight years, pursuant to an article inserted by the Senate. (8 Stat. 192.) During its continuance citizens of France could take property in the District of Columbia by inheritance from citizens of the United States.

188 U. S.

But after its expiration that right was limited as provided by the statute and common law of Maryland, as adopted by Congress on the 27th of February, 1801, until the Convention between the United States and France was concluded, February 23, 1853. The seventh article of that Convention is as follows:

"In all the States of the Union, whose existing laws permit it, so long and to the same extent as the said laws shall remain in force, Frenchmen shall enjoy the right of possessing personal and real property by the same title and in the same manner as the citizens of the United States. They shall be free to dispose of it as they may please, either gratuitously or for value received, by donation, testament or otherwise, just as those citizens themselves; and in no case shall they be subjected to taxes on transfer, inheritance, or any others different from those paid by the latter, or to taxes which shall not be equally imposed.

"As to the States of the Union by whose existing laws aliens are not permitted to hold real estate, the President engages to recommend to them the passage of such laws as may be necessary for the purpose of conferring this right.

"In like manner, but with the reservation of the ulterior right of establishing reciprocity in regard to possession and inheritance, the government of France accords to the citizens of the United States the same rights within its territory in respect to real and personal property, and to inheritance, as are enjoyed there by its own citizens." (10 Stat. 996.)

This article is not happily drawn. It leaves in doubt what is meant by "States of the Union." Ordinarily these terms would be held to apply to those political communities exercising various attributes of sovereignty which compose the United States, as distinguished from the organized municipalities known as Territories and the District of Columbia. And yet separate communities, with an independent local government, are often described as States, though the extent of their political sovereignty be limited by relations to a more general government or to other countries. (Halleck on Int. Law, chap. 8, §§ 5, 6, 7.) The term is used in general jurisprudence and by writers on public law as denoting organized political societies with an established government. Within this definition the District of Columbia, under the government of the United States, is as much a State as any of those political communities which compose the United States. Were there no other territory under the government of the United States, it would not be questioned that the District of Columbia would be a State within the meaning of international law; and it is not perceived that it is any less a State within that meaning because other States and other territory are also under the same government. In Hepburn v. Ellzey, 6 U. S. 2 Cranch, 445, 452 [2:333, 335], the question arose whether a resident and a citizen of the District of Columbia could sue a citizen of Virginia in the circuit court of the United States. The court, by Chief Justice Marshall, in deciding the question, conceded that the District of Columbia was a distinct political society, and therefore a State accordng to the definition of writers on general law; but held that the Act of Congress, in providing for controversies between citizens of different States in the circuit courts, referred to that term as used in the Constitution, and therefore to one of the States composing the United States. A similar concession, that the District of Columbia, being a separate political community, is, in a certain sense, a State, is made by this court in the recent case of Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia, decided at the present term. 132 U. S. 1, 9 [38: 281, 286].

645

Aside from the question in which of these significations the terms are used in the Convention of 1858, we think the construction of article VII. is free from difficulty. In some States aliens were permitted to hold real estate, but not to take by inheritance. To this right to hold real estate in some States reference is had by the words "permit it" in the first clause, and is alluded to in the second clause as not permitted in others. This will be manifest if we read the second clause before the first. This construction, as well observed by counsel, gives consistency and harmony to all the provisions of the article, and comport with its character as an agreement intended to confer reciprocal rights on the citizens of each country with respect to property held by them within the territory of the other. To construe the first clause as providing that Frenchmen shall enjoy the right of possessing personal and real property by the same title and in the same manner as citizens of the United States, in States, so long as their laws permit such enjoyment, is to give a meaning to the article by which nothing is conferred not already possessed, and leaves no adequate reason for the concession by France of rights to citizens of the United States, made in the third clause. We do not think this construction admissible. It is a rule, in construing treaties as well as laws, to give a sensible meaning to all their provisions if that be practicable. "The interpretation, therefore," says Vattel, "which would render a treaty null and inefficient cannot be admitted;" and again, "it ought to be interpreted in such a manner as that it may have its effect, and not prove vain and nugatory." (Vattel, Book II. chap. 17.) As we read the article it declares that in all the States of the Union by whose laws aliens are permitted to hold real estate, so long as such laws remain in force, Frenchman shall enjoy the right of possessing personal and real property by the same title and in the same manner as citizens of the United States. They shall be free to dispose of it as they may please—by donation, testament or otherwise—just as those citizens themselves. But as to the States by whose existing laws aliens are not permitted to hold real estate, the Treaty engages that the President shall recommend to them the passage of such laws as may be necessary for the purpose of conferring that right.

In determining the question in what sense the terms "States of the Union" are used, it is to be borne in mind that the laws of the District and of some of the Territories, existing at the time the Convention was concluded in 1858, allowed aliens to hold real estate. If, therefore, these terms are held to exclude those political communities, our government is placed in a very inconsistent position—stipulating that citizens of France shall enjoy the right of holding, disposing of and inheriting, in like manner as citizens of the United States, property, real and personal, in those States whose laws permit aliens to hold real estate; that is, that in those States citizens of France, in holding, disposing of and inheriting property, shall be free from the disability of alienage; and, in order that they may in like manner be free from such disability in those States whose existing laws do not permit aliens to hold real estate, engaging that the President shall recommend the passage of laws conferring that right; while, at the same time, refusing to citizens of France holding property in the District and in some of the Territories, where the power of the United States is in that respect unlimited, a like release from the disability of alienage, thus discriminating against them in favor of citizens of France holding property in States having similar legislation. No plausible motive can be assigned for such discrimination. A right which the government of the United States apparently desires that citizens of France should enjoy in all the States, it would hardly refuse to them in the District embracing its capital, or in any of its own territorial dependencies. By the last clause of the article the government of France accords to the citizens of the United States the same rights within its territory in respect to real and personal property and to inheritance as are enjoyed there by its own citizens. There is no limitation as to the territory of France in which the right of inheritance is conceded. And it declares that this right is given in like manner as the right is given by the government of the United States to citizens of France. To insure reciprocity in the terms of the Treaty, it would be necessary to hold that by "States of the Union" is meant all the political communities exercising legislative powers in the country, embracing not only those political communities which constitute the United States, but also those communities which constitute the political bodies known as Territories and the District of Columbia. It is a general principle of construction with respect to treaties that they shall be liberally construed, so as to carry out the apparent intention of the parties to secure equality and reciprocity between them. As they are contracts between independent nations, in their construction words are to be taken in their ordinary meaning, as understood in the public law of nations, and not in any artificial or special sense impressed upon them by local law, unless such restricted sense is clearly intended. And it has been held by this court that where a treaty admits of two constructions, one restrictive of rights that may be claimed under it and the other favorable to them, the latter is to be preferred. Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 487 [25: 629]. The stipulation that the government of France in like manner accords to the citizens of the United States the same rights within its territory in respect to real and personal property in inheritance as are enjoyed there by its own citizens, indicates that that government considered that similar rights were extended to its citizens.

within the territory of the United States, whatever the designation given to their different political communities.

We are therefore of opinion that this is the meaning of the article in question—that there shall be reciprocity in respect to the acquisition and inheritance of property in one country by the citizens of the other; that is, in all political communities in the United States where legislation permits aliens to hold real estate, the disability of Frenchmen from alienage in disposing and inheriting property, real and personal, is removed, and the same right of disposition and inheritance of property, in France, is accorded to citizens of the United States, as is there enjoyed by its own citizens. This construction finds support in the first section of the Act of March 3, 1887. (24 Stat. 476, chap. 340.) That section declares that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons not citizens of the United States, or who have not declared their intention to become citizens, to thereafter acquire, hold or own real estate, or any interest therein, in any of the Territories of the United States or in the District of Columbia, except such as may be acquired by inheritance or in good faith in the ordinary course of justice in the collection of debts previously created. There is here a plain implication that property in the District of Columbia and in the Territories may be acquired by aliens by inheritance under existing laws; and no property could be acquired by them in the District by inheritance except by virtue of the law of Maryland as it existed when adopted by the United States during the existence of the Convention of 1800 or under the seventh article of the Convention of 1853. Our conclusion is that the complainants are entitled to take by inheritance an interest in the real property in the District of Columbia of which their uncle died seized. The decree of the court below will therefore be reversed and the cause remanded, with direction to overrule the demurrer of the defendant; and it is so ordered.

JOHN W. BURT ET AL., Appts.,
v.
ALEXANDER F. EVORY ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 349-350.)

Rule for construing patent—patent for improvement in boots and shoes—no patentable invention—improvement, when patentable—improvement in degree—combining old devices—for what a patent may be granted.

NOTE.—For what patents are granted; when declared void,—see note to Evans v. Eaton, Bk. 4, p. 433.

As to patentability of inventions, see note to Thompson v. Boisselier, Bk. 20, p. 76, and to Corning v. Burden, Bk. 14, p. 633.

As to abandonment of invention, see note to Penock v. Dialogue, Bk. 7, p. 327.

As to distinction between inventions of mechanism, articles or products, and processes; when latter patented,—see note to Corning v. Burden, Bk. 14, p. 633.

As to including process and product in same patent; separate patents therefor,—see note to Evans v. Eaton, Bk. 4, p. 433.

183 U. S.

1. In construing a patent, it is necessary to consider the state of the art when the application for it was made.
2. The claim in the patent No. 59,375, issued to Evory and Heston Nov. 6, 1866, for an "improvement in boots and shoes," is for a manufactured article, and not for a mode of producing it; as such, there is no patentable device or function in their shoe.
3. There is no patentable invention in the patent; it is merely a carrying forward of the original idea of the earlier patents on the same subject,—a change in form and arrangement of the constituent parts of the shoe, or an improvement in degree only.
4. Every improvement in an article is not patentable. The test is that the improvement must be the product of an original conception.
5. A mere carrying forward or more extended application of an original idea—a mere improvement in degree—is not invention.
6. Neither is it invention to combine old devices into a new article without producing any new mode of operation.
7. A person, to be entitled to a patent, must have invented or discovered some new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or some new and useful improvement thereof; and it is not enough that a thing shall be new, in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been before known, and that it shall be useful, but it must amount to an invention or discovery.

[No. 164.]

Argued Dec. 16, 1889. Decided Feb. 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts, in favor of plaintiffs, for damages for the amount of royalty found due by the master for infringement of letters-patent No. 59,375, issued to Evory and Heston, Nov. 6, 1866, for an improvement in boots and shoes. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George D. Noyes, for appellants:

The practice of maintaining bills nominally for injunction and account, but really for the purpose of compelling payment of license fees, has been condemned and virtually overruled by this court.

Eureka Co. v. Bailey Co. 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 488 (20: 209); Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 205 (26: 981); Sanders v. Logan 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 168.

The right to profits depends on the right to an injunction.

Parker v. Winnipisaukee Lake C. & W. Co. 67 U. S. 2 Black, 545 (17: 838); New York Guaranty Co. v. Memphis Water Co. 107 U. S. 205 (27: 484); Wright v. Ellison, 68 U. S. 1 Wall. 16 (17: 555).

As to what re-issue may cover, see note to O'Reilly v. Morse, Bk. 14, p. 601.

As to assignment, before issuing and reissuing patent; recording, when assignment transfers extended terms,—see note to Gayler v. Wilder, Bk. 13, p. 504.

As to when assignee may sue for infringement; when patentee must; when they must join,—see note to Wilson v. Rousseau, Bk. 11, p. 1141.

As to damages for infringement of patent; treble damages,—see note to Hogg v. Emerson, Bk. 13, p. 824.

As to notes given for patent-rights; purchaser before maturity,—see note to Mandeville v. Welch, Bk. 5, p. 87.

647

The law does not recognize a right of the patentee either to compensation or to profits when he has not lost anything and when the infringer has not made a profit.

Rude v. Westcott, 180 U. S. 152 (82: 888).

A court of equity is governed by the same evidence of damages as is a court of law.

Parks v. Booth, 102 U. S. 96 (26: 54); Philp v. Nock, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 460 (21: 679); Tees v. Huntingdon, 64 U. S. 28 How. 2 (16: 479); Whitney v. Emmett, 1 Baldw. 303.

This court has affirmed decrees for nominal damages, but the matter does not appear to have been brought to the attention of the court.

Garretson v. Clark, 111 U. S. 120 (28: 871); Black v. Thorne, 111 U. S. 122 (28: 872); Rude v. Westcott, 180 U. S. 152 (82: 888).

The statute does not authorize a recovery of a defendant's profits.

Whitney v. Emmett, 1 Baldw. 303; Hogg v. Emerson, 52 U. S. 11 How. 587 (13: 824); Seymour v. McCormick, 57 U. S. 16 How. 480 (14: 1024); Root v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 105 U. S. 205 (26: 981); Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136 (31: 664).

The statute was intended to supply the obvious defect in equity jurisdiction illustrated in Livingston v. Woodworth, 56 U. S. 15 How. 546 (14: 809); or Dean v. Mason, 61 U. S. 20 How. 198 (15: 876); Whittemore v. Cutter, 1 Gall. 478; Silsby v. Foote, 61 U. S. 20 How. 378 (15: 953); Littlefield v. Perry, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 205 (22: 577); Birdsall v. Coolidge, 98 U. S. 64 (23: 802).

In the absence of all other evidence, the law presumes a nominal damage.

Whitney v. Emmett, 1 Baldw. 303; Seymour v. McCormick, 57 U. S. 16 How. 480 (14: 1024); Birdsall v. Coolidge, 98 U. S. 64 (23: 802); New York v. Ransom, 64 U. S. 23 How. 487 (16: 515).

Mr. Frederick H. Betts, for appellees:

The changes introduced by the plaintiff, apparently slight in themselves, are yet important as adapting the shoes to a proper fulfillment of their uses, and hence are properly deserving of protection.

Emerson v. Howe, 8 Fed. Rep. 327; Treadwell v. Parrott, 5 Blatchf. 369, 873.

The grant of royalties in a number of instances, in which the license fees were paid, is sufficient to justify recovery against an infringing defendant.

Burdell v. Denig, 92 U. S. 716-720 (23: 764-766); Sanders v. Logan, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 167-170; Livingston v. Jones, 2 Fish. Pat. Cas. 207-210; Judson v. Bradford, 16 Pat. Off. Gaz. 171-174; Clark v. Wooster, 119 U. S. 322-326 (30: 392, 393).

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts, by Alexander F. Evory, Alonzo Heston and J. B. Belcher against John W. Burt and Fred Packard, composing the firm of Burt & Packard, for the alleged infringement of letters-patent No. 59,375, issued to said Evory and Heston, November 6, 1866, for an "improvement in boots and shoes."

The bill, filed December 9, 1880, alleged the issue of said letters-patent to the plaintiffs Evory and Heston; the assignment of a one-half interest therein to the plaintiff Belcher; the granting of an exclusive license to the National Rubber Company to manufacture rubber goods containing the invention patented; and the infringement by the defendants, which was said to consist in their having made and sold shoes and gaiters constructed in accordance with the specification and drawings contained in letters-patent No. 205,129, granted to the defendant Packard June 18, 1878, and also other shoes and gaiters, all of which contained the invention in the plaintiffs' patent. The bill prayed an injunction, an accounting and damages.

The defenses pleaded in the answer were non-infringement; an anticipation of the plaintiffs' invention by certain English patents dated in 1856 and 1860, respectively; and want of novelty in the invention, because, long prior to the issue of plaintiffs' patent, one Jacob O. Patten of Philadelphia had manufactured and sold shoes constructed on the same plan as described in that patent. Issue was joined, proofs were taken, and on the 3d of February, 1883, the circuit court entered a decree sustaining the plaintiffs' patent, and adjudging that there had been an infringement of it by the defendants; and accordingly referred the case to a master for an account of profits, and for the determination of damages, if any, by reason of such infringement. Evory v. Burt, 15 Fed. Rep. 112. October 18, 1884, the master filed his report, in which he found that the defendants had made and sold 41,297 pairs of shoes which infringed the plaintiffs' patent, but that, as they made no difference in price between shoes containing the invention of the plaintiffs and those without it, they therefore made no profit from such infringement; that Belcher was the only one of the plaintiffs who was engaged in making or selling shoes, and, as he made and sold less than 1,000 shoes containing the invention in the patent, he was not damaged by reason of defendants' infringement; but that, as the evidence showed that the plaintiffs had an established royalty of three cents a pair, for shoes made under that patent, and had issued licenses and sold stamps to persons desiring to use their patent, the licensees paying such royalty, the defendants should pay the plaintiffs that royalty on the number of shoes made by them containing the infringing device, to wit, 41,297 pairs, that is, the sum of three cents a pair, or $1,238.91. Exceptions were filed to this report, but they were overruled by the court, and on the 29th of January, 1886, a final decree was entered confirming it and assessing damages in the sum of $1,238.91, that being the amount of the royalty found due by the master. An appeal from that decree brings the case here.

The material parts of the specification of the plaintiffs' patent and the drawings are as follows: "Our said invention consists in a novel mode of constructing shoes and gaiters, whereby the ordinary elastic goring at the sides and the tedious lacing up at the front are both dispensed with, while at the same time the tops will expand to receive the foot, and fit neatly and closely around the ankle when the shoe is on, being also water-tight to the extreme top of the shoe. . . . Figure 1 represents a side elevation of our invention; Fig. 2 a plan or top view of the same; and Figs. 3 and 4 represent detached views or patterns of the several parts.

Similar letters of reference in the several figures indicate like parts of our invention. A represents the front of the shoe, and has attached to its rear edge a, as shown, a gore flap (marked D). B represents the back of the shoe, and has attached to its front edge b, as shown, a corresponding gore flap (marked C). The front and back are sewed together at those parts of their contiguous edges marked a' and b', and the flap C is arranged upon the flap D, bringing their corresponding edges c and d upon each other, which are then sewed together, the two flaps thus arranged forming a double extension gore upon each side of the shoe, which readily expands to admit the foot, and which may then be folded forward over the instep, and be secured by a buckle or knot, or by a suitable lacing, as desired. . . . We do not claim, broadly, for an extension-gore flap inserted in the ankle of gaiter shoes, for this is fully covered by the broad claim of Samuel Babbitt's patent, issued March 7, 1885, to which our patent will be subject; but our mode of construction is an improvement upon that, and all the other modes since patented, in the following particulars, viz: first, it requires less stock in its construction, and is therefore cheaper than those in which the gore is inserted in the heel; second, it is neater in appearance, and, being adjustable to the ankle, it may be fitted even where there is a variation in the size of the shoe, thus rendering it more available in the construction of shoes for sale at wholesale; third, it avoids the wrinkle in the heel in Babbitt's construction of shoes, which, being exposed to the friction of the leg of the pantaloons, soon wears into a hole; fourth, by giving expansion forward to the vamp in front of the ankle it admits of the more easy introduction of the foot, and allows a neater fit than is attainable when the gore is in the heel. What we do claim as our invention, and desire to secure by letters-patent, is—a shoe when constructed with an expansion-gore flap, C D, the external fold, C, of which is attached to and in front of the quarter, B, and the internal fold, D, of which is attached to and in rear of the vamp, A, the said several parts and pieces being respectively constructed and the whole arranged for use substantially in the manner and for the purpose set forth."

In construing this patent the court below followed the decision of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Connecticut (Judge Shipman) in Evory v. Candee, 2 Fed. Rep. 542, and seemed to assume that no question was presented here touching its validity. After referring to the fact that the patent had been held valid in Evory v. Candee, supra, the court said: "Its validity is not now assailed, unless a wide construction is given to the claim; and this, as is most usual, is the difficult point."

The assignments of error are seven in number; but in the view we take of the case it is necessary to examine only the first three of them, which are, that the court erred (1) in holding that the patent is valid; (2) in holding that, in view of the antecedent state of the art, the patent had been infringed by the defendants; and (3) in construing the patent.

These assignments may be properly considered together. In construing the patent it will be necessary to consider the state of the art when the application for it was made. The object sought to be accomplished was to make improvements upon ordinary shoes so that they would be water tight and would exclude dirt. It is shown by the record that long prior to the time when the application for the patent was made there had been a number of efforts made in the direction of accomplishing the same result. As early as 1856, Stephen Norris, of England, received a patent there for "improvements in the manufacture of boots and shoes and other coverings for the human feet;" and in 1860, Norris and Robert Rogers obtained another patent in England relating to the same subject matter, and intended to be an improvement upon the invention in the prior patent. These patents were broad in their claims, and were intended to cover any device by which boots and shoes could be made water-tight by means of the cut of the various pieces composing them. Various designs were adopted and used by the patentees in those patents for the manufactured article to which the patents related.

In his specification to the patent of 1856, Norris says: "My improvements consist in adapting to boots, shoes and other coverings for the human feet, gussets of novel and improved construction, in combination with ordinary fastenings, for the purpose of enabling boots, etc., to be readily adapted and secured to and detached from the feet, and at the same time preserved water-tight at such parts when necessary. The following are a few examples of the mode of adapting my said improvements to certain descriptions of boots, shoes and other coverings for the human feet. First, as regards ladies' boots, I propose to employ side gussets of cloth or leather, so combined with elastic material as that the said gussets shall always be preserved flat, instead of wrinkling or overlapping, as heretofore. Another mode is to secure folding side gussets and fastenings, composed either by interlacing into two rows of hooks strips of elastic or eyelets. The openings for the gussets I propose to make at each side of the boot, and to extend it from the top in an ornamental direction, either towards the toe of the boot or the sole thereof, or towards the heel. And as regards gentlemen's boots and other similar coverings, I propose, in manufacturing boots known and distinguished as Bluchers, to form the side seams thereof, or close the 'fore' and 'back' parts, somewhat after the manner of Wellington boots, so as to resemble the same when on the feet, and to enable Blucher boots to be more readily put on and taken off than heretofore, by employing the aforesaid gussets in combination with boots of the above description. In order to explain my said invention as completely as possible, I now proceed to describe the best means I am acquainted with for carrying the same into practical effect, reference being had to the illustrative drawings hereunto annexed, and to the numeral figures and letters of reference marked thereon respectively, as follows." Then follows the description of the drawings relating to the patent, and, in conclusion, the specification says: "I would remark that the principal points to be attended to in these improvements are to have the gussets the proper size, and to connect them to the front and back parts of the boot, or to the back part only thereof, by sewing and stabbing, or other known means, so that they may, when necessary, be rendered water-proof; and this applies more particularly to men's boots. And as regards the fastenings for securing the boots on the feet, I employ any of the known means for that purpose." And again he says: "I hereby declare that I claim as my invention: firstly, the modes above particularly described, set forth, and represented at figures 1, 2, 3, 4, 10, 11, 12, 13, 18, 19, of sheet 1, of manufacturing Blucher boots, and more particularly the cutting of the back part of such boots in the manner exhibited at figures 5, 6, 15, 16, 18, for the purpose set forth; secondly, the inserting of the gusset at the back part of the boot, as at figure 14; and lastly, as regards the boots exhibited at the several other figures of the drawings, I claim the adapting thereto of two gussets, as above described."

In the patent of 1860 some minor changes were made, in the shape of several of the parts composing the boot or shoe, but the object of the invention remained the same, namely, to make the boots and shoes to which it related water-tight and capable of excluding dirt, etc.

An examination of the drawings accompanying the applications for those patents shows that several of their shoes differ very little, if any, in their essential features from those manufactured under the Evory and Heston patent. The shoes under the English patent, as do those under the Evory and Heston patent, consist of quarters, the vamp, and a folding gusset or gore flap uniting the vamp and the quarters. It is contended on behalf of the appellees, and the testimony of their expert, Mr. Brevoort, is to the same effect, that the material point of difference between their shoe and the Norris shoe is, that in the latter the gusset or gore flap folds in such a manner that it lies within the shoe proper next to the foot, while in their shoe the gore or gusset folds outside of the shoe, thus rendering their shoe more comfortable to the foot and more easily worn than the English shoe. But we do not think it can be safely averred that the specifications and drawings of the English patents require the gore or gusset to be folded so that it will lie inside of the vamp, next to the foot. It is true that Norris does not say in so many words that the folds of the gore will lie wholly outside of the shoe proper; but neither does he say that they shall lie wholly within the shoe. We think a fair construction of Norris' patents leaves the question of where the folds of the gussets of his shoes shall lie within the discretion of the manufacturer of them, who, if he be a skillful mechanic, will be enabled to so arrange the gores or gussets that they will accomplish their object without interfering with the comfort of the wearer of them.

On the 7th of March, 1865, Samuel Babbit of Kokomo, Indiana, obtained a patent, No. 46,622, for an "improvement in gaiter boots." In his specification Babbit says: "The object of this invention is to dispense with the use of the ordinary gore or elastic webbing in the manufacture of gaiter boots, and at the same time so construct the shoe as that the purposes of such webbing shall be subserved. To this end the invention consists in forming that part of the shoe which covers the ankle with an extension which enlarges the opening to such a degree as to permit the foot to be readily inserted, and which, after the shoe is on the foot, is folded and buckled or fastened against the ankle after the manner of a flap; and this shoe is made without the formation of a joint and is perfectly water-tight." Babbit's shoe had the quarters extended at the heel about one half the width of the shoe at the ankle, thus enlarging the opening in the top of the shoe through which the foot is inserted to an extent commensurate with such extension. When the shoe was on the foot those elongated quarters were folded against the side of the shoe and buttoned to it, and the shoe was thus rendered water-tight clear to the top.

Another patent, No. 49,076, for the same sort of an invention, was granted to David Brown and William S. Wooton, of Kokomo, Indiana, on the 1st of August, 1865. That invention is thus described in the specification: "The present invention consists in attaching to the back portion of the boot or shoe in which a vertical slit or opening has been made a folding flap or piece of sufficient size and shape that, when the boot or shoe is put on the foot, it can be folded or passed entirely around the instep, and there fastened by buckling, buttoning or in any other proper manner, said flap being connected therewith by means of two wings or sectional pieces, each fastened by sewing, or in any other suitable way, at one edge to one side of opening or slit in the boot or shoe and at the other to the inner surface of the folding flap, and which wings, when the folding flap has been buttoned, as described, lie and are held between it and the exterior surface of the boot or shoe upper." The advantages claimed for the Brown and Wooton patent were the ease with which the shoe could be put on and taken off, the absence of eyelet holes or any kind of apertures communicating with the interior of the shoe, and the peculiar construction and arrangement of the flap, whereby the counter of the shoe was prevented from being broken down.

Such was the state of the art when Evory and Heston made their application for the patent in suit. Let us now carefully examine the Evory and Heston patent to see what patentable improvements are embraced by it. In the first part of the specification it would seem that they were seeking a patent for a mode of constructing a shoe, for they say: "Our said invention consists in a novel mode of constructing shoes and gaiters," etc. And in another part of their specification they say: "Our mode of construction is an improvement upon" the Babbitt patent, etc. But the concluding part of their specification would seem to negative the idea that they were claiming a patent for a mode of construction, and not for a manufactured article; for they say: "What we do claim as our invention and desire to secure by letters-patent is a shoe when constructed with an expansion-gore flap," etc. In the brief of counsel for appellees it is conceded that the patent is for a shoe, and not for a mode of constructing it. Counsel says, after quoting the concluding paragraph of the specification: "This is a claim for a shoe having on each side an expansion-gore flap," etc.

We think, therefore, the claim in this case must be regarded as being for a manufactured article, and not for a mode of producing it. This being true, it is difficult to see any patentable device or function in the Evory and Heston shoe. It is a mere aggregation of old parts with only such changes of form or arrangement as a skillful mechanic could readily devise—the natural outgrowth of the development of mechanical skill as distinguished from invention. The changes made by Evory and Heston in the construction of a water-tight shoe were changes of degree only, and did not involve any new principle. Their shoe performed no new function. In the construction of it the vamp, the quarters and the expansible gore flap were cut somewhat differently, it is true, from like parts of the shoes constructed under the earlier patents referred to, but they subserve the same purposes.

It is well settled that not every improvement in an article is patentable. The test is that the improvement must be the product of an original conception. Pearce v. Mulford, 103 U. S. 112, 118 [26: 98, 95]; Slawson v. Grand Street etc. R. Co. 107 U. S. 649 [27: 576]; Munson v. New York City, 124 U. S. 601 [31: 598], and many other cases. And a mere carrying forward or more extended application of an original idea—a mere improvement in degree—is not invention. In Smith v. Nichols, 88 U. S. 21 Wall. 112, 118, 119 [22: 566, 567], Mr. Justice Strong, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "A patentable invention is a mental result. It must be new and shown to be of practical utility. Everything within the domain of the conception belongs to him who conceived it. The machine, process or product is but its material reflex and embodiment. A new idea may be ingrafted upon an old invention, be distinct from the conception which preceded it, and be an improvement. In such case it is patentable. The prior patentee cannot use it without the consent of the improver, and the latter cannot use the original invention without the consent of the former. But a mere carrying forward or new or more extended application of the original thought, a change only in form, proportions or degree, the substitution of equivalents, doing substantially the same thing in the same way, by substantially the same means, with better results, is not such invention as will sustain a patent. These rules apply alike, whether what preceded was covered by a patent or rested only in public knowledge and use. In neither case can there be an invasion of such domain and an appropriation of anything found there. In one case everything belongs to the prior patentee; in the other, to the public at large."

188 U. S.

Neither is it invention to combine old devices into a new article without producing any new mode of operation. Stimpson v. Woodman, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 117 [19: 866]; Heald v. Rice, 104 U. S. 737 [26: 910]; Hall v. Macneale, 107 U. S. 90 [27: 867].

In the recent case of Hill v. Wooster, decided January 13th of this year [ante, 502], it is said: "This court, however, has repeatedly held that, under the Constitution and the Acts of Congress, a person, to be entitled to a patent, must have invented or discovered some new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or some new and useful improvement thereof, and that it is not enough that a thing shall be new, in the sense that in the shape or form in which it is produced it shall not have been before known, and that it shall be useful, but it must, under the Constitution and the Statute, amount to an invention or discovery," citing a long list of authorities.

We are of the opinion that the patent in suit does not meet the requirements of the rules deduced from the decisions to which we have referred. We do not think there is any patentable invention in it; but, on the contrary, that it is merely a carrying forward of the original idea of the earlier patents on the same subject—simply a change in form and arrangement of the constituent parts of the shoe, or an improvement in degree only.

For these reasons the decree of the court below is reversed, with a direction to dismiss the bill.

JAMES COYNE, Plff. in Err.,

v.

THE UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 870-874.)

Master and servant—injury to servant by the falling of a rail while loading—boss hurrying

NOTE.—Liability of master to servant.

Following are the principal recent American decisions upon the subject:

That a negligent manner of loading cars is customary with railroads is not an excuse which will relieve a company from liability to a servant for injuries received in consequence of such negligence. Hosie v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 668.

That a car by which a brakeman was killed while coupling it with another was improperly loaded by men and swearing at them—failure of duty on part of boss—keeping out of way of construction train—assumption of risk.

1. One employed by a railway company as a laborer or construction hand, under a construction boss or foreman, cannot recover of the company for injuries received by him through the negligence of his fellow servants in allowing a rail to drop which he and they were loading on a car, whereby his leg and foot were broken and crushed.
2. Where the method of loading the rail, by lifting it and walking with it to the car, halting, dressing, and then in concert lifting the rail at the word of command of the boss and throwing it on the floor of a flat car, is shown to be a proper and safe method of loading the rails, if, in the course of such loading, the injury to the plaintiff occurred, no negligence can be complained of.
3. The facts that the boss hurried the men and used oaths, whereby they became confused and failed to act in concert, do not show negligence on his part, nor excuse their negligence. The use of oaths and imprecations by the boss is not an element of negligence.
4. That, after the men had lifted the rail which produced the injury and had carried it forward to the car and were there holding it awaiting the word of command from the boss to lift it further and throw it on the car, the boss failed to give the word of command in such way as to produce concert of action in the men, but, on the contrary, ordered them to get the rail on the car in any way they could, does not authorize a recovery.

reason of the fact that lumber projected over the end so as to interfere with the space necessary for coupling, or that the conductor knew that the car was improperly loaded, does not show willful neglect; but to constitute such neglect it must appear that the conductor, or other person in charge of the train, knew, or by the use of ordinary care could have known, that the car was so improperly loaded as to imperil the life of the servant or employé. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brice, 84 Ky. 298.

The loading of a car with lumber protruding longitudinally over its ends, and so enhancing the danger of coupling, is not per se negligence. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Gower, 85 Tenn. 465.

In the absence of any rules requiring section men to guard against irregular trains, or of any care to notify them of the approach of such a train, proof of the death of a section man while going with a hand-car on a special order, by a collision with a wild train, creates a prima facie case of negligence on the part of the company. Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Lang, 118 Ind. 579.

Where men are rightfully at work on a trestle over which a railroad is operated, with the knowledge of the officers and persons operating the road, who know that the men are thereby placed in great danger, it is the duty of the company to operate and run its trains with care proportionate to the danger; and if it does not do so it is guilty of culpable negligence. Interstate C. R. T. R. Co. v. Fox, 41 Kan. 715.

Fellow servants and their negligence.

In order to constitute persons fellow servants, it is necessary that they shall be, at the time, directly co-operating with each other in the business in hand, or that their usual duties shall bring them into habitual consociation, so that they may exercise an influence upon each other promotive of proper caution. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Kelly, 127

5. The necessity of keeping the construction train out of the way of the freight train was one of the risks of the employment.

6. Where the work of construction and repair must be done in the intervals between the running of regular trains, and this fact is known to the employé who is employed to do such work, he assumes the risk of doing it at the times at which it has to be done.

[No. 8.]

Argued Jan. 23, 24, 1890. Decided March 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward L. Johnson and E. T. Wells, for plaintiff in error:

The negligence on the part of McCormick was negligence on the part of the Railroad Company, whose vice-principal he was.

Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Lundstrom, 16 Neb. 254, 259; Cleveland etc. R. Co. v. Keary, 8 Ohio St. 201, 211.

Plaintiff and McCormick were not fellow servants, but McCormick was a vice-principal for whose negligence the defendant Company is responsible.

Cunard Steamship Co. v. Carey, 119 U. S. 245 (30: 354); Moon v. Richmond & A. R. Co., 78 Va. 745, 749, 750; McDermott v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 87 Mo. 285, 294; Burlington &

Ill. 687; Fort Hill Stone Co. v. Orm, 84 Ky. 188; Kroeg v. Atlanta & W. P. R. Co., 77 Ga. 202.

In Tennessee, where servants of the same master are engaged in different departments of a common service, or one is the superior of another in the same department, either temporarily or permanently, they are not fellow servants. East Tenn. V. & G. R. Co. v. DeArmond, 86 Tenn. 73.

An employé cannot look to his employer for an injury resulting from the negligence of a co-employé. Hoffman v. Clough, 124 Pa. 505; Anderson v. Bennett, 16 Or. 515; Brodeur v. Valley Falls Co., 16 R. I.—; Anderson v. Sowle Elevator Co., 37 Minn. 530; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Blohn, 73 Tex. 637, 4 L. R. A. 764; Casey v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 84 Ky. 79.

The rule as to fellow servants has no application where the injury was occasioned by exposing the employé to risks not within his contract of employment. Jones v. Old Dominion Cotton Mills, 82 Va. 140.

In order to recover damages from an employer for injuries sustained through the negligence or incompetency of a co-employé, it must be shown that the employer failed to exercise proper care in his selection. Pilkinton v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co., 70 Tex. 226; Keith v. Walker Iron & Coal Co., 81 Ga. 49; Stephens v. Doe, 73 Cal. 26.

The foreman of a gang of section or track men, engaged in the discharge of his ordinary duties in the course of his employment, is a fellow servant with them. Olson v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co., 38 Minn. 117.

A "gang boss" in the car-shops of a railroad company is a mere fellow servant of a member of the "gang," where, although he has immediate control of the work, he is under the general control of the master mechanic. McBride v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Wyo.) 21 Pac. Rep. 687.

A brakeman on the forward end of a freight train which is uncoupled or broken in two, leaving the conductor on the rear end, although, under the

M. R. Co. v. Crockett, 19 Neb. 188, 145; Mason v. Edison Machine Works, 28 Fed. Rep. 228; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. May, 108 Ill. 293; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Hawk, 10 West. Rep. 137, 121 Ill. 259; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Perego, 86 Kan. 424.

Mr. John F. Dillon, for defendant in error:

One who enters the service of another takes upon himself the ordinary risks of the negligent acts of his fellow servants in the course of his employment.

Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 647 (29: 755, 758); Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 383 (28: 787, 789); Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 483 (27: 1005); Bartonskill Coal Co. v. Reid, 3 Macq. 266, 282; Wilson v. Merry, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 326.

The master's obligations which the law has created are:

1. The exercise of reasonable care to furnish suitable machinery and appliances to carry on the business for which he employs the servant.

Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213 (25: 612); Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642 (29: 755); Cunard Steamship Co. v. Carey, 119 U. S. 245 (30: 354).

2. The exercise of like care in not subjecting the servant to risk of injury from unskillful, drunken, habitually negligent or otherwise unfit fellow servants.

Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454 (27: 605).

rules of the company, the right to command thereupon devolves upon the engineer, is a fellow servant of the latter until the engineer avails himself of his right to take charge of the train, and does take charge, and assumes to direct and control the movements of the brakeman; and where, acting without directions from the engineer, but in performance of his duty, under the rules of the company, the brakeman goes to the rear end of his fragment of the train, to act as lookout and give signals to the engineer, and by the latter's negligence in suddenly jerking the train is thrown off and injured, he cannot recover. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Martin, 3 L. R. A. 282, 87 Tenn. 398.

The negligence of a station agent whose duty it is to inspect loaded cars, in permitting a car to go into a train improperly loaded, in consequence of which an employé of the company is injured, does not give to the latter any right of action against the company, as the negligence is that of a fellow servant. Byrnes v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co. 4 L. R. A. 151, 113 N. Y. 251.

Laborers at work on a railroad in transporting dirt on a small truck to the cars a short distance, alternately acting as brakeman, are in the same grade of employment; and one who is injured by the neglect of another cannot recover from the company, although the negligent laborer was, at the time, acting as brakeman and the injured laborer was not. Casey v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ky. 79.

Although asleep upon a side track, in a car provided for that purpose, the foreman of a bridge gang, who is liable to be called at any moment to go out with his gang upon the road, is on duty so far as to be at the time a fellow servant with the men operating a freight train whose negligence causes his injury. St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Welch, 72 Tex. 296, 2 L. R. A. 839.

A station agent, with authority to employ and discharge hands on duty at the station, is a fellow servant of a brakeman on a freight train, so as to 188 U. S.

3. The exercise of care, when the master employs a youthful and inexperienced servant, to see that he is not employed in any more hazardous position than that for which he was employed, and to give him such warning of his danger as his youth and inexperience demand.

Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 553 (21: 739); Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 483 (27: 1005).

Often one person acts in two capacities, namely, as the representative of the master to perform certain duties, and also as a servant engaged in a common employment with the other servants.

Ford v. Fitchburg R. Co. 110 Mass. 241; Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 650, 658 (29: 759, 760); Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 219 (25: 615).

For the negligence of McCormick, if any there be, the Railway Company is not responsible.

Whart. Neg. § 283, and cases.

A vice-principal is one to whom the employer commits the entire or general charge of his business.

Murphy v. Smith, 19 C. B. N. S. 361; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 889, 390 (28: 792); Brick v. Rochester, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 98 N. Y. 211.

The negligence of a fellow servant or co-employé, acting as such, will not authorize a recovery in any case, although the fellow serv-prevent a recovery by the latter for negligence in allowing a car of lumber which had been loaded by a shipper to be put into the train with lumber projecting over the end so as to be dangerous. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Farmer, 73 Tex. 85.

A section foreman whose duties require him to be on and about the track, to keep it in proper condition for running trains over it, where he is liable to be injured by passing trains, is a fellow servant with the conductor of a freight train, so as to prevent any recovery for injuries received by him in consequence of the conductor's negligence. Elliot v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 383, 5 Dak. 523.

A railroad company is not responsible to its section or track men for the negligence of the engineer or brakeman of a train, they being fellow servants. Connelly v. Minneapolis E. R. Co. 88 Minn. 80.

The brakeman of a freight train, and the conductor and other employés of a passenger train of the same railroad company, are fellow servants; and an action for damages for the death of such brakeman, caused by the negligence of such conductor and other employés, is not maintainable against the railroad company. McMaster v. Illinois C. R. Co. 85 Miss. 264.

A railroad company is responsible for injuries inflicted upon a brakeman on its train through the negligence of the conductor thereof. Ayers v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 84 Va. 679; Johnson v. Richmond & A. R. Co. 84 Va. 713.

A roadmaster is a fellow servant with the engineer and conductor of a train upon which he rides in obedience to directions and in the performance of his duties, and cannot, in the absence of an allegation or proof of want of care in their selection, recover damages against the company for injuries caused by their negligence. Gulf, W. T. & P. R. Co. v. Ryan, 69 Tex. 665.

A locomotive engineer is a fellow servant of his fireman, so that the latter cannot recover from the ant or co-employé may be a superior officer, an agent or a foreman; but if the superior agent is charged with the performance of the master's duty, then, in so far as that duty is concerned, his acts and his negligence are the acts and the negligence of the master, and not simply those of a co-employé or fellow servant.

Krueger v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 9 West. Rep. 249, 111 Ind. 51; Copper v. Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. 103 Ind. 305; Atlas Engine Works v. Randall, 100 Ind. 298; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Collarn, 73 Ind. 261-273; Mitchell v. Robinson, 80 Ind. 281; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 219 (25: 615); Mullan v. Phila. & S. M. Steamship Co. 78 Pa. 25; Gunter v. Graniteville Mfg. Co. 18 S. C. 262; Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516; Flike v. Boston & A. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 549; Corcoran v. Holbrook, 59 N. Y. 517; McCooker v. Long Island R. Co. 84 N. Y. 77; Brothers v. Carter, 52 Mo. 872; Tierney v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 33 Minn. 311; Towne v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 87 La. Ann. 630.

The power of direction and control or superiority, entirely disconnected from any duty of a master delegated to the servant, does not render the person possessing this power a fellow servant with those who work under his direction.

Pollock, Torts, 88; Whart. Neg. § 229; Wood, Ry. Law, 1497; 2 Thomp. Neg. 1026, company for injuries resulting from the former's negligence. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Blohn, 73 Tex. 637, 4 L. R. A. 764.

An engineer in charge of the train of a railroad company is the superior, not the fellow servant, of a brakeman on the same train acting under his orders. East Tennessee & W. N. C. R. Co. v. Collins, 85 Tenn. 227.

A laborer employed by a railroad company to remove snow and other obstructions from its track, and under the immediate control of a roadmaster, is a fellow servant with a trackwalker and a conductor in consequence of whose negligence he is killed, and no recovery therefore can be had against the company for his death. Fagundes v. Central Pac. R. Co. 79 Cal. 97, 3 L. R. A. 824.

A yard-inspector of cars and a yard-foreman are fellow servants. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Rice, 51 Ark. 467, 4 L. R. A. 173.

In Tennessee a telegraph operator at a way station, who has no control or of connection with the running of railway trains, except as a medium through which orders from the superintendent's office are communicated to servants of the company in charge of its trains, is not the fellow servant of a train conductor. The operator is the conductor's superior, as an aid or helper to the superintendent of trains. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. De Armond, 86 Tenn. 73.

The conductor and engineer of a "wild train" are not fellow servants of a laborer on a gravel train, who is injured by a collision due to their negligence. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. O'Brien (Wash. Ter.) 21 Pac. Rep. 82.

An engineer is not a fellow servant with an "overhauler of cars." Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Norment, 84 Va. 167.

A car inspector in the employment of a railroad company, upon whom is enjoined the duty of inspecting the company's cars, is not a co-employé of a brakeman or of a conductor who is, in the line of his service, discharging the duties of a brakeman. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. McMullen, 117 Ind. 439.

654

1028; Beach, Contr. Neg. 109; Loughlin v. State, 7 Cent. Rep. 70, 105 N. Y. 159.

A command to hurry does not excuse negligence on the part of the servant to whom the command is addressed.

Taylor v. Carey Mfg. Co. 1 New Eng. Rep. 210, 140 Mass. 150.

It was not error in the court below to direct the jury to render a verdict for the defendant.

Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 482 (27: 1005).

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

James Coyne brought an action in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Colorado, against the Union Pacific Railway Company, to recover damages for a personal injury. After issue joined, the case was tried by a jury. The court instructed the jury to find the issues for the defendant, to which instruction the plaintiff excepted. The jury rendered a verdict for the defendant, and the plaintiff has brought a writ of error.

The bill of exceptions sets forth that the plaintiff gave evidence tending to show the following facts: On and before the 18th of May, 1882, the plaintiff was in the employ of the defendant as a laborer or construction hand, under one McCormick, construction boss or foreman of the defendant. McCormick had

A person employed in a car-shop of a railroad company is a fellow servant with those in charge of a train, by whose negligence he is injured. Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co. 73 Iowa, 140.

A track-walker over a section of a railroad is not a fellow servant with those in charge of a train by which he is struck and killed. Sullivan v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 97 Mo. 113.

Track repairers are not fellow servants with a railroad brakeman. Torian v. Richmond & A. R. Co. 84 Va. 192.

A telegraph operator is not the fellow servant of a brakeman. Hall v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 39 Fed. Rep. 18.

Where a workman on a railroad grade was injured by the falling of a trestle upon which he was working, it was held that all the workmen on the grade, consisting of team-drivers drawing dump cars, and men unloading them, and the foreman assisting the man injured to work on the trestle, were all fellow servants. Lindvall v. Woods (Minn.) 4 L. R. A. 793.

Men employed at a hopper at the foot of a hill to unload cars and crush stone taken from a quarry situated on the side of the hill, and moved by trucks to a turntable, from which it is carried by an inclined railway to such hopper, are fellow servants of those at the turntable, although one of the latter was charged with the special duty of attaching a cable to the loaded car and paid an extra price therefor, and the owner of the quarry is not liable for the death of one of them, caused by the negligence of someone at the turntable in shoving off the car before the cable was attached. Fort Hill Stone Co. v. Orm, 84 Ky. 183.

As to responsibility of master to servant for carelessness and competency of co-servants, see note to Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniel, Bk. 27, p. 605.

As to who are co-employés or co-servants, within the rule that a master is not responsible for injuries to a servant occasioned by the negligence of a co-servant, see note to Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. Bk. 25, p. 612.

authority to control and direct, and compel obedience of, the plaintiff, and also, in his discretion, to discharge the plaintiff or any other servant of the defendant working under his direction and control. While employed by the orders of McCormick, the plaintiff, with the other servants and section men of the defendant, went upon its construction train, which was under the control and direction of McCormick, to a place between two stations on its railroad, known respectively as Byers' and River Bend, about two miles east from Byers' station, and at such place the plaintiff and the other servants were commanded by McCormick to load upon a certain flat car in the construction train about forty steel rails, which were then lying near the track of the railroad. The plaintiff and the other employees of the defendant proceeded to load the rails on the flat car, as directed by McCormick, and under his orders, he directing the labor of the plaintiff and the other servants. Each of the rails was from 24 to 29 feet long, and weighed from 400 to 600 pounds. To lift one of them, the labors of about ten men were required; and the plaintiff and the other servants under the command of McCormick were divided into two gangs, of ten or more men each. In loading the rails, each of the gangs was required and directed by McCormick to act in concert, and to lay hold of and lift the rail, and walk with it to the flat car, and there halt, dress, and, at the word of command given by McCormick, lift the rail, and cast it, with one motion, on the floor of the flat car. By reason of the length and great weight of the rails, it was necessary, in loading them upon flat cars, that, in order to avoid injury to the workmen engaged, care, deliberation and concert of action should be observed, and that some person should give the word of command in each of the several stages of progress in loading them, and particularly at the point when the rail was to be thrown upon the car. Prior to the injury complained of, McCormick had controlled and directed the men in loading the rails, and the plaintiff supposed that, in loading the last rail, the one which hurt him, the same course would be pursued by McCormick. Neither at such place nor nearer than Byers' Station was there any siding or switch. When all but three or four of the rails were loaded upon the flat car, the regular freight train of the defendant appeared rapidly approaching from the east. McCormick thereupon, with violent oaths and imprecations, urged the plaintiff and the other men of the party to make haste and complete the loading of the rails, so that he might move the construction train back to Byers' Station and out of the way of the freight train. By reason of the great haste so commanded by McCormick, and the confusion resulting therefrom, the plaintiff, who had before been, and then was, working and lifting at the end of the rail seized by the gang to which he belonged, was crowded off from that rail. McCormick, who was then, as before, standing on the flat car, commanded the plaintiff, with oaths and violent language, to lay hold of the other rail and not to stand idle. Thereupon the plaintiff, in obedience to the commands of McCormick, rushed to and seized upon the rail being lifted by the other gang of men and moved forward to the flat car. While the plaintiff and the other men so holding that rail were awaiting the word of command to lift it, McCormick, with further oaths, imprecations and harsh and violent commands, ordered the party to get the rail on in any way they could, not giving to them any word of command. Thereupon, the party, hurried and agitated by the oaths, imprecations and violent commands of McCormick, lifted without concert, some at one moment and some at another, and threw the rail at one end with force and at the other end with less force, so that it struck the side of the flat car at one end and fell backwards. The plaintiff, seeing that it was about to fall, endeavored to retreat out of the way of it, but was unable to avoid it, and it fell on him, bore him down, and broke and crushed his foot and leg. He had been in the service of the defendant only about seven days. At the time of his going with McCormick to the place of loading the rails, the time at which the freight train of the defendant would approach that place was well known to McCormick and was unknown to the plaintiff. The freight train was overdue at Byers' Station at the time the construction train left that station, and McCormick knew the fact of its being so overdue, and knew that the freight train was then coming towards Byers' Station from the east; and the plaintiff knew nothing about the freight train. The injury so occasioned to the plaintiff was probably due and owing to the haste and confusion occasioned by the oaths, violent commands and injunctions to make haste given by McCormick.

The only question to be considered in the case is whether it was proper for the court to instruct the jury to find for the defendant, or whether the case should have been left to the jury.

We are of opinion that it was proper to direct a verdict for the defendant. On the facts set forth, the injury to the plaintiff was not caused by any negligence on the part of McCormick. It is alleged that McCormick, knowing of the approach of the regular freight train, moved out his train in the face of it; but that does not show any negligence, for it does not appear that the approaching freight train was so near as to render it unsafe for McCormick to start the construction train. Whatever the distance away of the freight train, it would properly be called an approaching train; and it is very plain that the work of construction and repair must be done in the intervals between the running of regular trains. This latter fact was known as well to the plaintiff as to McCormick, and the plaintiff, being employed to do construction work with a construction train, must be held to have assumed the risk of doing it at the times at which it had to be done. The fact that all of the rails save three or four had been loaded at the time shows that there was no negligence in undertaking to load the rails upon the construction train at the time they were loaded. The negligence on the part of McCormick, if there was any, could have been only as to the manner of loading the particular rail whose fall injured the plaintiff.

It is clearly to be deduced from the evidence that the method described, of lifting the rail, walking with it to the car, halting, dressing, and then, acting in concert, lifting the rail, at the word of command given by McCormick, and throwing it upon the floor of the flat car, was a proper and safe method of loading the rails, and that if, in the course of such action, the injury to the plaintiff had happened, no negligence could have been complained of. The negligence alleged consists in the fact that, after the men had lifted the rail in question and had carried it forward to the car and were there holding it, awaiting the word of command from McCormick to lift it further and throw it on the car, McCormick failed to give the word of command in such a way as to produce concert of action in the men, but, on the contrary, ordered them to get the rail on the car in any way they could. The fact that McCormick hurried the men does not show any negligence on his part, or excuse any negligence on theirs. The necessity of keeping the construction train out of the way of the freight train was one of the risks of the employment. The use of oaths and imprecations by McCormick was not an element of negligence. The fact that McCormick urged the men, to hasten, even if, as a consequence, the plaintiff and his fellow workmen became confused and failed to act in concert, cannot be regarded as a fault or negligence in McCormick. Whatever negligence there was, was the negligence either of the plaintiff himself or of his fellow servants who with him had hold of the rail.

These views being conclusive in favor of the defendant, it is unnecessary to consider the broader grounds urged in support of the judgment below.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer concurs in the judgment.

THE QUEBEC STEAMSHIP COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
BARBARA MERCHANT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 375-379.)

Fellow servants, who are—employer's liability—negligence—stewardess of steamship—assump-

NOTE.—Master and servant; fellow servants, who are; master's liability for negligence.

Among the more recent American decisions reported are the following:

A second hand or second foreman under the regular foreman of the machine-shop department of a cotton factory, who takes his orders from his immediate foreman or the general superintendent, is a fellow servant with the overseer of the slashing and dressing room, in the upper part of the factory. Brodeur v. Valley Falls Co. 16 R. I. —.

In working with a derrick the foreman and his assistants are fellow servants, and the master is not responsible to any one of them for the negligence of any other in the use of the materials and implements which the master has supplied. McKinnon v. Norcross, 3 L. R. A. 320, 148 Mass. 533.

A painter upon a new house, who uses a scaffold erected by carpenters in building the house, is a fellow servant with the carpenter. Hoar v. Merritt, 62 Mich. 386.

A grain-trimmer employed by a contractor to work in trimming a cargo of grain on a steamship is not a fellow servant with a mate and seaman of tion of risks—question of fact—jurisdictional amount—amount of judgment—interest.

1. The porter and the carpenter of a steamship are fellow servants with the stewardess of the ship.
2. An employer is exempt from liability for injuries to a servant caused by another servant.
3. The employer is liable when his own negligence contributes to the injury, or when the other servant occupies such a relation to the injured party, or to his employment, in the course of which his injury was received, as to make the negligence of such servant the negligence of the employer.
4. Where the stewardess of a steamship was injured by falling overboard, through the negligence of the porter and carpenter of the ship in omitting to properly fasten the rods composing the railing of the gang-way for passengers, she cannot recover of the Steamship Company for such injuries.
5. The stewardess took upon herself the natural and ordinary risks incident to the performance of her duty, and among such risks was the negligence of the porter and the carpenter, or of either of them, in the course of the common employment of the three.
6. The court left it as a question for the jury to determine if they found that negligence existed, whether the injury was occasioned by the careless act of a servant not employed in the same department with the plaintiff. This ruling held to be erroneous.
7. Where the judgment below was for the amount of the verdict and interest, which together, as entered in the judgment, amount to over $5,000, this court has jurisdiction, although the verdict does not exceed that sum.
8. The test as to the jurisdiction of this court, in a case like the present, is the amount of the judgment below, even though, without the interest included in it, the amount, exclusive of costs, would not be over $5,000.

[No. 30.]

Argued Jan. 24, 1890. Decided March 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment for the plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal in-the ship, through whose negligence he is injured. Crawford v. The Wells City, 38 Fed. Rep. 47.

The chief manager of charcoal works, who works at charging the retorts, etc., with no direct charge over the machinery, but with the right to repair it, and with the duty to see whether it is out of repair, but with no authority to buy, alter or change machinery, is a fellow servant with a man employed in such works. Yates v. McCullough Iron Co. 69 Md. 370.

A second mate superintending the work of reeling in a hawser is a fellow servant with a seaman turning the reel on board ship. The Egyptian Monarch, 36 Fed. Rep. 773.

A servant in a shop who has repaired a chain used in raising locomotive driving wheels, and another servant who, in so using the chain, is injured by its breaking at the link which had been repaired, are fellow servants. Rogers Locomotive & N. Works v. Hand, 13 Cent. Rep. 236, 50 N. J. L. 464.

Where the superintendent of repairs to a ship directed assistants to be sent up from the hold to open a hatchway on the main deck, and the hatch fell through the opening, injuring another workman under it, in the hold, the master was not liable juries against a Steamship Company. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William Allen Butler and Wilhelmus Mynderse, for plaintiff in error:

An employer is exempt from liability for injuries to a servant caused by the negligence of a fellow servant.

Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213 (25: 612); Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377 (28: 787); Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 189 (30: 1114); Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Mares, 123 U. S. 710 (31: 296); Priestley v. Toule, 3 Mees. & W. 1; Hutchinson v. York, N. & B. R. Co. 5 Exch. 343; Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. 1 McMull. L. 385; Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 9; Coon v. Syracuse & U. R. Co. 6 Barb. 231, 5 N. Y. 492; Flike v. Boston & A. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 549.

One who enters the service of another for the performance of specified duties takes upon himself the natural and ordinary risks incident to the performance of such duties, and among these risks are the carelessness and negligence of fellow servants in the course of the common employment.

Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 49; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213 (25: 612); Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fbrt, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 553 (21: 739).

The accident causing the injuries which the plaintiff sustained were not only due, solely, to the negligence of her fellow servants, but the negligence itself was one of the incidental risks of her employment.

Quinn v. New Jersey Lighterage Co. 23 Blatchf. 209; Hudson v. Ocean Steamship Co. 12 Cent. Rep. 644, 110 N. Y. 625.

The ship's carpenter and the ship's porter were fellow servants of the plaintiff.

2 Parsons, Shipping and Ad. 49; The Jane and Mutilda, 1 Hagg. Adm. 187; U. S. Rev. Stat. § § 4511, 4512.

Where the negligence is that of a fellow servant not occupying a position which makes him the representative of the employer as to the servant injured, and the employer has fulfilled his duty, the employer is exempt from liability.

Hickey v. Tnaaffe, 7 Cent. Rep. 72, 105 N. Y. 26; Anthony v. Leeret, 7 Cent. Rep. 698, 105 N. Y. 591; Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516; Cahill v. Hilton, 9 Cent. Rep. 255, 106 N. Y. 512; Brick v. Rochester, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 98 N. Y. 211; Powers v. N. Y. L. E. & W. R. Co. 98 N. Y. 274; Mackin v. Boston & A. R. Co. 135 Mass. 201; Hodgkins v. Eastern R. Co. 119 Mass. 419; Webber v. Piper, 109 N. Y. 496.

In order that two workmen should be fellow servants it is not necessary that both should be engaged in performing the same or similar acts.

Buckley v. Gould & C. Silver Min. Co. 14 Fed. Rep. 833, cases cited, and note pp. 840, 841, 846; Holden v. Fitchburg R. Co. 129 Mass. 268; Lehigh Valley Coal Co. v. Jones, 86 Pa. 432; The Harold, 21 Fed. Rep. 428; Armour v. Hahn, 111 U. S. 518 (28: 440); The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. Rep. 390; Whart. Neg. § 231; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Murphy, 53 Ill. 336; Morgan v. Vale of Neath R. Co. L. R. 1 Q. B. 149; Garrahy v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 258; Howard v. Denver & Rio Grande R. Co. 26 Fed. Rep. 837; Mealman v. Union Pac. R. Co. 87 Fed. Rep. 189.

There is not any difference in the grade of service performed by the several classes or departments of the service on the ship.

Henry v. Staten Island R. Co. 81 N. Y. 373; Smith v. Potter, 46 Mich. 258; Kidwell v. Houston R. Co. 3 Woods, 813; Vallee v. Ohio & M. R. Co.

for the injuries. Hussey v. Coger, 3 L. R. A. 559, 112 N. Y. 614.

The engineer in charge of an engine operating a machine for sawing, whose duties include that of keeping the machinery in good condition, and repairing it when broken or defective, is a fellow servant with another engaged in operating the saw. Teleman v. Moeller, 73 Iowa, 108.

An employé having ridden in a freight elevator to the highest floor in the building, cannot recover against his employer for injuries received, due to the carelessness of the engineer in starting the elevator in the wrong direction. Stringham v. Stewart, 1 L. R. A. 433, 111 N. Y. 188.

The fact that an employé has authority from the master to discharge his fellow servants does not alone constitute him more than a fellow servant himself. Webb v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 97 N. C. 387.

One having the full control of another's timber yard and employing and discharging men is a vice-principal. Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 297.

A master is not responsible for mere personal negligence of a superior fellow servant causing injury to an inferior. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Lahr, 86 Tenn. 335.

It is not the rank of an employé, or his authority over other employés, but the nature of the duty or service he performs, which determines whether he is a vice-principal or a fellow servant. Lindvall v. Woods (Minn.) 4 L. R. A. 793; Kelley v. Cable Co. 7 Mont. 70; Jones v. Old Dominion Cotton Mills, 82 Va. 140.

138 U. S.

Whenever a master delegates to another the performance of a duty to a servant which rests upon himself absolutely, he is liable for the manner in which the duty is performed. Lindvall v. Woods (Minn.) 4 L. R. A. 793; Anderson v. Bennett, 16 Or. 515.

A railroad company is liable to any one of its employes operating its road for the negligence of either one of its officers or employes whose duty it is to keep the road in a reasonably safe condition, and who culpably fails to perform such duty or to give notice or warning thereof. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. v. Kier (Kan.) 21 Pac. Rep. 770.

A foreman putting up a staging is not a fellow servant of a carpenter who is injured by his negligence. Heckman v. Mackey, 36 Fed. Rep. 363.

A foreman in charge of men employed in raising a part of a railroad track is an agent of the company, and not a fellow servant of one of the men under his orders. Stephens v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 96 Mo. 207.

A company of men under the control of a foreman engaged in the business of repairing bridges, water-tanks and telegraph lines along a line of railway, in going to and from their labor on a hand-car on such railway, are under the control of such foreman; and his principal is liable for his negligence occurring in the course of his employment. Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 22 Neb. 775.

A foreman in charge of a gang of railroad laborers, with power to discharge them, subject to the approval of the supervisor, and under the duty to see that they work faithfully, is the direct repre-

657

85 Ill. 500; Kumler v. Junction R. Co. 83 Ohio St. 150; Smith v. M. & L. R. Co. 18 Fed. Rep. 304.

Mr. A. J. Dittenhoefer, for defendant in error:

As the verdict does not exceed five thousand dollars this court has no jurisdiction.

Merrill v. Petty, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 338-345 (21: 499, 500); Walker v. U. S. 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 163 (18: 319); First Nat. Bank v. Redick, 110 U. S. 224 (28: 124); Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Rogers, 93 U. S. 565 (23: 977).

The master's immunity from damages for injuries sustained by one employé through the negligence of another is limited to cases where the servants are engaged in the same department of duty, and does not extend to cases where servants are engaged in departments essentially foreign to each other.

8 Abb. Nat. Dig. 202, 203, and cases cited; Gravelle v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 10 Fed. Rep. 711, 11 Fed. Rep. 569; King v. Ohio R. Co. 14 Fed. Rep. 277; Crew v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 87; The Titan, 23 Fed. Rep. 413; Garrahy v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 258; McKenna v. The Carolina, 30 Fed. Rep. 199; Central T. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 34 Fed. Rep. 616; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 389 (23: 792); Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642 (29: 755); Cunard S. S. Co. v. Carey, 119 U. S. 245 (30: 354).

It is proper to submit to the jury, as a matter of fact, whether the plaintiff and such other servant were in the same line of employment.

Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Moore, 77 Ill. 217; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Gregory, 58 Ill. 272; Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Morganstern, 106 Ill. 216.

The English rule that all servants of the same master are fellow servants has encountered constant resistance.

representative of the railroad company, and not a fellow servant with the laborers. Criswell v. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. 30 W. Va. 798.

A mine boss who directs a ten-year-old boy to leave the work he is doing and assist in switching coal cars is not a fellow servant of such boy. Brazil Block Coal Co. v. Gaffney, 119 Ind. 455, 4 L. R. A. 860.

As to who are co-employés or co-servants, within the rule that a master is not responsible for injuries to a servant occasioned by the negligence of a co-servant, see also earlier cases in note to Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. Bk. 25, p. 612; also note to Coyne v. Union Pac. R. Co. ante, p. 651.

Machinery and appliances.

In determining the question of reasonable care on the part of the master, regard must be had to the risks and dangers attending the use of the instrumentality furnished the servant in his employment, and the obligation of the former, as respects due care, extends as well to the matter of inspection and repair as to furnishing. Anderson v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 39 Minn. 523; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Kanaley, 39 Kan. 1; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Crenshaw, 71 Tex. 340; New York & C. M. S. & Co. v. Rogers, 11 Colo. 8; Clairain v. West. U. Tel. Co. 40 La. Ann. 178; Ayers v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 84 Va. 679; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Silliphant, 70 Tex. 623; Eicheler v. Hanggi, 40 Minn. 263; Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Brooks, 84 Ala. 188; Steen v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 37 Minn. 310; Johnson v. Ashland Water

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Moranda, 93 Ill. 326.

In the following cases in the federal courts it has been determined that as matter of law the servant injured was not a fellow servant with one whose neglect caused the accident:

Common laborer engaged in unloading vessel and officer of ship,—

McKenna v. Carolina, 30 Fed. Rep. 199.

Expressman and engineer,—

Central T. Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 34 Fed. Rep. 616.

Common workman and conductor of switch-engine,—

Garrahy v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 258.

So also station agent and carpenter,—

Palmer v. Utah & N. R. Co. (Idaho) 13 Pac. Rep. 425.

Laborer in carpenter shop and engineer,—

Ryan v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 60 Ill. 171; Bain v. Athens Foundry & M. Works, 75 Ga. 718; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Moore, 83 Ky. 675-684; Stroble v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 70 Iowa, 555; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 122 Ill. 369; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. DeArmond, 86 Tenn. 78, 37 Alb. L. J. 22.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action to recover damages for personal injuries, brought by Barbara Merchant against the Quebec Steamship Company, a Canadian corporation, in the Superior Court of the City of New York, and removed by the plaintiff into the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York. The case was tried by a jury, which found a verdict for the plaintiff for $5,000, on which a judgment was entered in her favor for that amount, with $306 interest from the time of Co. 71 Wis. 558; Jones v. Old Dominion Cotton Mills, 82 Va. 140.

Where an employé undertakes a hazardous employment, he is deemed to assume the risks of the same, so far as they are open to observation or are known to him. Woods v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 39 Minn. 435; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Lee, 84 Va. 642; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Sims, 80 Ga. 749; Smith v. Sellars, 40 La. Ann. 527; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Cottrell, 83 Va. 512; Jenney Electric Light & P. Co. v. Murphy, 115 Ind. 566, 15 West. Rep. 507; Melzer v. Peninsular Car Co. (Mich.) 42 N. W. Rep. 1073; Minty v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Minn.) 4 L. R. A. 408; Campbell v. Lunsford, 83 Ala. 512; Berger v. St. Paul R. Co. 39 Minn. 78; Nelling v. Industrial Mfg. Co. 73 Ga. 260.

The risk of danger from dangerous machinery is not assumed by an employé unless he knows the danger or it is so obviously evident that he will be presumed to have known it. Scanlon v. Boston & A. R. Co. 7 New Eng. Rep. 141, 147 Mass. 484; Louisville R. Co. v. Wright, 15 West. Rep. 320, 115 Ind. 304.

A switchman assumes the hazard of an unblocked frog of a switch which he uses, when he accepts the service and continues therein. Appel v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 111 N. Y. 550; Wolson v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 37 Minn. 828; Goff v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 26 Fed. Rep. 299; Buckley v. Gutta Percha & R. Mfg. Co. 118 N. Y. 540.

A man who enters upon employment in a tannery, where he walks backwards, dragging hides from vats to a wash-wheel, on a slippery floor, across a rendering the verdict to the time of entering judgment, and $60.25 costs,—in all $5,366.25.

The plaintiff was the stewardess of the steamship Bermuda, a vessel belonging to the defendant, and one of a line of vessels plying between the City of New York and the West Indies. She has been employed on the vessel for about eighteen months. It was her duty as stewardess to attend to the ladies' rooms in the cabin, and, in the course of that duty, to empty slops, as to which her orders were to throw them over the side of the vessel. The cabin was on deck. A railing extended around the vessel, and consisted of four horizontal iron rods, which were supported, at intervals of about 4½ feet, by stanchions. In this railing there were openings or gangways, for receiving and discharging freight and passengers. Three of the gangways were for passengers. One of them faced one of the doors of the cabin which open on the deck. In order to use these openings or gangways, the four iron rods which formed the railing of the gangway, instead of being fixed immovably to the stanchions, were each of them fastened at one end to a stanchion by a ring or eyelet in which the rod could swing, the other end of each rod being formed into a hook which went into an eye fastened on another stanchion to receive it. This was a proper construction of the railing at the gangway.

On the 28th of December, 1883, the vessel was at anchor from a mile-and-a-half to two miles off the shore of the Island of Trinidad, one of the islands at which she stopped in her trips. Some passengers from New York were to land at Trinidad, and their baggage was put off through the gangway on the starboard side aft into a boat from the shore. To do this, the four rods composing the railing in the gangway were raised, and the gangway was opened.

After the baggage had been discharged, the carpenter and the porter of the vessel undertook, according to the testimony of a witness for the plaintiff, to replace the rods in their proper position. He says that the porter, one West, "was at one stanchion, pushing forward, while the carpenter stood at the other, where the hook fitted into the eye, trying to force it into the eye. It began raining, and the carpenter and West were beginning to get wet." Thereupon the carpenter left the gangway and the porter left it soon afterwards. The rods were not placed in their proper positions, but remained so far unfastened that the hooks were not secured in the eyes. The porter testified, as a witness for the defendant, that he told the carpenter to put the rods in, and that he replied, "Wait until the rain goes over." While the rods were thus unfastened, the plaintiff came out of the cabin door with a pail of slops, to throw its contents over the side of the vessel. She leaned over the railing at the gangway, the rods gave way, and she fell overboard through the opening and was seriously injured. She probably struck the edge of a small boat which was lying there, and thence fell into the water. She had been in the habit of emptying slops at this gangway, but had never noticed the hooks.

The ship's company consisted of thirty-two or thirty-three persons, divided into three classes of servants, called three departments, the deck department, the engineer's department and the steward's department. The captain, the first and second officers, the purser, the carpenter and the sailors were in the deck department. The engineers, the firemen and the coal-passers were in the engineer's department. The steward, the waiters, the cooks, the porter and the stewardess were in the steward's department. Every one on board, in-space about 16 inches wide along the edge of a vat, assumes the risk of falling into the vat. Balle v. Detroit Leather Co. (Mich.) 41 N. W. Rep. 216.

One of a bridge gang employed to make repairs of railroad bridges, assigned to the duty of pulling down an elevated water-tank, cannot recover for an accident which could not have been foreseen, at least by anyone except himself and the other members of his gang, who were his fellow servants. Easton v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 39 Fed. Rep. 65.

A boy of fourteen or fifteen years old cannot recover of his employer for injuries received in consequence of allowing his hand to be caught under a stamping machine at which he was employed, as the danger was as obvious to him as to an adult. O'Keefe v. Thorn (Pa.) 24 W. N. C. 379.

An employé who continues in his employment with knowledge of the dangerous condition of the premises where he is employed, on the employer's promise to make them safe, is entitled to recover for injuries received therefrom, if within a reasonable time for removing the defects, but not if after the expiration of such reasonable time. Stephenson v. Duncan, 73 Wis. 404; Darracott v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 83 Va. 238; Foster v. Pusey (Del.) 13 Cent. Rep. 47; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Donnelly, 70 Tex. 371; Southern Kan. R. Co. v. Crocker (Kan.) 21 Pac. Rep. 785; Weld v. Missouri P. R. Co. 39 Kan. 63.

Contributory negligence.

Although a servant be injured by the negligence of his master, yet if he could by reasonable care and prudence have averted the accident, and the injury can be traced to his own negligence as well as that of the defendant, he cannot recover. Cornwall v. Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. 97 N. C. 11; Pierce v. Atlanta Cotton Mills, 79 Ga. 782; Stewart v. Phila. W. & B. R. Co. (Del.) 17 Atl. Rep. 630; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Maloy, 77 Ga. 237; Yall v. Central Pac. R. Co. 76 Cal. 474; Trinity & S. R. Co. v. Mitchell, 72 Tex. 608; Wilson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 85 Ala. 280; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Emmert, 83 Va. 640; Piedmont Electric Illuminating Co. v. Patteson, 84 Va. 747; The Leocadia, 35 Fed. Rep. 534; Judkins v. Maine Cent. R. Co. 6 New Eng. Rep. 715, 80 Me. 417.

Where the negligence of an employé of a railway company contributes to his death, his widow cannot recover. Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Kitchens (Ga.) 9 S. E. Rep. 827.

A master is not released from liability for an injury to a servant from a defective machine, by the fact that the operator of the machine was negligent in managing it, where his negligence simply contributed to the injury caused by the master's negligence. Sherman v. Menomonee River Lumber Co. 1 L. R. A. 173, 72 Wis. 122; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Lang, 118 Ind. 379.

An employé may recover, notwithstanding his own negligence, if the employer could, by the exercise of care, have avoided the consequences of the employé's negligence. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Lee, 84 Va. 642.

As to responsibility of master to servant for carelessness and competency of co-servants, see note to Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, Bk. 27, p. 605.

cluding the plaintiff, had signed the shipping articles, and she had participated in salvage given to the vessel. The master or captain was in command of the whole vessel.

At the close of the evidence, the counsel for the defendant requested the court to direct the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, on the grounds (1) that the injury sustained by the plaintiff was one occasioned, if there was any negligence, by the negligence of a fellow servant; and (2) that, on the uncontradicted testimony, the plaintiff herself was guilty of contributory negligence, and could not recover. The court refused so to direct the jury, to which refusal the defendant excepted.

We think the court ought to have directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that the negligence was that of a fellow servant, either the porter or the carpenter. As the porter was confessedly in the same department with the stewardess, his negligence was that of a fellow servant. The contention of the plaintiff is that, as the carpenter was in the deck department and the stewardess in the steward's department, those were different departments in such a sense that the carpenter was not a fellow servant with the stewardess. But we think that, on the evidence, both the porter and the carpenter were fellow servants with the plaintiff. The carpenter had no authority over the plaintiff, nor had the porter. They and the plaintiff had all signed the shipping articles; and the division into departments was one evidently for the convenience of administration on the vessel, and did not have the effect of causing the porter and the carpenter not to be fellow servants with the stewardess.

The injuries to the plaintiff were caused solely by the negligence of one or the other of two fellow servants, who were in a common employment with her; and there was no violation or omission of duty on the part of the employer contributing to such injuries. Neither of her fellow servants stood in such relation to her or to the work done by her, and in the course of which her injuries were sustained, as to make his negligence the negligence of the employer. The case therefore falls within the well-settled rule, as to which it is unnecessary to cite cases, which exempts an employer from liability for injuries to a servant caused by another servant, and does not fall within any exception to that rule which destroys the exemption of the employer when his own negligence contributes to the injury, or when the other servant occupies such a relation to the injured party, or to his employment, in the course of which his injury was received, as to make the negligence of such servant the negligence of the employer.

The plaintiff took upon herself the natural and ordinary risks incident to the performance of her duty, and among such risks was the negligence of the porter and the carpenter, or of either of them, in the course of the common employment of the three. There was nothing in the employment or service of the carpenter or the porter which made either of them any more the representative of the defendant than the employment and service of the stewardess made her such representative. The court left it as a question for the jury to determine, if they found that negligence existed, whether the injury was occasioned by the careless act of a servant not employed in the same department with the plaintiff. This ruling was excepted to by the defendant, and we think it was erroneous.

The plaintiff takes the point that, as the verdict did not exceed $5,000, this court has no jurisdiction, although the judgment was for the amount of the verdict, with interest and costs. The statute in regard to the jurisdiction of this court provides that the matter in dispute must exceed the sum or value of five thousand dollars, exclusive of costs (Act of February 16, 1875, chap. 77, § 3, 18 Stat. 316). It is well settled that the test as to the jurisdiction of this court, in a case like the present, is the amount of the judgment below, even though without the interest included in it, the amount, exclusive of costs, would not be over $5,000. N. Y. Elevated Railroad Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 118 U. S. 608 [30: 259].

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the case is remanded to that court with a direction to award a new trial.

GUSTAVUS C. HOPKINS ET AL., Plffs.
in Err.,
v.

JOHN J. McLURE, Administrator, etc.,
ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 380-387.)

State decree, when not reviewable—decision based on independent ground.

1. Where the decree of the state court does not rest upon the State Statute in question, but upon independent grounds, it cannot be said that the decision of the state court was based upon the application of the Statute as a valid Act affecting the contract of the plaintiffs in error and impairing its obligation.
2. Where the Supreme Court of a State decides a federal question, in rendering a judgment, and also decides against the plaintiff in error on an independent ground, not involving a federal question, and broad enough to maintain the judgment, the writ of error will be dismissed without considering the federal question.

[No. 126.]

Argued Nov. 20, 1889. Decided March 3, 1890.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court of Chester County, South Carolina, that the liens of certain mortgages were exhausted and they were no longer preferred claims, and that the debts they were given to secure could only be

NOTE.—As to jurisdiction in the United States Supreme Court, where federal question arises, or where are drawn in question statutes, treaty or Constitution, see notes to Martin v. Hunter, Bk. 4, p. 97; Matthews v. Zane, Bk. 2, p. 654; Williams v. Norris, Bk. 6, p. 571.

As to jurisdiction of United States Supreme Court to declare state law void as in conflict with State Constitution; to revise decrees of state courts as to construction of state laws,—see note to Hart v. Lamphire, Bk. 7, p. 679; also note to Commercial Bank of Cincinnati v. Buckingham, Bk. 12, p. 169.

proved and take rank against the assets in the hands of the administrator according to the nature of the instrument evidencing the debt and the statute relating thereto, in an action to marshal the assets of the estate and have the real property of the deceased sold and have the creditors of the estate establish their demands.
Dismissed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 24 S. C. 559.

Mr. Wm. E. Earle for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Jno. J. Hemphill for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 9th of July, 1876, George W. Melton died, intestate and insolvent, in South Carolina, leaving surviving him his widow, Margaret A. Melton, and three infant children. John J. McLure was appointed administrator of his estate, and commenced an action in the Circuit Court of Chester County, South Carolina, in July, 1877, to marshal the assets of the estate, to have the real property of the deceased sold in aid of assets, and to have the creditors of the estate establish their demands. The creditors were called in, and numerous claims were established, among them a note under seal to R. G. Ratchford & Co., bearing date February 22, 1859; a note under seal to Dr. A. P. Wylie, bearing date May 8, 1872; a note under seal to Samuel D. Melton, bearing date February 1, 1871; a bond secured by a mortgage on real estate to one Duvall, sheriff, dated June 4, 1875, which had been transferred to one Kerr, as clerk of the court of Fairfield County, South Carolina; and a bond secured by a mortgage on real estate to Hopkins, Dwight & Co., dated May 19, 1876. The widow and the infant children, and various creditors of the deceased, were made defendants. The case was referred to a special referee, who reported that the assets of the estate could not exceed $11,000; that the amount due on the mortgage to Duvall, sheriff, was $1,087.35, and the amount due on the mortgage to Hopkins, Dwight & Co. was $30,748.44; and that there were debts on sealed notes and specialties dated prior to November 25, 1873, amounting to $7,005.04, and debts on simple contracts amounting to $36,415.98, the total of the three classes of debts being $75,256.81. The special referee reported that, after the payment of the costs, the assets were applicable first to the satisfaction of the bond and mortgage to Duvall, sheriff, and next to the bond and mortgage to Hopkins, Dwight & Co. Exceptions were filed by various creditors to the report of the referee, and the case was heard by the circuit court.

It appeared that the mortgage to Hopkins, Dwight & Co. had been foreclosed by a judicial sale of the land covered by it; that the proceeds of the sale were insufficient to pay the debt; that the debt and the mortgage were set up as a preferred claim against the general assets in the hands of the administrator; that the land covered by the mortgage held by Kerr as clerk was sold under an order of the court before Kerr became a party to the suit by proving his debt and mortgage; that, after that sale, Kerr, not having obtained its proceeds, instituted proceedings to foreclose the mortgage, obtained judgment and sold the land, but the proceeds of sale were insufficient to pay the mortgage debt; and that Kerr set up the debt as a preferred one against the general assets of the estate.

The circuit court said in its opinion that the referee held that both of these debts were preferred claims on the authority of the case of Edwards v. Sanders, 6 S. C. 316; and it discussed the question whether the mortgage debt of Hopkins, Dwight & Co. was a preferred claim after its specific lien had been exhausted, because it was a mortgage.

Section 26 of the Act of South Carolina, which became a law March 13, 1789, being Act No. 1455, entitled "An Act Directing the Manner of Granting Probates of Wills and Letters of Administration, and for Other Purposes Therein Mentioned" (Stat. at L. of S. C. 1839, vol. 5, p. 111), provided as follows: "That the debts due by any testator or intestate shall be paid by executors or administrators in the order following, viz.: funeral and other expenses of the last sickness; charges of probate of will or of the letters of administration; next, debts due to the public; next, judgments, mortgages and executions, the oldest first; next, rent; then, bonds or other obligations; and lastly, debts due on open accounts; but no preference whatever shall be given to creditors in equal degree, where there is a deficiency of assets, except in the cases of judgments, mortgages that shall be recorded, from the time of recording, and executions lodged in the sheriff's office, the oldest of which shall be first paid, or in those cases where a creditor may have a lien on any particular part of the estate."

This provision was construed by the Constitutional Court of South Carolina, in 1822, in the case of Tunno v. Hoppoldt, 2 McCord, L. 188. In that case the deceased left an outstanding "obligation or sealed instrument of mortgage and covenant" and some outstanding simple-contract debts. The question arose whether that instrument was to be ranked, in the legal order of payment under the Statute, among bond debts, or among simple-contract debts. The court said that the claim was by simple contract, that is, by a note; that the question was whether the mortgage deed could change the character of the note, or give it a preference over other simple-contract debts under the Statute; that the simple-contract debt was not changed by the mortgage; and that the deed gave a particular lien upon certain property, but its object and intent had terminated, and otherwise left the note as it stood before, still a simple contract.

In Kinard v. Young, 2 Rich. Eq. 247, in the Court of Appeals in Equity and Court of Errors of South Carolina, in 1846, it was held that, in the administration of the assets of an insolvent testator or intestate, mortgages, as mortgages, were not entitled to priority over rent, specialties and simple-contract debts, except so far as they were liens on any particular part of the estate, and that, after the lien was exhausted, the grade of the demand must be determined by the nature of the instrument which the mortgage was given to secure; the court following the decision in Tunno v. Hoppoldt.

The provision of the Act of 1789 was incorporated in 1873 in the Revised Statutes of South Carolina, as section 8 of chapter 90, p. 457, as follows: "The assets which come to the hands of an executor or administrator, after proper allowance to the executor or administrator, in a due course of administration, shall be applied to the payment of his debts in the following order, that is to say: (1) funeral and other expenses of the last sickness, charges of probate or letters of administration; (2) debts due to the public; (3) judgments, mortgages and executions—the oldest first; (4) rent; (5) bonds and debts by specialty; (6) debts by simple contract.

In 1875, the case of Edwards v. Sanders, 6 S. C. 316, was decided by the Supreme Court of the State. It was held that, under section 26 of the Act of 1789, prescribing the order in which debts of a decedent are to be paid, mortgages, whether of chattels or real estate, rank in the third class, and are entitled to payment out of the general estate in preference to specialty and simple-contract debts; that a purchaser of the mortgaged premises, by the mortgagee or his assignee, under a decree for foreclosure, does not extinguish the mortgage debt for any unsatisfied balance that may remain; and that, where the purchase is made after the death of the mortgagor, the unsatisfied balance retains its rank as a mortgage debt, with right to priority of payment out of the general estate, over specialty and simple-contract debts.

While the case of Edwards v. Sanders stood as the rule of construction, the referee in the present case held that the mortgages in question were preferred claims. Before the case came on to be heard upon exceptions to the report of the referee, the case of Piester v. Piester, 22 S. C. 139, was decided, in January, 1885, by the Supreme Court of the State, which held that, under the Act of 1789, a mortgage, as such, had no precedence in the administration of the estate of a deceased person except to the extent of its specific lien upon the property mortgaged, and that when such lien was exhausted the mortgage ranked according to the grade of the demand secured by it; thus approving the case of Kinard v. Young, and overruling that of Edwards v. Sanders. The court said: "We think that a creditor of a decedent's estate, whose claim is secured by a mortgage on particular property, has under the Act a lien upon that property: but when that is exhausted the mortgage as such is functus officio; and in further marshaling the assets the demand must rank according as it may be a simple contract or specialty." The court cited the cases of Tunno v. Happoldt and Kinard v. Young, and said that the doctrine asserted by them was regarded as the settled construction of the Act of 1789, until the case of Edwards v. Sanders. Of that case the court said that it "is not only unsustained by proper rules of construction, but is in direct opposition to the decided cases and what was at that time considered the settled law of the State." The court then referred to the Act of South Carolina, passed December 14, 1878, entitled "An Act to Alter and Amend the Law in Relation to the Payment of Debts of a Decedent" (No. 548, 16 Stat. 686), which provides: "That in the administration of the assets of a decedent, mortgages shall not be entitled to a priority over rents, debts by specialty, or debts by simple contract, except as to the particular parts of the estate affected by the liens of such mortgages. That after the property covered by the liens is exhausted, the grade of the demand shall be determined by the nature of the instrument which the mortgage was given to secure," as an Act which, although it was passed after the facts in the case then at bar arose, "only declared what had been the law of the State since the Act of 1789."

After a consideration of these cases, the circuit court reached the conclusion, in the present case, that the mortgages in question came under the operation of the decision in Piester v. Piester, and were not preferred claims as mortgages. The decree of that court was that, the lien of the mortgages having been exhausted, they were no longer preferred claims; and that the debts they were given to secure could only be proved and take rank against the assets in the hands of the administrator according to the nature of the instrument evidencing the debt, and the Statute relating thereto. Exceptions were filed to the decree and the case was heard on appeal by the Supreme Court of the State, which, in April, 1886, affirmed the decree of the circuit court. 24 S. C. 559.

The point was taken by the appellants in the Supreme Court of South Carolina, that the case of Piester v. Piester could not be applied to their cases, for the reason that so to apply it would impair the obligation of contracts or divest vested rights, because, at the time of the making of the contract of Hopkins, Dwight & Co., the law, as then declared by the case of Edwards v. Sanders, required that the balances due on the two debts should be ranked as mortgages, and as such be entitled to priority over specialty debts; and that the decision in Piester v. Piester could not divest rights which became vested at the time the intestate died, under the law as it was then declared to be.

But the supreme court said that the construction placed on the provisions of the Act of 1789 by the decision in Piester v. Piester was the same as that laid down in Tunno v. Happoldt and Kinard v. Young; that the law stood unquestioned down to the time of the decision in Edwards v. Sanders; that that decision did not seem to have been followed in a single instance; that from what was said in Piester v. Piester it would seem never to have been satisfactory to the profession; that at the first opportunity it was overruled; and that, in the meantime, the Legislature, by the Act of 1878, had shown its dissatisfaction with the construction adopted in the case of Edwards v. Sanders. On the question whether the decision in Piester v. Piester effected such a change in the law as would forbid its application to the case under consideration, because it would impair the obligation of a contract or divest rights vested under the law as declared in Edwards v. Sanders, the supreme court said that, as the proper construction of the Statute had been settled for a long series of years by decisions of both of the courts of final resort in the State, in accordance with the view declared in Piester v. Piester, it would be going very far to say that a single isolated decision, never recognized or followed in any subsequent case, and never recommending itself to the approval of the profession, should be regarded as having the effect of changing the law. "On the contrary," says the court, "whatever may be the opinions of individuals as to its correctness, it must be regarded as an erroneous declaration of what was the law, and as only the law of the particular case in which it was made."

The members of the firm of Hopkins, Dwight & Co., as successors of the former members of that firm, and the trustee of that firm and of Mrs. Melton and her infant children, have brought a writ of error to review the decree of the supreme court affirming that of the circuit court; and the defendants in error now move to dismiss the writ of error, on the ground of a want of jurisdiction in this court.

It is contended on the part of the plaintiffs in error that the decision of the court below was based upon the application of the Act of 1878 as a valid Act, affecting the contract of the plaintiffs in error and impairing its obligation. But the validity of that Statute was not drawn in question, and the supreme court did not pass upon it. The decree of that court does not rest upon that Statute, but upon independent grounds. The decision rests upon a ground broad enough to cover the entire case, without considering the Statute. It rests upon the ground that the law of South Carolina, under the Act of 1789, was such as it had always been held to be, in Tunno v. Huppoldt, Kinard v. Young and Piester v. Piester, and that the law as so declared had always been the law, and was not varied or changed by anything decided in Edwards v. Sanders. That being so, we must hold that no federal question is presented by the record.

This view is in accordance with the decisions of this court in Kreiger v. Shelby Railroad Co. 125 U. S. 39 [31: 675]; De Saussure v. Gastard, 127 U. S. 216 [32: 125], and Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554 [33: 442], the ruling in which cases is that, where the Supreme Court of a State decides a federal question, in rendering a judgment, and also decides against the plaintiff in error on an independent ground, not involving a federal question, and broad enough to maintain the judgment, the writ of error will be dismissed without considering the federal question.

The writ of error is dismissed.

THE PHOENIX CASTER COMPANY,
Appl.,
v.

AUGUSTUS SPIEGEL ET AL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 360-369.)

Patents—construction and infringement of.

1. Where a patentee has modified his claim in obedience to the requirements of the Patent Office, he cannot have for it an extended construction which has been rejected by the Patent Office.

2. In a suit on his patent, his claim must be limited, where it is a combination of parts, to a combination of all the elements which he has included in his claim as necessarily constituting that combination.
3. The Martin caster patented to him by letters-patent No. 190,152, May 1, 1877, is not infringed by the Yale caster used and sold by defendants.
4. In view of the state of the art, the words "the rocker-formed collar-bearing, or its mechanical equivalent," in the claim of the Martin patent, must be restricted to such a bearing resting on a collar beneath the floor-wheel housing, as is shown in the patent.
5. The housing in the Yale caster is not of a construction similar to that described by Martin; and there is not in the Yale caster any equivalent for such "rocker-formed collar-bearing." The housing of the Martin patent has an opening from top to bottom, while the Yale caster has no such opening.

[No. 150.]

Argued Dec. 10, 1889. Decided March 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana to review a decree dismissing a suit for an infringement of letters-patent granted to Alexander C. Martin for an improvement in furniture casters. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Opinion below, 26 Fed. Rep. 272.

Mr. Charles P. Jacobs for appellant.
(No counsel for appellees.)

Mr. Justice Blatchford delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit in equity, brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana, by the Phoenix Caster Company, an Indiana corporation, against Augustus Spiegel, Henry Frank and Frederick Thoms, to recover for the alleged infringement of letters-patent No. 190,152, granted May 1, 1877, on an application filed September 16, 1876, to Alexander C. Martin, for an "improvement in furniture casters."

The specification, claim and drawings of the patent are as follows: "This invention relates to swiveling casters, and the objects of the invention are to secure in such casters freedom from pivotal wear of carpet or floor and increased mobility in swiveling. The first object is attained by the use of two floor-wheels whose axes are coincident, in connection with devices which insure the contact of both wheels with the floor, regardless of ordinary irregularities of floor surface. The second object of the invention is a natural result of the suppression of floor friction. In the accompanying drawing, Fig. 1 is an elevation of my improved caster. Part of Fig. 1 is a vertical section. Fig. 2 is a side elevation, and Fig. 3 is a part

NOTE.—As for what patents are granted and when declared void,—see note to Evans v. Eaton, Bk. 4, p. 433.

As to patentability of invention, see note to Thompson v. Boisselier, Bk. 29, p. 76; also note to Corning v. Burden, Bk. 14, p. 693.

133 U. S.

As to abandonment of invention, see note to Pennock v. Dialogue, Bk. 7, p. 327.

As to distinction between inventions of mechanism, articles or products, and processes; when latter patented,—see note to Corning v. Burden, Bk. 14, p. 693.

As to including process and product in same patent; elevation, exhibiting the portion cut away in Fig. 1. Common casters, in swiveling, pivot upon the floor. The point of pivot motion is the point of contact between wheel and floor. Such pucker and wear carpets, and are sluggish in their swiveling action. Two rollers side by side will, in swiveling, turn in opposite directions, and it will be found that they roll upon the floor instead of pivoting, as does the single wheel; but if the floors should be irregular, as is often the case, one wheel of the pair would not touch the floor, and the two-wheeled caster would become practically a one-wheeled caster. My improvement consists in making the axis of the two wheels oscillatory with reference to the article to which the furniture caster is attached. The axis of oscillation, being at right angles to the floor-wheels' axis, allows the wheels to accommodate themselves to ordinary inequalities of floor. Referring to the drawing, A is a flange, from which depends the stem or boss C. This stem serves as a pivot for the swiveling motion, as a draft pin for the wheel-housing, and as a means of uniting the parts. The housing B furnishes bearing supports for the two floor-wheels E E and the anti-friction pivot wheel F. The latter wheel is situated centrally between and vertically above the floor-wheels. The housing swivels upon the stem in the usual manner. Were only a swiveling motion of the housing desired, its fit upon the central pivot might be close, allowing only looseness enough for the swiveling action; but the object sought by my improvement demands that the housing should have a compound motion with reference to the central pivot. It must revolve upon a vertical axis and oscillate upon a horizontal axis. This compound bearing is formed by making the housing bearing slightly elliptical and the housing collar-bearing in rocker form, as shown in Fig. 3. The rocker may be on the side of the hole nearest the anti-friction wheel or on the opposite side, and the axis of the rocker should be in line with, and a continuation of, the axis of the anti-friction wheel F, so that the anti-friction wheel may not impede the oscillating motion. By means of the relief resulting from the elliptic nature of the housing opening and the rocker-bearing, freedom for oscillation is secured without interfering with the functions of the central pivot as a bearing of rotation, draft-pin and means of union. I claim, as my invention, a furniture-caster composed of the following elements: The floor-wheels E E, the anti-friction pivot wheel F, the housing B, the elliptical housing opening or its mechanical equivalent, and the rocker-formed collar-bearing or its mechanical equivalent, all combined so as to allow the floor-wheel axis to oscillate horizontally, substantially as and for the purpose specified."

663

The answer sets up as defenses want of novelty and non-infringement. After a replication, proofs were taken on both sides. The case was heard before Judge Woods, and a decree was entered which stated that the court found that there had been no infringement of the patent, and that the bill was dismissed, with costs. From this decree the plaintiff has appealed. The opinion of the court is reported in 26 Fed. Rep. 272.

The caster used and sold by the defendants was known as "the Yale caster," and was made at New Haven, Connecticut. The opinion of the court stated that the prior art was shown by reference to numerous earlier patents, both American and English, "which, it is alleged, anticipated the Martin combination entirely, or, at least, in so far as to impose upon it a strict construction, limiting it to the particular arrangement of parts described and excluding any pretense of infringement by the defendants." The opinion then proceeds as follows: "After a painstaking consideration of the evidence and accompanying models, the opinions of the experts, and the arguments and briefs of counsel, which upon both sides have been quite exhaustive, I am compelled to the conclusion that infringement has not been shown, and consequently that the bill must be dismissed. The combination of the patent in question accomplished no new result in mechanics, and differed from previous known combinations, designed for the same and like purposes, only in the construction of one or two of the parts, whereby, perhaps, a better but certainly not a different kind of result was accomplished than had been before effected. More than this cannot be justly claimed, as it seems to me. Besides, it appears that Martin's application for a patent was rejected and withdrawn two or more times, the examiner insisting, upon certain references, 'that all applicant's novelty in entire device is only expressed by words as specified.' "In obedience to this ruling the claim, and perhaps the specification, was modified and the patent granted. It follows that the patent cannot now, by a liberal construction, be made to include anything so separate patents therefor,—see note to Evans v. Eaton, Bk. 4, p. 433.

As to what release may cover, see note to O'Reilly v. Morse, Bk. 14, p. 601.

As to assignment, before issuing and retaining patent; recording; when assignment transfers extended terms,—see note to Gayler v. Wilder, Bk. 13, p. 504.

As to when assignee may sue for infringement:

when patentee must; when they must join,—see note to Wilson v. Rousseau, Bk. 11, p. 1141.

As to damages for infringement of patent; treble damages,—see note to Hogg v. Emerson, Bk. 13, p. 824.

As to notes given for patent-rights; purchaser before maturity,—see note to Mandeville v. Welch, Bk. 5, p. 87.

denied by the Patent Office, and without this the device of the defendants cannot, I think, be said to infringe."

The claim of the patent is for a combination of the following elements: (1) the floor-wheels E E; (2) the anti-friction pivot-wheel F; (3) the housing B; (4) the elliptical housing-opening, or its mechanical equivalent; (5) the collar; (6) the rocker-formed collar-bearing, or its mechanical equivalent. All these are to be so combined as to allow the axis of the two floor-wheels to oscillate horizontally with reference to the article to which the caster is attached. The floor-wheels E E are mounted in a housing. This housing also furnishes bearing supports for an anti-friction pivot-wheel F, which latter wheel constitutes the principal bearing-surface between the floor-wheels' housing and the plate at the bottom of the piece of furniture, on which plate the anti-friction pivot-wheel travels in the swiveling movement of the caster. The collar, which is not referred to by letter in the specification, is marked D in figure 8 of the drawings. It sustains the downward pressure at the heel of the housing, which is that part most remote from the floor-wheels. The convex surface of the rocker-formed collar-bearing, which is between the heel of the housing and the collar, is formed on the housing itself. There is an elliptical opening in the housing, in which the entire caster swivels, so as to permit its lateral oscillation. No one of the six elements above mentioned can be dispensed with, without departing from the invention specified in the claim of the patent. The collar is a necessary element in the combination specified in the claim, because there cannot be a rocker-formed collar-bearing unless there be a collar.

A copy of the file-wrapper and its contents, in the matter of the patent, is found in the record. The claims in the specification originally filed were as follows:

"First. The housing B, in combination with the anti-friction wheel F, and two or more floor-wheels, E, substantially as described.

"Second. The combination of the housing B, flange A, boss C, so arranged that the axis of rotation and oscillation of the housings shall intersect below the flange A, substantially as and for the purpose specified.

"Third. The combination of the flange A, boss C and screw G, substantially as and for the purpose specified."

The application was rejected on the 27th of September, 1876, by a reference to four United States patents, the examiner saying that the invention claimed lacked apparently any element of patentable novelty, and adding that, in view of those references, "and in the absence, as far as is perceived, of any new formation or showing of patentable improvement over them," the application was rejected.

The applicant then canceled said three claims, and substituted for them the following, leaving the text of the specification to stand:

"In a furniture-caster, the combination of the above-described housing B with the anti-friction wheel F and floor-wheels E E, when the anti-friction wheel F is situated above and centrally between the floor-wheels E E, substantially as and for the purpose specified."

On the 5th of October, 1876, the Patent Office informed the applicant that it was not patentable to double the number of wheels which before existed, the examiner adding: "It would not, of course, be possible to repatent all our devices used with a single wheel to everyone who should put in two wheels instead of one."

The applicant then made amendments in his specification and drawings, and submitted his case again, with an argument, to which the Patent Office replied, on the 19th of October, 1876, that if the applicant would define, in his claim, his "housing B" as "having an elliptical opening bearing upon a point opposite to and farthest from the anti-friction wheel F," the case would pass all reference.

In reply to this, the applicant, on the 23d of October, 1876, substituted a new specification and claims for those already presented. The new claims were as follows:

"In a caster, the combination of the housing B, anti-friction wheel F and floor-wheels E E, when the anti-friction wheel is located centrally between and vertically above the floor-wheels, for the purpose and substantially as specified.

"In a caster, the combination of the flange A, stem C, housing B and floor-wheels E E, so arranged that the axis of the floor-wheels may oscillate with reference to the plane of the flange A."

On the 26th of October, 1876, the examiner wrote to the applicant as follows: "The examiner, in official letter of 19th inst., suggested all he felt that he could possibly allow, considering the state of the art. Applicant's present amended first claim could not be allowed, as it is for just what in every letter the Office has stated that it could not allow, viz.: 'adding the usual friction roller in the usual way to two wheels, also old.' This is a mere double use. The 2d amended claim could not be allowed, even were applicant the first to use two wheels, for it is not for devices, but for a result or function (never patentable), applicant claims, 'so arranged that the axis may oscillate,' etc. A dozen inventions may do this, and yet not be equivalents of applicant's arrangement of devices, to which alone he is entitled. Just as stated in letter of 19th, the examiner thinks that in granting the claim there suggested he, if anything, errs on the liberal side."

In reply, the applicant, on the 31st of October, 1876, amended his specification and claim. The following paragraph was inserted in the specification: "It is also necessary that the housing should be capable of having a compound motion upon the central pivot. It must revolve upon a vertical axis and oscillate upon a horizontal axis. This compound bearing is formed by making the housing bearing slightly elliptical and making its collar-bearing in rocker form, as shown in Fig. 8. The rocker may be on the side of the hole nearest the anti-friction wheel, or on the opposite side. By means of the described relief and rocker-bearing, freedom for oscillation is secured, without interfering with the function of the pivot as a bearing of rotation, draft-pin, and means of union." The following claim was substituted for all previous claims: "In a caster, the floor-wheels, E E, and an anti-friction wheel, F, in the relative position specified, when combined with the housing B, having its pivot bearing relieved as specified, or its mechanical equivalent, substantially as and for the purpose specified."

In reply, the examiner said, in a letter to the applicant dated November 15, 1876: "Part of applicant's claim reads as follows: 'having its pivot bearing relieved as specified, or its mechanical equivalent.' Applicant will see at once that all applicant's novelty in entire device is only expressed by words 'as specified.' This sort of claim has never been allowed, save through some error, since 1870. . . . Again, 'its mechanical equivalent' refers to no specified devices. One cannot say 'having a thing done so and so, or its mechanical equivalent.' Again, the specification says, 'One important feature of my invention is so and so,' and, 'a further improvement consists in,' etc. Applicant has one novelty only, and should be well aware that he should not still claim, in his nature of invention, the anti-friction wheel. Applicant should claim definitely his devices (which he includes in 'relieved as specified') and their equivalents, and change specification to correspond, as suggested. An appeal from the examiner is, of course, proper at any time, but he can issue no patent unless the specification and claims, fairly and without ambiguity, only cover the novel device."

The applicant then, on the 17th of November, 1876, withdrew his existing specification and claim, and substituted those which are in the patent as issued, and it was granted.

It therefore appears that, while the applicant at first claimed a combination of merely three elements, namely, the housing, the anti-friction wheel and the floor-wheels, he finally limited that combination by adding to those three elements the elliptical housing-opening, the collar and the rocker-formed collar-bearing. When the applicant presented his original application, he evidently supposed that he was the first inventor of a two-wheeled caster in which the axis of the floor-wheels could oscillate relatively to the furniture leg. In his letter of October 26, 1876, the examiner criticized the second amended claim, namely, "in a caster, the combination of the flange A, stem C, housing B and floor-wheels E E, so arranged that the axis of the floor-wheels may oscillate with reference to the plane of the flange A," as not being for devices, but for an arrangement so made that the axis of the floor-wheels could oscillate, while the applicant was entitled only to his arrangement of devices. The combination of specified elements constituting such arrangement, selected by the applicant after all the correspondence between him and the Patent Office, is contained in the claim as granted.

It is well settled that where a patentee has modified his claim in obedience to the requirements of the Patent Office, he cannot have for it an extended construction which has been rejected by the Patent Office; and that, in a suit on his patent, his claim must be limited, where it is a combination of parts, to a combination of all the elements which he has included in his claim as necessarily constituting that combination. The authorities on the subject are collected in the case of Roemer v. Peattie, 132 U. S. 313, 317 [33: 882, 883].

The defendants' caster is a two-wheeled caster, with two floor-wheels and two anti-friction wheels, one of the latter located on each side of the vertical plane of the axis of the floor-wheels, the attachment of the floor-wheel housing to the furniture-plate being through the medium of a pivot-pin which turns in the furniture-plate and is secured to the floor-wheel housing by the horizontal axis-pin of the anti-friction wheels, which axis-pin thus becomes the centre of oscillation for the caster. It is provided also with a hollow stud, formed in one piece with the furniture-plate and projecting downward therefrom, within which hollow stud the verticle swiveling-pin turns. It is wanting entirely in the collar of the Martin patent, at the bottom of the attaching stud, by which the caster-housing is secured to the furniture leg, to prevent its dropping when the furniture is lifted; and it is wanting also in Martin's "rocker-formed collar-bearing," which rests upon the collar beneath it and forms one point of the axis of oscillation. The expert for the plaintiff concedes that he does not find in the Yale caster anything that in terms might be called a rocker-formed collar-bearing, except so far as the pivot-pin, being permanent in the housing, might be said to be a part thereof.

In view of the state of the art, as shown by the various patents put in evidence, the words "the rocker-formed collar-bearing, or its mechanical equivalent," in the claim of the Martin patent, cannot embrace all modes of affording vertical support between the floor-wheel housing and the furniture-plate, whereby lateral oscillation of such housing is permitted; and those words must be restricted to such a bearing resting on a collar beneath the floor-wheel housing, as is shown in the Martin patent. The housing in the Yale caster is not of a construction similar to that described by Martin; and there is not in the Yale caster any equivalent for such "rocker-formed collar-bearing;" nor is there any collar beneath the housing on which such collar-bearing can rest. The housing of the Martin patent has an opening from top to bottom, through which the vertical swiveling-stud of the furniture-plate passes, while the Yale caster has no such opening, but only a recess or cavity in the top of the housing, an arrangement which results from the use in the Yale caster of a different mode from that of Martin, of attaching the housing to the furniture-plate, by the substitution for the Martin stud and screw, and a collar held by the screw beneath the housing, of a horizontal pin passing entirely through the swiveling pintle of the housing, which pintle is thus made to revolve with the housing, and turns in the fixed furniture-plate, the horizontal pintle of the anti-friction wheels being used for the attachment of the housing.

For these reasons we concur with the circuit court in its view that infringement has not been established.

It is to be regretted that while this case was orally argued on the part of the appellant, it was not so argued on the part of the appellees, nor have we been furnished with any brief on their part. This leads to the conclusion that, although the decree dismissing the bill states that the plaintiff claimed his appeal in open court and gave good and sufficient surety, and that the appeal was accordingly allowed, the defendants, for some reason, have not sufficient interest in the questions involved to endeavor to sustain the decree. Perhaps the case, as presented to us, is substantially a moot case; still, there is nothing to show it, and the appellant, on the record, has a right to have the questions he presents decided.

Decree affirmed.

HENRIETTA C. KELLER, Appt.,
v.

ISABELLA W. ASHFORD, Ex'rx.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 610-626.)

Act of Feb. 25, 1879—review of judgments of District of Columbia—Act of March 3, 1885—jurisdiction as to amount—record of deed—construction of deed—incumbrances—agreement in deed—assumption of mortgage in deed—principal and surety—contract in deed to assume mortgage—right of mortgagee—giving time—prior mortgage—mortgagor, when not necessary party.

1. Under the Act of February 25, 1879, the final judgment or decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in any case where the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the value of twenty-five hundred dollars, may be re-examined and reversed or affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of error or appeal.
2. The Act of March 3, 1885, only provides for appeals or writs of error thereafter allowed and does not cut off appeals taken before the passage of the Act.
3. In a suit founded upon a contract, the sum in dispute at the time of the rendition of the judgment or decree appealed from, including any interest then accrued, is the test of appellate jurisdiction.

4. The original of a deed need not be produced nor its execution proved where it has been fully recorded; and, where not produced upon notice to do so, the recorder's copy is competent and sufficient evidence.
5. The clause, in a deed of land, "subject however to certain incumbrances now resting thereon, payment of which is assumed by said party of the second part," designates and comprehends all mortgages and taxes which are incumbrances as if particularly described.
6. A person claiming title by virtue of a lien created by taxes assessed against the grantor, claims under the grantor equally with one claiming by a mortgage from him.
7. One who has accepted the benefit of a conveyance cannot repudiate the burden imposed upon him by express agreement therein, and will be liable to his grantor for any breach of that agreement.
8. In equity, as at law, the contract of the purchaser to pay the mortgage, contained in the mortgagor's deed to him, being made with the mortgagor and for his benefit only, creates no direct obligation of the purchaser to the mortgagee. The mortgagee cannot sue at law; but, in equity, he may avail himself of the right of the mortgagor against the purchaser.
9. In equity a creditor may have the benefit of any obligation or security given by the principal to the surety for the payment of the debt.
10. A mortgagee may avail himself of an agreement in a deed of conveyance from the mortgagor by which the grantee promises to pay the mortgage.
11. But such right of a mortgagee to enforce payment of the mortgage debt against the grantee of the mortgagor does not rest upon any contract of the grantee with him, or with the mortgagor for his benefit.
12. Such a mortgagee has no greater right than the mortgagor has against the grantee, and therefore cannot object to the striking out by a court of equity, or to the release by the mortgagor, of such an agreement, when inserted in the deed by mistake.

NOTE.—Assumption of payment of mortgage, in a deed; effect of; rights of the parties; conveyance subject to mortgage; principal and surety; release.

An agreement merely to take land subject to a specified incumbrance is not an agreement to assume and pay off the incumbrance. The grantee, without words in the grant importing in some form that he assumes the payment of the mortgage, does not bind himself personally. Elliott v. Sackett, 108 U. S. 132 (27: 673); Shepherd v. May, 115 U. S. 505 (29: 456).

In the absence of the mutual agreement of the grantor, grantee and holder of the incumbrance, to that effect, the relation of principal and surety does not exist between the grantee and grantor; and the latter is not discharged from his liability by an agreement between the other parties to extend the time of payment. Shepherd v. May, 115 U. S. 505 (29: 456).

Where a grantee has, by mistake, assumed the payment of a mortgage by an agreement in his deed, which is recorded, and is released from the agreement by his grantor on discovery of the mistake, a court of equity will not enforce the agreement at suit of one who has purchased the notes secured by the mortgage, in ignorance of the agreement, although the grantee has paid interest on the debt. Drury v. Hayden, 111 U. S. 223 (28: 408).

133 U. S.

Where the mortgagor of a farm gave a warranty deed for the west half thereof and received pay therefor, and the mortgage was shifted on to the east half of the farm, the subsequent grantee of that part took only the title of the mortgagor, incumbered with the whole mortgage, where he took with notice, as he was bound to know of the law of contribution. Deavitt v. Judevine, 7 New Eng. Rep. 88, 60 Vt. 686.

A covenant in a deed in which a mortgage is assumed cannot be released without the consent of the mortgagee, and such release is ineffectual. Gifford v. Corrigan (N.Y.), 6 L. R. A. 610. This principle was left undecided in Gifford v. Corrigan, 7 Cent. Rep. 277, 105 N. Y. 223.

Where a grantee of land by deed which in fact, although covenanting to pay incumbrances, was only a mortgage, quitclaimed to the grantor's wife upon her agreement to pay the incumbrances, and thereafter bought in the premises upon foreclosure of one of such incumbrances.—held, that his liability on his assumption was discharged. Garnsey v. Rogers, 47 N. Y. 238; Pardee v. Treat, 82 N. Y. 385; Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268; Wadsworth v. Lyon, 58 N. Y. 201; Cole v. Cole, 12 Cent. Rep. 924, 110 N. Y. 630.

Where a purchaser of a portion of mortgaged premises assumes and agrees to pay, as part of the 13. Such an agreement does not, without the mortgagee's assent, put the grantee and the mortgagor in the relation of principal and surety towards the mortgagee, so that the latter, by giving time to the grantee, will discharge the mortgagor.

14. Where the land has been sold under a prior mortgage for a sum insufficient to pay it, leaving nothing to be applied towards the payment of the mortgage held by the plaintiff; and the plaintiff has exhausted her remedy against the mortgagor personally, by recovering judgment against him, execution upon which has been returned unsatisfied,—the plaintiff is entitled, upon such agreement, to a decree for the mortgage debt.
15. Although the mortgagor is a proper party to the bill, yet where no objection is taken on that ground at the hearing, and the omission to make him a party cannot prejudice any interest of his, or any right of either party to the suit, it affords no ground for refusing relief.

[No. 8.]

Argued Oct. 15, 16, 1888. Decided March 3, 1890.

APPEAL from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia dismissing a suit in equity, brought by Henrietta C. Keller, the holder of a promissory note secured by mortgage on land, against Francis A. Ashford, grantee of the land subject to the mortgage, who, by the terms of the deed to him, assumed payment of incumbrances on the land, to recover the amount of the note secured by the mortgage. On motion to dismiss, as well as upon the merits. Motion to dismiss denied, decree reversed and case remanded with directions to render a decree for the plaintiff.

Opinion below, 8 Mackey, 444.

Statement by Mr. Justice Gray:

This was a bill in equity by Henrietta C. Keller, the holder of a promissory note for $2,000, made by one Thompson, secured by his mortgage of land in Washington, against Francis A. Ashford, as grantee of the land subject to this mortgage, and who by the terms of the deed to him assumed payment of incumbrances on the land. The bill prayed for a decree in the plaintiff's favor against Ashford for the amount of that note, and for general relief. The case was heard upon pleadings and proofs, by which it appeared to be as follows:

On August 17, 1875, Thompson, being seised in fee of lot 5 in square 888, in the City of Washington, conveyed it to one Rohrer, by a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage, to secure the payment of Thompson's promissory note of that date for $1,500, payable in three years with interest at ten per cent, held by one Harkness.

On February 21, 1876, Thompson conveyed the same lot by like deed of trust to one Gordon, to secure the payment of Thompson's note of that date for $2,000, payable in one year, with interest at eight per cent yearly until paid, to the order of Moses Kelly; and Kelly indorsed this note for full value to the plaintiff.

On January 1, 1877, Thompson, at the instance and persuasion of Kelly, executed and acknowledged and delivered to Kelly a deed, expressed to be made in consideration of the sum of $4,500, conveying this lot, together with lots 6, 7 and 8 in the same square (each of which three other lots was also in fact subject to a mortgage for $2,000), to Ashford in fee, "subject, however, to certain incumbrances now resting thereon, payment of which is assumed by said party of the second part;" and containing covenants by the grantor of warranty against all persons claiming from, under or through him, and for further assurance. At the date of this deed, the only incumbrances on the land conveyed were the five mortgages above mentioned, and some unpaid taxes assessed against Thompson while owner of the land. On January 22, 1877, this deed, together with a notary's certificate of its acknowledgment by the grantor, was recorded in the registry of the District of Columbia.

At the taking of the depositions before the purchase price, the whole mortgage, he becomes the principal debtor, the mortgagor remaining simply a surety; the portion conveyed is primarily liable for the mortgage debt, and the remainder is liable as security merely. The purchaser, therefore, is bound to protect the mortgagor and his land from any liability on account of the mortgage debt. This obligation on the part of the purchaser is not affected by its conveyance; and, if the said purchaser fails to protect the residue from sale under the mortgage, he becomes liable to the grantee thereof for the damages thus caused to him. Wadsworth v. Lyon, 98 N. Y. 201; Wilcox v. Campbell, 8 Cent. Rep. 687, 106 N. Y. 325.

The grantee of the remainder is not bound to take any steps in an action to foreclose the mortgage; it is the duty of the principal to appear therein and protect the interests of his surety; and, if he fails so to do, and the latter is, in consequence, deprived of his land, the value thereof is the fair measure of his damages. Id.

A grantee of premises, who has assumed payment of a mortgage thereon as part of the consideration, cannot resist liability for a deficiency arising upon a subsequent foreclosure thereof on the ground of the invalidity of his deed, where he and his later grantee have retained undisturbed possession of the premises. Gifford v. Father Matthew T. A. B. Society, 6 Cent. Rep. 33, 104 N. Y. 139; Parkinson v. Sherman, 74 N. Y. 88; Dunning v. Leavitt, 85 N. Y.

30; Crowe v. Lewin, 95 N. Y. 423; Albany City Savings Inst. v. Burdick, 87 N. Y. 40; Madison Avenue Baptist Church v. Baptist Church, 46 N. Y. 131, 139.

An agreement between a vendor and purchaser recited that a specified portion of the price was to be paid by the purchaser "by assumption of a certain mortgage," etc., and on the same day, at the purchaser's request, a deed of the property was made to his wife, expressed to be subject to the mortgage referred to in the agreement. Held, that, construing the agreement and the deed together, the purchaser had assumed the payment of the mortgage, and that the mortgagee could compel payment by him of the deficiency resulting upon foreclosure. Slauson v. Watkins, 86 N. Y. 597; Pike v. Seiter, 15 Hun, 402; Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 298; Burr v. Beers, 24 N. Y. 178; Garney v. Rogers, 47 N. Y. 238; Pardee v. Treat, 82 N. Y. 385; Bennett v. Bates, 94 N. Y. 354; Todd v. Weber, 95 N. Y. 181; Smith v. Truslow, 84 N. Y. 660; Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 280; Booth v. Cleveland Rolling Mills Co. 74 N. Y. 15; Schley v. Fryer, 1 Cent. Rep. 5, 100 N. Y. 71; Ludington v. Low, 21 Jones & S. 374.

Where a conveyance is made, subject to a mortgage upon the premises, which the grantee, by the terms of the deed, "assumes," he thereby becomes personally liable for the mortgage debt. Although the assumption in terms refers only to the mortgage and not the bond, the covenant to assume is the equivalent of one to pay. Braman v. Dowse, 12 examiner, the plaintiff, having given notice to Ashford and to Kelly to produce the original deed, and both of them having failed to do so, was permitted, against the defendant's objection, to put in evidence a copy of the deed and acknowledgment, certified by the recorder to be a true copy.

No consideration was actually paid for the conveyance. The value of the lots conveyed was, according to Thompson's testimony, $4,000 each or $16,000 in all, or, according to Ashford's testimony, not less than $3,400 each or $13,600 in all.

Thompson testified that he never had any negotiations with Ashford about the property; and that he was induced to make this deed by the assurance of Kelly that the grantee would assume the incumbrances upon the land and relieve him from liability upon the notes he had given secured by mortgage.

Ashford testified that he never had any negotiations with anyone about the purchase of the land; and that in February, 1877, Kelly, who was his father-in-law, to whom he had lent much money and for whom he had indorsed several notes, told him that, in order to secure him from loss, he had procured a conveyance to be made to him of these four lots, in which he thought "there was considerable equity;" informed him at the same time that there were incumbrances or mortgages upon the property, but did not specifically mention any of them, except the $1,500 mortgage upon lot 5; told him that the interest on this was pressing, and that, if he would pay it, Kelly would relieve him from any further trouble as to the incumbrances; and advised him to go on and collect the rents of the property, so as to indemnify himself against that interest and pay the taxes in arrears.

It was proved that Ashford in March, 1877, entered into possession of the four lots, and paid the taxes previously assessed upon them, and also paid interest accruing under the mortgage for $1,500 on lot 5, and collected the rents of the four lots, until December 4, 1877, when he sold and conveyed lots 7 and 8 to one Duncan, subject to existing incumbrances thereon; and continued to collect the rents of the other two lots, and to pay the interest accruing under the mortgage for $1,500 on lot 5, until March 14, 1878, when this lot was sold, pursuant to the provisions of that mortgage, by public auction, and conveyed to Harkness for the sum of $1,700, which was insufficient to satisfy the amount then due on that mortgage.

On comparing Ashford's testimony with that of Boorman, the plaintiff's attorney, and with a letter written by Ashford to Boorman on October 8, 1877, it clearly appears that Ashford was informed of the clause in the deed to him, assuming payment of incumbrances, and was requested to pay the plaintiff's mortgage, as early as September, 1877, and then, as well as constantly afterwards, declined to pay it, or to recognize any personal liability to do so. There was no direct evidence that he knew of this clause before September, 1877.

The plaintiff brought an action at law upon the note against Thompson as maker and Kelly as indorser on November 18, 1877, and recovered judgment against both in December, 1877, on which execution issued and was returned unsatisfied April 15, 1878.

The present bill was filed May 13, 1878. A decree dismissing the bill was rendered in special term May 9, 1882, which, after the death of Ashford and the substitution of his executrix in his stead, was affirmed in general term February 16, 1885, upon the grounds that Ashford had never accepted the deed to him, and also that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, was at law. (3 Mackey, 455.) On the same day, as the record states, "from this decree the plaintiff appeals in open court to the Supreme Court of the United States, which appeal is allowed."

Cush. 227; Drury v. Tremont Imp. Co. 13 Allen, 168; Locke v. Homer, 181 Mass. 93; Stout v. Folger, 34 Iowa, 71; Sparkman v. Gove, 44 N. J. L. 232; Schley v. Fryer, 1 Cent. Rep. 5, 100 N. Y. 71.

A grantee in a deed who has assumed payment of a mortgage upon the conveyed property, may set up, in defense of an action to enforce his personal liability, an entire or partial failure of consideration by reason of a breach by the mortgagor of the agreement under which the assumption was made. Loeb v. Willis, 1 Cent. Rep. 324, 100 N. Y. 231.

If a senior mortgagee purchases the mortgaged premises, assuming the payment of a junior mortgage, and the amount of such mortgage is deducted from the price of the land, the senior mortgage will then be postponed in favor of the junior mortgage. Fowler v. Fay, 62 Ill. 375.

A mortgagee can derive no advantage from a covenant of assumption in a deed, if the covenant be invalid between the parties to the deed. Bull v. Tittsworth, 20 N. J. Eq. 78.

It is only where the grantor has himself paid the mortgage that he becomes subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee. Ayers v. Dixon, 78 N. Y. 318; Lappen v. Gill, 129 Mass. 349; Risk v. Hoffman, 69 Ind. 137; Pardee v. Treat, 82 N. Y. 385; Fenton v. Lord, 128 Mass. 466; Emley v. Mount, 32 N. J. Eq. 470; Strohauser v. Voltz, 42 Mich. 444; Waters v. Hubbard, 44 Conn. 340; Marshall v. Davies, 78 N. Y. 414; 3 Pom. Eq. 195.

133 U. S.

The acceptance of a conveyance, containing a statement that the grantee is to pay an existing mortgage, is all that is necessary to create a liability on his part. And acceptance of the conveyance imposing the liability, by a duly constituted agent of the grantee, will bind the latter. Taylor v. Whitmore, 35 Mich. 97; Trotter v. Hughes, 12 N. Y. 74; Bishop v. Douglass, 25 Wis. 606; Wales v. Sherwood, 1 Abb. N. C. 101, note; Locke v. Homer, 181 Mass. 93, 41 Am. Rep. 199; Belmont v. Coman, 22 N. Y. 438; Spaulding v. Hallenbeck, 35 N. Y. 204, 39 Barb. 79; Atlantic Dock Co. v. Leavitt, 54 N. Y. 35; Collins v. Rowe, 1 Abb. N. C. 97; Fairchild v. Lynch, 10 Jones & S. 235.

Where the contract is one merely of indemnity, and not to pay, or against liability, actual damage must be shown. Crippen v. Thompson, 6 Barb. 534; Gilbert v. Wiman, 1 N. Y. 550; Churchill v. Hunt, 3 Denio, 321; Port v. Jackson, 17 Johns. 239; Aberdeen v. Blackmar, 6 Hill, 324; Lee v. Clark, 1 Hill, 56; Thomas v. Allen, 1 Hill, 145; Collinge v. Heywood, 9 Ad. & El. 633; Reynolds v. Doyle, 1 Man. & G. 755.

As to assumption of mortgage by purchaser of premises; what constitutes; effect of; conveyance subject to mortgage,—see note to Elliott v. Sackett, Bk. 27, p. 678.

As to release of grantee by grantor from covenant to assume mortgage, see note to Drury v. Hayden, Bk. 28, p. 408.

669

The appeal bond was approved February 18, and the appeal was entered in this court April 10, 1885.

The case was argued upon a motion to dismiss the appeal for want of sufficient amount in controversy to give this court jurisdiction, as well as upon the merits.

Messrs. Walter D. Davidge and Wm. W. Boardman, for appellant:

The deed from Thompson and wife to Ashford, with the provision therein that he should assume payment of the incumbrances resting on the property described in the deed, was accepted absolutely by Ashford.

Coolidge v. Smith, 129 Mass. 554; Freeman's Nat. Bank v. Savery, 127 Mass. 75.

The grantee, Ashford, having accepted the deed and entered into possession, and having, by its terms, assumed the payment of the incumbrances then resting on the property conveyed, became personally bound to pay.

Story, Eq. Jur. 12th ed. § 1016d; 8 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1206; 2 Jones, Mort. 3d ed. § 752; Trotter v. Hughes, 12 N. Y. 74; Crawford v. Edwards, 88 Mich. 354; Urguhart v. Brayton, 12 R. I. 169; Huyler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504; Bishop v. Douglass, 25 Wis. 696; Ricard v. Sanderson, 41 N. Y. 179; Spaulding v. Hallenbeck, 35 N. Y. 204; Belmont v. Coman, 22 N. Y. 438; Locke v. Homer, 181 Mass. 98; Pike v. Brown, 7 Cush. 133.

Where the purchaser of the equity of redemption covenants or promises the grantor to pay off an incumbrance upon the land, this duty or obligation inures for the benefit of the mortgagee, or creditor in the incumbrance, and he may, in some form of action, compel the purchaser to respond directly to him.

Halsey v. Reed, 9 Paige, Ch. 446; King v. Whitely, 10 Paige, Ch. 465; Trotter v. Hughes, 12 N. Y. 74; Curtis v. Tyler, 9 Paige, Ch. 432; Garnsey v. Rogers, 47 N. Y. 233; Pardoe v. Treat, 82 N. Y. 335; Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 263; Burr v. Beers, 24 N. Y. 178; Thorpe v. Keokuk Coal Co. 48 N. Y. 253; Atlantic Dock Co. v. Leavitt, 54 N. Y. 35; Ricard v. Sanderson, 41 N. Y. 179; Spaulding v. Hallenbeck, 35 N. Y. 204; Vrooman v. Turner, 69 N. Y. 290; Urguhart v. Brayton, 12 R. I. 169; Hoff's App. 24 Pa. 200; Moore's App. 88 Pa. 450; Merriman v. Moore, 90 Pa. 78; Townsend v. Long, 77 Pa. 143; Justice v. Tallman, 86 Pa. 147; Crawford v. Edwards, 88 Mich. 354; Miller v. Thompson, 34 Mich. 10; Strohauer v. Voltz, 42 Mich. 444; Booth v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. 43 Mich. 299; Crowell v. Currier, 27 N. J. Eq. 152; Huyler v. Atwood, 26 N. J. Eq. 504; Klapworth v. Dressler, 13 N. J. Eq. 62; Norwood v. DeHart, 30 N. J. Eq. 412; Thompson v. Bertram, 14 Iowa, 476; Corbett v. Waterman, 11 Iowa, 86; Bishop v. Douglass, 25 Wis. 696; Schmucker v. Sibert, 18 Kan. 104; Rogers v. Herron, 92 Ill. 583; Gautzert v. Hoge, 73 Ill. 80; Coffin v. Adams, 131 Mass. 133; Miller v. Billingsly, 41 Ind. 489; Fitzgerald v. Barker, 70 Mo. 686; 26 Am. Rep. 660, note; George v. Andrews, 60 Md. 26; Lamb v. Tucker, 42 Iowa, 118; Bowen v. Kurtz, 37 Iowa, 239.

In most of the cases, the right of the mortgagee or creditor to compel the purchaser to respond directly to him is based purely upon equitable principles.

King v. Whitely, 10 Paige, Ch. 465; Curtis v. Tyler, 9 Paige, Ch. 432; Crowell v. St. Barnabas Hospital, 27 N. J. Eq. 650; Crawford v. Edwards, 88 Mich. 354.

The original creditor cannot sue at law upon the undertaking of a third person to pay an existing debt.

Jones, Mort. 3d ed. § 761 a; St. Louis Second Nat. Bank v. Grand Lodge, 98 U. S. 123 (25: 75); Mellen v. Whipple, 1 Gray, 317; St. Louis Exch. Bank v. Rice, 107 Mass. 37; Prentice v. Brimhall, 123 Mass. 291; Coffin v. Adams, 131 Mass. 133; Booth v. Conn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. 43 Mich. 299.

Thompson was not a necessary party defendant.

Miller v. Thompson, 34 Mich. 10; Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 74 a, 237, 542; Whiting v. Bank of U. S. 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 6 (10: 33).

Miss Keller could not maintain an action at law against Ashford; her remedy was solely in equity.

Crowell v. Currier, 27 N. J. Eq. 152.

Burr v. Beers, 24 N. Y. 178, declares a different rule.

Mellen v. Whipple, 1 Gray, 317; St. Louis Exch. Bank v. Rice, 107 Mass. 37; Prentice v. Brimhall, 123 Mass. 291; Coffin v. Adams, 131 Mass. 133.

The sum in dispute at the time of the making of the decree below determines the jurisdiction in error.

U. S. Bank v. Daniel, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 32 (9: 989); Knapp v. Banks, 43 U. S. 2 How. 73 (11: 184); The Putapasco, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 451 (20: 457).

Interest accrued after the institution of a suit and before judgment may accordingly be included.

U. S. Bank v. Daniel, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 32 (9: 989).

Messrs. George F. Appleby and Calderon Carlisle, for appellee:

A mortgage excepted from covenant against incumbrances is not excepted from warranty.

Estabrook v. Smith, 6 Gray, 572; Harlow v. Thomas, 15 Pick. 66; Maher v. Lanfrom, 86 Ill. 513-523.

Taxes are incumbrances.

Long v. Moler, 5 Ohio St. 270; Mitchell v. Pillsbury, 5 Wis. 407.

There is no proof that the deed was ever delivered to or seen by Ashford. The recording of it did not amount to a delivery nor did it charge Ashford with notice of the assumption clause.

Bull v. Titsworth, 29 N. J. Eq. 73; Cordts v. Hargrave, 29 N. J. Eq. 443; Mead v. Bunn, 32 N. Y. 277; Jackson v. Phipps, 12 Johns. 421; Recording Act D. C. 20 Stat. 40; Higman v. Stewart, 38 Mich. 524.

The payment of interest is not inconsistent with Ashford's not having assumed the incumbrances.

Elliot v. Sackett, 103 U. S. 132 (27: 678); Drury v. Hayden, 111 U. S. 223 (28: 408); Girard L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Stewart, 86 Pa. 89.

The transaction between Kelly and Ashford was really a mortgage, though absolute on its face.

Arnaud v. Grigg, 29 N. J. Eq. 482; Garnsey v. Rogers, 47 N. Y. 233.

This complaint shows no pretense of a right in a court of equity.

Phœnix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 620, 621 (20: 502, 503); Hendrick v. Lindsay, 98 U. S. 143 (23: 855); Lawrence v. Fox, 20 N. Y. 268; Burr v. Beers, 24 N. Y. 178; Shepherd v. May, 115 U. S. 510 (29: 457).

Mr. Justice Gray delivered the opinion of the court:

The motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction must be denied. This appeal was claimed and allowed February 16, 1885. At that time the Act of February 25, 1879, chap. 99, was in force, which provided that "the final judgment or decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in any case where the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the value of twenty-five hundred dollars, may be re-examined and reversed or affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States upon writ of error or appeal." (20 Stat. 831.) The case is not affected by the Act of March 3, 1885, chap. 855, § 1, further limiting the appellate jurisdiction of this court, because that Act only provides that "no appeal or writ of error shall hereafter be allowed" from any such judgment or decree, unless the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of five thousand dollars. (23 Stat. 448.) The change of phraseology, referring to the time when the appeal or writ of error is allowed, instead of to the time when it is entertained by this court, was evidently intended to prevent cutting off appeals taken and allowed before the passage of the Act, as had been held to be the effect of the language used in the Act of 1879. Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Grant, 98 U. S. 398 [25: 281]. In a suit founded upon a contract, the sum in dispute at the time of the judgment or decree appealed from, including any interest then accrued, is the test of appellate jurisdiction. Bank of United States v. Daniel, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 32, 52 [9: 989, 997]; The Patapaco, 79 U. S. 12 Wall. 451 [20: 457]; New York E. R. Co. v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 118 U. S. 608 [30: 259]; Zeckendorf v. Johnson, 123 U. S. 617 [31: 277]. By the express terms of the promissory note sued on in this case, it bore interest at the rate of eight per cent yearly from its date until paid. Computing interest accordingly, the sum in dispute was much more than $2,500 at the time of the decree in general term, which was the decree from which this appeal was taken. In Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Trook, 100 U. S. 112 [25: 571], cited for the appellee, as in District of Columbia v. Gannon, 130 U. S. 227 [32: 922], the judgment in special term was for damages in an action sounding in tort, which bore no interest, either by the general law, or by the judgment of affirmance in general term.

Nor can the objection of the defendant, that the original deed from Thompson to Ashford was not produced, or its execution proved, be sustained. The deed is admitted to have been duly recorded. There is no presumption that it was in the possession of the plaintiff, who was not a party to it; but it is to be presumed to have been in the possession, either of Ashford, the grantee named in the deed, or of Kelly, who procured the deed to be made, and to whom it was originally delivered. Both of them having failed to produce it upon notice to do so, the recorder's copy was competent and sufficient evidence of the contents of the deed, as between the parties to the suit. Rev. Stat. D. C. §§ 440, 487; Dick v. Balch, 38 U. S. 8 Pet. 30 [8: 856].

But upon the merits of the case we are unable to concur with the views expressed by the court below, in its opinion reported in 8 Mackey, 455, either as to the effect of the testimony, or as to the rights of the parties. The material facts, as they appear to us upon full examination of the record, have been already stated. It remains to consider the law applicable to those facts.

The questions to be decided concern the extent, the obligation and the enforcement of the agreement created by the clause in the deed of conveyance from Thompson to Ashford of this and three other lots, "subject, however, to certain incumbrances now resting thereon, payment of which is assumed by said party of the second part."

The five mortgages made by the grantor, namely, the plaintiff's mortgage for $2,000 and a prior mortgage for $1,500 on lot 5, and a mortgage of $2,000 on each of the three other lots, and some unpaid taxes which had been assessed against the grantor, were incumbrances, and were the only incumbrances existing upon the granted premises at the time of the execution of this conveyance. Rawle on Covenants (5th ed.) § 77. The clause in question, by the words "certain incumbrances now resting thereon," designates and comprehends all those mortgages and taxes as clearly as if the words used had been "the incumbrances," or "all incumbrances," or had particularly described each mortgage and each tax. We give no weight to Thompson's testimony as to Kelly's previous conversation with him to the same effect, because that conversation is not shown to have been authorized by or communicated to Ashford, and cannot affect the legal construction of the deed as against him.

It was argued that because the deed contains a covenant of special warranty against all persons claiming under the grantor, the words "certain incumbrances" cannot include the mortgages made by the grantor, but must be limited to the unpaid taxes which, it is said, would not come within the covenant of special warranty. But the answer to this argument is that any person claiming title by virtue of a lien created by taxes assessed against the grantor would claim under the grantor, equally with one claiming by a mortgage from him; and incumbrances expressly assumed by the grantee are necessarily excluded from the covenants of the grantor.

Ashford is not shown to have had any knowledge of the conveyance at the time of its execution; and a suggestion was made in argument, based upon some vague expressions in his testimony, that the conveyance was intended to be made to him, by way of mortgage only, to secure him against loss on his previous loans to and indorsements for Kelly. But his subsequent acts are quite inconsistent with the theory that the conveyance did not vest the legal estate in him absolutely.

Within a month or two after the conveyance, having been told that the four lots had been conveyed to him and were subject to incum-

